Chicago, Sept. 18—(CP)—Admiral William H. Standley, United States Navy, retired, advocated last night that the United States "provide an adequate number" of "mosquito boats" to Great Britain to "forestall any menace the U-boats of Germany may be in the Atlantic."

Admiral Standley, Dorothy Thompson, columnist; Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., actor, and Maury Maverick, Mayor of San Antonio, Tex., and former congressman, spoke before a meeting sponsored by the Chicago Chapter of the Committee to Defend America by aiding the Allies.

The naval officer urged that the United States follow up its recent action of trading 50 over age destroyers to Great Britain for naval and air bases in British possessions in the western Atlantic by dispatching effective anti-submarine craft to Britain.

"When the fogs of winter envelop England and aerial combat of necessity slows down," Admiral Standley said, "I foresee an intensification of naval warfare. Provided with new and convenient bases... Germany's submarines will be immensely more effective than they were last winter and spring.

"As we advance with our rearmament we should throw more and more ships, airplanes, munitions and all the material aid and comfort at our command into democracy's fight against Hitlerism...

"We are alive to the belief that if Britain does not stop Hitler soon—sooner or later we must undertake the job ourselves."

Defeat Would be Catastrophe

Miss Thompson said she was convinced that "the defeat of the British Commonwealth of Nations and of the British Empire and a clear victory for Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy will be a catastrophe for the United States of America, for the liberty of this hemisphere, for the prosperity of our people, for the social and human values which are the very meaning of our national life, and for our power and influence in the world.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who recently advocated "appeasement" of Germany in a speech here, was bitterly attacked by Miss Thompson.

Maverick, speaking as a former "Isolationist," said that the British navy today "stands between us and war, and probably destruction." He said: "I honestly believe, as Ambassador Bullitt believes, that if England is destroyed, we will be attacked.

"The President traded off 50 destroyers to England for those naval bases," he continued. "Well, that was the best trade that was ever made for this country. Let's make more trades like that. Let's send airplanes—how many—5,000 of them, now; more armament—whatever England and her Allies need; and let's extend credit, plenty of it, now—and thereby save the lives and liberty of America."

VON RIBBENTROP REACHES ROME

Travels in Armored Train Similar to That Presented Il Duce by Hitler

Rome, Sept. 19—(AP)— German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop arrived in an armored train today for conference with Mussolini and Foreign Minister Ciano on the future policies of the axis.

The armored train was like that given Mussolini by Hitler. German troops manned anti-aircraft guns on the carriages.

Also among the welcomers was the Spanish Ambassador who wore the red beret of the Requetes (Carlist Monarchists). When Ribbentrop left Berlin Ramon Serrano Suner, Gen. Francisco Franco's brother-in-law, was still engaged in conferences with German leaders.

Ribbentrop wore a brown shirt under a white tunic. He was cheered by one of the largest crowds ever assembled by Fascist leaders to greet a foreign visitor.

Ground Crew Members At Trenton Station Deserve Credit

St. Catharines, Ont., Sept. 19 —(CP)—Seven ground crew members of the Royal Canadian Air Force who hitch-hiked from Trenton, Ont., on their time off and paid for their own flying lessons here, passed tests Tuesday for their private pilots' licences. Three others of the group will be tested when they receive leave from Trenton.

Those who won their pilot tickets were: Reg. Duncan, Dartmouth, N.S.; Allan White, Amherst, N.S.; Dave Evans, Robert Bruyere and Finn Marsh, all of Montreal, and Herb Dale and Fisher Sayers of laying of special emphasis on the amazing unity of all sections of the people. "Rich and poor, Tory and Labor, Protestant and Catholic, intellectual and handworker, they all share a common purpose, a determination to defeat the axis powers.

AMAZING UNITY

"I believe that a new Britain will emerge after this war. Many of the old evil ways will be discarded. Our militia army is serving as a great leavener of the classes. The sons of millionaires and Dukes have to go through the ranks like everyone else. The trades unionists and workers in our great industries feel that they are in the front line of the battle—as they are. When the story comes to be told of the way they carried on at their machines and lathes despite the approach of hostile aircraft it will be one of which we all shall be very proud."

Sir Evelyn referred briefly to the friendship between the ritish Empire and the United States. "I have never regarded British and American cooperation as something exclusive and detracting from Canadian-British friendship and association."

"I have no patience with the professors and other intellectuals who tell the Canadian people that now that they have a defence pact with the United States here will be an inevitable drift away from their association with Great Britain and the British Commonwealth.

"I believe that the future of civilization depends on the close association between the British Commonwealth and the American Commonwealth."

Empire Training Plan Praised

In an address last night he said that people of the British Isles are "heartened enormously" by the thought that 120 air training establishments across Canada soon will be "turning out every month vast quantities of air crews."

Speaking to Ontario members of the union, he termed the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan as "one of the most amazing things that has ever happened."

"Your young men are the finest human material conceivable," he said. "Canadians in the first place are air-minded and they have the initiative essential to a first-class airman."

NOTED PASTOR DIES IN TORONTO

Archbishop J. F. Sweeney, Former Rector of Church of St. Albans, Retired in 1932

Toronto, Sept. 19—(CP)—Funeral services will be held here Saturday from the Church of St. Alban for Most Rev. James Fielding Sweeney, 82, who died at his home last night. A life-long servant of the Church of England in Canada, he retired in 1932 through ill health as Archbishop of Toronto and Metropolitan of Ontario.

One of Canada's outstanding religious figures, Archbishop Sweeny was beloved by countless thousands. He was a bitter opponent of the liquor traffic and a champion of prohibition.

One of his greatest ambitions, and one which he failed to realize, was to complete St. Alban's Cathedral, the foundation of which was laid in 1887. For years as Bishop and later as Archbishop he fought for support and money to complete the building but a fire in 1929 killed his hopes.

He was educated at Montreal High School, McGill Normal School and McGill University, Mntreal; Montreal Diocesan Theological College and Trinity University, Toronto. He was ordained Deacon in 1880 and Priest in 1881. He served in various Montreal and Toronto parishes.

Archbishop Sweeny was twice married. His wife was Georgina Bostwick of Berthier, Que., who died in 1893. They had two daughters. In 1900 he married Catherine Boomer of Toronto who died in 1935.

Vice Admiral Dies In Active Service

London, Sept. 19—(CP)— Death of Vice Admiral Basil George Washington while in active service at sea was announced today.

He retired in 1931 after 28 years in the Royal Navy, but returned to active duty this year. He served as naval aide-de-camp to the late King George V, and his last post before retirement was command of the battleship Royal Sovereign.

He was decorated for service in the last war.

REPRISALS OR NO REPRISALS

A week ago the London Times argued editorially against reprisals against the Germans for their attacks on the civilian population of London saying it would be a mistake for the British to pursue "a new policy of terrorism." Several Canadian editors took the same attitude but the past few days has seen a change in sentiment because of the bombing of Buckingham Palace and St. Paul's.

The Ottawa Journal says it is futile for Britain to play "cricket" according to the book of rules with an enemy bent on murder and devastation. "Today, at least, it is murder," writes the Journal, "mass murder, which dominates the black souls of the Germans, and we should not continue the folly of pretending that chivalry, the camaraderie of fighting men, any longer has a place in war. Berlin must be bombed without mercy or scruple. The people of Berlin, of Germany, must be made to suffer—there is no alternative. They have brought upon themselves the hard fate they must know. Germany is a nation running amok. When a dog goes mad its destruction is what matters, and we are not too particular as to the means. Women and children and civilians of London are in the line of battle. Let that line run through Berlin, too. When a nation has gone mad it is time to forget about chivalry."

The St. Catherines Standard, also, agrees with the Journal and states that "reprisals are necessary."

The question of reprisals is a controversial one but we believe most normal people would like to see the Germans get something of their own medicine as we have stated before. The nation has been comparatively untouched by the horrors of recent wars except in the way of casualty lists and we feel that bombing of their cities should come, whether now or later but, certainly, some time when Britain has the planes to go ahead and do it thoroughly. Destruction of parts of the Nazi cities might be considered just as much a military objective as bombing munition plants and plane factories if it is going to help destroy the morale of the Germans. They are such a regimented people that they could not or would not put up with it to the same extent as the British. However, the Sunday Dispatch of London sums up the matter very well when it states:

"This is the test: Will it help us to win the war if we bomb Berlin and other German towns? The answer must come from the strategists. If the answer is "No" then our efforts must be conserved for elsewhere. Our own bombed population must know that this is for the best. But if the answer is "Yes" then our dreadful duty is clear. We should bomb Berlin and bomb it now. There should be no waiting for provocation to increase. The step must not be looked on as a reprisal. We have no time for reprisals. Our every act must be directed with cold ferocity to exterminating the Nazis and their menace to our lives. If it will stop them let us bomb their homes, scatter their factories, ravage their forests and break their hearts. But not as a reprisal."

DEFECTIVE TIRES CAUSE OF ACCIDENTS

On Tuesday a tire on a car from Denbigh blew out on the road near Kingston and a woman passenger was killed. A couple of weeks ago a similar accident took place up in western Ontario and another woman was killed when the car was thrown into the ditch by the tire blow-out.

Accidents of this kind are a source of danger to owners of cars who possibly believe their tires are better than they really are. They are, also, a danger to other motorists on the highways. When a tire blows out it generally throws the car out of control for a few seconds and in that time it may cross the path of an approaching car with disastrous results to both.

We believe tires are as important to safety as good brakes and motorists should see that they are in good condition. The strain on the sidewalls of tires when a car is going fast around curves is tremendous and when a tire gives away at this time an accident is almost sure to occur.

It behooves drivers of cars who know they have tires that are not in first class condition to drive slowly for if one or more lives are lost through that neglect it is a very dear price to pay for unwillingness to play safe.

Neutrals Cheer The Loudest

Bald facts spoke clearly enough for the R.A.F. fighters over the week-end. Prime Minister Winston Churchill's tribute added Britain's own appreciation, with typically British restraint. But some of the loudest cheers and most vivid descriptions of a triumphant engagement came from the "neutrals"—American reporters in London.

Yesterday's news accounts of the Battle of Britain compared to the quiet official communiques as a tourist poster does to an ordnance map. The Air Ministry announced calmly that 185 Germans were down, against 30 of ours, and interpolated a few matter-of-fact comments to indicate how the heroic job had been done. Here is how one section of the same engagement impressed James M. Minifie of the New York Herald Tribune:

"Spitfires and Hurricanes . . . met them over Maidstone and Canterbury, and above the Medway and the Thames Estuary. Many Nazis were shot down. Many more turned away, with little stomach for planes firing 960 rounds a minute, manned by men of skill and daring, superbly trained and led.

"Enemy survivors nearing London, tired and nervous, found squadron after squadron of British fighters flying into action . . . cutting the tails off stragglers with sharp precision bursts. The Nazis had never had such a gruelling time . . . As the surviving Dorniers began their race for the coast, they were no longer a formation but merely the centre of a general rough and tumble in which Hurricanes and Spitfires danced about, taking their choice of targets."

They could use that sort of language at the Air Ministry too, but they don't. Since the Battle of Britain started, British superiority has been so utter and conclusive as to be almost incredible, and official reports are deliberately restrained. A recent private communication to Montreal quoted a high Air Ministry official as saying full details of some battles, particularly as to the number of planes engaged on the respective sides, were so literally unbelievable that they were not released for publication. But enough comes out to make one think clear—the Royal Air Force is winning this war. — Montreal Gazette.

Cathedrals in France

(By a Correspondent in Vatican City of the New York Times)

Further details of the destruction of churches caused during the German attack on France have been received at the Vatican. The following summary is said to be the result of an investigation made by French ecclesiastical authorities after the signing of the Franco-German armistice:

The Cathedrals of Rouen, Evreux, Arras and Cambrai were virtually destroyed; those of Orleans, Amiens, Chartres, Rheims, Laon and Soissons, which were seriously damaged in the Great War, are untouched.

The Church of St. Maclou in Rouen, the 13th. century church in Gisors and the church at Adelys, which was a Renaissance masterpiece, were among those seriously damaged. Others partially destroyed were the churches of St. Paul and of Notre Dame de Recouvrance in Orleans, of Chanaz in the diocese of Chamberry, of St. Genix, of Pont de Beauvoisin and of Domessin in the region of Guiers, and of Echelles.

Moreover, many convents, religious houses and diocesan sees were destroyed or damaged. The archbishopric of See and two convents—those of the Sisters of Picpus and the Sisters of Providence—opposite the cathedral were hit. Bombs struck the chapel of the Sisters of Picpus, causing 20 deaths. In the convent in the Sisters of Providence five girls who were attending school were killed.

The Little Seminary of St. Croix in Orleans was razed. The home of Joan of Arc in Orleans, which housed the Dominican Sisters, was destroyed.

According to the Bishop of Chamberry, the boarding house of Rumillo was destroyed, and the seminary of Rouen and the archbishopric were gravely damaged.

BUSES SNORT THRU MAYFAIR

Riding in Bus or in Car is Adventure in Getting to Work in London

London, Sept. 19—(CP)—It's an adventure getting to work in London these days—and you never know until you get there whether your place of work is still standing.

For one thing, you can't tell when or where your bus is going to start, or what route it will take to reach its destination.

Today, two big double-decker buses snorted through two of the most exclusive squares of Mayfair along quiet streets where a taxi hitherto was the humblest vehicle seen.

Black-garbed housekeepers and red-vested footmen peeped from behind shutters of more or less deserted mansions to glimpse the unusual sight.

Each impromptu stopping place is the scene of a free-for-all as more weary workers try to get aboard.

Subway and street car tickets now are accepted on buses, too. But, even so, hundreds have to spend hours on journeys home to the suburbs.

Most motorists are obeying the injunction of the Transport Ministry not to leave the central London area with empty seats.

"Goodbye girls—I'm going home first class tonight," one store clerk was heard to call to her friends as she stepped daintily into a chauffeur-driven limousine.

(United Correspondents)

(F-15)

Following upon Marshal Petain's capitulation, "The Times" published an interesting extract from one of its own leading articles written one hundred and thirty-five years ago. At the Battle of Austerlitz, fought on December 22nd, 1805, Napoleon had beaten Austria and Russia and all Europe lay at his feet. It was then that "The Times" wrote:

"Incredible as this sudden and unexpected termination of the war is, we are compelled to give it reluctant credit . . . From the Baltic to the farthest extremity of Italy, there is not a Sovereign or Prince who at this moment may not be said to hold his power by sufferance from Bonaparte. What this frightful state is to lead to, is in the womb of time. The Victor may be merciful on the Continent, but we, who despise his power, are not to expect peace from his moderation. He pledged himself to his troops, that he would make peace at Vienna before Christmas, and in London before Easter. He has redeemed that pledge in the first instance; we are persuaded, he will endeavour to do so in the latter."

Ten years later Napoleon's power was destroyed and he was himself a prisoner at St. Helena. A verse of Rudyard Kipling's poem, "A St. Helena Lullaby", runs:

"How far is St. Helena from the field of Austerlitz?
You couldn't hear me if I told, so loud the cannons roar,
But not so far for people who are living by their wits;

Hitler's threatened invasion of England reminds us that on February 22nd, 1797, a French army under an adventurer called General Tate attempted to land in Britain. This force succeeded in setting foot on our shores near Fishguard in South Wales, but was quickly put to flight. A contemporary account says:

"After landing, the troops started to advance, until they were deceived by a stratagem on the part of the women of Fishguard. Dressed in red cloaks and tall hats of their national costume and carrying broomsticks, the women kept moving about on the skyline of distant hills, so as to make the invaders believe that an army of red-coated musketeers lay before them.

"The ruse was effective. The Frenchmen hesitated, a small force of militia arrived and two days later the invaders surrendered at Velindre to a force vastly inferior to their own."

Two years late, in the spring of 1799, Napoleon collected a fleet at Toulon for an attack on England. On April 25th of that year instructions were issued for the defence of London, and Napoleon Raid Precautions were a recognized ancestor of our A. R. P.

Streets were to be patrolled; each street was to have a bell to sound the alarm. Fire engines were to be at proper stations. A special corps was formed to guard reservoirs. Vessels and boats were to be taken from the south side of the Thames to the north side in case of enemy landings.

Instruction No. 12 said that no quarter was to be given to the enemy when found in transports, gunboats, or otherwise. The cellars of London were to be searched for the Fifth Column men of the day.

History, as we see, is fond of repeating itself, and it is likely that the road to St. Helena will be trodden again.

Surprise for An Italian Prisoner

The prisoner was an Italian artillery lieutenant. He had been sent out with two men to repair a broken-down truck on the Tobruk road, behind Fort Capuzzo. A British armored car came along and captured them. The lieutenant was near 30, slight of build, without much tan. He wore a khaki service cap on his head, a short-sleeved rayon shirt and khaki trousers. Over one arm he carried the green greatcoat of the Italian Army—for desert nights are chill.

His guard brought him to the officers' mess for some tea and assigned him a seat at the end of the table. The Italian paused a moment, then ostentatiously walked around the table shaking hands with each officer. He sat down: people passed him bread and butter, tea, milk and marmalade. Somebody gave him a cigarette. The Italian remained silent. The British officers talked among themselves. Then he was taken away for questioning.

At dinner time he was doing most of the talking, in French, using his two hands to help the vocabulary along. "Amazing what a couple of whiskies will do", the officer next to me confided. The Italian was gesticulating. "When we show a white flag you go on shooting just the same", he was saying. The British reminded him of certain incidents in the first days of the war when supposedly surrendering, Italians suddenly let loose with hand grenades. "So what can you expect?"

"We've got to move along", the guard informed the prisoner. "Where are you taking me?" "You're going to (place name deleted)." The Italian exclaimed, aghast, "Why, we've bombed that place out of existence!" The Britishers roared.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

James W. Barton, M.D.

You are reading from time to time about operations to give relief from the symptoms of high blood pressure. These operations are performed as a last resort, and any relief whatever following these operations can be considered a success as those patients are likely to be stricken by paralysis, heart, kidney and other diseases.

However, that some special disturbance in the body may be causing high blood pressure and its symptoms and the removal of that disturbance by surgery, rather than operating to relieve the high blood pressure direct should be performed is the suggestion of Drs. Italo F. Volini and Nathan Flaxman, Chicago, in the Journal of the American Medical Association. They report a total of 28 operations, none of which was performed as direct treatment for high blood pressure; there were operations that needed to be performed and were performed despite the fact that the patient had high blood pressure.

The operation included removal of gall bladder, uterus, and prostate gland, and other surgical conditions. The results were compared with the results of operations performed directly on nerve roots to lower the blood pressure.

All the patients were relieved of their high blood pressure symptoms—headache, pain in chest, nervousness, dizziness, tiredness, sleeplessness—whether the operation was performed for gall bladder, uterus, prostate or other conditions. Some of the patients remained free of their symptoms for about 4 months and others for as long as 9 years, averaging 3 1-2 years. The ages of the patients varied from 26 to 72 years at time of operation. The relief of symptoms was not always in proportion to the amount of the reduction of blood pressure.

The above results, in the opinion of Drs. Volini and Flaxman, were better than those obtained in any of the operations performed directly for high blood pressure by cutting roots of the nerves supplying the blood vessels.

War Prophets

This war is hard on prophets. From the beginning events have occurred so seldom in the expected manner or at the anticipated time that the best forecasters are constantly obliged to revise their predictions. During August, for instance, as the air raids on Britain were developing toward the terrific intensity of the past ten days, most of the experts agreed that the time was short for effective bombing or possible invasion. They said that after mid-September, when the fogs usually begin to shroud the British islands, England would be protected by the weather from successful mass attack. To the layman it seems logical that a thick envelope of mist would prevent concerted action between groping bombers and troops trying to land.

Now, however, the oracles, backed by some English military strategists, are taking a different view. They give warning that the mist is likely to help the invader more than the defenders. Observing that troop carriers are stealing along the French coast under cover of darkness, they argue that if the enemy can also move under cover by day his chances of landing unobserved are doubled. They go so far as to surmise that the Autumn fogs may be what Hitler is waiting for to launch his long-looked-for invasion.

Other prophets assure us that the time for invasion is past, and among those hedgers on earlier predictions of a quick decision are German and Italian journalists. One of the most authoritative spokesmen of the Fascist party now announces that the "final attack" of Britain cannot be expected until next Spring. Still others predict that while the bombing of Britain will continue through the Winter, the main theatre of war is about to be shifted to the Mediterranean. They point to the Italian advance in Egypt and the discussions going on in Berlin with the Spanish Minister of Government as omens of a new battle on a different front.

Little reliance can be placed on any of these veering forecasts. But it is possible that outside observers are not the only prophets whose previews are subject to change. Hitler promised his people peace this year; if he has to postpone until after another Winter the "victory" they all count on it means something has gone wrong with the time-table. Why did Marshal Goering fly over London yesterday if not to discover why the countless tons of dynamite dropped by his Luftwaffe have not shaken the resistance of the people? Today is the last day of the full tide for September, and if the Germans give up that great advantage there will be more reason to suspect, supposing the bombardment was a preparation for invasion, that Hitler's predictions are also being revised by unexpected events. — N. Y. Times.

The Vivisection Of France

By EUGENE LENNHOFF

(O-35)

While Hitler is inflicting upon the Vichy government one humiliation after another, his "geo-politicians" are busy drawing the new map of France which is to serve as the basis of a dictated peace in the event of a German victory. According to all statements from German and Italian sources, France is to be so dismembered after the war that she could no longer play the role of a great European power. The Nazis hope at the same time to secure her final isolation from Great Britain.

The process of vivisection has already begun. Though Hitler repeatedly declared before the war that he had no claims upon Alsace-Lorraine, he has already formally annexed both these French provinces. Each is now a 'Gau' of the Third Reich and Herr Wagner and Herr Buerckel have been appointed the respective 'Gauleiters'.

German agents, as is well-known, have for many years been heavily financing the so-called autonomist movement in Brittany and Normandy — though with very little success. They furnished the inhabitants of these northern provinces with abundant propaganda material, setting forth their "historical claims" to independence and propounding the fantastic theory (English version) that the Bretons and Normans were not French at all, but of "pure Nordic stock". Periodical demonstrations were organized with the help of a few fanatics at Rennes and other places. The bald truth is that Hitler cares nothing for anybody's "historical claims". All he wants is to retain possession of the French shores of the Channel and he proposes to do this by creating a number of buffer states with the status of vassals or protectorates.

One such vassal state would be an entirely new creation called "Flanders", made up of South Holland, North and West Belgium and the French areas around Calais and Boulogne. Belgium would cease to be an independent country; Calais, Dunkirk, Ostend, Zeebrugge, Flushing, Antwerp and the Hook of Holland would remain naval bases within the sphere of German domination.

In the areas thus threatened the Germans have already launched a propaganda campaign, backed up by historical argument, for the purpose of "reincorporating in Flanders the northern provinces conquered by the Kings of France seven or eight centuries ago". The German wireless is inveighing against the "injustice" of the Peace of Westphalia of 1648, by which two provinces of Flanders passed to the Netherlands.

In order to isolate Alsace-Lorraine from France and leave it a hinterland, Professor Haushofer and other of Hitler's "geo-political" advisers are suggesting the creation of a buffer state of Burgundy. This would consist of the three provinces of Burgundy, Franche-Comte and Champagne, together with that part of Lorraine (including Nancy) which did not fall to Germany in 1871. For this case, too, Goebbels' propaganda seeks justification in the annals of mediaeval history.

So much for Hitler's own particular plans. But he also strongly supports Italian claims to Savoy, Nice and Corsica. Lastly, the Nazi regime would fain despoil France of those southern provinces which it describes as Basque and Catalan. The strictly Basque departments of Bearn and Hautes-Pyrenees Hitler means to offer to General Franco for incorporation in Spain. To the north, along the Bay of Biscay, he would "re-establish" Gascony and Guyenne as the Aquitaine of mediaeval times.

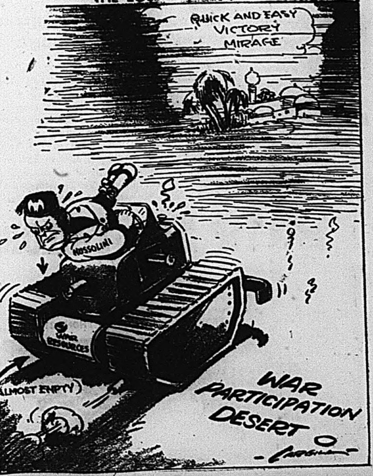
Naturally, the inhabitants of the territories thus destined for "independence" never dreamt of being anything but good patriotic Frenchmen. But the Fuehrer's hatred of France and his determination to annihilate the "hereditary foe" are so strong that he is ready to give effect to the wildest imaginings of his geo-politicians.

The Quislings of Bordeaux and Vichy, who are to-day abusing Churchill for wanting to recapture liberty for France, and who have passed sentence of death upon General de Gaulle, the leader of all free Frenchmen, may not yet have considered the dire fate awaiting their country should Great Britain lose the fight. At the time of their shameful surrender they believed that they could secure Hitler's blessing for the establishment of a totalitarian France; a France which repudiated all the traditions of her glorious past. They should have known that, so long as Hitler is strong, nothing will stop him dismembering their country. Only the victory of Britain can save France from slow death at the hands of the Nazi vivisectors upon whose mercy she has so shortsightedly thrown herself.

Stage Coach Driver Dies

Ottawa, Sept. 19—(CP)—Edouard LeBlanc, 81, one of the first stage coach drivers in this district, died here last night, following an illness of two months. Years ago LeBlanc drove a stage coach between Ottawa and Aylmer, Que., and between Richmond, Ont., and Ottawa.

THE LOST "PETROL"



"THIS HAS THE VITAL FOOD VALUES THAT MY FAMILY NEEDS"

Over two Nabisco Shredded Wheat slice a banana, pour a cupful or more of milk, sugar to taste—and you have a breakfast made-to order for a lazy morning-appetite! But that's only half the story. In this one delicious dishful, you actually get eight vital food values: Three Vitamins (A, B_1 and C), Iron, Calcium, Phosphorus, Carbohydrates and Proteins.

Leading Canadian health authorities agree that "whole grain cereals" are an essential "protective" food in peace and war. Nabisco Shredded Wheat, is a "whole grain cereal"—100% pure whole wheat—with all the rich, inner flavor of Nature's finest cereal grain. Serve this nourishing, low cost, morning meal to your family regularly.

W.M.S.

The service opened with quiet music played by Mrs. Edgar McKeown.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen gave the call to worship which was a poem entitled "The Great Physician". All sang "The National Anthem" and "The Call to Prayer" was read.

Miss Eileen MacMullen arranged the roll call which was brief excerpts taken from the missionary monthly and this idea will be followed for October and November.

All sang a hymn and Mrs. Roy Thrasher conducted the devotional period based on "The Way of The Father's Will". In this part hymns and responses were sung by Miss Gladys Summers and Mrs. Edgar McKeown, prayer for our Canadian Indians by Mrs. John Holmes. Bible lesson read by Mrs. Lindsay McKeown and the offering amounting to over three dollars was received and dedicated.

In the business period Mrs. Lindsay McKeown was appointed delegate to attend the sectional rally at Cannifton shortly.

Miss Muriel Sine gave a graphic description of the life and work of Rev. James Evans who journeyed to Norway House in 1840 to be the first missionary in an isolated outpost. In June of this year a special centennial was observed in practically every reserve throughout Canada.

Evans arranged a syllabic alphabet in the Cree language on birch bark and soon adults and children were learning to read, later he invented a printing press of his own which answered his purpose until a real one could be secured.

A special cairn was erected to his memory at Norway House in July 1932 and truly in this centenary year we should give gratitude to God for James Evans and his unfinished task of "Lighting the Darkness". The title of the chapter was aptly named "Birch Bark Talks".

A paper on Indian work in Canada was prepared by Mrs. Frank Jeffs and read at the meeting and was based on the 15th annual report and the president told of the estimates for Indian work.

Mrs. L. McKeown read a poem "We tread upon Thy carpets".

Mrs. Percy MacMullen gave a synopsized report of the recent Branch Executive and School for Leaders held at Whitby and said this seventh year was the best ever with one hundred and sixty-two registrations. Among the missionaries who spoke at the School were Miss Margaret Dawson, Chissamba, Africa, and Miss Mary Haig of Japan, both of whom are returning to their duties in October.

Miss Wilma Paddock of North Frontenac, Mrs. Wilfrid of West China and our scholarship student Miss Eiko Enomoto of Japan.

Mrs. George Weaver and Mrs. Allan Bailey tendered a vote of thanks for the report.

The service closed with a hymn and benediction.

Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Bailey and Barbara of Toronto, Miss Isobel Turner of Belleville, spent the week end with Mr. and Allan Bailey.

Mrs. Ernest White spent a day last week with Mr. Harry Potter, Stirling.

Mrs. Fred Jeffs, Mrs. Frank Jeffs and Bert attended the wedding ceremony of Mr. William John Jeffs of Mount Pleasant and Miss Cora Mae Petherick of Zion at Hastings United Church parsonage on Wednesday, September 11th., with Rev. John Glover officiating. The attendants were Mr. Bert Jeffs and Mrs. Douglas Barnum with Miss Lorraine Barnum as flower girl. The wedding dinner was served at Trent Villa, Campbellford, and after a honeymoon to points west the young couple will reside on the groom's farm at Mount Pleasant.

PERSONALS

Miss Margaret Moore of Peterboro, is spending her vacation with her sisters, Mrs. Bob Miles and Mrs. Ray Grant.

Mr. Francis J. O'Neil, Roslin, Ont, left on Monday for St. Augustine Seminary, Toronto.

Mr. E. Colebourne has left for Cleveland, Ohio, to attend a convention.

Captain J. H. McLeod. Commanding Officer of "B" Troop 32-34th Field Battery, R.C.A., C.A.S.F., stationed at Petawawa, has acknowledged receiving 83 sweaters and ninety pairs of socks donated by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the 32-34th. Of this number twenty sweaters and twenty pairs of socks were donated by the Argyll Chapter I.O.D.E., twenty-eight sweaters and eighteen pairs of socks by the St. Julien Chapter, three sweaters and ten pairs of socks by the Comrade club.

Miss Janet Miles entertained last evening at a pantry shelf shower in honour of Mrs. Joe Miles (nee Doris Bunnett) at the home of Mrs. Ray Grant, 68 North Front. The spacious rooms were beautifully decorated with fall flowers and pink and white streamers. Games and contests were enjoyed. All the gifts were accompanied by original verses that proved very amusing. Dainty refreshments were served toward the close of the evening.

Tabernacle Mission Circle met last evening at Mrs. Geo. Stanton's, Avondale. An interesting discussion period was participated in when several new ideas were introduced. A delegate was appointed to attend the Sectional Rally at Cannifton and also a representative to present the work and future plans of the circle at the congregational supper. The subject of the worship service was "Doing the Father's Will". Ethel Horton played a piano solo. The study programme portrayed the life and work of Dr. James Evans among the Canadian Indians, the centenary celebration held at Norway House, and the story of Rosabelle Ryder, a graduate nurse, who had attended the Round Lake residential school. It was interesting to learn how he made the Birch Bark talk for the Indians. Many valuable donations were brought and the Supply Box packed for distribution where needed. Lunch was served and a vote of thanks tendered the hostess.

ST. JOHN'S MISSION

The ladies of the Guild met at the Hall for an all day quilting. A pot luck dinner was served. The business meeting was opened by singing two Harvest Festival hymns and prayers for Peace. Tea was served and the meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. Heaven.

A delightful tea and sale of home cooking was held at the home of Mrs. Hicken in aid of the Guild. Tea was served in the dining room which was tastefully decorated with asters. The table looked lovely with asters and candles. A very enjoyable time was had and a nice sum realized for the Guild. The National Anthem and several Patriotic songs were sung before the end of the afternoon.

The Stars Say

For Friday, September 20

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DIFFICULT, disturbing, perhaps distracting day, according to the adverse chain of several planets. However there are signs offsetting these trials and miseries by meeting all obligations with rigidity, honesty and willingness, then wiping off the slate and getting a fresh start and under very encouraging auspices. But this reorientation should be attempted with poise, not passion, with a view to maintain harmony, in both business and personal readjustments. Placate superiors and elders. Find those of position and financial power ready to promote worthy enterprises.

Those whose birthday it is, by prudence, poise and harmony may convert difficult, harrowing and unhappy circumstances into constructive, expansive and pleasant prospects, with support of elders, superiors, employers or those whose financial promotion and friendship are vital. But meet all obligations cheerfully, before essaying this newer and happier course of action. A very expansive, agreeable and cooperative condition will prevail in all logical and worthy plans for readjustment.

A child born on this day may possess sterling character, with probably many ups-and-downs and challenging adventures to tax and strengthen it.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Wonder How She Can Support Her Children

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We've been married ten years, have two lovely children and I am about to bear my third child to a husband whom I no longer love or respect. He makes a good income and is generous enough in his allowance, but he is 'woman crazy' and so notoriously unfaithful that all our friends and relatives know of his infidelities.

I had made up my mind to leave him when I discovered I was going to have this third child. I have decided positively never to resume relations with him in future, even if, I remain under the same roof to insure a home for my children, until I learn some trade or business which will enable me to support them. I have no relatives who can help. What would your suggestion be?

Desperate

Obviously, the thing for you to do at the present time is to try and keep as serene a mind as possible in the interests of your expected baby. You don't want to have an unhappy neurotic child, with tendencies which will weigh against him in later life.

You and your children are certainly entitled to maintenance from the husband and father, even though his weakness has cost him your respect and love. When you regain your strength go to your local superintendent of schools and see what is open to you in the way of vocational training. A wife in your position is always happier if she has a little money she can call her own.

You must realize if you leave your husband that he will become the victim of his own weakness and will probably marry the first adventuress he meets. Stand pat, even if you expect to go your separate ways in the home.

Your choice of a business, trade or profession should be influenced by the kind of work you'd like most to do.

Unconventional Bread-and-Butter Letter

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The girl in whom my son is interested spent the week-end with us and was given every attention and courtesy. When she left I certainly expected what is known as a "bread-and-butter" letter. She wrote on a postcard: "Sure had a grand time, especially liked your muffins." Was this well-bred?

Unwilling Mother-in-law to be.

To say the least, the young lady's bread-and-butter letter on a postcard was certainly unconventional. Young people, imagining they are rushed to death these days, do some pretty queer things. If she impressed you as being a nice girl and had good qualities, I believe I'd overlook the unusual letter of thanks after a visit.

Chivalrous Gesture

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Three years ago I married a girl, whom I had gone with years previously. She is the only child of fairly well-to-do people while I am of a poor family. For two years we lived to ourselves and were quite happy. Then my work forced me to travel.

My wife became restless due to my absence and the idea that she wasn't getting enough fun out of marriage. So she left me saying she didn't care for me any longer. I think her parents interfered, and also that she didn't like the idea of having to do without certain things. She has no grounds for divorce, so I thought I'd get the divorce. I still want her, but my action will be just to satisfy her, as she says she doesn't want me. Am I doing right?

I feel quite confident that I could marry again, but would it be fair to the girl I would ask, knowing that I will always feel the same toward my wife? Do you suppose that after a period of playing, seeing other men as they are, my wife would want to come back?

I will always think she really cares for me.

W.

Feeling the way you do about your wife, and having the impression she still cares for you, don't you think it would be foolish to get a divorce only to give her more freedom? Men have made this sort of chivalrous gesture, even submitting to trumped up charges so that their wives would divorce them and enjoy more good times. But as you think her parents have influenced her in this matter, and she may be bored living under the parental roof at least give her a chance to

Wek-End Visits to Boy Friend's Home Proper if Parents Approve

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am 16 years old and I have been invited by a boy friend's mother to spend a week-end with them. I am wondering if it would be proper for me to accept this invitation. Is it? This boy has visited in our home once.

Also I intend to invite this boy to a Prom. in our school next Spring. Should I invite him to stay at our home or not?

L. M.

Since this boy's mother has directly invited you to visit them, it is proper for you to accept her invitation, provided that your mother and father approve of your going. And I judge that they will, since they have already had the boy as a guest in your home.

Also, since he has been a guest in your home, I judge too that your mother and father would approve of inviting him to be a guest there when he come to the Prom. However ,this invitation too should come directly from your mother.

Best Man Shouldn't Pay

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I will appreciate your opinion on the following question:

A is to be married shortly, with a small, simple wedding. She is not having any reception. The bride and groom and their two attendants are going to a restaurant for dinner. A is under the impression that the best man is expected to pay for this dinner.

B insists that A is absolutely wrong, and that the bride or the groom is expected to meet this expense.

Which is right?

Reader

B is right. There is no reason in the world why the bride-to-be (or the groom-to-be) should expect that the post-wedding dinner should be the best man's obligation. The best man is regarded as a guest on such an occasion, not as the host.

I am assuming that the best man has made no suggestions that he be given the privilege of giving this dinner. If, however, he wishes to be host, and if he makes a definite suggestion as to this, that's different. But the invitation should come from him . . . not the suggestion from them!

The bride might properly arrange to pay for this dinner, just as she or her family would be expected to pay for the wedding reception or a larger post-wedding dinner.

Thanks Always Proper

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Should I thank a man when he helps me on with my coat or when he pulls out my chair for me at the table? Or should I just take these as a matter of course?

W.

Courtesy, no matter how small, should always be thanked for. For every consideration shown us by anyone anywhere we should say a gracious "Thank You".

WEDDINGS

TAYLOR—BARKER

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock at St. Andrew's Church manse, when Elma Rosena Barker, daughter of Mr. Harry Barker, Trenton, became the bride of Walter Edmond Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert A. Taylor of Belleville. Rev. W. J. Walker performed the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a gown of Airforce blue with hat to match and wore a corsage of roses and baby's breath.

They were attended by Miss Erma Gould and Mr. Wilbur Barker, brother of the bride, both of Trenton.

A reception and buffet luncheon was held at the groom's home in Trenton, following the ceremony. The groom's mother received wearing a frock of navy blue.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor left on a wedding trip for Sudbury, the bride travelling in a costume of blue with hat and accessories to match. They will reside in Belleville.

RAY—STRATTON

St. John's Anglican Church, Bancroft, was the scene of a pretty autumn wedding on Tuesday, September 17th., at 2.30 o'clock when Edith Marguerite, daughter of Mr. A. E. Stratton, Rosser, Man., became the bride of Chauncey Valleau Ray of Timmins, Ont., son of Mr. Edwin A. Ray of that place

Rev. G. A. Gordier, B.A., performed the ceermony, Miss Selina Thompson played the wedding music and solos were sung by Mr. Thomas Fraser of Toronto.

Mr. Frank Shedler of Timmins, was groomsman and the ushers were Donald Russell and Harry Jenson, Bancroft.

A reception in the Community Hall for over a hundred guests followed the ceremony, gladioli and ferns being used in decorating the hall as well as the church. Mrs. Ray, the bridegroom's mother, wore Burgundy crepe.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray left later on a trip to Montreal, the bride travelling in a dark suit with Robinhood green accessories. They will take up residence in Timmins after October first.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. William Waterhouse, Mrs. Hogle, Mrs. Winter and Miss Catherine Winter of Belleville, Mrs. C. Terrill, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Dorland, Wooler, Mrs. Fox and Miss Fox, Trenton.

LAFFIN—ALLAIR

A very pretty September wedding took place at Queensboro on Monday morning, at nine o'clock, when Marie Frances, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Allair, was united in marriage to John Patrick Laffin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Laffin of Queensboro.

The wedding took place in St. Henry's Church with Rev. Father F. D. Hyland of Madoc, officiating. The altar which was decorated with flowers made a pretty setting for the occasion. Mrs. Frank Barry presided at the organ during the ceremony.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her father looked charming in a floor length gown of dusty pink with white embroidered net veil with bandeau of orange blossoms. She carried a sheaf of pink and white gladioli.

The bridesmaid, Miss Rose Laffin, sister of the groom, was beautifully gowned in a floor length gown of turquoise blue sheer with pink hat and gloves and carried a mixed sheaf of gladioli.

The groom was attended by Mr. Fred Bosely.

SINCLAIR—HOWARD

Pastel-hued asters and gladioli banked the front of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Windsor, for the wedding Saturday evening, at 6 o'clock, of Miss Alda Grey Howard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Howard, of Salter Avenue, Windsor, to Mr. Colin McKendrie Sinclair, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Sinclair, of the same city, at which the Rev. Dr. H. M. Paulin officiated, and Mr. Robert Sinclair, of the Kent Regiment, Chatham, sang "O Promise Me" during the signing of the register. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a lovely gown of white English lace over satin fashioned on fitted lines, with long, tight sleeves and a slight train. Her tulle veil, shoulder-length, was caught to her hair with a coronet of orange blossoms, and she carried pink roses, white bebe chrysanthemums and baby's breath. Her cousin, Miss Lois Hay, of Stirling, who was her only attendant, wore pink taffeta, trimmed with touches of blue and a short pink veil topped with a wreath of tiny pink flowers. Her bouquet was a fan of pink, white and blue gladioli. Mr. Louis Reaume assisted the bridegroom as best man, and Mr. Maxwell Howard, brother of the bride, seated the guests. A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony, pastel asters and gladioli being used in decoration there also. Mrs. Howard wore for her daughter's wedding a gown of rose crepe, with a navy hat, and a cluster of gardenias and rosebuds at her shoulder, and Mrs. Sinclair, the bridegroom's mother, was in printed green sheer, with a green hat, and a similar corsage. Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair left later for a motor trip east, the bride travelling in a beige bolero frock with a matching coat, and a black hat. They will reside in Windsor.

Keep the Children In Bounds

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

The child on the way to and from school, especially in the village and country, is tempted often to trespass on private property. He may steal fruit and trample down crops. Very annoying to the owner, his misdemeanor is perilous to the child's moral character.

An occasional city child will snatch fruit from the vegetable stand. At noon and after school I have seen many well dressed school children crowding in local stores, especially the five and ten-cent store. Obviously not nearly all of them are there to make purchases, nor do all buy the things they get. Vast is the damage to their character. Their parents are responsible.

Rights of Others

Now and then children trained at home to respect property will imitate other children at appropriating property. They need further guidance. We parents owe it to our community and our children to train them to respect the rights of others in the neighborhood from the time they begin to toddle and to impress on them the importance of keeping on the highway and sidewalk on the way to school, no matter what other children do.

Some children will cross lots and lawns, breaking down shrubs, wrecking fences, or proving a menace to crops. They will climb fruit trees or knock down fruit not yet ripe. Complaints from property owners reach the school, but the school is not responsible for the child's conduct when away from these school grounds. The parents are. However, wise teachers prevail upon their children at school to avoid trespassing. Moreover, the school needs to control children during recess in relation to surrounding property. Proper guidance in these matters is education for good citizenship.

Straight and Narrow

Insist that your child go directly to school in the morning and return directly after school. Establish this good habit as soon as your child begins school attendance. Well for the mother to be home always to make the child's homecoming attractive. The child who loiters on the way is in physical and moral danger.

If your child does loiter, let him know that you consider him too immature to manage himself and that you will go to school for him, preferably on foot, until he is grown up enough to bring himself home promptly. In case your youngster wishes to go to the home of a playmate, let him come home first and go from there. If punishment seems necessary for loitering, let it consist of sitting on a chair doing nothing for at least an hour for each offense.

Shank's Mare

Many thousands of school children must be transported by bus. Fortunate for your child if the bus driver is well selected and is given authority to refuse taking the child who does not abide by the established rules. If the child does not have himself ready when the bus arrives let him stay home and sit for at least two hours doing nothing and stay in the house all that day. Let the same rule hold if the father takes the child on his way to work. No reason why parents should have to worry about getting the child ready for school on time. Let him do the worrying.

Excepting in bad weather, children old enough to walk should have to walk to school, even for a mile or so. There are but very few instances when high school children should drive a car to school. Having to walk is good for their health and character.

Solving Parent Problems

Q.—What about parents who talk while a child is playing a musical selection that has been requested by a guest?

A.—They are downright boors.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Should Tonsils Come Out?

There has been a great deal of controversy concerning the function of the tonsil in the human throat and even now medical men do not agree upon it entirely. It would appear that the role of the tonsil is to reduce infection in the throat; to fight it before it can spread elsewhere. Its tissue is composed of a tiny, round cell that collect normally in the presence of an infection. These cells have the ability to fight infection by absorption and destruction of bacteria. As long as the tonsil fulfills this role, it is a valuable member of the body defenses. The trouble is that after having been involved in a few severe invasions of the body by infections, the tonsil itself often becomes diseased and, instead of helping combat infection as it should, it actually becomes a focus for it.

If after examining your child's tonsils your physician decides they must come out, then take his word for it. If he finds the tonsils are not diseased and says they don't need to come out, then you don't need to worry over whether your child should have his tonsils removed.

The Dionne Quintuplets had their tonsils out nearly two years ago. Their tonsils were in exceptionally bad shape because they were harboring germs of the dread streptococcus.

Infected tonsils may become so enlarged when diseased they fill up the throat so that the child has difficulty eating and even breathing. When the surgeon started to work on Marie's throat, he turned to me and said: "I don't know how she managed to swallow anything".

A few weeks ago a New York physician expressed surprise that "such perfectly reared children as the Dionne Quintuplets should all at the same time have tonsils so diseased that they had to be removed", and the Journal of the American Medical Association asked me to reply to him.

As for the surprise expressed at the infection appearing in all five at the same time, I find that difficult to understand. I, on the contrary, would have been surprised if the infection had occurred only in part of the set. This is an identical set living in an identical environment. The appearance of a disorder in one individual and its failure to appear in others when no differences of heredity or environment exist would be surprising indeed to me.

As for the appearance of diseased tonsils in these children, I have no excuse to offer. It is well known that diseased tonsils occur in children of the best homes as well as those of the worst. We believe the care that has been given to these children is the best possible care we could have given them. These children are subject to outside sources of infection a great deal more than the public realizes, despite our attempts to protect them.

Canada's War Chiefs

CAPT. J. O. COSSETTE

NAVAL SECRETARY

(This is one of a series on military chiefs directing Canada's armed forces).

By KEN CLARK

Canadian Press Staff Writer
(Copyright, 1940,
by The Canadian Press)

Capt. Joseph Oscar Cossette, once a Montreal newspaperman, has attained the highest business post in the Royal Canadian Navy. He is naval secretary, a man as full of yarns as he is of energy and ideas.

Once, when he was fighting the Bolshevists, the ship Capt. Cossette was on — he wasn't naval secretary then but just a young sub-lieutenant—was in the Baltic at a port called Libau. He went ashore with a sea-faring idea, to procure a cuckoo-clock as a souvenir and naturally he took some soap with him, slices off a laundry bar. That was what they used for money, such had been the scarcity of soap for years in Russia.

Young Cossette went into a little shop there and in looking about for a clock he saw a suspicious looking object and scraping away the dust found two packages of a Canadian tobacco (name censored). These he had for one slice of soap much to the satisfaction of his pipe.

The whole man is packed trim and athletic into a physique of 50 years. What goes on behind his pince nez with a gold engraved bow slung on a moderately wide black ribbon, is as various as his experience and as accurate as an auditor's statement.

He started out to be a newspaperman on La Patrie in Montreal, and now in his spare moments of leisure makes ship models, mends toys, goes swimming and takes movies for private showing. He explained, "You seat your friends comfortably on the floor, give them a little glass to hold in the hand and turn on the movies for a pleasant evening."

Merchant and Navy

Getting down to seafaring matters by way of literature Capt. Cossette thinks Joseph Conrad is more in the merchant marine line but if it is suggested that in that case a navy man might look at Conrad down his sleeve, he protests.

"The barriers between the merchant marine and the navy have disappeared," he said during an interview. "In the old days an officer in the navy pretty nearly had to have a private income which closed the door to many young men not too well off financially, but nowadays if a man has the goods and the physique and the background, enough education to back it up, he can get to the top. The class distinction between the navy and the merchant sailor has been done away to a great extent and I venture to say will disappear entirely before long."

Capt. Cossette himself is the champion example of how the sort of man he describes comes to the top but on this matter he showed a sudden salty reticence.

Asked if it were chance that brought him into the navy, he thought it rather "something in the blood." His father, still living at the old home in Valleyfield, Que., was one of those twice-around-the-Horn men, went down in sailing ships and around the tip of South America to the golden west in the days of the clippers and windjammers.

Perhaps this accounts for the fact that when young Cossette abruptly left the fourth estate and dived into a life on the briny, his father gave him his blessing without a murmer.

Not so the editors and the owner of the paper, Joseph Tarte. Said Mr. Tarte: "This is a youthful folly which you will regret. The life of a sailor is tougher than you think." They were so sure he wouldn't stick they promised to hold his job for a year. But Capt. Cossette stayed in the navy 30 years.

Shipped in Halifax

He found himself a rating in Halifax with no English except "yes" and "no" which was alright ashore but bad afloat. He could read the language and was in fact stuffed up on the "The Boys Own" and other tales of adventure, but "splicing the main brace" was something occult.

The sailor who had saved quite a bit of money from his former employment paid it out to a professor at Dalhousie University who rammed English into him two hours a night, six nights a week. The Navy hired the same professor to teach a class of ratings and young Cossette took that too just to make sure. It was a hard life for the newspaperman. "It nearly did break me," he says now, "but I never told anybody."

His progress was as steady as his hand. He served on various vessels in the Royal Navy, served at Halifax and Esquimalt, found himself in 1917 Accountant Officer at the Royal Naval College in Halifax. His luck held and when the "Halifax explosion" knocked the college down he was one of two men uninjured.

He went on up. He went to England to attend technical courses and receive appointment at the British Admiralty. As Accountant Officer on various stations he was, besides his other duties, responsible for the food for ratings. Sometimes in the old days it was salt pork, salt beef and hardtack, but even at the best it was monotonous. "Tuesday, boiled ham; Wednesday, sausage and mash; Thursday, boiled beef, etc."

'Tis Better Now

"Nowadays . . .' :'We have refrigerators. We can keep anything for any length of time. The diet is varied and wholesome."

Capt. Cossette has never regretted his life on the ocean wave. He admitted that for a rating it involves some privations but on the other hand is one of comradeship, interesting travel and healthy exercise.

"And if I were 25 again and had occasion to choose a career I would not hesitate a moment to join the navy," he said. "The experience obtained as a rating has been invaluable in my various appointments and principally in the present one as Naval Secretary. It was with pleasure that I saw my son enter the Canadian Navy two years ago. He is now in the British Navy. I haven't had news of him for some time but I know he is aboard the battleship Valiant, after serving in a sister ship the Warspite."

Capt. Cossette reassures mothers who come around and ask him how tough the navy is. Even the language isn't bad, he tells them. He only uses an occasional big "D" himself as a sort of salty decoration for a large and somewhat academic vocabulary.

The meeting opened by singing the Ode and Institute Creed was repeated in unison. The roll call was answered with uses for common salt. The minutes were read and approved, also the treasurer's report. Two letters of thanks were read for fruit sent to the sick. Mrs. Claude Nugent was appointed delegate to the Kingston Convention. It was decided to hold a party in the near future with Mrs. Tom McCambridge, convener. Mrs. Walter Hudson had several articles on display she made at the lingerie class held in Napanee. A welcome was extended to the Bath ladies who supplied the program, consisting of songs, community singing, a piano duet and a health paper by Mrs. Ruttan. The musical part closed with a flower contest. Mrs. Fred Henderson, convener, thanked the Bath ladies for their splendid program, which was much enjoyed by all. The meeting closed with the National Anthem, after which lunch was served, consisting of sandwiches, cake, tarts and tea.

Word has just been received that Mrs. Charlie Anderson passed away at Kingston General Hospital on Monday morning. She was taken ill on Saturday and was taken to the hospital at noon on Sunday and operated on, but she never regained consciousness. Her passing is to be much regretted as her husband suffered a stroke four years ago and she attended him very faithfully, but he is left to mourn her loss. The funeral was held this afternoon (Thursday) at 2.30 o'clock at Selby United Church.

Calling out men of certain age classes for medical examination, and if fit, to undergo military training for a period of 30 days within Canada, or the territorial waters thereof.

PROCLAMATION

ATHLONE

CANADA

GEORGE THE SIXTH, by the Grace of God of Great Britain, Ireland and the British Dominions beyond the Seas KING, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.

To All To Whom these Presents shall come or whom the same may in anywise concern,
GREETING:

PROCLAMATION

E. MIALL,
Acting Deputy Minister of Justice, Canada

WHEREAS it is provided by The National Resources Mobilization Act, 1940, that the Governor in Council may make from time to time such orders and regulations requiring persons to place themselves, their services and their property at the disposal of His Majesty in the right of Canada for the use within Canada or the territorial waters thereof, as may be deemed necessary or expedient for securing the public safety, the defence of Canada, the maintenance of public order, or the efficient prosecution of the war, or for maintaining supplies or services essential to the life of the community;

And Whereas pursuant to the powers therein contained, and the provisions of The War Measures Act, our Governor in Council did on the 27th day of August, 1940, make regulations to provide a system for calling out men for military training within Canada and the territorial waters thereof, such regulations being known as the National War Services Regulations, 1940;

And Whereas pursuant to and in accordance with the said Regulations, it has been decided to call out for military training, as aforesaid, every male British Subject who is or has been at any time subsequent to the first day of September, 1939, ordinarily resident in Canada and who, on the first day of July, 1940, had reached the age of twenty-one years but had not yet reached the age on that date of twenty-two years or had reached the age of twenty-two years but had not yet reached the age on that date of twenty-three years, or who had reached the age of twenty-three years but had not yet reached the age on that date of twenty-four years, or who had reached the age of twenty-four years but had not yet reached the age on that date of twenty-five years and who was on the fifteenth day of July, 1940, unmarried or a widower without child or children;

Now Therefore Know Ye that pursuant to The National Resources Mobilization Act, 1940, and the War Measures Act, and pursuant to and in accordance with the National War Services Regulations, 1940, promulgated under the provisions of the said Acts, we do hereby call out the aforesaid classes of men to submit themselves for medical examination and to undergo military training for a period of thirty days within Canada or the territorial waters thereof, and to report at such places and times and in such manner and to such authorities or persons as may be notified to them respectively by a Divisional Registrar of an Administrative Division appointed by the Governor in Council pursuant to the above mentioned regulations.

Of all of which Our Loving Subjects and all others whom these Presents may concern, are hereby required to take notice.

In Testimony Whereof, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Canada to be hereunto affixed. Witness: Our Dear Uncle, Our Right Trusty and Right Well Beloved Cousin and Counsellor, Alexander Augustus Frederick George, Earl of Athlone, Knight of Our Most Noble Order of the Garter, Member of Our Most Honourable Privy Council, Knight Grand Cross of Our Most Honourable Order of the Bath, Grand Master of Our Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George, Knight Grand Cross of Our Royal Victorian Order, Companion of Our Distinguished Service Order, Colonel in Our Army (retired), having the honorary rank of Major-General, One of Our Personal Aides-de-Camp, Governor General and Commander in Chief of Our Dominion of Canada.

At Our Government House, in Our City of Ottawa, this eleventh day of September, in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and forty, and in the fourth year of Our Reign.

By Command, E. H. COLEMAN, Under-Secretary of State.

Cincinnati Reds Clinch Flag For Second Year in Succession Defeating Phillies 4-3 in 13th

TIGERS SPLIT

A's Win Second From Detroit After Tigers Swamp Them in First Game

(By Judson Bailey Associated Sports Writer).

While the American League has been muddling around for two weeks like so many rabbits in a pen Cincinnati Reds have come along to win their second straight National League pennant with an impressive display of decision and dispatch.

Their 4-3 triumph in 13 innings over the Phillies yesterday was their 16th victory in 18 games. That's blistering finish and may have an important bearing on the world series that is just across the threshold.

The American League is locked in a death struggle. Cleveland Indians were so desperate yesterday that they called out Bobby Feller with two days' rest to face the seventh-place Washington Senators. The strategy worked and the Tribe triumphed in both ends of a double-header 3-1 and 2-1, to regain first place.

A's Split With Tigers

Philadelphia Athletics, the same tag-alongs who knocked Cleveland off the top perch Tuesday, scored nine runs in the second game of their double bill at Detroit yesterday to get a split and force the Tigers out of the lead. With New York Yankees and Chicago White Sox dividing their double-feature, this left the standings this way:

	Won	Lost	Pct.	gb	tp
Cleveland ..	84	61	.579	—	9
Detroit	83	61	.575	½	10
New York ..	79	64	.552	4	11
Chicago	79	66	.545	5	9

Cincinnati could hardly be blamed for snickering at that sort of a spectacle, with the lead changing hands six times in 10 days. As far as their own race was concerned, the Reds have been in first place continuously since July 7 and never were worse than third at any time this year.

Vander Meer Clinches Flag

The honor of clinching the flag fell to Johnny Vander Meer, as a unit of added drama. The no-hit king showed signs of his old self as he kept eight hits scattered and struck out 10. Then in the 13th he led off with a double and scored the winning run.

St. Louis Cardinals, of all clubs, gave the Reds an assist by crushing the Dodgers 14-7 with a 17-hit bombardment. This left Brooklyn 12 games behind with 10 to play. The Reds have 13 to go and could lose them all without harm.

In the two other National League games Jim Tobin held his old Pirate teammates to five hits as Boston Bees beat Pittsburgh 4-1 and Stan Hack hit two homers and two singles to help Chicago Cubs hand New York Giants their 10th straight setback 6-4.

The tragedy of the Tigers was that they won their first game from the A's 14-0 and weren't able to save any of this margin for the second session. In the nightcap Detroit got a 6-4 lead and collapsed in the ninth, giving nine runs.

Sox Come Close

Chicago came close to passing over the Yanks into third place. The Sox won the first game 6-3. In the second the Yanks led off with four runs in the first but Chicago came right back with five and added three more in the fourth. Then Twink Selkirk homered with two on the seventh, the Yanks got two more in the eighth and darkness closed the show before Chicago could do anything about it.

St. Louis Browns squelched Boston Red Sox 11-2 with a 14-hit offensive.

OWEN SOUND WINS TITLE

Sarnia, Ont., Sept. 19 —(CP)— Owen Sound Georgians captured the Ontario Lacrosse Association Senior "B" championship last night defeating Sarnia 15-9 for their second successive victory in the best-of-three series. Georgians led 6-5 at halftime.

Bun White, Owen Sound home, was an outstanding star with five goals. Sarnia missed many scoring opportunities and were outsped by the visitors who showed neater combination play.

JERSEY GIANTS, ORIOLES BEATEN FOR SECOND TIME

Newark Bears Score 3-1 Win Over Giants and Rochester Takes Orioles 4 to 1

WINNERS NEARLY IN

Ryba Turned in Best Hurling of the Night With Five-Hit Job

By The Associated Press

Jersey City Giants and Baltimore Orioles, each badly needing a victory to keep in the running in the preliminary round of the Governors' cup playoffs, will have the advantage of playing on home grounds tonight when they square off against Newark Bears and Rochester Red Wings in the third game of the best-of-seven series.

Little Giants and Orioles each dropped the first two games at Newark and Rochester respectively and if defeated tonight their chances of advancing to the final round will be slim.

George Washburn, lanky right hander, pitched the Bears to a 3-1 victory over the J's last night, while Mike Ryba hurled six-hit ball to give the Red Wings a 4-1 triumph over Baltimore.

Washburn allowed only five hits, struck out four and walked three, while his mates collected seven off Johnny Wittig, including Bud Metheney's second home run of the series. The Bears pounded Wittig for all their hits in the first six frames, scoring twice in the fifth inning on four singles and a walk with the bases loaded.

The Wings backed up Ryba's masterful hurling with a nine hit assault on Tommy Hughes and Roy Bruner, who relieved in the eighth. The Orioles scored their run in the fourth inning on three safeties. Umpire-in-Chief Chet Swanson reversed a first-base decision by Umpire Milt Schroeder on Rochester appeal in this inning for the third Baltimore out. The action precipitated a near riot by Baltimore fans and the game was delayed for several minutes.

Cincinnati Manager Hopes Detroit Tigers Will Win Pennant

Philadelphia, Sept. 19 —(AP)— The champions of the National league — Cincinnati Reds — don't care what team wins the American league pennant, but General Manager Warren Giles hopes it's Detroit.

Giles watched his club clinch their second straight flag by coming from behind yesterday to beat the Phillies, 4-3, in 13 innings as Brooklyn lost to St. Louis.

"We'd probably draw more in dollars and cents if we played Cleveland," Giles said. "But on the other hand we might not. There might be 80,000 in the Cleveland stadium one day and then drop off.

"In spite of what a lot of people might think, ball clubs consider more things than money. I don't care who wins the American league pennant—we'll beat whoever it is—but I think we'd do better with Detroit than any other team."

The Reds whooped it up in their dressing room after southpaw Johnny Vander Meer scored the winning run in the 13th, but the big celebration was reserved for tonight. The want Paul Derringer to win his 20th game against the Phils today.

Tommy Carruthers Wins Low Gross Score at Port Hope

Belleville golfers did exceptionally well at the Central Ontario invitation golf tournament played at Port Hope yesterday. Three members of the Belleville Golf Club competed in the tournament, two of whom came down with outstanding scores.

Tommy Carruthers, hard driving Belleville golfer, won the top-flight honours of the day taking the low gross score of the tournament, while Harry Ridley, a club-mate of Carruthers, handed in the low net score, giving Belleville the top honours of the matches.

The three local golfers to compete were Tommy Carruthers, Harry Ridley and Joe Legault, all of whom carded creditable scores, including the two top cards of the day.

E. GOODFELLOW PLAYING COACH OF RED WINGS

VERY POPULAR

Goodfellow Made All-Star Team in 1936-37 and in 1939-40 Seasons

Detroit, Sept. 19—(CP)— Big Ebbie Goodfellow, one of the main reasons why Detroit Red Wings won the National Hockey League championship and Stanley Cup in 1936 and 1937, will run the club this season, leaving Manager Jack Adams free to attend to Detroit's wide-spread farm system.

One of the hardest-hitting defencemen in the N.H.L., Goodfellow apparently will be manager of the team in all but name. In announcing the move yesterday Adams at first said flatly Goodfellow would be manager but later said his title would be "playing coach," running the club during Adams' absences from Detroit.

Adams' announcement confirmed rumors in circulation here for some time that he was to be placed in charge of all of Detroit's hockey affairs. He will become assistant to President James Norris, Sr., retaining his offices here. Clubs in Indianapolis and Omaha and teams in Michigan, Ontario—as well as Red Wing affairs—will be under his direction.

The choice of an aide to Adams, Wings pilot since hockey was introduced here in 1927, rested between Goodfellow and Herbie Lewis, former Wing star forward who managed Indianapolis last season. Adams decided finally on the 33-year-old Ottawan.

Like Eddie Shore, Goodfellow can spark a rally that frequently has led the Wings to victory when they appeared beaten. A converted centre with a terrific shot, he was chosen defenceman on The Canadian Press all-star team in the 1936-37 and 1939-40 seasons and made the alternate team in 1935-36.

Splendid prizes were given by the club to all winners. The day's tournament was arranged by Games Chairman Cliff Argue.

London County Hall Somewhat Damaged

London, Sept. 19 —(CP)— The London County Hall was damaged in a recent air raid, Charles Latham, leader of the London county council, disclosed today. The hall, one of the largest and most modern buildings of London, is just across Westminster Bridge from the Houses of Parliament.

"Although the fabric of the County Hall has received some damage," Latham said, "I want to assure the public of London that the civil defence and other services of the L.C.C. are being maintained."

They do say that statistics show one out of every 200 persons in Britain is named Smith. This, no doubt, is one reason why there'll always be an England, for does not the poem may, "The smith a mighty man is he, with large and sinewy hands, and the muscles of his brawny arms are strong as iron bands"?

The World Series opens October 2 and the National Hockey League gets going November 2—leaving sportdom a scant month to transfer its animosity from that——umpire to that——referee!

As the baseball world watches the closest pennant race in the 4-year-old history of the American League, "Mild Bill" McKechnie and his Cincinnati Reds can take a breather before the annual autumn classic gets under way the second of next month. The first two games will be played in the National League champions' park, which will be Crosley Field in Cincinnati, with the next three games scheduled to be played in the park of the American League winner (take your choice, but don't give too many odds), with possible sixth and seventh games to be played back at old Redland Field. All games will commence at 1.30 p.m. (EST). Should either New York or Boston emerge winners in the junior loop and meet Cincinnati—one day will be allowed for travel between the second and third games No travel days will be necessary providing, Cleveland, Detroit or Chicago are the American League standard-holders in the 1940 world baseball series.

Do you remember when wrestler Yvon Robert went "berserk" before a crowd of 6,000 fans at Montreal a year ago today after striking his head on a post. He lost the bout to Ernie Dusek who retained his world's professional wrestling championship title.

In the near future, next week perhaps, the secondary schools of the district will convene at the annual Bay of Quinte group meeting of the C.O.S.S.A. It is hoped the district secondary school sports moguls do not curtail their years sporting programs too severely on account of war activities. After careful consideration both the Northern and Eastern Ontario regions decided to continue Inter-scholastic sporting programs as usual in an effort to provide as much amusement and recreation as possible during a period when much serious thought is directed in other channels. At the same time we wish to welcome Mr. Cliff Yerex, of Toronto, who has been appointed athletic director at the Belleville Collegiate in the absence of Lieut. George Laughlin of the 34th Battery (C.A.S.F.).

This lad Dick Bishop, who wrestled Tom George, the pudgy Greek in a 45-minute semi-final draw here last Monday, is a former British Empire Games grappler. Dick represented England in the 1938 British Empire Games as a middleweight, turning professional at the conclusion of the games. At that time Bishop was a middleweight and as fast a ring workman as one could wish to see. Outside of the ring Dick is a quiet unassuming young fellow and as likeable as they come. Efforts to match him with the lithe Pedro Valdez for next Monday night are in the making. A Valdez-Bishop semi-final scrap should not only prove an attraction, but it would bring together two speedy grapplers, who know all of the ropes and ply their trade in an unadulterated style to assure the patrons of some honest-to-goodness wrestling for a change.

It will be the Boston Red Sox chain with which Ralph (High-pockets) McCabe, former Belleville hurler, will get his trial next spring. In Oshawa they say Detroit, it was rumoured here that the Yankee chain had signed McCabe through Newark, but we have it on the very best authority that Bob Shawkey scouted McCabe personally for his old friend Eddie Collins, business manager of the Boston Red Sox. Shawkey is interested in Canadian mining and frequents Northern Ontario and Quebec. He saw McCabe in action several times as he pitched for the Canadian Malartic team over the border in Quebec. Incidentally Shawkey is personally looking after McCabe's tryouts next spring.

"Soup" Campbell's Oshawa "mushballers" shaded the fast C.P.R. nine in their home game with the Toronto team in the O.A.S.A. play-downs last night 6-5. Bus Benson, who hurled fastball on an outlaw league in Toronto all season, was on the hilltop for Hog Town, which made the win all the sweeter. "Prim" Whitely, pinch-hitting for Skipper Campbell in the eighth met one of Benson's fast ones, with two aboard, and it was over the fence and out of sight to give Oshawa victory. Now, we're more sure than ever that the Shell 'Oilers' had the best intermediate softball team in the province.

Sport Spice — That nine run splurge of the A's in the 9th must have really hurt Detroit's baseball feelings yesterday..... That rally not only lost the game for the Tigers, but lost them the league leadership also, as Cleveland were beating the Senators twice with Bob Feller hurling his 26th win of the season....When the Reds cinched the senior loop yesterday, it marked the fourth pennant winner "Mild Bill" McKechnie had piloted, the Pirates in '25; Cardinals in '28 and Reds in '39 and '40....See where Jack Adams has nominated Eddie Goodfellow as manager of the Detroit Red Wings, while "Pudgy Jawn" takes over the job of managing director, accounting only to President James Norris....Today the league leading Indians have nine games to play, Detroit ten, and the Yankees and the White Sox nine....President Hardridge, of the American League, is preparing for any eventualities, insomuch as plans for a possible three-way tie have been formulated just in case, but next week's Detroit-Cleveland series will doubtless tell the tale.

$16,060,000 WILL COMPLETE LOAN

Lists Will be Kept Open All Week and It is Expected Loan Will be Subscribed

Ottawa, Sept. 19 (CP)—The second war loan now has only $16,060,000 to go before attaining the $300,000,000 objective. Books will be kept open for applications for loan bonds until the end of the week.

Investment in those bonds is an investment in freedom, hope and mercy, L. W. Brockington, K.C., counsellor to the war committee of the Cabinet, says.

"Our Government wants your money to help our youth to win," he told the nation last night, speaking over the National Network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

"Salvation for you and me comes from the agony of some one else. It is agony heroically endured—an agony beside which money and wealth are as nothing. There is not much you and I can do but at least we can show our patriotism by loyally and promptly doing what we are asked to do."

Canadian investors could not get finer security than Dominion Government Bonds, for Canada was a "company that will never be wound up."

Will Pay Hitler Interest

Capital was merely seized in Germany, he said. One did not hear of Hitler paying interest—but Mr. Brockington hoped Hitler would be paid back in compounded interest some day "by the retribution of God and man."

The people who supported this loan were helping create the greatest time-bomb in history, "a time-bomb whose explosion will mark the dawn of a new world of hope."

The Bank of Canada announced last night subscriptions had reached a total of $283,940,000 in the first nine days of the campaign and that books would remain open at least until the end of the week.

Sales agencies reported a widespread response to appeals on behalf of the loan from coast to coast. Individual subscriptions again reached a high peak for the campaign yesterday and indications were that many private subscribers were again increasing their earlier subscriptions.

Yesterday's increase of $11,593,800 in total cash subscriptions compared with an increase of $10,048,100 Tuesday.

Military Training Will Improve Health of Nation

By GLADYS ARNOLD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Sept. 19—(CP)—In addition to imparting military knowledge to Canadian youth the plan to call men for compulsory 30-day training periods in militia centres was seen by Dr. H. H. Christie today as a means of improving the health of the nation.

Dr. Christie, newly-appointed supervisor of military training medical services under War Services Minister Gardiner, has already taken up his duties in Ottawa. He came here from Esterhazy, Sask., where he was a practising physician and President of the Saskatchewan Medical Association.

In an interview he said one objective of the training plan was to bring to first class condition the men called for training whose medical examination places them in the lower health brackets.

"Even if the war ended tomorrow this military training probably would go on and have highly beneficial results in raising the whole health level of the Dominion," said Dr. Christie. "It is our desire to see that these men who begin with a health handicap reach a place where they can be classed as perfectly fit."

At present single men of 21 to 24 years inclusive, and widowers of those ages without children, are on call and liable to compulsory military training. Plans call for the first batch of 21-year-olds, numbering some 30,000, to start the initial training period in Canada's 39 camps about Oct. 9.

Is This the Reason You Are Constipated?

If you're wondering why your bowels don't work right . . . stop and think about what you eat. Bread, meat, eggs and potatoes. All good nourishing foods . . . but lacking in "bulk" after the digestive process. And you need "bulk!" Food that gives the bowels something to work on . . . to help them move.

If it's this lack of "bulk" that's causing your constipation, Kellogg's All-Bran is just what you need. After digestion a soft mass remains which helps your bowels move. In addition, All-Bran gives you Nature's intestinal tonic, vitamin B1. Eat this tasteful ready-to-eat cereal every day, drink plenty of water, and enjoy happier days. All-Bran is made by Kellogg in London, Can. Sold by every grocer.

14 LIBYAN NATIVE DIVISIONS USED GRAZIANI REPORTS

Rome Communique Admits British Fleet and Air Force Shelled and Bombed 350 Miles of Coastline

RHODES, LERO BOMBED

Rome, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Italy is using 14 Libyan native divisions (about 170,000 men) in addition to Italian troops in the drive into Egypt, Marshal Rodolfo Graziani reported to Premier Mussolini today.

The Italian Commander's report was made as a high command communique disclosed that the British fleet and air force had bombed and shelled Italian positions along 350 miles of the Egyptian and Libyan coast, as well as in East Africa and the Dodecanese Islands, in the Eastern Mediterranean.

Graziani was reported to have told Mussolini he used 2,000 motor trucks in the eastward advance.

The British counter-offensive by air and water was reported by the Italian High Command on a 350-mile front of the Egyptian and Libyan Coast. In addition bombing attacks were made on Rhodes and Lero in the Dodecanese Islands and seven Italian bases in East Africa.

New Announcement On Joint Waterway Development Expected

Ottawa, Sept. 19 —(CP)— There were indications in Ottawa that exchanges between this capital and Washington have approached a stage when some new announcement can be made on proposals for joint development of power resources involved in the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterways project.

According to unofficial information obtained this morning, however, no more than a general statement on the progress of negotiations may be expected for some time.

It was understood that fresh representations from Washington formed part of the agenda for discussion at a cabinet council meeting scheduled for today.

There was a possibility of some comment on the situation from Prime Minister Mackenzie King this evening. Last Tuesday the Prime Minister said he might make a statement in this connection "later this week."

Unprecedented industrial expansion in Canada and the United States, engendered by the war, caused the governments of both countries to turn with renewed hope and determination to the waterways project late last year.

Negotiations between delegations of Canadian and United States experts were held at Ottawa and Washington last January, and there have been constant diplomatic exchanges since then.

King and Queen Visiting Chelsea Heartily Cheered

London, Sept. 19 —(CP—Cable)— The King and Queen visited bombed areas in Chelsea today and were cheered by residents who stood amid the ruins of their homes.

One 66-year-old woman, who had taken shelter with an old woman friend, said neither had a scratch.

"Wasn't it wonderful, Your Majesty?"

The Queen agreed, remarking that "You must have been badly shaken."

The woman replied, "Oh yes, but I'm quite all right now."

The King and Queen later visited a block of damaged flats at Marylebone. Police on motorcycles had to clear the way yard by yard. Bus passengers got an unexpected close-up of Their Majesties as the royal car crawled through the crowd.

In one street they spoke to an A.R.P. squad who had tunnelled for 7 1-2 hours in the ruins of a doctor's house to rescue his daughter. The men had to use their bodies as props to hold up debris but got her out safely.

Canada Shipping Anti-Tetanus Serum To Great Britain

London, Sept. 19 —(CP—Cable)— Canada is reported to be shipping immediately 50,000 packages of anti-tetanus serum for use here.

The shipments are being made after an appeal by the British Red Cross to Col. George Nasmith of Canadian Red Cross. Col. Nasmith cabled to Canada and arrangements have been made for supplies to come from Connaught laboratories.

Maj.-Gen. O. L. Robinson of the British Red Cross said Canada was approached because more reserve supplies of the serum are needed.

London's County Hall Hit by High Explosive Bomb, Two Are Killed

By HAROLD FAIR
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 19 (CP).—Hitler's night raiders dumped a high explosive bomb on London's county hall early today and killed two waitresses in the noble greystone building across Westminster bridge from the Houses of Parliament.

The bomb tore a 30-feet deep cavern in the members' terrace of this building which houses the London County Council, governing body of a sprawling metropolitan area.

Council leader Charles Latham, who succeeded Herbert Morrison when he entered the government, issued a statement saying that "although the fabric of county hall has received some damage, I want to assure the public of London that civil defence and other services of the L.C.C. are being maintained."

Prominent Buildings Hit.

Other prominent buildings damaged included the public record office in Chancerly Lane, the inner temple where the library clock tower was hit and a collection of law books scattered, and the British museum, the courtyard of which was damaged.

Fifteen persons were injured among 300 people working in the county building when a tremendous explosion rocked the structure. Many workers were blown from their feet while glass and debris came crashing down. Most windows in the council chambers were blown out while the chairman's seat leaned forward at a drunken angle to which it had been pushed by a massive door which had blown in upon it.

A majority of the council seats were covered with dust but it appeared that the chamber escaped serious damage. The dome over its entrance was smashed, however, while a large luxurious carpet was strewn with broken glass.

Blackout Curtains Destroyed

Fire broke out on the second and third floors but finally was subdued. Blackout curtains were destroyed but many of the staff carried on their work with light from torches.

The granite wall above the river was partly blown away. Windows toward the back and on the opposite side of the river were broken.

The small calibre high explosive bomb falling in the court yard of the British museum shattered front windows and struck the stone boundary of the courtyard pathways, but made only a small crater.

Lord Croft, Under-Secretary for War, disclosed that a large number of incendiary bombs had fallen recently at Chelsea Royal Hospital for invalid and aged soldiers, but he said that the prisoners had successfully extinguished them. On another occasion a heavy high explosive bomb burst at the gateway but there were no casualties.

He told of pensioners over 80 being restrained with difficulty with attempting to help quench fires.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London today endured the 13th day of the Luftwaffe's accelerated blitzkrieg as hints appeared that the war might take a new turn as a result of conferences in Rome between German Foreign Minister Ribbentrop, the Italian military hierarchy and Spanish representatives.

Britain's capital estimated its dead from last night's raids at 90, its seriously hurt at 350, not a high figure comparatively, but witnesses described the raids as the most intense of the war. Against this the Air Ministry counted 48 German aircraft downed.

Royal Air Force bombers returned across the channel from raids that blasted invasion ports from Ostend to Le Havre and watchers on the cliffs of Dover reported they had seen flames stretch for miles along the French coast last night.

Wind Picks Up

The planes had scarcely returned when the wind which dropped yesterday began to pick up and in a few hours a gale was whistling down the channel again, raising a sea that coastal observers said would prevent any German invasion attempt for the time being.

While axis representatives met in Rome o decided the future of their partnership a violent battle broke out in the Libyan desert where British ground forces attacked advancing Italian forces and Royal Naval units poured shells into Italian reinforcements seeking to reach Sidi Barrani from Bardia on the coast. It appeared the British high command might have decided the time had arrived to halt the Italian advance which now has extended its supply lines 60 miles.

Might Switch Troops

Persons speculating on the outcome of the Rome meeting foresaw a possible switch of German ground forces to the eastern Theatre, especially if the Germans conclude the season is too far advanced to attempt an invasion of Britain. Some support was lent to this theory by news yesterday from Malta that a German Junkers was among aircraft shot down there in a raid.

What form of assistance Hitler could give Mussolini in a Mediterranean campaign is problematical because of the difficulty in transporting troops to Africa against the superiority of the British Mediterranean fleet which the Italians so far have not seen fit to challenge.

It was considered Spain might fit into the Axis picture at this point. Franco's country, still staggering under the consequences of its long civil war, could not help much in a military way, but for a consideration—or a few promises—might be induced to give its senior partners bases in Spanish Morocco where they could annoy Gibraltar and seek to block the Straits of Gibraltar with gunfire.

The prospect of Germany reinforcing Italian troops in Libya and Egypt, however, is no brighter than Italian prospects of reinforcing them herself, because Germany has practically no fleet left, apart from submarines and mosquito boats—all presumably outside the Mediterranean.

The feebleness of the Italian effort to sew up the Mediterranean was seen today in the disclosure that Egypt is still importing all its coal from Britain and that shipments are coming through the straits.

County Court

Seven traffic cases were disposed of in today's session of County Police Court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., at the Court House.

Charges of careless driving were heard against Marjorie S. Elliott, A. Yardwood, James Hilts, H. Finkelstein, Joseph Rubino and George Ryckman with the same disposition made in each case, fines of $5.00 and costs being imposed and paid.

A charge of operating a truck without first obtaining a Public Commercial Vehicle license was heard against J. H. McEwen, Toronto trucker. A written plea of guilty was accepted and a fine of $20.00 and costs imposed.

A charge of failing to notify the Department of Highways of his change of residence was dismissed against F. O. John D. Twigg of the R.C.A.F., after the accused had assured the court he had procured his automobile in Toronto and the firm to make the sale had made out his ownership card.

Motorcycle Patrolman Hatch presented six and Constable Caldwell four cases before the court.

Although not present a conviction was registered against Maxwell Cleary, Toronto, who had been summoned into today's court on a charge of careless driving. "Had it not have been for the efforts of a truck driver this man would have caused a serious accident by cutting in on Highway No. 2 west of the city," disclosed Constable Hatch. A fine of $7.00 and costs was imposed by the court.

'KOREAN RESTORATION ARMY' SET UP HEADQUARTERS

Hong Kong, Sept. 19 (AP)—The Chinese Central News Agency reported today the headquarters of a "Korean Restoration Army" was established yesterday near Chungking, seat of General Chiang Kai-Shek's Government.

New York, Sept. 19.—(AP) — Domei, the Japanese News Agency, said in a broadcast from Tokyo today that the Chinese government had seized control of the section of the French-owned Yunnan Railway in Chinese territory.

This railway, which runs from the Indo-China port of Haiphong to Kunming, capital of China's Yunnan Province, hitherto has been under French management. French authorities have accepted in principle Japanese demands for the right to use the Indo-China section to move Japanese troops for a thrust into Southwestern China.

Japan Denies Charge Over Thailand's Demands Upon Indo-China

New York, Sept. 19.—(AP)—The Japanese Foreign Office denies that Japan had anything to do with Thailand's (Siam's) Territorial demands on French Indo-China, Domei, Japanese News Agency, said today in a broadcast from Tokyo.

The denial referred to a charge by Havas, official French News Agency, that Thailand's Extreme Nationalists, under guidance by Japan, had compelled the government to make the demands.

Thailand is asking the return of territory in the Laos and Cambodia regions, which territory she claims was hers before the expansion of French Indo-China late in the nineteenth century.

U.S. FIREMEN MAY STUDY LONDON'S METHODS

Stillwater, Okla.—Twenty-five U. S. firemen will go to London to study new methods of quenching bomb-set fires, if United States and British officials approve. J. Ray Pence, Stillwater fire chief and secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Fire Department Instructors, said many fire chiefs are eager to go.

TWO ARE KILLED NEAR WOODSTOCK

Auto in Which Men Were Riding Hit Squarely by Passenger Train

Woodstock, Ont., Sept. 19 (CP).—George R. Dryden, Toronto, and W. B. MacFarlane, Woodstock, were instantly killed shortly before noon today when the auto in which they were riding was demolished by westbound Canadian Pacific Railway passenger train No. 21, about 2½ miles west of here.

The fatality occurred at Governors' Road, a county thoroughfare and unprotected rail crossing.

Divisional C.P.R. officials said they had been advised by the engine crew that the locomotive's whistle was blowing and its bell was ringing as it approached the crossing.

The auto, a light sedan, registered in the name of John W. Hay, Toronto, was struck almost squarely by the engine and was flung into a ditch. Bodies of the two occupants were mangled badly. Authorities said the driver of the car hadn't been determined.

The C.P.R. train was in charge of Conductor Frank Perry and Engineer R. Taylor. Both are Toronto residents.

MacFarlane was an implement dealer and Dryden a sales representative for an implement firm.

The machine was hurled high into the air and shattered into many pieces by the impact. The men were returning from Embro village where they had made a business call earlier in the morning.

VON RIBBENTROP MEETS IL DUCE

Gayda Says Other European Nations Are Involved 'Not as Spectators Alone'

Rome, Sept. 19—(CP)— Hitler's Foreign Minister, Ribbentrop, conferred with Mussolini this afternoon presumably on the next turn in the war.

Linked with the talks was the possibility that Spain might be drawn into the conflict. At least to the extent of permitting an axis drive across her territory against Gibraltar.

The axis powers seek a "totalitarian" victory over Britain according to Virginio Gayda, and in this fight to the finish other European nations are involved "not as spectators alone."

This comment by Mussolini's mouthpiece was interpreted as a reference to Spain's potential role.

The Italian Foreign Minister, Count Ciano and German and Italian Ambassadors to each other's capital, Von MacKensen and Dino Alfieri, respectively, were present at the Palazzo Venezia meeting.

Ribbentrop came to Rome on an armored train like that given to Mussolini by Hitler. German troops manned anti-aircraft guns on the carriages.

Hollywood Stars May Not Be Drafted Experts Believe

Washington, Sept. 19—(AP)— It's a good guess today that none of Hollywood's handsome young leading men will be drafted from the studios into army training camps.

Selective service experts privately expressed the unofficial opinion that stage, radio and movie stars probably would be deferred from service because of their importance to a so-called "essential industry"—essential, that is, in maintaining civilian morale by entertainment.

Among the better known and higher paid Hollywood figures who are within the draft age and more or less without dependents, except perhaps their agents and some ex-wives, are:

Nine Belgium And French Ports Severely Bombed

London, Sept. 19 —(CP)— Royal Air Force bombers struck at nine French and Belgian ports last night causing "much damage" to shipping and military stores and starting many fires, the Air Ministry announced tonight. The raids also covered military distribution centres in Belgium and Germany. Seven British planes failed to return.

DIVIDEND BY BK. OF ENGLAND

London.—Directors of the Bank of England met in the vaults far below street level today and, after hearing the report of Montagu Norman, the governor, declared a six per cent dividend. Mr. Norman observed that the bank had been "somewhat upset and interrupted getting on with its daily business." He also said precautions have been taken which are expected to "ensure the bank's business will be carried on through all emergencies."

Two Fine Addresses At V. A. Baptist Church Congregational Rally

Victoria Avenue Baptist Church held their Sunday School and Congregational Annual Supper Rally in the Sunday School rooms on Wednesday evening. Entertainment was provided by some of Belleville's outstanding artists and inspirational addresses were given by two well-known Baptist laymen from Century Baptist Church, Toronto, in the persons of Mr. Sid Johnson, president of Century Brotherhood and leader in Young People's work and Mr. Floyd E. Reynolds, assistant Sunday School superintendent and Church Clerk of Century Church.

Following a sumptuous repast, community singing of favorite hymns was indulged in, with Mr. Howard Hall in charge. Miss Anna Lounsberry who recently resigned as Sunday School secretary, a post which she had filled faithfully for many years, was presented with a magnificent electric ceiling fixture. Taken completely by surprise, Miss Lounsberry expressed her thanks with her customary charm of manner.

The minister, Rev. C. T. Olmstead, addressed the assembly in a few words of welcome, to which Mr. Howard Hall responded.

Mr. John W. Deacon's splendid voice was heard in the singing of "Danny Boy" and "Day by Day." Mr. James Bankier, who sings patriotic songs so feelingly, contributed with "The Guard Ship" and "There'll Always Be An England." Miss Phyllis May sang beautifully "Jeanne With the Light Brown Hair" and "Little Yellow Dog." Mr. Alec Gordon supplied piano accompaniment for the vocalists. Two humorous readings were given by Miss Mildred Lloyd which sent the audience into spasms of laughter, "A Philadelphia Mother Visits School" and "Mud Pies."

Churches Should Be Filled

Mr. Sid Johnson of Toronto, who was introduced by Mr. W. Hales, spoke on "Our Responsibility to the local Church". "We are living in a world of chaos such as has never been seen before" declared Mr. Johnson, "and our churches should be crowded every Sunday, calling on our God to help the stricken peoples in our Empire. If the church is to march on to victory and fulfil her mission that all men might be made free it will only be when we have shed our selfishness and pride. Christianity is not a straight-jacket that takes all the joy out of life. Christianity breaks the shackles of superstition and sin and gives us the freedom, only a new birth in Christ can give. The Church of Christ has been kept alive by blood and sacrifice down through the ages. It can be kept alive today only by blood and sacrifice. Let us do a man's job in our duty to the church. Let us take up the tools of service and put aside the toys of childhood, the petty grievances, the childish pleasures".

Habit of Prayer Neglected

Mr. Floyd E. Reynolds, the second speaker, was introduced by Mr. Chas. Franklin. Mr. Reynolds spoke on "Prayer Life". "If the church has failed in some respects it is owing to the fact that we have neglected our prayer life", stated Mr. Reynolds. "We are suffering from the discontinuing of the family altar and without the proper home life where is our church life and our national life?" Mr. Reynolds said that the best time to pray was in the morning when we are rested and refreshed, when we can give our best to God with a clear perspective of our needs, not to wait until night when we are all tired out after a hard day's work, to mumble few unintelligible words in a hurry and then jump into bed and forget about it.

"Days of National Prayer are fine," stated Mr. Reynolds, "but we shouldn't wait for someone to tell us to pray. Some people treat God like some celestial fire brigade. They wait until everything goes haywire before they call on God. Prayer is not so many words offered up to God but is the sincere desire of the soul and some of the best prayers are unconscious ones. Prayer was one of the most potent forces in the life of Jesus Christ. If it was necessary for Him to pray how much more is it necessary for us to pray".

The meeting was brought to a close with Mr. G. F. Smith preacher at Sidney Baptist Church, pronouncing the benediction.

Nazi Press Clamors For 'Unlimited' Bomb Warfare

Berlin, Sept. 19—(CP)—The Nazi press clamored today for "unlimited" bomb warfare on Britain in retaliation for the claimed bombing of a German hospital.

It followed cautious admissions that the aerial struggle "might" go on through the winter, in contrast to previous Nazi boasts that Britain would be knocked out quickly.

Der Angriff, Propaganda Minister Goebbels' paper, demanded "thousand-fold retaliation" for the alleged bombing at Bethel, Prussia, in which the high command claimed nine children were killed and 12 injured by Royal Air Force night raiders.

Another neyspaper, Hachtausgabe, said that "hereafter not the slightest consideration need be taken" for British civilians.

Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung thundered that "the scoring of accounts will be terrible."

WAR IS BATTLE OF TWO CODES

Norse President Hambro Urges Youth to be Great in Courage Alone as Before Witnesses

Winnipeg, Sept. 19 (CP)—Carl J. Hambro, President of the Norwegian Parliament at the time of the German invasion told the Ninth General Council of the United Church in a brief address last night that the present war was "a fight between two different codes of honor, morally and intellectually...... A struggle put on paper by German philosophers of which Hitler is but the natural outcome."

Dr. Gordon Sisco, Clerk of the Council, introduced Mr. Hambro as "Former President of Norway" but Mr. Hambro interrupted amid cheers and handclapping. "I am not the former.... I am the President of Norway," he said.

Greatness of Courage

"I trust that the United Church of Canada will educate the young man of this country to be as great in his courage alone as he would be in front of witnesses," Mr. Hambro said in his address. "For that is the spirit we need to win this war or any war."

Some people seemed to be under the impression that the fighting forces of the Baltic countries were weakened by religious groups who believed in passive resistance, he continued. This was entirely untrue. The first persons of Sweden to offer themselves to fight for Finland against Russia were members of the Oxford Group of that country.

Says Norway's Fall Cost Germany Heavily

Norway, in holding out against Germany for 60 days, lasted longer than any other nation which fell before the Reich's advance. Even then there was no surrender. Norway simply could not fight on. British and French munitions could not be utilized.

Norway's fall was not without loss for Germans, he said. In the invasion Germany lost an estimated 70,000 tons of shipping and 35,000 lives. In land battles 65,000 Germans lost their lives and a great many more were wounded.

"Vast Expansion" In Agriculture Forecast by Minister

Listowel, Ont., Sept. 19—(CP) — A "vast expansion" in Canadian agriculture was forecast today by Agriculture Minister P. M. Dewan of Ontario, speaking at the opening of the Listowel Fair. He said he looked for this expansion "within the next couple of years."

"We are bound to have expanded markets for bacon, poultry products and concentrated milk products. Our chief competitor countries in the supplying of these products to Britain have been overrun by Germany. She is almost sure to turn to us for increased quantities.

"The increased quantities of eggs exported to Britain this year and the recently-enlarged exports of bacon are, I think, a definite indication of what is going to happen. This looks like a long-drawn-out war and while we may have almost suffered from over-production of farm products in late years, yet under present international conditions it is much safer to over-produce than under-produce.

"We must not fail Britain at any time during this conflict when she demands increased supplies of concentrated foodstuff."

Dud Bombs Made In Czecho-Slovakia Contain Sand

Victoria, Sept. 19—(CP)— Dud bombs dropped by German raiders over England have been made in Nazi-annexed Czecho-Slovakia, according to word received by a Victorian from a relative in Northampton. The Victorian, who wished to remain anonymous, said the letter described a bomb that fell in Northampton and failed to explode. It was roped off for a week, then examined and found to bear a stamp showing it had been made in Czecho Slovakia. It proved to be filled with san instead of an explosive.

TUG TAKES OFF MORE CREW MEMBERS OF INCEMORE

By H. E. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

Port Menier, Anticosti Island, Que., Sept. 19—(CP)—The salvage tug Foundation Aranmore arrived today to assist the grounded British freighter Incemore and removed some of the 22 crew-members still aboard the wreck.

The number of men removed by the tug from the battered freighter which grounded on the rugged Anticosti coast during a storm Monday was unknown here. The only information reaching this settlement was that some of the men had been taken aboard the tug and that she was standing by.

BROADCASTING OFFICE PARTIALLY WRECKED

New York.—The London office of the Columbia Broadcasting System has been partially wrecked by German bombs, Edward R. Murrow, chief of the C.B.S. European staff, said in a broadcast from London heard here last night. Murrow said that the two top floors of the building were in the street but that a survey is necessary before the complete damage can be determined.

Failure to Produce Registration Cards Has Embarrassing Results

Canada, as well as the Empire, is at war with a common enemy. A few short weeks ago the Dominion Government conducted a National Registration for the express purpose of ascertaining data relative to all persons in Canada over the age of 16 years. Every true Canadian and even aliens, who have taken up residence in Canada, registered, that is unless the individual sought to cloak his or her presence or identity. During the period of National Registration every person in the Dominion to adhere to the orders of the Government obtained a registration certificate, which is their personal property and which should be carried on their person at all times if only for identification during these times of war. In Belleville today, two cases of laxity or indifference regarding the possession of National Registration certificates were reported, one in the police court and the other in city police circles. Some thoughtless people may not take the matter seriously, but the fact still remains the Government of Canada has enacted legislation ordering all citizens to carry their registration certificates at all times, under the penalty of a severe fine or imprisonment when found in default and it is up to them to pay heed.

In Jail For Three Weeks

For example, a man named Thomas Scollard, a Toronto war veteran, has been incarcerated in the Hastings County Jail for nearly three weeks, the main reason being he was unable to produce his National Registration card after being apprehended on a charge of minor intoxication. During his period of confinement in the County jail Scollard has written no less than three letters to Ottawa seeking a duplication of his registration card which he told police court officials he had lost. Scollard contended he had registered in Toronto and had lost his registration certificate, a story the court officials did not discount, but the law demands the production of the individual registration card at all times. Scollard, as an example, has languished in gaol for three weeks, not altogether as the result of being convicted of intoxication, but his initial remand was due to the failure to produce his National Registration card.

Today before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., Scollard after having sworn to an affidavit stating he had registered in Toronto, was in receipt of a letter from Ottawa which assured him no duplication could be made at this early date, as complete tabulations had not been completed as yet.

THEREFORE DON'T LOSE YOUR REGISTRATION CARD.

However, Scollard was given a letter from the Dominion Government and after His Worship read the contents, he released a man who had been careless with his registration card. This business of carrying one's registration card is important to the Dominion's war effort, as a lost registration card in the hands of an enemy alien might prove disastrous to the loser.

Others Leave Cards at Home

As another minor example—While patrolling the city streets shortly before 3.00 a.m. today, Constables Arnott and Ellis came upon a parked car containing six persons. The hour was late, the officers merely conformed to their duty and asked them to produce their registration cards. The result proved rather embarrassing to a local young lady who could not produce her National Registration card, and was taken to the police station where she remained until her sister was aroused and produced the necessary identification.

One of her companions, George Chard of Frankford, found himself in a similar predicament. However, Chard could not arouse his relatives and after much trouble was instructed to return to Belleville and appear in court on Friday. Chard contended he had left his registration card at home, but the investigating authorities have instructions regarding such indifference on the part of the individual.

The National Registration Act says all residents of Canada from 16 years upward must at all times be in possession of their National Registration certificate; therefore, if the individual inclines to disregard this law, the offender should be prepared to take the consequence.

German Library of Information is Held Immune to State Laws

New York, Sept. 19. — (AP)— Holding the German Library of Information to be an agency of the German Government and thus diplomatically immune to State laws, Magistrate Charles Keutgen today dismissed charges of penal code violations against Dr. Matthias Schmitz, director of the organization.

"However contemptible the defendant may be in other respects", said the Court's decision, "he is charged here with a narrow, technical offence and a great disservice would be done to any government of laws if the defendants were to be punished otherwise than in accordance with law".

Former Magistrate Joseph Goldstein, who had accused the library of being a propaganda organization, had Dr. Schmitz summoned into court six days ago, on a charge of failing to register the library as a business corporation.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Bidding was slow but persistent in today's stock market and leading issues managed to add fractions to their recent advance.

Scattered Steels, Aircrafts, Coppers and Rails leaned forward from the start and, near the fourth hour, plus signs were in the majority.

Canadian issues were sluggish. Dome Mines and Distillers Seagram held unchanged while other issues were inactive. Canada 4s, among Bonds, dipped 1-4 point.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 19—(CP)—As volume improved in the early afternoon on the Stock Exchange, the market began to present a fairly steady to firm tone. Sales at one o'clock reached 69,000 shares.

Chief activity in Golds was centered in MacLeod Cockshutt, Northern Canada and Upper Canada. Northern gained 7 cents and the other two issues were showing gains of 4. MacLeod earlier had touched 2.40, up 9.

Abitibi Preferred, was an active industrial feature, gaining 1 1-8 to 5 3-8. Walkers also was firm, advancing 1-2 to 40. Throughout the rest of the Industrial list the tone was irregularly higher with most changes confined to fractions.

Base Metals were ahead in the average. Waite Amulet, Noranda, Sherritt and International Nickel all showing gains. Pend Oreille was weaker. Trading in Western Oils was negligible.

AIR CADET CORPS

The Minister said the first branch of the Air Cadet League is already established at Westmount, Que., where the first president is G. B. Foster. Toronto men have expressed interest in the plan and Vancouver people are anxious to revive an organization of the same type which has been inactive for some time.

The Minister thought it would be time to call a general meeting to discuss organization and program after branches of the Air Cadet League have come into being in various cities.

Bishop To Be Hon. President

Air Vice-Marshal W. A. Bishop has consented to be the First Honorary President of the League and Maj. Power said he assumed that training would be carried on through public schools. Asked whether Air Cadets would be given preference if they sought to join the R.C.A.F., he said there had been some suggestion that this be done.

The Minister gave the present strength of the R.C.A.F. as 26,500 of whom 16,600 are under the training plan.

Maj. Power remarked that work had been started on the $1,000,000 improvement and expansion project at the Newfoundland Airport and that building operations in Canada are so far ahead that buildings marked for completion in 1941 will all be finished in 1940.

THREE BROTHERS KILLED IN RAIDS

Galt, Ont., Sept. 19 —(CP)— R. Holland of Galt received a cable today, advising him of the death in air raids on London of three of his brothers.

The cable was signed by Holland's father and said: "Harry, Charles, George killed in air raids. Everyone else is safe."

Two other brothers and a sister live in England, the Galt man being the only one of the family in Canada. He is a veteran of the First Great War. He was at work in a local foundry when the message reached him.

DUKE OF KENT ESCAPES BOMB

Time Bomb Explodes Within 80 Yards of Car in Which He is Visiting Bombed Areas

London, Sept. 19—(CP Cable) — A time bomb exploded today within 80 yards of a car in which the Duke of Kent was visiting bombed areas in southwest London. He was not injured.

The Duke's car was travelling along a road and came to a roped off barrier bearing the notice "danger—unexploded bomb." The car stopped and at the same moment the bomb went off.

There was a loud report and rubble shot up from the front garden of a house a short distance up the road. Two seconds later a shower of stones and earth descended on the Duke's car.

When the shower subsided the Duke got out of the car, watched by people who had been attracted by the noise of the explosion. They crowded around him, a number of women shaking the Duke's hand.

Smiling and apparently unperturbed, the Duke walked to the place where the bomb exploded. There he met men of the Royal Engineers' bomb disposal squad and spoke to them.

A Sergeant said the bomb had lain in the garden for some time. They had been unable to move the bomb and caused it to explode after taking precautions to see that it should do no damage.

The men cheered the Duke when he departed from the area. Women patted him on the back, one shouting "it's grand to see you here."

PLANS TO REMOVE JAP CIVILIANS

Japan to Take Step as She is Allowed Limited Right to Facilities in Indo-China Against China

Hanoi, French Indo-China, Sept. 19 (AP).—A Japanese spokesman announced today that all Japanese civilians in Indo-China, including diplomatic representatives, would be removed by special train and boat, starting tomorrow, in advance of the prospective arrival of Japanese armed forces.

Japan has been granted limited military facilities in this French colony for operations against the Central Chinese Government.

The detailed means of putting the Tokyo-Vichy agreement into effect are still subject to negotiation—apparently amicable—but the French are perturbed at the determination of Japan to remove her nationals.

The Japanese consul at Hanoi, Rokuro Suzuki, his staff, members of the Nichihara mission and newspapermen planned to leave tomorrow to lessen the possibility of "unfortunate incidents", as the Japanese spokesman expressed it.

Suzuki arranged for a special train to carry the Japanese to Haiphong, where Japanese vessels are expected to move them to the island of Hainan or Canton, both Japanese-occupied parts of China.

Vichy, France, Sept. 19 (AP).—Foreign Minister Paul Baudouin said today France is "all alone" in the far east and should not be judged too harshly if her decisions in Indo-China, where she has had to yield to Japanese demands, are not pleasing to "the western world".

In a statement to United States newspaper correspondents the foreign minister said France had been given to understand no real support could be given her by the United States should the Japanese attack Indo-China.

He said the French military strength in the Far East cannot be compared with that of a nation like Japan, which France now recognizes as the first Asiatic power.

The Vichy government has consented to limited facilities in Indo-China for Japanese military sources which presumably will be used for a thrust into China.

Office in London Demolished

Brockville, Ont., Sept. 19 —(CP) —The aerial bombardment of London last night was of especial interest to citizens here through the announcement received by cable today by George T. Fulford, M.P., Vice President, that the London office of the G. T. Fulford Company of Canada Limited had been demolished by a bomb. The brief cablegram gave no particulars other than to announce "Office totally demolished last night, staff all safe."

'INVASION PORTS'.

Heaviest of War

Reporters who went through last night's raid at its height said it was much heavier than any previous in London, even though the estimated casualty list has been exceeded.

The government said "small dwelling houses" in suburbs south of the Thames were the main objectives. In other areas, apartment houses, business buildings, stores and hotels were hit.

But Britain was not idle. The Air Ministry announced that Royal Air Force fliers delivered a terrific assault on German concentrations in "invasion ports" on French and Belgian coasts, including a big attack on the big French port of Le Havre and raids on Boulogne, Calais, Dunkerque and Ostend.

"Invasion ports and shipping and barges" were attacked, the Ministry said, as well as "marshalling yards in Germany and enemy-occupied territory."

Biggest Assault of Year

The attack appeared to have been one of the biggest, if not the biggest, assault of the war on these German-held points. British airmen were said to have left the French coast in flames for many miles.

Observers at a southeast English coast town saw the flash of heavy bomb explosions across the English Channel and the glare of bursting shells as the Nazi coastal batteries turned loose a heavy barrage on their attackers.

As for the invasion threat, Dover correspondents sent word that the English Channel still was too rough for small boats which Hitler would need to transport any troops.

The 12th successive nightlong raid on London lasted nine hours and 34 minutes, starting at 7:54 p.m. (2:54 p.m. EDT) Wednesday and ending at 5:28 a.m. today

The record alarm—nine hours and 54 minutes—began the intensified siege at 8:06 p.m. Tuesday. Of the 33 hours and 22 minutes between that hour and the all-clear at dawn today, the city was under alarm 22 hours and 53 minutes.

New Incendiary Bomb

The new incendiary bomb used by the Germans was said by rooftop observers to glow dully for about two minutes and, upon explosion, send sparks and flaming debris hurtling through the air.

Britain also was using a new weapon—a new secret defence against night raiders which the press asserted had "succeeded in bringing down bombers in certain circumstances, for instance in defence of small sites." The weapon was said to be not a gun, ray, nor balloon, but simple and cheap to manufacture.

An increasing number of Nazi planes took part in the overnight London raid, raining high explosive and incendiary bombs on the metropolis from the north rim to the south, east and west.

The fashionable west end, as in the previous night's attacks, suffered heavily. The shopping area, home of many of the world's most famous fashion stores, was struck again and again by high explosive projectiles.

Violent Strafing

The centre of London underwent violent strafing from raiders who also dropped blazing oil bombs. Coughing men and women stumbled from apartments after the missiles scored direct hits.

An eight-pound cast iron guttering joint, hurtled from considerable distance, landed on the roof of The Associated Press building in which The Canadian Press has its offices.

The government said a number of fires was caused by incendiary bombs, but that "all of these have now been extinguished or brought under control."

Five high explosive bombs fell within a radius of a quarter of a mile about two well-known London squares.

A bomb crashed through the roof of a West End hotel, scattering debris down several floors. A girder was flung across the street and crashed into office windows.

All guests and the staff of the hotel were reported accounted for except an army officer and his wife whose room was covered with debris.

Three Shot Down

The Press Association reported at least three German bombers shot down during the night and early morning.

The Peter Robinson department store at Oxford Circus was damaged by a bomb The explosion stripped many steel girders bare of stonework and wrecked part of the interior.

Sections of broken pillars from the facade of the building bounced to the other side of Oxford Circus.

This was the fourth Oxford Street department store to suffer extensive damage in the last two night raids on the West End.

Oxford and Regent Streets—normally two of the West End's busiest thoroughfares—were closed today to motor traffic. They were strangely quiet, but in little cafes sleepy-eyed Londoners sat drinking their morning coffee.

One cafe only 50 yards from Oxford Circus and only a few hundred yards from where a delayed action bomb—or dud—had landed was doing a roaring business.

BRITISH WARSHIPS

at Tobruk, and a large motor transport concentration between Salum and Sidi Barrani was set on fire.

Egypt Still Non-Belligerent.

His announcement came at the end of a cabinet meeting which lasted through the night, at which Egypt's role in the war was debated. Egypt still is non-belligerent, despite the Italian invasion of her territory.

The British forces continued to harass the Italians but refrained from major action, apparently preferring to choose their own time and place for a stand.

The transport of supplies, especially water, over a narrow strip of desert flanked on one side by the sea and on the other by a great encarpment, or plateau, of treacherous shifting sand which comes within a few miles of the sea in places, remains a serious Italian problem, rendered more difficult by British harassing operations.

The British said Italian inroads were not such as to place Egypt in jeopardy, and added that no additional Italian troops had crossed the Libyan-Egyptian frontier in 36 hours. The Egyptian Premier said he was "optimistic."

Bomb Fascists at Sidi Barrani

Royal Air Force planes laid down a heavy bombardment on Fascist troops at Sidi Barrani, newly-won Italian base 60 miles inside the Egyptian frontier, British military headquarters said.

The Italian troops were busy trying to roll cannon into place when bombs began to plunge down on them and although Fascist planes rose to protect the ground forces, they were described as "ineffective."

The aerial counter-offensive extended all the way to the Libyan border, officials disclosed, and fires—some of them visible for 70 miles—were started. At least 10 fires were started in attacks on Italian transports at Buqbuq

Biggest Italian Airdrome Destroyed

At Bengazi, Libya, about 350 miles west of Sidi Barrani, the R. A. F. claimed to have destroyed Italy's biggest military airdrome in North Africa.

In South Africa, British bombers attacked Elwak and Birkaq, where direct hits were claimed on the wireless station.

In other Mediterranean operations, the British said they bagged four planes, two of them Junkers dive bombers of the type used so effectively by the Germans in the French offensive.

These planes, the English communique said, operated side by side with Italian fighters in an attempted attack on a Malta airfield.

"Two Italian pilots who escaped by parachute were rescued by us from the sea," the communique said.

Italian Statement

Rome, Sept. 19.—(AP) — The High Command said today the British fleet in the Mediterranean has gone into action, shelling Italian troops along the Egyptian shore seeking to reach Barrani.

The Royal Air Force attacked Rhodes, Tobruk, Bomba, Bengazi and a number of East African strongholds, the Communique said.

It claimed the Italian Air Force replied with attacks on the British fleet in the Mediterranean and Port Aden, and bombed English land forces at Matruh.

(There was no immediate report from the Admiralty in London of any action in the Mediterranean.)

He said he lost his job because he failed to return on time from a visit to Brantford to see Miss Clayton, who was staying with friends there early in March.

He denied he took an inflated car tube from the machine to save himself after the plunge, saying: "I thought she mightn't be able to make shore or might take cramps." Instead, Miss Clayton swam ashore and he himself used the tube, McElderry reminded witness.

Contradictory evidence of the principals featured the trial yesterday with each accusing the other of steering the car into the water. Martin was the first witness called by the defence and was on the stand when Court adjourned until today.

Martin testified his car shot into the water because Miss Clayton turned the wheel before he could stop her and "before I could get at the emergency brake it was too late." The girl testified that Martin drove straight into the canal and that she screamed as water splashed up in front of the car. She said she clambered out a side window and swam to shore.

Several eye-witnesses testified to seeing the car shoot off the road and enter the canal without any perceptible reduction in speed. They told of Miss Clayton swimming to shore and that Martin made his way to a nearby boom using an inflated inner tube.

Written Statement Produced

In cross-examination of Miss Clayton, Defence Counsel John Bradshaw showed the girl a written statement, written by herself, submitted to Martin for his signed acceptance. It was undated and ruled that Martin, who boarded in a home next to Miss Clayton here, should abide by 11 "musts."

He was to "go straight upstairs as soon as you go inside the house and do not stay downstairs at all" and was to "allow no one to drive your car, not even any of your friends."

He also was to "take no treats of any description into the house next door," and to "leave my name and my mother's name out of all your conversation." He also was to "take no one any place while I am away."

Miss Clayton said Martin moved into the home of her aunt, next door to her own residence, last September. They became engaged last January and had obtained marriage licence.

Both Miss Clayton and her widowed mother testified that Martin was of a jealous disposition. Martin testified Miss Clayton was jealous of what she considered his relations with other women.

The engagement was broken off the day previous to the car plunge and in testimony each claimed to have cancelled it.

PETAIN SAYS NEED IS FOR AUTHORITY

Declares True Liberty Can Exist Only Under Shelter of Directing Authority

Vichy, France, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Marshal Philippe Petain, France's aged Chief of State, declared in a magazine article today that true liberty "can only exist under the shelter of a directing authority which must be respected and obeyed".

Asserting "the idea of class struggle as a driving force for universal progress is absurd", Petain said France's professions must be organized on a corporative basis under State supervision.

"Liberalism, capitalism and collectivism are foreign products imported into France, which France, returning to her senses, naturally rejects", Petain wrote in the publication Revue Des Deux Mondes.

Traditional Ideals

The traditional ideals of the French Republic—liberty, equality and fraternity—were "beautiful things", he said, but henceforth French youth will be taught to keep its eyes open to "reality".

"We are not satisfied to give them (youth) the liberty to die of hunger, even though this liberty confers the right of dropping a vote in the ballot box", he wrote.

Of equality, he said men "who are equal before God" must be equal before the law and have an equal chance to earn a livelihood.

Fraternity, he added, "is a magnificent ideal, but only in natural groups such as the family and the fatherland".

Capt. R. A. Davy Wed Sixty Years Ago

Toronto, Sept. 19 (CP)—Although he celebrates his 60th wedding anniversary today, Captain Robert A. Davy, east Toronto, has had only 21 birthday anniversaries. Last February he was fortunate in being able to have his 84th birthday anniversary on the exact date.

Captain and Mrs. Davy were both born in Kingston, and were married in an Anglican Church there. They came to Toronto 35 years ago where they have lived ever since. Mrs. Davy is 82, and still does quite a bit of her own housework. The anniversary tonight will be celebrated very quietly with six members of the family present.

ASKS COURTS FOR OBJECTORS

United Church General Council Urges Federal Government to Follow British Method

Winnipeg, Sept. 19 (CP).—Ninth general council of the United Church last night adopted a resolution urging the Canadian government to deal with conscientious objectors in the same way as in Great Britain where courts of law are set up to consider individual cases.

In Canada, while certain religious groups are exempt, no courts have been set up to deal with the individual conscientious objector.

The council, which expects to conclude its session today, continued discussion on gambling and adopted a resolution asking that the law be so amended that the presence of a gambling device be considered evidence of intent to conduct a common gaming house.

Rev. E. E. Pugsley of Cannington, Ont., recommended that all congregations refrain from use of gambling devices to raise funds and urged all adherents of the United Church to avoid participation in any gambling enterprise.

Election of the executive committee of the general council resulted as follows:

Officers of the general council: Rt. Rev. A. S. Tuttle of Edmonton, moderator; Rt. Rev. John W. Woodside, Ottawa, retiring moderator; Dr. G. A. Sisco, Toronto, secretary; Rev. Robert Laird, Toronto, treasurer.

Members at large elected include: Rev. D. H. Gallagher, Guelph, Ont.; Rev. P. L. Jull, Brooklin, Ont.; Hon. J. B. Challies, Westmount, Ont., and A. Cochrane, Brampton, Ont.

Representatives of conference include: Dr. E. Leslie Pidgeon, Montreal and Ottawa; Rev. H. W. Cliff, Bay of Quinte; Amos Vipond, Toronto; R. W. Treleaven, K. C., Hamilton and Rev. V. T. Mooney, London.

Representatives of administrative boards include: Dr. Frank Langford, Toronto, Christian Education; Dr. J. R. Mutchmor, Toronto, evangelism and social service; Dr. R. B. Cochrane, Toronto, home missions.

SOVIET NEWSPAPER ATTACKS U. S.

Red Fleet Accuses United States of Spreading Monroe Doctrine to Whole World

Moscow, Sept. 19—(AP)—Red Fleet, publication of the Soviet Russian navy accused the United States today of spreading the Monroe Doctrine to the "whole world" and of planning to occupy the Azores, Madeira, Canary and Cape Verde islands.

The newspaper declared that occupation of these Portuguese and Spanish bases off the west coast of North Africa "by a strong European power would be a serious menace for the United States and particularly Latin America."

Hence, Red Fleet asserted, the United States is preparing to take them over herself.

The article also declared there was an American press campaign to take over French and British colonies in Africa.

"The Monroe Doctrine of America for the Americas, proclaimed 117 years ago, then had the progressive idea of defence of young Latin American Republics from "intervention by reactionary European countries, particularly Monarchist Spain," Red Fleet said.

"Now, under conditions of imperialism, this doctrine acquires a new character and the idea would be expressed better by a formula of the whole world for the North Americas."

Berlin, N.Y., Sept. 19 (AP).—State police are investigating theft of 135 sticks of dynamite and 100 blasting caps from two magazines of the town of Berlin.

The town was using the explosives for blasting in constructing a road. The theft was disclosed last Monday by John Jorgensen, assistant foreman on the construction job.

Mathematics Used to Test Quality of Ammunition for War

Philadelphia, Sept. 19 (AP)—How mathematics is put to a new use to test the quality of ammunition for war described to the Bicentennial Conference of the University of Pennsylvania today by Capt. Leslie E. Simpson, United States Ordnance Department.

The equations of statistical theory is the name of the formulae used to insure good shells both for big guns and rifles.

Sampling, Capt. Simpson explained, always has been the method of testing. It is too costly to inspect each shell. In the old way the samples were selected at random and the whole batch judged by their performance.

This, he said, permitted interior stuff to pass when the random batch happened to be above average and also sometimes threw out superior ammunition because one sample happened to be inferior.

The statistical theory uses sampling in a different way. Safe limits, or standards of excellence, are set up for the shells. When the first batch comes in from a manufacturer, numerous small samples are tried, not at random, but in the order of manufacture.

In these samples the average of all the defects shall not exceed the limits of the requirements, and no defect shall be three times that allowed by the rules.

In subsequent batches only random samples are needed to learn whether quality is good, only the first batch has to be subjected to large sampling tests.

If the ammunition fails to pass the first test, its quality is poor, and the army is protected against accepting it.

"Flying Blind" by VERA BROWN

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

"Judith!" Dudley's voice broke the stillness. The girl stirred. His voice dragged her back from a great abyss into which she seemed to be falling, falling. . . . A blinding pain. Ellen was still beside her.

"The exits!"

Judith could hear Dudley and the foreigner.

"Ware!" The man's voice answered Dudley, from outside the cabin. Then there was a flash! The gas tanks! Fire!

Judith dragged at Ellen's limp figure. She pounded on her. Half-conscious, the girl moved. The blaze was on their side, where the wing had broken-off.

"Judith!" Dudley's voice was near. He was helping her with Ellen. Together they thrust the girl through the exit of the seat were Dudley had been sitting with Judith. She fell out limply. "Ware, get hold of her."

Then Dudley helped Judith. "Hurry, hurry!"

They were out on the ground, deep in muddy sleet. Then they were running. Dudley pulled Judith with him, and Ware was bringing Ellen.

When they were a hundred feet away from the ship, Judith turned. She could see two more dark figures. Day and Jenks. They'd got out the top of the cockpit.

The blaze lighted the scene. Roy stood there staring at the blazing ship. Ellen went to him but he did not seem to realize she was there. The heat burned their faces. Judith did not realize Dudley was holding her close.

"You're all right?"

"Yes."

Then Judith saw that Roy had slumped to the round. The foreigner was praying again. Ware and Jenks were standing over Roy.

The terrific heat took Judith's breath away. She felt sore and bruised. She moved her feet, her arms. "I'm alive!" she said suddenly in utter surprise.

"Stay here while I see about Roy."

Judith still stunned, waited obediently, watching the ship. The metal skeleton was glowing red. The gasoline had spent its force.

"Everybody else all right?"

"Yes."

Ware spoke for the first time: "I think my arm's broken, Dudley."

Judith stood there shivering. It was suddenly bitterly cold. "Where are we?"

"We haven't the faintest idea."

Jenks was helping Roy over nearer the ship. There was still a warm glow from it. "If only we'd thought to push out some of the blankets!"

"I've got one," Ware said.

Dudley spread the precious blanket on the ground.

"Here, girls, you'd better come over here."

But Judith shook her head: "Bring Roy."

Jenks and Dudley helped the crippled pilot over to the blanket. His face showed ghastly white in the night. They lowered him to the ground. Not a murmur came from his close-pressed lips.

"Yes—" Roy's voice was bitter.

"It was magnificent," Dudley persisted. "I didn't think we had a chance."

Ware sat down beside Roy, and Ellen fussed over the pilot, sobbing as she tried to make him more comfortable. It was Roy who spoke. "I haven't any idea where we are. There's no lights anywhere I can see."

"Maybe somebody heard the crash?" Ware suggested.

"They'll send out a help call from the airport. Did they know our position?" Dudley asked.

"I talked with them just before we hit."

"I'm going to leave this here. You'll need it."

"Where are you going?" Dudley asked.

"For help."

"Better try north and east. I think we're below Pittsburgh some place. Follow the valley and see what happens."

Ware spoke then: "I'm going with you."

"You can't with your arm!" Dudley protested.

Dudley too off his coat, began tearing up his shirt. He improvised a sling for Ware's arm.

"Look in my coat pocket. I've got a flask," Ware said.

Dudley smiled in the darkness. "Take a drink of it before you start, both you boys."

"No, keep it. You'll need it worse than we will before morning."

Roy had a flashlight. The two men took that and stumbled off down the valley.

The five were left alone. Dudley, with the foreigner's help, moved Roy and the blanket over nearer to the ship. The metal seemed a glowing mess of coiling reptiles. It still radiated considerable heat.

Dudley was giving orders. "You girls stay here with Roy. We are going out to get some wood. We'd better get going while there's still a little light from the ship."

Roy had a big pocket knife. He gave it to Dudley who went off with the foreigner who introduced himself as "Monsieur Severes" from Cairo, Egypt.

By the time Dudley and Severes came back with their first load of wood it had begun to rain a fine mist which soaked into their too thin garments.

Severes, his equilibrium restored with the main danger over, had become a rock on which to lean. Dudley went close to the ship. With two wet sticks, he broke off some of the almost molten metal. If they had to stay there for hours, if Roy was going to endure the long wait, they must have heat!

The fire smudged, went out. Dudley tried again. He collected every bit of paper he could find from his pockets, from Judith's and Ellen's bags.

After a long time, a flicker of flame leaped up. They all gave a cry of joy.

"What time is it?" Judith asked.

Roy's watch had been smashed in the crash, but Dudley's was still running: "Almost nine."

Despite the fire, the cold soon chilled them to their very bones. Roy was the one who suffered most. Lying with his head in Ellen's lap, he grit his teeth to bear the pain.

It was when their courage was at a low ebb that the gentleman from Egypt started to sing. He had a pleasing tenor, and he sang for them amusing little songs, translating them later in halting English.

Monsieur Severes certainly turned out to be game, Judith thought. He found some candies in his pocket and divided them carefully into five parts. But Roy was too ill to eat his. Dudley poured the last of the liquor down the pilot's throat, and the rest of them ate the candy. For they were getting very hungry.

It was too cold for any of them to doze off. Judith sat huddled close to Dudley.

"Won't it ever get to be daylight? Then we could start walking." Ellen moaned.

Dudley did not tell her that daylight was still hours away. No use to discourage her. There was no way of telling how long it would take Ware and Jenks. Sometimes during the night Roy became delirious. They were frantic, kept the fire burning bright. But they were helpless to do more for him.

Dudley and Severes manufactured a little shelter of branches of trees to keep the rain off. That helped. All were bruised and sore from the crash. Judith could scarcely move her head, her neck hurt her so.

"I think of the war," said Severes. "Cold and wet and never any dawn."

"No going over the top just before dawn now," Ware consoled. "Remember that, Severes. By morning we'll be warm and dry."

"That will be fine, but—," Judith insisted, "sing some more for us, Monsieur Severes."

The Egyptian sang again. Ellen wept as she smoothed the hair back from Roy's hot forehead. Dudley realized now Roy was seriously hurt, must be got to a hospital with all possible speed. After a while the rain stopped. The wind came up, cold and sharp.

"At least the fog will lift. Then they can find us."

Dudley moved so that he could break the wind from Judith's slim figure. Roy's voice, mumbling in delirium, was the only thing besides the wind which broke the stillness.

Gradually the fog lifted. There were stars peeking through the clouds. It must have been an hour later that Dudley shouted:

"I hear a ship!"

From over the mountain they could see the running lights of a small plane, circling. Then the pilot spotted the fire, flew straight for the group on the ground. The ship swept low over them. As it passed in a deep roar the pilot released a flare, and Dudley saw a tiny parachute open.

"The First Aid Kit!" He began to run, never taking his eyes off the tiny chute. As he ran he stumbled, bruised his ankles on rocks, and the bushes scratched his bare hands.

Dudley finally found the First Aid packet in a small tree. He came back on the run. In the package was a small bottle of brandy. He tore it open, poured some of it into Roy's mouth. There was chocolate in the little package. They ate eagerly.

"It won't be long how. The ship can show Jenks the way if he can't locate us."

Hope of immediate rescue put heart into the bedraggled group. Judith stood up, hopped about to get some feeling into her cold feet. She slapped her hands together, and Dudley chaffed them to get circulation going. Pilot Roy seemed to be resting easier now. And the Egyptian broke into a native song.

"He's like a lark!" Judith murmured to Dudley.

When the foreigner finished, he came to bow gallantly before Judith. He had lost his hat, his clothes were rumpled, but he clicked his heels as he bent over Judith's cold fingers and kissed them:

"I salute a most gallant lady!"

Judith was completely nonplused and wanted desperately to laugh. Yet his sincerity touched her. He created such an amazing spectacle with his incredible clothes and his courtly manners.

Then he waved his hand toward the mountain around which Jenks and Ware had disappeared so many hours ago.

"They will come for us soon. I shall always remember this night. We shall prize it as an experience, which has made our lives much richer."

It was as though all America were listening to him and he kept on: "I shall go back to my country with a story of brave American women, and of American men with courage. Europe may worry—"

Dudley and Judith listened to him speechless.

And he didn't even have a sip of that brandy," Dudley murmured. At last they persuaded him to come back to the fire. Their long waiting was not over. No rescue party came.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was late for supper again on account of not realizing how late it was and nobody telling me and me not asking anybody, and I hurry up and went home trying to think of bum ones, and I thought, I wish I had some news to tell them, to take their mind of me and put it on themselfs.

Giving me a idea, and I ran back in the dining room and quick sat down in my place saying, G, ma, jimminy, pop, who do you think is coming tonight?

Well whoever it is it's a fine eleventh hour to be telling us for land sakes ma said, and pop said, If you'd waited till tomorrow you needn't of told us at all, we could of told you.

Being sourcastic, and ma said, Who is it, and how long have you had this news?

Since this afternoon, it was a phone message, I said. Try to guess, ma, try to guess, pop, I'll give you a free hint, it's a member of the family, I said, and pop said, Worse and more of it, your mother's sister Fanny has proberly hit town and we'll have to be the innocent bysitters while she talks her head off till train time. Yee gods I was looking fallward to a pleasant evening paying a pile of intristing bills, he said.

No sir, it's not Ant Fanny, I said, and ma said, Well who is it, O deer, I expected to see a picture with your sister Gladdis this evening.

Come on, out with it, who's coming for Peet sake? pop said, and I said, and I said, Cousin Artie, he's coming right after supper and we're going to have some fun and he'll stay all night if you invite him.

The result being they told me to eat supper, being better than asking me a lot of questions about why I was late.

New Bell Placates Camel

Colorado Springs, Sept. 18 —(AP)—Ethel, 42-year-old camel at the Broadmoor Zoo, went on a hunger strike after Fritz, a male camel, crushed with his teeth a Tibetan bell she had worn for 20 years. Virgil Crisp, bell maker, tried to duplicate the instrument but Ethel wouldn't eat. The second one he made also was unsatisfactory. But the tone of the third satisfied the camel. Ethel's eating again.

Judge Dismisses Abandoning Charge Against Woman

North Bay, Ont., Sept. 18.—(CP) A complete report of circumstances surrounding the trial of Mrs. Louisa Roy of Field, Ont., on a charge of abandoning her four-months-old baby, was sent to Attorney-General Gordon Conant of Ontario by Judge J. A. S. Plouffe today, following hearing of evidence against the woman in district court. Styling the woman as a heroine, rather than a criminal, Judge Plouffe dismissed the case.

Mrs. Roy was arrested nearly a month ago following an investigation by the Children's Aid Society.

Evidence revealed that the woman, unable to receive relief because her husband was working, was forced to work to obtain money. Her husband did not contribute to the family's support, it was testified.

BURIED FOR 17 HOURS

London, Sept. 18.—(CP)—Jack Reaves, 32, was rescued today from an automobile in the basement of a West End garage after being buried 17 hours in the wreckage caused by a German bomb explosion. His bride of two months, sitting beside him, was dead.

Property Damaged at Malta

Valetta, Malta, Sept. 17 (delayed)—(CP)—Italian bombers raided the British island of Malta twice today, causing damage to government property. Three of the raiders were reported shot down in a morning raid. In the afternoon British fighter planes flew out over the Mediterranean to meet another formation of Italian planes and drove it off.

THURLOW TOWNSHIP

The Board of Health for the Township of Thurlow have decided to make available to the children, both of school age and pre-school age, the inoculation against typhoid and para-typhoid. This will be in the same manner as for diphtheria, smallpox, etc. in the schools. It will be free and not compulsory, and no child will be inoculated without consent of the parents who are respectfully asked to indicate in writing to the teacher of their school section their wishes in the matter, and each teacher is asked to co-operate. Inoculations to start September 23rd, 1940.

VOLUNTARY AID FREELY OFFERED

Dr. E. W. Stapleford Says Organization of Voluntary War Effort No Easy Task

By GLADYS ARNOLD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Sept. 19—(CP)— Plans for harnessing Canada's great and, as yet, untapped pool of human effort to wartime needs are taking shape under the National War Services Department, Dr. E. W. Stapleford of Victoria College, Toronto, said today.

"I believe that within a short time we will be able to announce just how we will use this human energy which is eager to be put to work," said Dr. Stapleford, Director of Voluntary Services under War Minister Gardiner.

Offers of voluntary aid of all descriptions are pouring into the department and Dr. Stapleford anticipated no easy task.

Many offers are from unemployed seeking jobs. Then, too, there are faddists with fantastic schemes and ideas for winning the war, but for the most part the offers are serious and come from competent people or associations desiring to do something to boost the war effort.

"A short period will be necessary to survey the whole field and the organization of these thousands of offers is going to be no bed of roses," said the director, only recently appointed.

Dr. Stapleford sees his jobs as two-fold—the task of co-ordinating and organizing the voluntary war effort of the Canadian people and the administration of the War Charities Act.

In the latter connection he emphasized that the registration of each money-raising charity organization is coming up shortly for renewal and the present intention is to co-ordinate efforts to raise funds.

Audited Accounts of Charities

Each charity must present an audited account of its expenditures, money raised and the sums devoted to war purposes when asking consideration for re-registration.

"We intend to co-ordinate all the various efforts to raise funds for the war and see that every cent thus raised is spent as intended," said Dr. Stapleford, who added that he felt people in Canada feel the frequency of appeals for money has been too great and the expense of raising money in an unorganized way greater than justified.

Last week-end Mr. Gardiner said a plan looking to restriction of appeals for charitable funds to two main drives annually, one for war charities and the other for civilian welfare work is under study.

Dr. Stapleford added that "already practically all major organizations raising money for war purposes are prepared to co-operate with the government to this end and before long it will be possible to make a definite announcement regarding this arrangement."

And in the matter of voluntary human effort he said national registration of last month should prove invaluable because answers given then show just what each person is qualified to do and where best they can be used to best advantage on the home front.

BETTER THAN AN OVERHAUL A FACTORY RE-BUILT ENGINE

When the time comes that your Ford needs a complete overhaul, here's a way to save money. Instead of overhauling your own engine, let us install a factory-reconditioned engine. These engines have been completely torn down and rebuilt for "good as new" performance by the men who make new Ford engines. You're sure of satisfaction and you save money. Come in and let us explain this plan to you.

NIGHT

extensive damage to houses and shops. One nurse was killed and several seriously injured, when a nurses' residence was struck.

Hideous Cacaphony of Noises

The night was a hideous cacaphony of varied notes, ack-ack fire and screaming, crackling bombs. With another member of the Canadian Press staff I sat in our apartment which was literally swayed at times by bomb blasts somewhere in the district.

A view from the window often showed the horizon ruddy in several places with fires but these appeared to be under control or extinguished with astonishing rapidity.

Documents were strewn in a roadway amid a confusion of broken glass and masonry as a bomb hit a commercial building in central London. A block blown from the third storey window of one office struck a wall on the opposite side of the street.

House Sliced, Occupants Unhurt

In the northwest a bomb sliced a large house but the occupants were extricated from the wreckage practically unhurt.

A fireman was badly injured by falling down a shattered staircase in a central London office block which was hit by two bombs. He was tackling the blaze from a perilous position when he suddenly disappeared from sight down the broken remains of the staircase.

A hundred yards distant 12 people taking shelter in an underpass escaped when a high explosive bomb fell in the centre of the street.

Five high explosive bombs dropped within a quarter-mile radius of two famous London squares, breaking windows all around but not causing any casualties.

Many Feared Entombed Under Debris

Many people were feared entombed under debris after several buildings were demolished when a raider crashed in southeast London with a full load of bombs.

A rescue party in this area tried to save a man part of whose body was exposed. They worked throughout the night under a partly demolished wall which fell when he was nearly freed, burying the rescuers. A second party dug out all their comrades, none of whom were seriously injured, and continued the work of freeing the trapped man.

More than 1,000 people marched in orderly manner from a shelter 60 feet under the ground to nearby surface shelters when a roof of a famous London building above them was fired. Despite its depth the vault was shaken by the explosion's force.

An eye-witness called it an "incredibly eerie sight to see these people marching through streets lit by flames from the burning building into streets on which showers of broken glass were still falling."

The rear of a bombed house in west London was smashed but the front was practically untouched and a bottle of milk on the doorstep was unbroken. In the same area five shops were bombed and two people killed.

Five members of the staff, including two men, were killed when sheltering in the basement of a grocery store in northwest London after a high explosive bomb travelling at a tangent scored a direct hit on the front of the premises.

BRITISH COAL FOR EGYPT

Alexandria, Egypt (AP)—Despite the war in the Mediterranean, Britain is supplying coal for operation of Egyptian railways. Ships carrying 8,200 tons of the fuel arrived recently from England and others are expected to follow. The railways had requested Britain to furnish special facilities for such shipments since other sources of supply were cut off.

Largest Crowd in Four Years Attends Stirling Fair Wed.; H. & P. E. Regt. Put on Display

GOOD RACING

Stirling, Sept. 19 (Special) — Enjoying the finest weather in the past four years, Stirling Agricultural Society officials were all smiles yesterday when one of the best crowds in the same number of years passed through the gates to enjoy a real day's entertainment. A Hastings and Prince Edward Regimental Band under the direction of Bandmaster Lockyear of Picton supplied excellent music throughout the afternoon and also led the parade for the fine military display of the officers and members of the 2nd battalion Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. The Headquarters Company under command of Maj. Angus Mowatt brought rounds of applause from patriotic spectators for their smartness as they were reviewed and inspected in front of the grandstand by Lt. Col. B. C. Donnan. This was with all its smartness and military precision the most colorful spectacle of the fair. The Agricultural Hall was attractive with its displays of flowers, fruits, grains, seeds and school children's work, as well as domestic science and ladies' work.

Event Successful

Officers of the Fair agree that the event was most successful due largely to the efforts of the following gentlemen: President, J. B. Thompson; 1st Vice President, Ben Bleeker; 2nd Vice President, Thos. Solmes; Secretary, F. R. Mallory; Treasurer, W. H. Paterson; Committee Conveners: J. B. Thompson, S. L. Lucas, Wm. Fitchett, Geo. Pollard, E. J. Pyear, E. Carlyle, L. Fair, A. E. Strickland, H. R. Tompkins, C. I. Hatton, Art Duncan.

Although the entry in the divisions of Fruit, Ladies' Work, Garden and Roots and Domestic Science was not as large as in previous years, competition was keen with local exhibitors rating higher than usual in the prize winnings. Listed below are the winners in order of merit:

210 Entries in Black & White Show

Eclipsing by far the excellent show of last year "The Black and White Day" sponsored by the Hastings County Holstein Breeders' club and Stirling Agricultural Society and the Ontario Livestock Branch as a special feature of the fair brought together the largest number of Holstein cattle seen in this part of the province. Well over two hundred entries were shown and in some classes over fifty head appeared in the ring at one time. Prize winners in this fine show were as follows:

Junior champion, female: Ena Teake Posch, D. Longwell estate.

Doubtless the largest and finest cattle show ever seen at a rural district fair. The great task of judging which required more than six hours work was capably done by James Henderson of Portsmouth, Vice President of the Dominion Shorthorn Breeders' Association. Among the interesting spectators were H. L. Fair B.S.A. local representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Mr. L. S. O'Neill, Director of the Provincial Livestock Branch. Prominent among the cattlemen of county with entries in the show were Emile Masse, Thos. Neal, Caskey Bros, John Burnside, Jas. Engleson, D. C. Ketcheson, G. M. Brough, John G. Caskey, Herbert Watt estate of D. Longwell, Philo Harris. This is the second year the project has been promoted in co-operation with the Stirling Fair and a large increase in entries and public interest make it a feature that will be sought after by fair boards of the county in coming years.

Poultry

Prominent showmen and prize winners in the poultry divison included J. D. Keeble, L. J. Ketcheson, Chas. Hoard and R. J. Meserve of Belleville. The latter a specialist in breeding Buff Orpingtons won the silver shield at C.N.E. for the best collection.

Show and Dance Held at Night

Climaxing this excellent day tired visitors to the Fair relaxed comfortable in the Stirling theatre for a special feature presentation and later in the evening many attended the dance held in the Community Service Building with music provided by the Austin Orchestra.

Impressive Presentation

Lt. Fred Houchin of Stirling was presented with a long service medal by Lt. Col. B. C. Donnan in recognition of twenty-one continued years' service in the Militia. Lt. Houchin has directed the drill and training of the local platoon in the 2nd Battalion of the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment and their smartness is a tribute to his military knowledge.

AT THE McCARTHY

"I Married Adventure"

Adventure in Africa! More than a million feet of film, never before seen on any screen and representing years of painstaking, death-defying effort, were scanned by Osa Johnson, before she could choose the material to go into Columbia's "I Married Adventure," her sensational screen autobiography which will be shown next week at the McCarthy Theatre. The film is based upon the lovely explorer's famous book of the month, bearing the same title, "I Married Adventure."

Compiled and edited by Mrs. Johnson, the unique picture represents the most thrilling scenes from the miles of motion picture made by the Johnsons during 27 years of adventuring.

The picture includes remarkable pictures of Africa's teeming game, gorillas at close quarters, charging rhinos, fierce jungle battles and weird birds. Unusual in theme, "I Married Adventure" is more than a record of the Johnson's safaris, for it blends natural grandeur with breath-taking, authentic thrills. For old-timers it will revive high spots of the Martin Johnsons' explorations; for the younger generation, it will reveal for the first time the contributions made by this couple to the spirit of adventure. Anyone who thrills to adventure and that should include pretty nearly everyone, will find their interest sustained during almost every moment of "I Married Adventure" and find it more pleasing even than a three ring circus.

"Wildcat Bus"

Thrills.... with the throttle wide open.... collisions on contract.... smash-ups on schedule...... the fastest thing on wheels.... and on the screen.... as a show-off comes through at the showdown, is presented now at the McCarthy Theatre in the exciting thrill-a-minute hit "Wildcat Bus" co-starring lovely Fay Wray and Charles Lang. The program also includes Charles Starrett as a Texas Ranger in "Riders of Black River" one of the best westerns you'll see this year. Plus chapter three of the action-crammed serial "Terry and the Pirates."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Carolina Moon"

The current world conflagration is a deep personal tragedy to Gene Autry, Republic's singing cowboy star. A year ago, he was a guest of the British empire, feted enthusiastically by 173 million people.

Today those same people who were cheering America's Goodwill Ambassador without portfolio, are now shrouded in gloom over the fate of their country and the loss of thousands of its noblest and finest men.

Autry's new picture, "Carolina Moon", which is now showing at the Capitol Theatre is one of several of his films which were sent to the "front" to entertain the soldiers. On the same program "SOS-Tidal Wave".

"SOS-Tidal Wave", Republic exciting action drama which shows how events of the day will be pictured to radio audiences in the future. One of the most dramatic scene in "SOS-Tidal Wave", is the one showing New York's skyscrapers crashing to the ground as the result of a combination tidal wave and earthquake. Ralph Byrd and Kay Sutton have the leads in this Republic thriller, with George Barbier, Frank Jenks and Dorothy Lee topping the supporting cast.

The Universal News events of the day and the 10th chapter of the thrilling serial "Buck Rogers" closes the bill.

AT THE BELLE

"Safari"

Recommended as absorbing screen fare is Paramount's suspenseful and intriguing romantic drama "Safari" co-starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. and Madeleine Carroll, which is now on the Belle Theatre screen. Studded with exceptionally fine individual performances and distinguished by an interesting and expertly devised story, it offers entertainment of a high order.

Briefly, the picture has to do with a wealthy, arrogant baron—played by Tullio Carminati—who entertains as guests on his yacht Madeleine Carroll and Muriel Angelus. Madeleine is plotting to marry Carminati, but finally recognizes her only chance is to incite his jealousy. Arriving at M'Pola, West Africa, the starting point of a safari Carminati has planned, he is incensed because Fairbanks, whom he has hired to lead the expedition, does not meet the boat.

From his base camp Fairbanks decides to fly over the area the safari will travel, and Madeleine induces him to take her with him. Aware of her plan to use him, he tells her so and berates her unmercifully. By delaying their departure she prevents him from flying back to camp and they spend the night alone in the jungle.

They return in the morning to find Carminati insane with jealous rage, and Fairbanks learns that he has been responsible for the death of one of the native boys during a hunt the previous day. He savagely denounces Carminati who, demands that they start immediately on a lion hunt. Carminati intentionally wounds a lion and dares Fairbanks to go into the brush and finish the kill, a foolish and hazardous attempt.

Knowing that Carminati hopes for his death, Fairbanks emerges with a torn arm—angrily disbands the camp, and orders the safari back to M'Pola. After telling off both Madeleine and Carminati he planes back alone and prepares to fly to Europe and the war.

Edgar Wallace Thriller

An exciting suspenseful mystery yarn is unfolded in the companion feature attraction, "The Mysterious Mr. Reeder." One of Edgar Wallace's most fascinating characters is portrayed by the well-known character actor, Will Fyffe.

The lovable but shrewd investigator of Scotland Yard, known to colleagues and the underworld alike, as the clever and crafty Mr. Reeder played by Will Fyffe, is assigned to break up a gang of counterfeiters which is flooding the market with phoney money.

The picture is well mounted and directed with finesse and beauty. One of the high points in the film is when Mr. Reeder has his life threatened and with perfect calm and poise saves his own life by quietly but surely frightening his attacker. Will Fyffe, as the gentle but firm Mr. Reeder gives his usual splendid portrayal. Kay Walsh is excellent as the detective's secretary who also serves as his bodyguard and feminine decoy. George Curson as Welford turns in an outstanding performance as the hard, cruel, sinister Welford. The balance of the cast gives good support.

Nervous and Sleepless

When you can't sleep it's from worry that poisons the nerves or anaemia which starves them. In either case digestion is poor, appetite fickle and the blood is lacking in vitamin B1 and the mineral substances from which nerve force is produced.

200 Nazi Planes Beaten in Terrific Battle Over Coast

RAF Fighters Hide In Clouds and Pounce On Nazis When They Reach Kent Coast

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 20—(CP Cable)—Strong forces of German raiders swept over the Kent coast this morning but Britain's vigilant defences repulsed most of them before they reached the London area.

Royal Air Force fighters turned back more than 200 German planes in a battle over the southeast coast and the raiders were seen racing in disorder toward the French coast.

Describing this morning's battle over the southeast coast, the Press Association said the fighters hidden in the clouds waiting for the Germans, pounced on them as they reached the Kent coast and a free-for-all followed. The raiders were driven relentlessly back eastward and the fight continued over the sea.

Fighters Cheered on Way Home

Later a formation of Hurricanes and Spitfires came flying home to the cheers of watchers below. Near Dover, one German fighter spun out of the sky trailing smoke and crashed in hills near the channel port.

When German raiders also appeared over London and the Thames estuary during the morning, anti-aircraft batteries kept up a thunderous barrage until British fighters sped to the attack.

R. A. F. bombers, striking at German bases while the Nazis were subjecting London to its 13th consecutive night attack, blasted the Dortmund-ems canal and other vital communications in Germany proper and a number of ports and airdromes in German-occupied territory, the Air Ministry announced.

Night Raid Not Intensive

Besides London, five counties in the midlands and the southwest were raided during the night. The

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Where the rain goes! Besides carrying food material to plants in water which is largely transpired into the air, rain water is disposed of by three other processes: runoff, evaporation and downward percolation. There can be no general rule giving the relative amounts by each process, as the amounts disposed of by them vary in every locality. This variation is due to topography, soil, and the kind and amount of plant cover. Hilly land and heavy soil favor run-off, while level lands and porous soil holds the water. Some crops require and use more water than others, and, of course, scanty crops require less water than lush vegetation.

"Don't Worry They'll Get it Back", Churchill Promises

London, Sept. 20 (CP)—"Don't worry—they'll get it back!" was Prime Minister Churchill's retort when crowds demanded reprisals against Berlin as he was inspecting bombed homes in the Battersea area of London.

Mr. Churchill was accompanied by Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, on a tour yesterday. The quotation appeared in the press today.

BERLIN CLAIMS 600 CIVILIANS KILLED BY BOMBS

1,400 More Injured by British Air Raids Since Beginning of War

ANOTHER NIGHT RAID

Berlin, Sept. 20—(AP)—Six hundred German civilians have been killed and 1,400 injured in British air raids on Germany since the start of war, informed sources claimed today.

(There was no estimate of the number of military killed and injured.)

British planes again raided western and southern Germany during the night, dropping bombs and incendiary phosphorous "leaves," these sources said.

The Rhineland and Heidelberg were among the places reported attacked and 10 civilians were claimed to have been killed, including three at Heidelberg. The weather was bad.

Gen. Nishihari Says French Delaying Tactics Prevent Settlement of Details

By C. YATES McDANIEL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Hanoi, French Indo-China, Sept. 20 (AP)—With all Japanese civilian Nationals removed from this French colonial capital and Japan placing a time limit for settlement of her military demands, negotiations with Japan reached a crisis today if not an actual breakdown.

Maj.-Gen. Issaku Nishihara, head of a Japanese mission which has been trying to work out details of a Vichy-authorized grant of "limited facilities" for Japanese troops and naval forces, terminated his personal negotiations with the French and prepared to leave Hanoi for Haiphong.

"When I leave French territory you may say the crisis has been reached," he said in his final interview with newspapermen.

He asserted that the Japanese attitude does not threaten the colony's territorial integrity, but said the situation demands a time limit for final settlement.

(At Hong Kong official quarters said Japan has given the French until midnight Sunday to comply with her demands which now include some new, secret clauses.)

Nishihara gave his interview before bidding farewell to colonial authorities. Earlier about 100 Japanese civilians left Hanoi on a special train for Haiphong after singing their national anthem on the station platform, under the leadership of Rokuro Suzuki, Japanese Consul General.

Nishihara denied that Japan had presented any new demand causing the negotiations to reach a "delicate state," as previously asserted by French sources.

More Than Million In Gold Reported Taken on Carol's Train

Bucharest, Sept. 20 (AP)—Rumanian Government officials said today that three wooden crates containing more than $1,000,000 worth of gold left the country on abdicated King Carol's special train. The gold was said to be in coins minted last spring to commemorate the 10th anniversary of Carol's reign but never issued.

Most Complete and Delicate Tests Given Candidates for R.C.A.F.

Ottawa, Sept. 20 (CP).—The most complete and delicate tests in the history of aviation now are being given candidates for the Royal Canadian Air Force it was said today at the Air Ministry.

The examination was described as a scientific test of the "brain waves" of candidates. The pattern of the "brain wave" is taken electrically through an oscillograph and, it was said, has been useful in conjunction with other regular physical tests of the air force.

A report from Toronto said these latest tests had resulted in the grounding of several airmen. At the Air Ministry it was admitted the "brain wave" check-up might bring grounding of prospective pilots but it was more probable that grounding of these men was due to a combination of all tests conducted in the examination of would-be fliers.

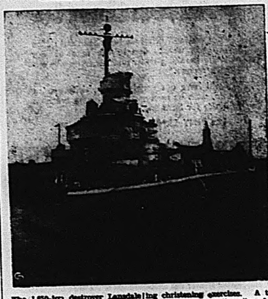
Describing the oscillograph, partly developed by Maj. G. E. Hall and J. K. Goodwin of the Clinical Investigation Unit of the R.C.A.F., a spokesman said patterns of brain reactions were taken electrically through a head set and recorded on strips of paper.

This pattern indicated whether or not the candidate would make a good pilot, observer or gunner, but added to its result were the inductions given by the cardiograph, testing the heart and observations made while candidates are subjected to air pressure conditions such as might be found from 25,000 feet up.

All these tests are considered as indicative of the nervous and physiological character of the candidate, a spokesman said.

"A man might be a good football player and have a great natural aptitude for flying, but his physical composition might be such as to make him unable to stand the strain of flying fast, at great heights and fighting at the same time."

LATEST ADDITION TO U.S. NAVY



The 1,650-ton destroyer Lansdale is shown at Boston navy yard after she was commissioned into active service immediately following christening exercises. A two-ocean navy is now the aim of the U.S. naval expansion program.

DEFENCE BOARD TO TOUR WEST

Defence Posts of Pacific Northwest and Alaska Will be Studied

Victoria, Sept. 20 (CP)—The Canada-United States joint defence commission which the Senior Canadian service member said has "come to some very valuable conclusions with regard to future defence measures," leaves here today to complete a tour of defence points of the Pacific Northwest and Alaska.

The Commission made an aerial survey of the coast of British Columbia and Alaska yesterday.

"We certainly learned a great deal from our aerial survey of the defence points of the Pacific Coast that we have seen so far," said Brig. K. Stuart, "and we feel that we are at last getting somewhere."

Defence Measures In Pacific Subject Of Anglo-U.S. Talks

London, Sept. 20 (CP)—Informed sources said today that talks having particular reference to defence measures in the Pacific are proceeding in Washington among the United States Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, the British Ambassador, the Marquess of Lothian, and the Australian Minister, Richard Casey.

Rats More Frightening Than Bombs Thinks Member Suicide Crew

London, Sept. 20 —(CP)— What do those fearless members of bomb-disposal units think about while dealing with unexploded bombs? A member of one crew seated astride a monster bomb signalled frantically and shouted "get me out of here." Hauled up, he explained his anxiety by pointing down in the hole at a huge sewer rat.

Robber Bands Rob Post Offices, Banks; I.R.A. Units Blamed

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Sept. 20 (CP)—Robber bands, identified by police as units of the outlawed Irish Republican army, simultaneously raided six post offices and banks today, making a haul close to £2,000 ($8,900).

A postmistress, one of the raiders and a police sergeant were wounded in one raid and five of the raiders were captured.

The raids came as post offices were preparing to pay out old-age pensions. The gunmen in each instance used the phrase, "We are holding you up in the name of the I.R.A."

MOTHER OF BOY TAKEN TO COURT

Kitchener Woman Charged With Causing Disaffection to His Majesty

Kitchener, Ont., Sept. 20—(CP)—Mrs. Mary Schemellovich of Kitchener, mother of a 12-year-old boy who refused yesterday to take part in patriotic exercises at school, was charged today under defence of Canada regulations with causing dissaffection to His Majesty. She allegedly is a member of the outlawed Jehovah's Witnesses.

Her son, Joseph, has not been barred from school because he later told school officials he would take part in the patriotic exercises.

Three sons of Lambro Gakeff were suspended from school last week for refusal to salute the flag and sing the National Anthem. Gakeff, also an alleged member of the Jehovah's Witnesses, is facing a charge under the defence regulations and Dr. H. J. Prueter, school inspector, said the Gakeff children will not be allowed to return to school until their father's case is settled.

Questioned by school officials yesterday the Schemellovich boy said his mother, a widow with six other children, had never told him to be unpatriotic. He said he had learned for himself in the Bible that he should "not bow to any earthly king."

FATHER COUGHLIN ABANDONS SERIES

Priest Charges 'Men Powerful in Field of Radio' Force Decision

Detroit, Sept. 20 (AP)—Rev. Charles E. Coughlin has abandoned his plan for a new series of weekly radio talks, which had been scheduled to open on Sunday, Oct. 20.

In an interview in the current issue of "Social Justice," the priest charged that "men powerful in the field of radio and other activities" had "forced the decision upon me."

The article said that in response to Father Coughlin's petition for a half-hour of time every Sunday for a year, most of the large stations declined "for various reasons," although many small stations accepted.

Hungary Denies 'Fantastic Stories' Of Merciless Cruelties

Budapest, Hungary, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Hungarian Foreign Office denied today what it called "fantastic stories spread by the Rumanian Government radio and press alleging merciless cruelties in the occupation of North Transylvania." The Rumanian charges included alleged "massacring" of Rumanian peasants, burning of villages and other "horrors" by Hungarians.

BRITISH MASTERY OF SEA SHOWN IN MEDITERRANEAN

Warships Blast Wide Gaps in Marshal Graziani's War Machine

BENGASI BOMBED

British Fleet Sails 2,500 Miles in Inland Sea Without Encountering Italian Warships

(By Larry Allen)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Alexandria, Egypt, Sept. 20.—(AP)—The Mediterranean fleet splashed back into Alexandria Harbor today, intact and undamaged, after leaving a broad trail of destruction amid Italian troop concentrations and supply bases along the Egyptian coast.

The warships returned from a broad sweep of 2,500 miles which in three weeks had covered the Aegean, Ionian and Eastern Mediterranean seas without encountering the Italian fleet and without any attempt at bombing by Italian airplanes.

One officer said this demonstrated "Our Mastery of the Sea".

Wide Gaps Cut in Italian Forces

Making a surprise attack on the Italian invaders less than 48 hours after they had advanced to Sidi Barrani and Salum, the returning warships reported they blasted those two places at close range and tore wide gaps in the war machine Marshal Rodolfo Graziani is preparing for a further thrust.

The fleet air arm also had a clear field for the bombing Monday of Bengasi, chief Libyan port, where they reported they probably sank a destroyer, set fire to a merchant ship and damaged several others.

Italian communiques have admitted the sinking of a torpedo boat, a pontoon and the starting of several fires at Bengasi.

Captain and Steward Of Japanese Ship Fined For Having Camera

Balboa, Canal Zone, Sept. 20—(AP)—The captain and a steward of the Japanese motorship Argentina Maru were fined a total of $125 late yesterday for having a camera aboard while the vessel went through the Panama Canal. A magistrate fined the steward $50 and the Captain $75.

FUTURE RE-CAST

Melbourne, Sept. 20 (CP-Reuters)—Plans for the future of the Australian Imperial Force have been "re-cast", it was stated authoritatively today. The new plans include:—

1. Probable resumption of recruiting for overseas service before the end of 1940, to continue for the duration of the war.
2. Concentration of supplies and equipment in the Middle East, where the bulk of Australian troops already overseas are emcamped, enabling a faster transfer of Australians to the main theatre of war.

NO DAMAGE TO CATHEDRAL

London, Sept. 20 (CP Cable)—A bomb fell in the grounds of Westminster (Roman Catholic) Cathedral in a recent raid, it was disclosed today. It dug a big crater but caused no damage to the Cathedral buildings or to the Archbishop's house.

Warships Named After Rivers of Canada and U.S.

Strength of Destroyer Division of Canada's Navy Will Be Thirteen

Ottawa, Sept. 20 (CP).—Six former United States destroyers, recently arrived in Canadian waters, will be commissioned ships of the Royal Canadian Navy, Navy Minister Macdonald announced today.

The destroyers, with the hoisting of the white ensign, take the new names of Annapolis, Columbia, Niagara, St. Clair, St. Croix and St. Francis, after rivers common to both Canada and the United States.

Gesture of Good Will.

Mr. Macdonald in a statement given newspapermen at a press conference said:

"The policy of naming the destroyers after rivers of Canada is consistent with that which has guided the authorities in selecting the names of those already commissioned in the Royal Canadian Navy. At the same time, by choosing rivers that flow through both countries, a gesture of international goodwill and friendship, so characteristic of relations of these great democracies, is evidenced."

Destroyer Strength Will Be 13.

With the acquisition of the six United States vessels, the destroyer strength of the Royal Canadian Navy will be raised to thirteen.

Already in service are the Restigouche, St. Laurent, Ottawa, Assiniboine, Margaree, Saguenay and Skeena.

The navy minister said the new destroyers, some of which had been laid up for some time, are apparently in good shape. They will be taken over within a few days and manned by Canadian crews of 125 or 130, five of whom will be officers.

Twenty-Two Members Of Crew Reach Gaspe

Gaspe, Que., Sept. 20 (CP)—Twenty-two members of the crew of the ill-fated British freighter Incemore, grounded on Anticosti Island during a gale Monday night, arrived here today aboard the rescue tug Foundation Aranmore.

Charged With Illegal Fishing

Seattle, Sept. 20—(CP)—The Master of the halibut boat Aloha and five crew members were reported in federal custody here today after a Canadian naval boat stopped the vessel 30 miles southwest of Goode Islands, B.C. The United States coast guard headquarters said the Canadian naval boat delivered the Aloha and crew to a coast guard boat off Patos Island, accusing the crew of illegal fishing. The Alhoa was convoyed into Seattle.

DE BOISANGER NAMED

Vichy, France, Sept. 20 (AP)—Yves Breart De Boisanger, recently appointed Governor of the Bank of France, today was named French economic representative on the Wiesbaden Armistice Commission. Boisanger replaced Pierre Fournier as Governor of the French National Bank on Sept. 1.

Football Yell Confounds Officers Aboard a Canadian Destroyer

Ottawa, Sept. 20 (CP)—"Yea, Tigers!" This football yell flashed from an aircraft of the British coastal command to the Canadian destroyer Restigouche "somewhere in European waters" cheerfully confounded the officers of that ship recently. Navy Minister Macdonald told the story at a press conference today.

Operating off the British Isles the Restigouche was circled by a plane.

The pilot flashed his signal lamp asking, "are you Canadian?"

Lieut. Desmond Piers of Halifax replied "yes," and then came the further query from the plane, "anybody from Hamilton?"

Lieut. Piers replied with dignity "one from Kingston, one from Toronto and one from Brantford, but none from Hamilton?"

Thereupon out of the sky came the light-flashing yell: "Yea, Tigers!"

Officers on the bridge waved and the plane moved off.

BRITISH SUB. SINKS TRANSPORT OFF DENMARK

Admiralty Communique States Nazi Transport "Heavily Laden"

4,000 ESTIMATED LOSS

Submarine Executes Attack Despite Heavy Weather and Low Visibility

London, Sept. 20—(CP)—The Admiralty announced today the torpedo sinking of a 10,000-ton German troop transport in a burst of smoke and flames, adding belated support to reports that nearly all of 4,000 Germans were lost.

A communique said that the submarine Sturgeon picked the transport out of a naval and plane escort as it poked into the twilight on the arm of the North Sea off Denmark on Sept. 2 and fired its torpedoes.

The Admiralty communique said that the "heavily laden" transport suffered torpedo hits and immediately showed "brilliant flashes of flame and a dense column of black smoke".

The date given for the attack coincides with that given by Swedish Press reports of the torpedoing of a transport identified as the Marion, out of Hamburg, in the Kattegat with loss of nearly all of the 4,000 men aboard.

Completed in 1932

(The Sturgeon, a sister ship of the Swordfish, Starfish and Seahorse which have figured prominently in the war, was completed in 1932. The submarine has a surface displacement of 640 tons and carries a normal crew of 40.)

The Admiralty said the Sturgeon executed its "successful attack" despite heavy weather and low visibility. In two minutes the whole ship burst into flames and when the Sturgeon rose to the surface some time later the transport had sunk and German escort vessels were sweeping the water with searchlights in a hunt for survivors.

Died in Death House He Helped to Build

Jefferson City, Mo., Sept. 20.—(AP)—"I thought when I was building the death house . . . that I would die in it", husky Robert West remarked to officers.

He did, along with Chester Jackson, a negro, early today.

They went to the lethal gas chamber of Missouri Penitentiary together, as sweetheart slayers.

West, 24-year old St. Louisan, quarried rock for the death house while serving a robbery term. After his release, he tried in vain to renew his childhood courtship of Mrs. Vivian Davidson, then estranged from her husband. He was convicted of killing her.

SHANNONVILLE PREPARES FOR "WORLD'S FAIR"

Long before New York or San Francisco beheld the wonders of a world's fair the village of Shannonville was puglicly announcing their annual fall fair and heralding it as "the World's Fair," equal to any or all. On Saturday the annual Shannonville "world's fair" is once again available to the public and patrons from far and wide will doubtless avail themseves of this annual outing. The conventional displays of farm products, livestock and other such commodities are of the highest variety, special prizes being given to growers and breeders solely within Hastings County. Horse races, a modern midway are other features to be presented on Saturday at the Shannonville "world's fair," where the motto is —"once a visitor, always a customer".

TEACHERS SPONSOR THE SCHOOL FAIR

The annual school fair for Sidney Township is being held at Wallbridge today, September 20. Although the Ontario Department of Agriculture has discontinued sponsoring school fairs, the Sidney Teachers' Association has undertaken the work and a good prize list has been prepared. Assistance has been forthcoming from the Township Council, the Women's Institute and Mr. H. L. Fair, local agricultural representative and it is expected that there will be the usual large exhibit.

WILD GOOSE BANDED SHOT IN NORTH

The work of banding birds under the direction of the Biological Survey is a hobby of Dayton Murphy of Wellington who has a game sanctuary at Wellington-on-the-Lake. One of the latest reports on birds banded by him being shot was received this week by Mr. Murphy from the Department of Mines and Resources. A Canada goose, banded at Wellington was shot at South Flaherty Island, Belcher Islands Group, Northwest Territories, according to this report.

COE HILL GIRL HAS BROKEN LEG

Bancroft (Special) Inez Gunter, 9-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gunter of Coe Hill, suffered a broken left leg near the thigh at 2: a.m. Friday morning when struck down by an automobile driven by Mr. Herman Bronson. The car was proceeding northward through Coe Hill village when Inez ran out from behind a parked car. The driver of the vehicle had no opportunity to stop the car or to avoid the accident.

Helen Gunter, 15-year-old sister of the injured girl, was standing close by when the accident occurred and made an attempt to rescue the girl from the path of the oncoming vehicle but was unsuccessful.

The injured girl was rushed to the Red Cross Hospital at Coe Hill where she was attended by Dr. S. S. Lumb of Bancroft. Provincial Constable S. W. Palmateer of Bancroft investigated the accident.

TWO PERIODS TO SHOOT PARTRIDGE

Two periods of open partridge season in this district were announced by the Department of Game and Fisheries, through Game Warden Herb McCabe here today.

Pursuant to the recent Provincial enactment it shall be lawful to hunt the following species of Partridge, namely ruffed grouse, Canada grouse, sharp-tailed grouse and prairie hen throughout Ontario, except on Crown Game Preserves and regulated game preserve areas, from October 1st to Oct. 14th, both days inclusive, and from November 4th to Nov. 1th, 1940. However, no person shall take or kill in excess to five birds per day or twenty-five in all during the above-mentioned two periods. At no time may a person be in possession of such birds in excess of the numbers herein prescribed.

PROPERTY DAMAGE AMICABLY SETTLED

Property damage resulted to a motor car driven by E. M. Bradley, Shannonville, on Front Street, yesterday. Mr. Bradley was driving his motor car away from the east curb and in front of a Canada Transport truck, double parked alongside of his car. As the front of Mr. Bradley's car emerged into the travelled portion of Front Street in front of the transport, a truck being driven in the same direction and by Thomas McAuley, 225 George Street, the latter vehicle collided with the side of the automobile causing considerable damage. Detective Fred Isard investigated and the matter of damages was amicably settled between the parties concerned.

Sydney, Australia, Sends $142,000 For Air Raid Relief

Sydney, Australia, Sept. 20 (CP-Reuters)—The Lord Mayor of Sydney today cabled 40,000 pounds ($142,000) to the Lord Mayor of London for air raid relief. The money was raised by special appeal.

London, Sept. 20 (CP Cabe)—The Lord Mayor's fund to relieve distress in Londons bombed areas today reached the total of 450,000 ($2,000,000). Contributions have been received from all parts of the world.

CHILD SAVES TWIN SISTERS

Toronto, Sept. 20 (CP)—Mary Cuff, 11, saved her brother and sister, twins, aged seven, from their home at suburban Mimico early today seconds before flames swept through the room in which they had been sleeping. Their two pet pups were burned to death in the kitchen after one of them started the blaze by tipping over a coal oil lamp on the table, according to Jack Cuif, father of the children.

POLICE COURT

"You are now about to witness the enforcement of the local improvement by-law," jocularly remarked Mr. E. J. (Eddie) Murphy, well-known Toronto barrister, in city police court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today when at the suggestion of Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson charges of theft which had been preferred against Hyman Brown and Joseph Iseman, both of Toronto, were dismissed as Mr. Robertson did not present evidence against the accused.

Iseman and Brown were facing charges of the theft of money, allegedly taken from the pocket of Alex McLaren, Tyendinaga, during the Belleville Fair. Mr. McLaren and one other chief Crown witness failed to appear against the accused men today. Mr. E. J. Murphy appeared on behalf of both Iseman and Brown. "Picking pockets at a fair is about as difficult as it would be with boxing gloves on," remarked Mr. Murphy as he stated he would personally escort his clients out of the city and see they did not return. The charges were dropped against both accused men.

The remainder of today's court was held in camera. Two juveniles appeared, one charged with the theft of a watch, and the other with stealing a bicycle from the premises of Queen Mary School recently. Recovery was made by Detective Fred Isard in both cases, the latter lad being instructed to return to his parents in Campbellford and remain there. He had been living with relatives in Belleville when he stole the bicycle in question.

Jean LaLonde, 17-year-old Peterborough lass, appeared charged with picking the pockets of her male escort while they were enjoying the romance of the moon recently. "This girl is headed in the wrong direction and goes out too frequently with men," stated Chief Kidd. Magistrate Butler suspended sentence for six months and ordered the girl, who is residing with relations at Point Anne, to report weekly to Chief Kidd.

Five inebriates enriched the city's coffers upon the payment of fines after pleading guilty to intoxication.

Trenton and District

Trenton, Sept. 20.—Monica Cannon has been selected as President of the Trenton High School Students Council, here for the coming year, and Marion Weaver was elected as vice-president.

Other officers elected were Lina Marilyn McClung, Secretary; Becki Gitelman as Social Convener; Alice Wilkins, as Literary Convener; Gerald Anderson as Boys' Sports Convener and Marjorie Donaldson as Girls' Sports Convener.

Plans for the Red Cross Campaign to start here next week, are rapidly being completed. Headquarters for the drive will be established in the Sutcliffe new store on Dundas Street West.

The campaign will be under the direction of C. A. Norsworthy, chairman of the Finance Committee, who will have a large number of voluntary workers to help him. The workers will make a door to door canvass of the town but contributors are urged to send their contributions to the Red Cross headquarters to aid the work and avoid having the canvassers make a trip to their homes.

Ontario will attempt to raise one half of the not-less-than $5,000,000 objective of the Canadian Red Cross Society in its national campaign to be launched on Monday. Trentonians are asked to give the largest possible contributions.

Chief William Bain has returned to his duties as Chief Constable of the town of Trenton, following a two-weeks' vacation.

21-Year-Olds In N. P. A. M. Units Are Exempted

With notifications now having been received through the mails by the 21-year-olds requesting them to appear for a medical examination before being called up for compulsory military training, it has been revealed that a number of men in this age-group, who are connected with the N.P.A.M. failed to state so, when registering under the National Registration Act. Such men will not be compelled to take military training under the present draught it is pointed out by military authorities.

Men of this age-group, who have already done their military training with the N.P.A.M. need only to get a certificate from their commanding officer and present this document to the board and they will be exempted from taking compulsory training with their age-group at military camp.

Dramatic Club Jottings

The executive of the Dramatic Club this year includes Jim Graham as Hon. President; Ralph Atyeo as President; Kathleen Morrison as Secretary; while Bill Brown holds the power of the purse—he's Treasurer.

News of the offerings for this year are still quite "hush-hush" but it is admitted that two plays are scheduled for production.

Reason for the vagueness is laid at the feet of Mr. Maybee whose operetta is still "in the offing".

There are about thirty-five members enrolled this year, including capable Art Young, and brilliant . . and busy . . Bernice Saunders, as the Old Faithfuls.

On Sunday evening we welcomed home our teachers and boys from their military training camp at Petawawa. They were a sunburned, healthy crowd, just one more snag in Herr Hitler's plans for power.

With their return our school settled down to regular routine.

The B.C.I. & V.S. War Service Clubs organized in all forms have already sold over Three Hundred and Fifty Dollars worth of War Saving Stamps and Certificates. This is in addition to some war bonds, of which some students are the proud possessors.

"Let's get together folks! Buy War Savings Stamps."

An interesting letter was received from the secretary of a War Service Committee formed in connection with the Women's College Hospital in Toronto, to which we sent the large contributions of tin foil (lead) at the end of June. The lead serves a double purpose—it is used in the manufacture of munitions, and the money allowed for it purchases additional clothing and comforts for the mothers and children of soldiers. So—keep up the good work of collecting! And—please do not compress the foil into balls, as it has to be sorted. (The thinner foil brings a higher price!)

The first meeting of the Red Cross Clubs, "Flanders", "John White", "Susannah Moodie", "Winston Churchill", "Dextras"— took place on Wednesday, the county students at noon, and the city students after four. Members who had earned money during the summer were proud to make their contributions to the purchasing of new materials, etc., and all had faithfully carried out some definite work—knitting for the soldiers, or sewing for the refugees in England. An eager enthusiasm was prevalent in the group into which this reporter wandered (on a message). This month their chief effort will be expended in knitting for the navy.

PRIESTLEY AGAIN ESCAPES BOMB

Novelist Tells of Bomb Hitting House in Cellar of Which He Was Having Coffee

London, Sept. 20—(CP)— There's "never a dull moment" in the life of J. B. Priestley these days of German bombing raids on London continue.

The noted British novelist told Thursday of a second escape he has had within the last three days, speaking in the British Broadcasting Corporation's broadcast feature, "Britain Speaks".

Priestley, who said he has been sleeping in his clothes since he lost all his other belongings in the bombing of his hotel, was invited to dinner at a friend's house in Mayfair.

The biggest appeal of the invitation, he said, was that he was going to sleep in a bed—a bed with pillows, sheets, blankets "and all the other things I remember Beds having"—for the first time since Monday.

Move to House's Shelter

While the air raid sirens shrilled outside, they had dinner—in the dining room, despite the air raid. Things got "pretty noisy" outside, however, so they decided to have coffee in the house's shelter.

Shortly after they reached the shelter, a message came that the house had been struck by an incendiary bomb and the roof was on fire.

"We left the shelter and went into the street where several other fires were burning. While I was standing there I heard something like a locomotive rushing at me.

"In three jumps I was back into the house, expecting every moment to hear an explosion. But there was no noise. I do not know whether it was a dud or time bomb. I do not know where it went."

Priestley spent the rest of the night in the shelter, but not in the bed he so fondly dreamed of. He had given it up to another guest of his friend while he slept on a makeshift bed on the floor.

POLICE SEEKING ARMY DESERTER

Alleged to Have Wounded Constable With Axe While House is Searched

Montreal, Sept. 20—(CP)— Police searched today for a suspected British army deserter who attacked Constable J. O. R. Ouimet of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Thursday with an axe. A six-inch gash in his skull, Ouimet is under observation in Montreal Neurological Institute.

Ouimet and another constable were searching for one of two soldiers who escaped from barracks at Westmount. The pair had been taken into custody when they reached Montreal on a ship after deserting from the British army at Gibraltar.

The two R.C.M.P. officers questioned one suspect and drove him to his home when he failed to produce a registration card. The attack is said to have occurred while they were searching for the card inside the house. The suspect escaped.

Ouimet came out of the house with blood streaming from his wound. The other constable, awaiting outside in a car, rushed him to hospital.

The deserter for whom they were searching was captured with his companion at nearby Caughnawaga last week after their arrival here. One of them escaped and has been missing since.

The two constables went out on the manhunt yesterday morning. They picked up one youth accused of deserting from the Canadian army. At the same time they questioned antoher suspected deserter. He had no registration card, saying he had left it at home.

The officers drove to a house on Champagne Street which Ouimet entered with the suspect. The suspect is said to have produced the card and then attempted to eject Ouimet. He is then said to have struck the officer over the head with the axe. Ouimet, who was unarmed, stumbled to the street while his assailant escaped through a back door.

STEPHEN KIYOSHK TO HANG NOV. 26

Jury Returns Guilty Verdict With No Recommendation for Mercy

Sarnia, Ont., Sept. 20—(CP) — Stephen Kiyoshk, 48, Indian of the Walpole Island Reserve, must pay with his life for the murder of Jerry Blackbird, another Indian who lived with him at his Squirrel Island cabin.

Kiyoshk was sentenced last night by Mr. Justice W. D. Roach to be hanged Nov. 26 after a Supreme Court Jury deliberated four hours before returning a verdict of guilty with no recommendation for mercy.

Body of Blackbird, head battered and feet chained to a boat, was found in the St. Clair River near Kiyoshk's home last August. A trail of blood led from the kitchen of the house to the river and a bloodstained axe was found nearby. Other Indians in testimony told of a liquor party the night preceding the slaying after the drinks had been obtained by rowing across the river to Sans Souci, Mich.

Denied Any Fight

In testimony, Kiyoshk said he had been alone in the house with Blackbird the night previous to finding the body but denied there had been a fight or that he killed Blackbird. Neighbors, however testified there had been sounds of a brawl from the Kiyoshk house and they had walked three miles to call police to quell the disturbance.

"I am not guilty of this charge at all and I accept the case under protest," Kiyoshk said when the verdict was returned.

It was the second time Kiyoshk has been sentenced to death. Early in 1912 he was convicted of the murder of Adam Johns, Walpole Indian. He was granted a reprieve, a new trial was ordered and he was acquitted, when an Indian girl who had been the principal witness against him at the first trial, changed her story. Kiyoshk later married the girl who has since died.

Heads of U. S. Fighting Services More Optimistic

Washington, Sept. 20 (CP)— Heads of the United States' fighting services, watching intently developments in the battle of Britain now are more optimistic than during the black days of June following the collapse of France over Great Britain's chances of winning the war.

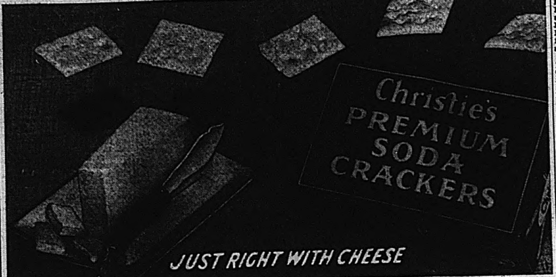
Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, said yesterday at a press conference advices received by his department are much more optimistic than they were six weeks ago. He did not elaborate on his statement.

The Secretary of the Navy, Col. Frank Knox, even is "quite cheerful" about Britain's prospects. At San Diego, Calif., earlier this week Col. Knox told newsmen he believes the chance for a successful invasion of Britain is growing weaker daily and added: "I believe England now has better than a '50-50' chance to win out, and I feel quite cheerful about it."

FRAUD IS CHARGED

Toronto, Sept. 19 (CP)—Two men and a woman were arrested by Royal Canadian Mounted Police here within the last 24 hours on charges of conspiracy to obtain money from the Dominion Government under the National Housing Act. Those arrested were Mrs. Gloria Murphy, Bernard J. O'Neil and E. D. Brouse.

Police said the trio conspired to make false statements in order to obtain loans under the Housing Act.



Main Food Items Rationed in France

Vichy, France, Sept. 20 (AP)— All main food items will be rationed in both the occupied and unoccupied zones of France beginning Sept. 23 under severe new restrictions announced here today.

Henceforth each Frenchman will be allowed the following rations:—

Meat—360 grams (about 12.7 ounces) a week.

Cheese—50 grams (about 1.8 ounces) a week.

Sugar—500 grams (about 17.6 ounces) a month.

Rice—100 grams (about 3.5 ounces) a month.

Soap—125 grams (about 4.4 ounces) a month.

A corps of 10,000 agents will be created to enforce the regulations. Ration tickets for all rationed foods served in restaurants start Sept. 30.

An official statement accompanying the announcement said "the consequences of the war and our defeat appear now in all their tragic reality."

The causes listed for the severe shortage include destruction and deterioration of harvests and livestock in the war zone. Milk production dropped off "to an enormous extent" and in certain places aphtic fever spread among farm animals.

There also was a poor harvest of cereals in the unoccupied zone of France, it was said, and the British blockade prevents imports to take up the slack.

A scene from Mrs. Osa Johnson's thrilling motion picture, "I Married Adventure," which comes to the McCarthy Theatre screen next week.

A CHALLENGE TO CANADIANS

EMERGENCY CALL!

From the shores of our Motherland comes an appeal for help which no true Canadian can fail to heed. While we live in comfort, death drops on that embattled island. The need for Red Cross assistance is urgent. Our sons and brothers are over there. On land, at sea, in the air, they face death daily. We must be prepared to help them when they are sick or wounded.

Red Cross help is needed on behalf of soldier and civilian alike. Hospitals and hospital equipment, surgical supplies and dressings, ambulances and X-Ray equipment will be needed. Overnight the need may become so urgent that lives may be sacrificed if help cannot be sent at once.

Never before has there been so great a need for Red Cross assistance. This challenge to humanity must be answered. Give to the Red Cross. Give to the utmost NOW!

BRITISH HUMOR IN MIDST OF WAR

The British House of Commons at its session on Tuesday met in the midst of war's alarums and was interrupted by one air raid warning. And that meeting freighted with the great utterance of Mr. Churchill also witnessed one of those little touches which show how little Britain is affected by the "terror" Hitler tries to instil into the people. The House was preparing to go into secret session and the Prime Minister remarked that Britain was "not receiving any information from the enemy about his way of life, though I am sure our military staffs would be very much convenienced thereby." Then using an old word, a poetic word, "espy," the Premier said "I declare to you, Mr. Speaker, that casting my eyes about, I espy a stranger."

The members laughed. It was the saving grace of British humor again, the playful British fantasy which seems so strange to the Nazis and which is so fine a characteristic of the British people. No one would ever think of Hitler, Goering, Goebbels or Himmler closing a public session in that manner.

HITLER'S TRANSPORTS BATTERED

On the shores of France and the neighboring lands are evidences of Hitler's annoyance, broken barges, part of his fleet of flat-bottomed transports in which he probably would have attempted to send hundreds of thousands of his soldiers to invade England. Hitler could not any more than anyone else congregate a vast flotilla of vessels to transport them without forming a magnificent target for the heroic young airmen of the Royal Air Force. These men attacked his craft assembled as Napoleon over a century ago gathered his thirteen hundred vessels to invade Albion. The R.A.F. did such damage that it is generally believed Hitler's invasion plans have been very seriously hampered.

The waves took a hand in lashing Hitler, these waves that lap and bathe the shores of Britain. The winds of the approaching equinox blew and Hitler's vessels were only too ready to seek shelter from the blasts. Some of his planes dared a raid over Britain but they fled before the fury of the onslaught of the British airmen who rode the winds against the snooping Huns.

Adolf Hitler does not know England, nor things English. Perhaps he does not even know the song 'There'll always be an England," but he should know something of England's history, how she smote the Spanish armada and how the winds and the rain and the seas finished what Drake left of the proud galleons of King Philip of Spain, as they battered them on the northern coasts of the British Isles.

Adolf Hitler, setting out for world conquest, should have learned some of the songs which reveal true British spirit. He should have read Campbell's "Ye Mariners of England" where he would have been told that Britain's "march is o'er the mountain waves, her home is on the deep."

Surely now he knows that and he also should know that his fellow Huns are not good sailors.

R.A.F.'s AMAZING ACHIEVEMENT

The amazing successes of the British Air Force on Sunday in knocking out of the sky 187 German warplanes was of a nature to cause Prime Minister Churchill to have the figures checked and the result was that they were substantiated, he told the Commons.

The R.A.F. has won the admiration of the world on the brilliance and thoroughness of its work.

British superiority has been so marked that to many it has been almost incredible but British reports are so thorough that there is no ground for doubt.

It is this which bears such a great meaning for the months ahead. The R.A.F. growing stronger and stronger as time passes will have so great a superiority in numbers of planes and men with the production of planes advancing and the Empire Air Training Plan turning out airmen at an unprecedented rate. It is this with the reliability of the British people, the great strength of the British army, the might of British seapower and the tightening of the blockade which gives the assurance of victory.

Hitler trusted to his armed battalions to overrun continental countries, and his planes to beat down resistance in the British Isles so as to permit invasion and the application of his continental methods. But he has not succeeded. The British Government has wisely seen to the expansion of the R.A.F. as the force which will conquer Hitler.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

James W. Barton, M.D.

Prevention and Treatment of Flat Feet

I often speak of painful feet because it is only too true that they not only interfere with comfort but are a real factor in preventing us from being at our best for work or play. Just as a headache can interfere with our thinking ability, so also can painful feet because they are a mental hazard in that we are always conscious of them.

One can hardly be blamed for seeking immediate aid for flat feet or painful arches. To be able to put an arch support in our shoes and get some degree of relief seems like common sense. Yet this very placing of an arch support when flat feet are just beginning is a mistake as it takes away the natural spring or elasticity and this spring becomes less used or becomes unused.

A good or normal foot should be in the form of a claw, like a bird's claw in that the arch is up from the ground and floor, and the first thought when the arch begins to sink downwards is not to use an arch support to "hold" it up, but to use a gripping or grasping exercise which strengthens the arch so that it stays up naturally.

If "some" help in holding up the arch is necessary, in addition to the gripping exercise, Dr. E. W. Cullipher, Miami, in the Journal of the Florida Medical Association recommends that the inner side of the shoe run in a straight line to the end of the inner side of big toe instead of turning outward to make shoes a little less "square" looking. In addition, he suggests that the inner side of the heel be raised about 3-16 to 3-8 of an inch. This raising of the inner side of the heel puts the weight of the body on the outer side of the foot where the weight really should be carried. Sometimes this increased depth of sole (3-16 to 3-8) should be placed on inner side of sole also.

Women's shoes should have plenty of length and width to allow all the upper heads of foot bones (ball of foot) to be uncrowded. If crowded, the sharp ends of the bones are pushed down to floor or ground causing pain. Heels should not be more than 1 1-4 inches, except, of course for "dress" occasions.

Arch supports are often necessary and give great relief enabling many sufferers to go about their work with a fair amount of comfort. But arch supports may never be needed, if gripping exercises, the exercise of walking on outsides of feet be done, and properly fitted shoes worn.

Savoy Dance Down Among The Steel Pipes

Helen Kirkpatrick, London to The Chicago Daily News

Ten years ago last night I first went to the Savoy dressed in my best, dazzled by the bright lights and the glittering jewels in the smartly dressed crowd. To London's best orchestra young debutantes and staid dowagers swung about the gleaming floor while a huge plate-glass window reflected its light in the Thames below. Those were in the dizzy 30's.

Last night I went to the Savoy again to dine and dance. We passed through that ballroom, its plate-glass windows boarded up, down, down, a series of stairs to the depths below. Ducking through the gas curtain on the door, we found ourselves in Wonderland.

The walls were hung with an asbestos curtain to shut out the earsplitting sounds of the gun barrage. Cosy tables were clustered among the steel pipes put up the way children make meccano trapezes, while overhead the two and three foot girders assured us that the hotel could collapse and we would still be safe.

The room used to be a banqueting room where the Association of American Correspondents had its luncheons.

"This used to be the Abraham Lincoln room, didn't it, waiter?"

"It's still the Lincoln room, madam," said he, stiffly.

While dancers whirled around the pipes skillfully, one contrasted the lovely evening clothes of a decade ago with the tailored suits of these fearful 40's. To the accompaniment of the orchestra's swing music, Savoy inhabitants filed downstairs for the night.

A stout lady in a pink quilted dressing gown had put her best black lace nightcap on for her public sleeping. Col. Blimp himself in his red, brocaded robe, was twitching his whiskers over a whisky, muttering, "the insolence of these blasted Nazis."

Instead of sweeping through the lounge to the waiting taxi, we dashed through, adjusting our tin hats to the baby Ford outside. The Ford leaped through the deserted streets audibly protesting at each crack of the near-by gun, and shying slightly when the whir of a bomb sounded in the distance. Then one hurriedly reviewed one's entire past, keeping a nervous eye out for a descending bomb.

GALLANT LONDON SURVIVED ANOTHER ORDEAL OF FIRE

By PERCY GHENT

In the Toronto Telegram.

While the eyes of the Empire and the world are watching that epic of heroism, the defence of London against the winged barbarians, there is comfort in the knowledge that the good and gallant city once before survived and flourished after a grim ordeal of fire and explosion, as it will survive and prosper again.

It was in 1666, the year of the Great Fire. Seventeen years earlier, the unfortunate Charles I had lost his head, Cromwell had been dead for eight years and the merry monarch, Charles II, was in the sixth year of his reign. Sir Isaac Newton was alive and making discoveries in science that brought glory to England. In Bedford Jail John Bunyan was writing the Pilgrim's Progress, and that gay man of affairs and stalwart champion of the navy, Samuel Pepys, was making daily entries in his sparkling diary.

Nell Gwynn, then a girl of 16, was selling oranges at London street corners or going from tavern to tavern singing songs. It was the England of Christopher Wren, genius of architecture and professor of anatomy; of John Dryden, poet and dramatist; of Izaak Walton, patron saint of all anglers; the England that knew and remembered William Harvey, the brilliant anatomist.

It was the England, too, of undrained fens and dense forests where deer, wild cattle, foxes, the ferocious wild boar and an occasional wolf were hunted. A land it was of roads so atrocious that all the strength of a dozen horses was needed at times to drag the heavy coaches from mud holes; a land where the Puritans still hunted witches with unholy glee.

• • •

And it was the England of John Evelyn, country gentleman of Wotton, near Dorking, whose quiet life was spent "minding his books and garden" and writing a diary packed with intimate details of life in the 17th century. From this diary history has gleaned its most vivid chapter on the Great Fire of London.

"In 1666, 2nd September. This fatal night, about 10, began that deplorable fire near Fish street, in London." So commences Evelyn's story. On the following day, the diarist, his wife and son, went by coach to Southwark to watch the progress of the conflagration. By that time, the whole city by the riverside was in flames. All the houses from "the bridge" to Thames street and from there to Cheapside had been consumed. That night, says Evelyn, the flames were so brilliant that for 10 miles around it was as light as day.

A prolonged season of dry, hot weather had preceded the fire and a fierce east wind sprang up when it had well started. On foot, Evelyn went as near as possible to the grim but fascinating scene. So mighty were the flames, he reports, that they kindled back against the wind as well as before it, "leaping after a prodigious manner from house to house and street to street at great distances one from the other".

He saw St. Paul's Church — an earlier structure than Wren's masterpiece—licked up with such fury that the lead of roof and piping melted and flowed like water. Hospitals, churches, halls, monuments, shops and houses became charred debris before his eyes. All the barges and boats on the Thames were loaded with household effects tossed into them with such haste that decks and holds were cluttered in the wildest disorder.

And because there were not enough boats and barges, the whole surface of the river was strewn with floating furniture and wooden chests, with crude rafts of charred planks covered with pathetic little household treasures cast adrift in the hope of possible safety and eventual recovery.

In London's present-day rain of fire every incendiary bomb is countered with fire-fighting equipment promptly and efficiently on the job. Hitler's deluge of flame is being matched by British courage and skill. But the London of 1666 was a city of tall, wooden houses and had lots of courage but little of science to fight the inferno. Ten thousand buildings roared and cracked like thunder at the height of the visitation and the flames and smoke hid the sky from view. For the populace there was no safety but in flight and little but gunpowder was at hand to fight the fire.

"Some stout seamen", Evelyn says, had wanted to confine the fire to the area of its first outbreak by using gunpowder to blast a wide gap around it. Their advice would have saved much of the city but it was disregarded. When, on the fifth day, "the courage of the multitude persisting and many houses being blown up, such gaps and desolations were soon made . . . the fire did not so vehemently urge upon the rest of the city as formerly. There was yet no standing near the burning and glowing ruins by near a furlong's space".

To get his graphic story, John Evelyn explored the smouldering debris till the soles of his shoes were scorched. Except by the blackened remains of some familiar landmark there was no means of telling on what once busy street he stood, or even where the street had been. More than a hundred churches were utterly destroyed, their stately arches and rich windows all in dust. Not a stick of timber was unconsumed and few the stones that had not been calcined white as snow.

And in the midst of the confusion a report circulated that the hostile French and Dutch were about to descend upon the ruined city. This rumor so enraged the Londoners that they forgot about their lost homes and possessions, "and, taking what weapons they could come at", could not be stopped from rushing forth to meet the foe. It was with difficulty that the people were finally assured there was no present danger of invasion and persuaded to go back to their tents and huts of temporary refuge in the lanes and fields of suburban London.

"Near the end of his account of the fire, Evelyn writes thus: "I then went towards Islington and Highgate, where one might have seen 200,000 people of all ranks and degrees, dispersed and lying along by their heaps of what they could save from the fire, deploring their loss and though ready to perish for hunger and destitution, yet not asking one penny for relief, which appeared to me a stranger sight than any I had yet beheld."

The Church A Canadian Saved

While St. Paul's may still be menaced by delayed action bombs buried in its vicinity, the great 1,100 pounder which lay close to it has been removed. And the suicide squad which accomplished this hazardous feat was led by Lieut. Robert Davies, a Canadian of the Royal Engineers. Bombs are exceptionally dangerous to this great church. The site on which it was built is not regarded as particularly stable, and the building itself showed such signs of instability fifteen years ago that it had to be strengthened at a cost of $2,000,000.

The growth of great cities like London is often accompanied by the filling in of creeks, some of which are diverted into sewers, as were the Taddle, which ran through the University grounds in Toronto, and also Garrison creek—perhaps a number of others here. Some London streams still run underground. The great Thames itself has been regulated and controlled by the Embankment, but it is not to be forgotten that in the early days there were not only creeks, but inlets, which have since been filled up. In some parts of the city there is water underground, and the danger to buildings on this type of site is not only from bombs close by, but from any which might fall some distance away and change the course of these underground waters so as literally to let the buildings down. Before undertaking the construction of St. Paul's, Sir Christopher Wren made borings to ascertain the nature of the soil far below, thus inaugurating a practice which has since become well established. As a result of his investigation, he placed his great dome on four bastions and eight piers, the main weight falling upon the piers.

This followed the burning of the second church on that site in 1666, and the piers were not built up solidly, but consisted of a veneer of Portland stone enclosing debris and rubbish from the earlier building. In 1925, when the dome was found to be nearly six inches out of plumb, an examination showed that the piers were badly cracked and had subsided from two to six and a half inches. In dealing with this situation, it became necessary to close most of the church, over a period of five years.

Holes were drilled into the piers, and more than 20 tons of cement was forced into each under pressure. Steel bars were also used as reinforcements to the extent of more than 120 tons. Then the inner wall of the dome was tied to the outer wall with steel tie rods four inches thick and 40 feet long. The dome itself was bound round with two chains of rustless steel, one 450 feet long and weighing 35 tons; the other even longer. These repairs are considered to have been marvels of engineering efficiency.

But a repaired building is still a repaired building, and the anxiety which followed the dropping of a heavy bomb in the immediate vicinity of St. Paul's is easily understood.—Toronto Daily Star.

The Black Falcon Soars Again

"Who's Who in America", a volume which purports to list the more interesting citizens of the United States, mentions a couple of individuals with the surname of Julian. But Colonel Hubert Fauntelroy Julian is not among those present. This, to our way of thinking, is a serious oversight.

At least twice a year for a decade tall, chocolate-colored Hubert Fauntelroy Julian, immaculately clad in morning coat and striped trousers, fresh carnation in his lapel, monocle screwed jauntily into his right eye, shiny silk topper perched at a rakish angle on his fuzzy black hair, has strutted across the front pages of this and other continents.

Laughter—loud laughter — has followed his progress and he has stared coldly back at his audience—stared back with injured dignity through the little round window pane in his right eye. Like all great clowns he has a quality of wistfulness. He has also a strong dash of Don Quixote in his make-up. The blades of the windmill slap him down when he ventures forth to do battle—slap him into ridiculous positions.

Remember when he was going to lead members of his race out of the bullrushes of Harlem to the promised land of Liberia? He cast himself on that occasion into a dual role—Moses and Emperor Jones. It was, if we recall correctly, a process server who stopped in front of the mass migration and scattered the venture to the four winds.

Then there was Ethiopia. Hubert Fauntleroy Julian appointed himself head of Haile Selassie's air force. Nobody disputed his position as commander-in-chief for he was the only flyer, and his the only plane poor tragic Selassie had. Colonel Julian in an impressive ceremony pledged his allegiance to the ruler of the black kingdom and climbed into the cockpit of the battered old aircraft, swearing to play havoc with the Italian invaders.

The motor roared. The machine took off. A minute later it had crashed. A minute later the Royal Ethiopian Air Force was so much twisted wreckage and its entire personnel was nursing countless bruises.

But Hubert Fauntleroy Julian recovered. He recovered sufficiently to try to iron out the difficulties in Heaven . . . Father Divine's Harlem Heaven. Faithful Mary, we think it was, had kicked over the traces and there was quite a rumpus and the black eagle stepped right into the middle of it. The "angels" promptly told him to mind his own business, which left him sartorially undisturbed but spiritually bruised.

And now Julian has challenged Germany's fat Goering to an air duel high over the English Channel. He claims to have had advices that Goering has accepted the challenge and also that he will "machine-gun that lousy creature out of this life".

Julian probably has received such advices—from a practical joker. What will come of his latest brain wave cannot be predicted. No doubt he will again wind up with the audience laughing. But his cause, as usual, is noble. And the heart of this gallant, ridiculous colored man—with the monocle and the fancy name and the self-bestowed titles—is true.

We wish he'd acquire a biographer. His story would make one of the funniest volumes in all time. Meanwhile, let the editors of "Who's Who in America" take note of their oversight. In the next edition of the tome we want to see a paragraph which starts, "Julian, Colonel Hubert Fauntleroy . . ."—Ottawa Journal.

A New Story

Daily Herald (London)

From September last up to very lately the word "Blitzkrieg" was constantly on the lips of German propagandists. It was used as a bait, to reconcile the German nation to the harsh exactions of war economy. And they took the bait. They were persuaded that their Fuehrer had discovered a short cut to world domination. Moreover, events appeared to confirm their hopes. Poland was won in a Blitzkrieg. So was Belgium. So was Holland. So was France. And the propagandists were emboldened to claim that Britain, too, would be struck down in a space of weeks. They have had to come off it. They have changed their tune. The German people are now being gently prepared for disillusionment. Unanimously the Nazi press is laying stress on the blockade, rather than the bomber, as the instrument which will destroy us. The German people must be greatly puzzled. For they have been told that their air force is swiftly reducing ours to impotence. They have been told that Southern England has been bombed flat: that air-raid victims pack our hospitals: that London mourns, and mumbles curses upon the British Government, beneath a pall of black smoke. If these things are true, they must be thinking, the war is practically finished. So why this sudden emphasis on the long and gradual process of blockade?

Preventing the Loss of Sight

The Canadian National Institute for the Blind was founded for two main reasons: first, to improve the conditions of the blind of Canada and, second, to prevent others from becoming blind wherever humanly possible. Thus, service to the blind and prevention of blindness are the two main pillars on which this Institute stands. These two activities go hand in hand. To serve those who are already blind without attempting to prevent their ranks from being increased, is to do only half the job. Realising this the Institute has established a Prevention of Blindness Department. The main aim of this Department is to reduce the amount of blindness in Canada to its lowest possible minimum.

It has been estimated that, of the twelve thousand blind persons now in this country, between three and four thousand need not have been blind had they received the proper care at the proper time. It is this proper care at the proper time that the Institute wishes to bring to those who are unable to supply it for themselves.

In Canada, during the past year, the Institute has arranged hundreds of eye examinations and has supplied hundreds of pairs of glasses. It has paid transportation to and from eye specialists and to and from hospitals. Many pairs of eyes have been saved. Had it not been for this phase of the Institute's work many more persons in Canada may have lost their vision. This work goes on from day to day and increases from year to year.

In Belleville and Hastings County this prevention of blindness work is being carried on by the Hastings County Advisory Board of the Institute. This Board is now conducting its annual campaign to raise funds to carry on this work in your community. Give generously and help to prevent the loss of sight in your city and county.

In the business period the members were invited to Mrs. Brough's for next meeting.

Anniversary Services at Fuller United Church.

Fuller United Church held their annual anniversary services on Sunday. Large congregations were present at both morning and evening services. Mr. Kenneth Stewart conducted the morning service and Rev. S. A. Doggett of Thomasburg was the special speaker at the evening service. The choir under the leadership of Mrs. W. J. Fitchett and Miss Evelyn Reynolds gave excellent music at both services and were assisted in the evening by Mr. Frank Palmer of Ivanhoe who also gave a solo. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers.

Work on the new power line through this district is about to commence. During the past week, about sixty men have been busily engaged in putting up their tent village at Moira on Mr. Gilbert Thompson's farm. The work of clearing the right of way for the huge towers will occupy some two months and another month's work will be necessary to plant the towers and stretch the wires. A number of local men will be given work.

The farmers have finished their grain harvest, but are still busy harvesting the second cutting of alfalfa hay. The fall wheat and rye is being sowed this week. The silo filling season was officially opened on Wednesday when Mr. Harry Thompson entertained a large number of his neighbors in the cornfield. The farmers are finding it exceedingly difficult to obtain help. Due to the abundant harvest not much fall plowing has been done.

Residents along the Madoc road leading to the village of Ivanhoe, are appreciating the new paved road. The dust nuisance has been permanently settled.

PERSONALS

Mrs. H. M. Sumsion of Saskatoon, is visiting her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Howell, 236 George St.

Sergeant Arthur Booth of the Belleville Police Department, underwent an operation in Belleville General Hospital today.

Rex. Chaplin, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Chaplin, Cedar Street, left for Galt, Ont., yesterday morning where he will join the Galt Aircraft Training School.

Recently a reception was held for Mr. and Mrs. John Culhane in Marysville Parish Hall. About two hundred and fifty were present. Dancing was enjoyed during the evening after which a delightful lunch was served. The bride and groom received many beautiful and useful gifts, for which they graciously thanked their many friends.

On Wednesday evening the Home and School Club of King George School met with a large number of members in attendance. The President, Mrs. Greenwood opened the meeting with the singing of "O Canada" and repeating the Lord's Prayer. Interesting reports were given by the secretary and treasurer of the society. Miss H. Thompson introduced the guest speaker of the evening, Miss E. M. Allison, who had taken a special course in Guelph this summer. She spoke on "Red Cross Nutrition" and distributed pamphlets "Foods for Health in Peace and War" published by the Canadian Medical Association, these contained many interesting items regarding Canadian markets and some very fine menus. Mrs. Harrison extended a hearty vote of thanks to Miss Allison. A new curtain was presented on behalf of the Home and School Club by Mr. L. Kells in the absence of Mr. J. Deacon. The members enjoyed some lively community singing and refreshments were served.

WEDDINGS

WEST—STAPLEY

On Wednesday morning, Sept. 18th., amid pastel shades of autumn flowers Rev. Marshall Laverty, B.A., B.D., officiated at the marriage of Lenora Mae Stapley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Stapley, Madoc Junction, to William Harold, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. West, of Stirling.

The ceremony was performed in Stirling United Church with Miss Grace Pitman, A.T.C.M., playing the wedding music. The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Kenneth, looked winsome in her smart travelling ensemble of navy and white, with navy accessories and corsage of roses.

Miss Jean McNabb of St. Louis, Mo., the bride's attendant, wore a suit of grey and plaid with navy hat and corsage of roses.

Mr. Russell West assisted the groom.

After the ceremony the couple left for Toronto and other western points. The groom's gift to his bride was a handsome cabinet of silver. Upon their return they will reside on John Street, Stirling.

Previous to her marriage Lenora was honoured with a kitchen shower at the summer home of Mrs. M. McNabb at Oak Lake, at which she received many lovely gifts from her girl friends and others for which she thanked them graciously. Other gifts including walnut tables, magazine racks, silverware, electric lamps and crystal, have arrived at her home, showing the popularity of the young couple the popularity them bon voyage.

ANDREWS—JOHNSON

A very quiet wedding ceremony was solemnized at Rawdon United Church parsonage on Wednesday afternoon, September 18th, with Rev. James E. Beckel officiating when Alice Carlyn only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Johnson, Wellman's, became the bride of John Hubert Andrews, son of the late Philip Andrews and Mrs. Mabel Andrews of Bonarlaw.

The bride looked charming in a gown of Airforce blue with matching accessories and she was attended by her cousin, Miss Elsie McQuigge of Havelock, wearing a wine ensemble.

Mr. Kenenth Hough of Bonarlaw, assisted the groom.

Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left on a honeymoon trip to Toronto and western points.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Stinginess of Husband During Life May Turn Widow into a Spendthrift

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"My sister and I are worried crazy over mother. She is throwing away the insurance money left her by Dad like the traditional drunken sailor. They were married over twenty-five years, and there is no denying that Dad was close—close as the bark on a tree. We had a dreadful time to get the necessaries of life, and had to resort to that rotten scheme of charging things and selling them to our relatives.

"Now mother has inherited $25,000 life insurance, and never having had a cent to call her own before, she's acting as if it were about twenty-five million. She buys everything. Her mourning is startling, all white, veil and all. A young gigolo hangs round, trying to sell her a house which we can't afford to buy. If we girls attempt to talk sense to her, she either flies in a fury or bursts into tears. We are at our wits' end.

Worried Daughters".

If men would only realize that the money they scrimp and toil to leave their wives slips like water through fingers that have always been empty of ready cash, they would try to teach their wives the value of money by giving them a little cash to handle.

Who has not been pitiably amused by the spectacle of a widow running amok through her life insurance, imagining the end of it will never be reached. Like a child with his first quarter turned loose in a candy store, she buys everything in sight.

The white mourning, of which this daughter speaks, is a sample of her state of mind. She's not exactly rejoicing in the death of her miserly husband or the money that's suddenly come to her to squander, but she needs startling clothes as a symbol. White mourning does it. It produces a stop, look and listen on the part of every beholder. It's challenging. "Who is that?" the passerby will ask taking a second glance.

"Don't you know? That's Mrs. So and So. Her husband died two months ago"

The house to which the daughter refers is only another symptom. Of course she feels she can afford it. She can afford anything as long as she's able to write checks.

What's to be done about it? The daughters say she flies into a tantrum or bursts into tears when they attempt to reason with her. The reasoning must be done by a man, because she has always been held in leash by her penny-pinching husband. Women don't count in her life. They're the material of which slaves are made, just as she has been kept down.

If there is any brother or man holding a responsible position in the family connections, he's the one to reason with the spendthrift. In cases like this, I have actually known a kindly president of a bank to call the squanderer into his private office and tell her that insurance money has a way of coming to an end, and that she just must cut out spending, or else.

A few well-chosen suggestions of what happens to middle-aged women without a penny may turn the spendthrift's thoughts into sensible channels. There really isn't anything for the daughters to do but hunt up some man—preferably a Dutch uncle—who may be able to turn the trick. What would you do if you had a mother, spending her way to the poorhouse?

Formal Engagement Announcements Termed Bad Taste by Expert

I don't approve of engraved (or printed) engagement announcements. These "formal" announcements are not good form.

Perhaps it has never been brought to your attention that this form of announcement is not good taste. Or sending these announcements may appeal to you as the easiest way to inform your friends and acquaintances of The Big News . . . . you "never did like to write letters anyway". But the right way is just as easy . . . and less expensive.

Let's say that you and your fiance have decided on the date on which you are to announce your engagement. You and he tell relatives and perhaps especially close friends. . . wisely asking them "not to tell" until the announcement date.

But there are your other friends in town and out-of-town, whom you want to have know the happy news. The basis of close friendship demands special consideration. So these friends are entitled to receive such special news "confidentially". If they have a proper sense of taste and appropriateness, they naturally won't be proud or flattered by receiving the news via a bleak and impersonal "formal" announcement.

On the other hand it will be a delightful and heart-warming experience to them to open a note from you, reading, perhaps something like this,

Dear Sally,

Of course I want you to be among the first to know that David Rowland and I are engaged! I know you'll be pleased . . we are! . . . and you've probably suspected that there was romance a-brewing. I'm so happy it's difficult for me to talk in "regular" words!

Mother and Dad are going to announce the engagement on October twentieth (no party, just a newspaper announcement) . . . . so please "don't tell" till then. I'll write you later about our plans, but I wanted you to know The News at once.

Dearest love from David and me.

Affectionately,

Now your relatives and close friends (and your fiance's too) are told or written to. And they're the ones most concerned with the news of this great occasion in your life. Those not so closely concerned, casual friends and acquaintances, will be told perhaps by a newspaper announcement . . . or perhaps just by the inevitable spreading of the news.

Courtesy Tip

When you take a long motor trip with other people, don't talk too much and don't be silent too much. Both grow tiresome!

SOFT COLOURS FOR SAFARI WARDROBE

The ultra-chic appearance of Osa Johnson featured in the next attraction at the McCarthy Theatre Columbia's "I Married Adventure," thrill-packed record of her 27 years of venturesome journeys, always surprises people. She cannot understand why.

"Every one thinks I should run around in heavy boots and khaki with an elephant gun slung over my shoulder," she said. "But I love nice clothes, and always try to look my best—even in the jungle."

Wears Slacks

The reason for this is simple enough. According to the charming widow of Martin Johnson, when a day's foraging is over—after treks through knife-sharp grasses and swarms of biting flies and ants—it's restful and soul-satisfying to slip into something cool and comfortable and try to look one's prettiest in the midst of the wildest country imaginable.

When Mrs. Johnson heads for the wilds of Africa, she takes along a plentiful store of slacks and shorts in soft blended colors. Bright reds and whites are out, because they are too easily spotted by the animals.

For evening wear, this extremely attractive explorer dons a pair of royal blue satin pajamas, piped in crimson. Sometimes she ties a brightly colored scarf around her head—for effect as well as for protection against annoying winged pests.

Also included in her wardrobe trunk—her only piece of luggage for personal effects—are wooly sweaters, a soft suede coat, comfortable sandals, high soft suede boots......and of course, her safari khaki.

Unspoiled

Twenty-seven years in the jungles have not hardened Osa Johnson—inside or out. Besides being pretty, Osa Johnson has a lovely skin. Not a mark of the many years of safari life shows on her face.

"What's the difference—one's dressing room or the jungle? It's just as important to keep one's self looking nice no matter where you are," she explained. "Every night in Africa I would cream my face to keep it from becoming dry. I'd even put my hair up every night—so that it would look well the next day."

Guard Baby's First Teeth

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

The first teeth are formed in the jaw before the baby's birth. The mother's diet during pregnancy and while nursing the baby determines the soundness of the baby's teeth while they are being laid down in soft tissue.

Foods for the pregnant mother adequate in vitamins and minerals as recommended by Mendenhall are: "1 quart of milk, one egg, one raw vegetable salad such as lettuce, celery and tomato, one citrus fruit, one cooked green vegetable, two slices entire wheat or graham bread or 1 1-2 ounces whole grain cereal. If a helping of lean meat, potato, and three servings of butter and cereal or bread are added to these foods, a diet sufficient in calories and adequate except possibly in iodine, will be furnished a normal mother.

"More fruit and vegetables may be substituted in place of carbohydrates if the energy needs to be curtailed." Some experts would add one-half teaspoonful of cod liver oil. However, every pregnant mother should have her diet checked by a physician.

Best Preventive

As a preventive of tooth decay (caries), Dr. Park has written: "I believe that if pregnant women received ample well-balanced diets, in which green vegetables were abundantly supplied and cow's milk was regularly taken, and kept a sufficient part of their time in the open air and sun, and if their infants were placed in the direct rays of the sun for a part of each day and were fed cod liver oil for the first two or three years of life, more could be accomplished in regard to the eradication of caries of the teeth than in all other ways put together, and that rickets would be abolished from the earth."

Dr. H. Kent Tenny, Jr., in that fine new little book, "Let's Talk About Your Baby," says:

"Now that he is getting enough teeth for cutting and grinding operations, it is well to encourage him in their proper use...... But you will find that civilized teeth are not used hard enough. Among the Eskimos, who use their teeth for just about everything, including the softening up of frozen boots, tooth decay is very rare.

Things to Chew

"So give your baby things like zwieback to chew and later on encourage him to eat toast, rye crisp, and crackers rather than soft bread, and teach him to chew his meat vigorously and thoroughly. As to cleaning the teeth it is well to start the habit early and remember that it is the grinding surfaces that need most attention. When he is two and a half or three years old take him to a dentist who appreciates the importance of children's dentistry, and thereafter keep in frequent touch with him." The Myer's children began going to the dentist when they were two. Before ten they were making and keeping their own dental appointments.

It is important also that the child have proper diet during the years before the permanent teeth erupt. Faegre and Anderson in "Child Care and Training" give a chart showing the average time of eruption of the various groups of temporary and permanent teeth.

Q.—Would you punish a child to make him say Please or Thank You?

A.—No; I should patiently work to make him want to exercise these courtesies.

Prospective Mothers Can Receive Guidance From New Health Book

Probably the most authoritative and up-to-date work in its field, an elaborate 230-page book, "The Canadian Mother and Child," has been printed by the Department of Pensions and National Health, and is now available for free distribution to the public of Canada.

The new book augments the National Health Publications series, a veritable library of free public health literature, which has achieved wide circulation in recent years. It will replace the old "Canadian Mother's Book" which was number two in the series.

Author of the new governmental handbook is Dr. Ernest Couture, a noted Canadian obstetrician, who is Chief of the Division of Child and Maternal Hygiene of the Department of Pensions and National Health. Much of the information it gives to mothers and prospective mothers is drawn from Dr. Couture's own experience in practise and has been supplemented by detailed instructions for infant care, pre-natal attention, nursery hygiene, nutrition, habit and character training and one hundred-and-one valuable aids to child rearing.

Replete with illustrations from life, the book is designed to contribute to the safeguarding of the health of mother as well as baby at childbirth. A foreword by Dr. R. E. Wodehouse, O.B.E., Deputy Minister of the Department, dedicates the book to the "service of Canadian mothers" and points out that those who are aware of the ill-effects suffered in childbirth through a lack of adequate care, will welcome this book as a contribution to the well-being of mother and child.

Entirely original in content, the book has been presented in a manner which will appeal to all women. It is intended to serve as a ready-reference on the numerous details associated with maternity which an attending physician will desire his patient to observe.

Diet charts, weight tables, pictures of exercises for young mothers, feeding formulas, recipes, knitting instructions, information on birth registration, and many other matters of importance when a baby arrives, have been incorporated in the new book.

Medical authorities who have had an opportunity of seeing the book believe that it will meet a wide-spread need, and will prove a valuable contribution to child and maternal hygiene in Canada.

Montreal Fashioneers Attend Skyflight

"Flying Colours" Featured at Introductory Party

Fall fashions by Peggy Sage took off to a flying start at a luncheon and fashion show for the Fashion and Beauty Press in the Normandie Roof of the Mount Royal Hotel, September 16th., to introduce Miss Sage's two new "Flying Colours".

Three of Montreal's leading departmental stores gave their own special versions as to how to answer the call to the colours. Travel clothes from Eaton's, Simpson's and Dupuis were modelled; Peggy Sage "Flying Colours"—Flagship and Skyhigh—forming effective and striking accents. Flagship is a rich carrying red. Skyhigh is a light, but high-styled pink.

Skyhigh polish was worn by Canadian Colonial Airway stewardesses, who were present to give out flight information on flying with Peggy Sage. This is the first nail polish ever to be approved for wear by this alert and attractive group of flying women.

The Peggy Sage Skyline Gifts Sets for 1940, beautifully styled to tempt the Christmas giver, were introduced. Gift sets were presented to the guests present.

FEET

Once, they made my heart rejoice—
Pattering feet!
When they answered to my voice—
Pattering feet!

School days carried them away—
Clattering feet!
Home they came at end of day—
Clattering feet!

Soon, too soon, we must part—
Tramping feet!
Down the road—across my heart—
Tramping feet!

May God keep you in His care—
Marching feet!
Safe from every hidden snare—
Marching feet!

Pacifiers

I get many letters from mothers who want to know what I think about giving a baby a "cumfort" or "pacifier"— you know, those gadgets mothers so often stick in the baby's mouth to keep him from crying. I invariably reply that I do not approve of their use. Usually this is all there is to it, but a few times mothers have written right back criticising me for this attitude. In one of these before me now, I'm accused of being too old-fashioned and of allowing my experience with the Quintuplets to cause me to lose sight of the way ordinary mothers, without nurse maids, must bring up children.

Well, my objection to the "comfort" can't be taken either as a sign I'm old-fashioned or have extraordinary ideas because of the Quins. Goodness knows, there hasn't been anything done in the upbringing of the Quins that wouldn't be equally sound, and as easy to apply, in the case of ordinary children.

No, my objection to giving a baby a "pacifier" to suck is purely a matter of asepsis — cleanliness. There are other bases for objections, but the uncleanliness of the "pacifier" is objection enough.

I have seen a good many of these "comforts" used. I have gone into dozens of homes where the "comfort" was tied around the baby's neck. When he wasn't sucking on it, it was dragging on the floor, or the cat was playing with it, or something of the sort was happening to it. "Pacifiers" are usually of rubber, and so do not lend themselves to safe sterilization. So, there they are, kicked around the baby's crib and off on the floor. Then when the baby starts to cry, into his mouth it goes, bacteria and all.

It only takes one good set of germs to get down into the intestinal tract and set up a first class case of diarrhoea. Diarrhoea often kills babies, or if it doesn't by itself, it leaves them so weakened that they fall easy prey to some other infection that finishes the job.

Another objection that has been made to these contraptions is that they may put the child's mouth out of shape just as thumb-sucking does. I suppose that if a baby does suck a "pacifier" a good deal for a long, long period of time it might affect the shape of his mouth.

Giving the baby the "comfort" to keep him from crying isn't the proper discipline he should have and will have to have some day.

But these latter reasons are unimportant compared with the danger of disease that lurks in a "comfort".

Not for Ditch Digging

By HELEN FOLLETT

IT ALWAYS happens. You've been getting after closet shelves, pulling down dusty boxes, messing round generally. The phone rings, you get a last minute call for a gay party and your finger nails look as if you have been digging ditches. No time to rush-trot to the beauty shop for a manicure.

Well, then, here goes. Remove the old polish, use the flexible file, working from sides to centre. Run the orange wood stick under the nail eaves, use a beveling file of emery board. So far, so good.

Give the hands a thorough scrubbing with hot soap suds and a brush, rinse and dry. To the nails apply cuticle cream or olive oil. Run the orange wood stick under the cuticle, lifting it gently; don't push it back at the base; you may injure the matrix. If little shreds appear, snip them away with the curved needle-point scissors, pointing the ends toward the nail base.

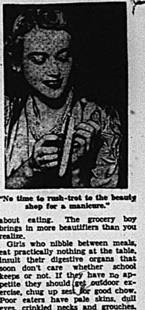
x x x

Pass the nail white pencil under the eaves of the nails, forming a clear cut line. If you don't fancy a pencil, use nail white and the orange wood stick.

On with the gay glitter. Do not apply polish lavishly. Two light films are better than one heavy one.

x x x

Every cell of the body is dependent upon nutrition, even every hair of your head. So don't be casual about eating. The grocery boy brings in more beautifiers than you realize.



"No time to rush-trot to the beauty shop for a manicure."

Girls who nibble between meals, eat practically nothing at the table, insult their digestive organs that soon don't care whether school keeps or not. If they have no appetite they should get outdoor exercise, chug up zest for good chow. Poor eaters have pale skins, dull eyes, crinkled necks and grouches. There's no beauty without health, no health without proper nourishment.

The Stars Say

For Saturday, September 21

By GENEVIVE KMBLE

SWIFT-MOVING events, with all manner of activities moving under high-pressure, is the prognostication based on very interesting planetary conditions. Under such highly-stimulated forces, backed up by keen, virile, creative intellectual powers and intuitive vision, it would be wise to push for high goals, through engineering new, important and even audacious projects. The newer, novel, inventive, perhaps revolutionary ideas, tactics and methods employed in such ventures are bound to meet conspicuous success. Work for fruition of bold ambitions with audacity but not eccentricity. Big business cooperates, welcoming constructive change.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of signal success, with productive and progressive fulfillments that are to materialize "in a big way." Initiative, daring, originality, with sudden and devastating shattering of old things, outgrown and effete ways and means, making way for rebuilding on fresh foundations, systems, and ideals. The old order passeth, under thunderbolts of progressive prods of major scope and purpose, with forces and faculties vividly stimulated and possibly inspired. Financial promotion awaits just such innovations. Be not however carried away by the novelty and vastness of events by erratic indulgences.

A child born on this day should have a full equipment of capabilities, powers, initiative, inspiration of many forms, progressions, innovations and extraordinary adventures. This may materialize in a science, invention, discovery, social science, drama, art, or romance.

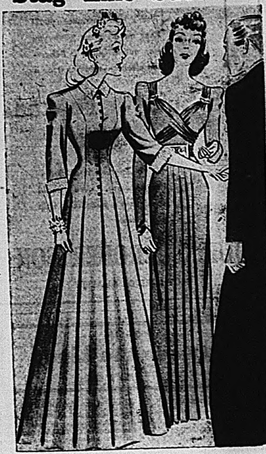
Stag Line Successes



By PRUNELLA WOOD

AS EVERY sophomore knows, the time to approach dad on college clothes is while you have him on the spot. Use your charms, not your pen, if you expect results. If you're not too hard on the good man's bank account, it's likely you'll be able to stack up quite a sizeable wardrobe, including the all-important date and prom dresses.

Today's pretty styles are moderately-priced and practical. The princess dress on the left is light grey velveteen designed to show off a tiny waist, and is collared and cuffed with seed pearl embroidery.

Means to the End of Making Boy Friends

The other evening I saw a crowd of 'teen age boys and girls arrive at a party and it was an eye opener. They piled out of their cars as though fire were behind them. Somebody tossed out an old tennis ball and in five seconds they were throwing it and catching it so fast oldish eyes could scarcely follow it. In less than fifteen minutes some of them were playing cards, others dancing, others swimming and others singing with the blaring radio. Remember how fast the old vaudeville acts used to get under way. These youngsters were tumbling about at just such a pace.

For five hours the whirling dervishes kept going, with only a half hour out for supper, and then some of them danced with their desserts in their free hands. Perpetual motion not only of hands and feet but of wits too, as proven by the laughter that splattered on the darkness.

Do you know what would have happened to any girl in the bunch who couldn't do the things they were doing? Why, she would have sat alone and sucked her thumb unless, perchance, there had been one gallant lad present who would have sacrificed his fun to sit and nurse her. There was no place for the self-conscious, shy, scared-to-death maiden in that evening's program.

Every day in the week I receive letters from girls who are unhappy because they have no boy-friends and no fun (synonymous at 'teen age) and naturally they are asking for the magic formula that is guaranteed to yield immediate returns. There is none. There are means to the end if a girl will take them.

Paradoxically, girl friends are the first and most important acquisition. If a girl belongs to a congenial crowd, all of whom are doing the same things, going to the same places, dating the same boys, she's all set. They can have all sorts of get-togethers (with and without boys) and have fun the lone wolf never dreams of. So the girls who would have boy friends should make girl friends and employ the mass offensive.

Every bit of knowledge we acquire and every skill we develop is eventually useful; the skill a girl develops at games and sports comes in right now to save her from innocuous desuetude; or in plain language, from being a drug on the market. If she knows how to do nothing but look pretty, simper and sigh she cannot hold her own with girls who know how to do everything but fly planes and are probably taking lessons in that art.

The Oomph, the It, the S.A., the pretty face have their places, but today the boys ask the girls, "What have you got on the ball?" All of which makes life much simpler for the gals without the come-hither. They can get in the game by muscling in.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

GIRLS SUCCESSFUL AS CONDUCTRESSES

Those Used to Public Make Best Ones — Shop Clerks Thought Good Bets

London.—Shop clerks and waitresses make the best women bus conductors according to the London Passenger Transport Board, forced to replace men on country routes.

This is because they are used to handling the public—a qualification considered of utmost importance in would-be conductresses. Few domestic servants have been chosen because they seem to be "so out of touch with the world," say examiners.

In London's southwestern area, men are being replaced by women at the rate of 15 a week.

Conductor Jenkins, one of the first seven girls to take over, finds the most difficult part of her work is keeping on her feet when the bus goes around corners. After two weeks on the job she could recall only one disagreeable passenger. "The public are very nice," she said. "The way they have received us has been wonderful."

Miss Jenkins has had several jobs including housekeeping, cooking and factory work but considers bus "conducting" better than any of them, even though it is sometimes very tiring.

Applicants are given a test paper when interviewed for the job. One of the questions is: "Give the names of six public buildings in the locality in which you live." One girl asked what a public building was before attempting to answer.

Age limits are between 23 and 30 for married women and 23 and 33 for single. Preference is given to wives of service men, subject to tests. Height limits are from five feet, two inches to five feet eight inches. This is because a conductor must be tall enough to reach the bell, but not so tall as to have to stoop in single-deck buses.

Conductresses have to work faster than those of the first Great War. Buses are larger, carry more passengers and travel at higher speeds.

Walk the Deck In Fit Finery

By ALICE DENHOFF

HAPPY days are here again for cruise addicts as ships increase their runs and announce new itineraries and schedules from Labor Day on through the winter with special emphasis on South American ports. So the cruise departments of the stores are working overtime selling beach things and dinner clothes and smart spectator sports shore-going costumes to excited travellers. What to take and what to leave at home—that's the question as suitcases are dusted off and wardrobes inspected.

The most suitable clothes for shipboard are exactly the same as those which would be donned by the fair passenger were she at the seashore or country-clubbing. If she has tub silk frocks and linens of the shirtwaist type she will find them well addicted to cruise life. For those shore excursions she will take along good looking spectator sports ensembles in white, or pink or blue or other pastel shades. Black is smart too!

Slacks If You Can Wear 'Em

If a gal can wear 'em, she should take along slacks. But if she isn't the type for them ashore, being afloat won't alter the set-up. It will only make things worse. Everyone comes under the scrutiny of everyone else on board ship and there's always plenty of gossip and comment on the sidelines, and a raft of snickers too for the girl who isn't the type for slacks or shorts. A fast game of deck tennis requires either shorts or one of those smart knee-length tennis frocks. Take along your swim suits and of course a serviceable beach robe.

The cruise sophisticate never, never takes along her very decollete gowns, for she knows that it isn't the thing, even if she does look simply glorious in that svelte lame numero. And there's no need to when there are such enticing dinner dresses, especially those casual shirtwaist models in white or black or pastel silk jersey that drape like a dream and are demurely devastating. Lace by all means, for it packs like a charm and emerges with nary a wrinkle. Take along one of those swell evening jackets that are all things to all women. Leave that fur jacket at home too. Furs aren't good sailors, as many a gal has discovered. Have a good time!

Combine Tomatoes For Occasional Meatless Meal

By BETSY NEWMAN

Today's Menu

Fried Tomatoes and Scrambled Eggs
Mashed Potatoes
Celery and Cucumber Salad
Coffee Marlow Mustard Pickles
Sour Cream Molasses Cookies
Coffee

Old-fashioned Mustard Pickles

1 qt. medium sized cucumbers
1 qt. small cucumbers
1 qt. button onions
1 green pepper
1-2 cup salt
2 heads cauliflower
2 qts. vinegar
3 cups sugar
1 cup flour
3 tbsps. mustard
2 tbsps. turmeric

Slice medium sized cucumbers, leave small ones whole, or cut in halves. Peel onions and leave whole. Chop pepper fine, discarding seeds. Clean cauliflower and separate into flowerets. Combine vegetables and barely cover with cold water. Add salt, put a plate and weight on top, and let stand for 12 hours. Cook in same water until vegetables are tender but not soft. Five minutes of boiling should be adequate. Drain thoroughly. Mix sugar, flour, mustard and turmeric and add vinegar slowly, mixing until smooth. Bring to boiling point, add vegetables. Simmer 15 minutes, put into clean sterilized jars. Seal while hot.

Fried Tomatoes and Scrambled Eggs

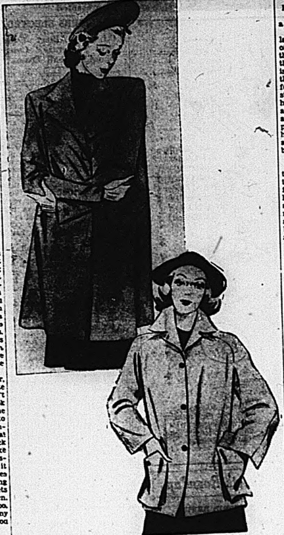
8 thick slices fresh tomatoes
Salt
Pepper
Flour
1-4 cup butter
8 eggs
1-2 cup milk
Salt
Pepper
Chopped parsley

Salt and pepper tomatoes and dip in flour. Melt butter in iron or heavy aluminum skillet and fry tomatoes until browned and tender. With a pancake turner remove tomatoes to edges of hot platter. Now beat eggs slightly with milk, salt and pepper. Pour into the same skillet and cook slowly until firm but still moist. Pile in the centre of platter and sprinkle with chopped parsley. Try serving tomatoes fried in this manner with steak or roast.

ODD FACTS

There is a wishing well in Chinatown, Los Angeles, Calif., where the hopeful ones may woo fortune by tossing in coins. Recently a visitor, slightly in need of a little spare cash, lowered himself into the wishing well and began fishing around for coins. The police fished him out. In his pockets they found 1,468 pennies, six nickels, four dimes, six metal slugs and five copper nails.

New Suede Styles



You pay for what you get in suede, as far as quality goes. At the same time, manufacturers are able to so style a coat or jacket to cut down cost, determined to a large extent by the width and length of skins.

The smart coat (UPPER) is an example. Without spoiling its lines in the least, a deep yoke in back saves the purchaser considerable. Shoulders are slightly squared, sleeves becoming full. Some of the lovely colors it is made in are mahogany, tobacco beige, sagebrush green, amber, dawn blue and a red-rust, any of them chic for campus or town.

The other suede jacket sketched, with bellow pockets and rounded shoulders comes in an equally colorful range and is buttoned in leather. This is one of several feminine Fall styles duplicated in jackets for men.

The British Color Council has just mailed its choice for Fall and Winter and such names as turf green, bunting azure and rowan berry describe the shades, with must gray, magenta rose and sherry brown the darkest colors available in new fabrics, both silk and wool.

BEAUTY

Secrets of Make-Up

There's beauty gold in them thar jars and bottles in your beauty kit, dear lady. There's magic, too, which turns a pale face faintly rosy, puts the gardenia velvetiness on the complexion, brings pretty coloring to the lips. That is, if you are keen of eye, steady of hand and know precisely what you are about. There's much to be learned about make-up technique. It's an art.

Alas, all the little dearhearts aren't artists. These are the lassies who cause the quaint, dear old dodos to lift their eyebrows almost out of joint, raise their hands in holy horror. Things weren't like that when they were young! It is to laugh. The smarties among even the oldsters are plying their lipsticks and laying on the synthetic blush. They use discretion. It is the wild young thing or the faded woman who doesn't care how much she trowels on the paint who makes cosmetic mistakes.

Some, we believe, strive for the artificial effect to attract attention. They have no place in our beauty class; our pulchritudinous efforts are directed by good taste and good sense, so we'll "leave 'em be" and pass them by. You bump into them often enough, wonder just what their heavily painted faces get them.

• • •

The smart girl uses different tactics. She is subtle; she is slick. She manipulates artifice so that it passes for natural effects. She prefers to have people believe she was born that way. The rouge compact is used sparingly. Lipstick films the rosy flesh, isn't plastered on, and the outline is so perfectly marked that the vermilion cream does not extend over the white skin and give her away. Not that make-up isn't respectable; it is. But that a little make-up gives freshness to the face, lights the eyes, makes the portrait more vivid, and so serves the purpose for which it was intended.

Your Child On the Farm

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

WHAT IS the benefit today for a child to visit a farm?

According to Dr. Allen G. Ireland, Health Education Director of New Jersey, it is in seeing where the food he eats comes from. In this day of living out of cans this is not surprising. A summer trip to the farm may be made the basis for an all winter long course of study in food values and dietary hygiene. It's one thing to be told about the content of milk, quite another to see the actual milking process and bottling. One thing to hear about green vegetables, quite another to see the plants growing, being tended and gathered.

Food Likes and Habits

As a matter of actual experience teachers and mothers say that these trips make a tremendous difference in a child's food likes and habits. To see a plant growing arouses curiosity about it that is never stirred by seeing it cooked on a plate. So a trip to the farm broadens the taste in the best sense—the taste for different foods.

How fast does the blood circulate and how can this be determined?

The rapidity with which blood moves about would have astonished old William Harvey, who discovered that the blood circulated. He thought it made a complete circuit in about thirty minutes. Correct time is closer to that many seconds. A drop of blood at the elbow in the arm goes to the right side of the heart through the lungs, to the left side of the heart and to the nose or tongue in about ten seconds. The method to prove this is to put a small amount of ether in the vein of the arm and then when the experimental subject first smells or tastes the ether the circuit has been made. Other methods which get away from the possibility of error from a subjective sensation like taste or smell are also used.

• • •

Do vegetables that you grow in your own garden really taste better than those you buy at the store?

Yes. This question is a postscript to the first one. The reason, of course, is psychological, or rather psychic physiological — emotions stir the digestive juices to more secretion, the knowledge that these are your own vegetables makes your mouth water for them.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Answer—Certainly not. Lulu G. Graves, in her book "Foods in Health and Disease," says: "Margarine consists of vegetable and animal fat. Has practically the same fuel value as butter and is as easily digested. Vitamin content (A & D) equally good in both. Shortening power and keeping qualities as good as butter, and margarine products stand high in cleanliness and purity.

Never Too Late For Cramming

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

I urge youth and their parents to keep on learning, entreating those who are not within access to a day or night high school or a day or night college, or unable to find the courses they desire in these schools, to consider the opportunities offered by correspondence schools. It is amazing how many have been able to further their education by pursuing home-study courses.

But inasmuch as there are, unfortunately, some correspondence schools which might be classified as rackets, every person considering the taking of a course by mail should be sure he has reliable information about the correspondence school he is considering. The high school principal in your neighborhood is a good person from whom to seek counsel on such matters. Usually he has the facts and is glad to be at your service.

New developments in business and industrial fields are exploited by unscrupulous men who urge ambitious young people to enroll in highpriced courses by false representations regarding the employment opportunities available.

Several fields that seem to offer unusual employment opportunities and which currently are being exploited far beyond their practical possibilities are television, diesel engines, air conditioning and civil service.

Preparation for civil service examination through coaching courses is neither necessary nor advisable. Civil service commissions continually warn people that no school can get advance information about civil service examinations.

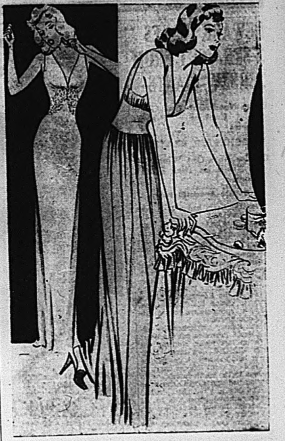
Agents of reputable schools do not promise jobs nor raise in pay or the like as a result of completion of any course of instruction. Those that do should be investigated. When pressed to enroll, be sure to get the agent's name, address, telephone number and name and address of the school he represents. Haste in signing should be avoided.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Should a boy wash dishes?

A. To be sure, he should, just as a girl should. It will help make him a good home citizen, and a good husband and father by and by.

Simplest to Launder



By PRUNELLA WOOD

WHETHER YOU live alone and like it or share all your household belongings with another working girl, it's silly to use a lot of your leisure time at the ironingboard. Jersey underthings help because they wash in a jiffy and press with no effort at all. Some girls could read an interesting book in the hours they spend painfully smoothing out fancy lingerie!

The gowns shown are sold for a song, fit comfortably like simple evening dresses, and come in pretty colors as well as white. The model on the right has an elasticized waistline and very full skirt. The other is perfectly plain except for the lacy insert below the bust.

Is Success at Office Job Although She Has Only One Arm

Mary Morrissey's Typing Speed is 35 Words a Minute and Her Shorthand Speed is 75 Words—Has Also Studied Charcoal Drawing at Beaux Arts

This is the story of Mary Morrissey, of Montreal, and it is a success story. She was born in Montreal about 20 years ago with only one arm. Today Miss Morrissey is a bilingual stenographer with a typing speed of 35 words a minute and a shorthand speed of 75 words a minute. This is how she did it.

When she was six years old her family moved to the United States. When they returned to Montreal she was 17 and a high school graduate ready to make the most of her education. She was interested in painting and studied for a year at the Monument Nationale. Then she took a three-year course in charcoal drawing at the Beaux Arts and finished it in two years.

After she got an artificial arm it was suggested that Federated Charities might teach her some use of it at their Occupational Therapy Centre. This was found to be difficult but it was possible to increase her already unusual dexterity with her left hand.

"I wanted to help my family," Miss Morrissey said yesterday, "but it is hard to make a living at art, so I decided to learn office work."

She was disappointed when the Occupational Therapy Centre suggested she make towels and persuaded them to let her have a typewriter instead. Then with informal sparetime help from the staff she developed her own method of one-handed typing and gradually improved her speed.

She conquered shorthand next and soon she was given odd jobs in the centre's office until she picked up good practical knowledge of filing and book-keeping. A vacancy occurred and Miss Morrissey slipped naturally into a part-time job. Now she is talking about a business college diploma and a full-time position.

But her ambition which has led her on to accomplish so much in the face of a serious disability, does not rest there.

"I was a reception clerk in a doctor's office once in my school holidays," she explained, "and I got interested in laboratory work. I would like to study chemistry and then get laboratory work in a hospital. She is very modest about her attainments.

Guest Children Told to Uphold British Honor

New York.—Here are some of the questions British children keep asking as they journey across the Atlantic to safety from their bombarded homeland:

"Should we have left mummy and daddy?"

"Are Americans all rich like in the movies?"

"Will they like us?"

"Will they admire us?"

"What kind of things shall I tell them—about the bombs or not?"

Mrs. Evelyn Fayrer Turner, granddaughter of Sir Joseph Fayrer, who was surgeon to King Edward VII, and Lady Priscilla Norman—both crossed on the liner Samaria with 138 children as volunteer escorts—described the questions today and said that the first night out "there was a little sniffling under the bedsheets."

Mrs. Turner and Lady Norman are two of the hundreds of British women who have volunteered to shuttle across the Atlantic without pay, to accompany British refugee children to the United States.

Each of the escorts has 15 children in her charge. The actual care of the younger children is done by nurses and by the ship's stewardesses.

As Mrs. Turner sees the escort's task, "the ocean trip bridges the gap between the old world and the new. We should try to make that bridge as pleasant as possible."

Lady Norman felt that her personal task as an escort was "preparing their minds to equip themselves to hold up our point of view and honor, and to come back after the war to help rebuild the world."

"My last words to my group were: 'Children, don't forget we must never let down England. Come back and help reconstruct the world.'"

She said she had provided the children with books about Washington, "and how we lost America through our folly years ago."

"There must be greater liaison work between England and America," she added, "we must understand each other, and have America help in the future—not in the fight, but to maintain peace."

On the trip over the children had one night of amateur theatricals in a four-act play Mrs. Turner wrote. They saw themselves portrayed in 1950, after their return home, helping England.

NEWARK TAKES 3 STRAIGHT FROM JERSEY GIANTS

Bears Need But One Game to Capture Playoff Series

ROCHESTER BEATEN

Orioles Nose Out Wings 3-2 in Ninth on Nick Etten's Homer

By The Associated Press

Newarks Bears had a 12-11 edge over Jersey City Giants for the season series between the two clubs, but since the start of the Governors' Cup playoffs the Bears have proved themselves far superior than the one-game margin indicates.

Newark has taken three straight from the Little Giants and needs only one more victory to advance to the finals where it will meet the winner of the Rochester-Baltimore series to decide the International League's representative in the Little World Series.

Hank Borowy outpitched the veteran Frank Pearce to put the Bears three up last night, shutting out Jersey City 1-0 on three hits. Pearce held the Newark powerhouse in check for eight innings but with one out in the ninth inning Ed Levy singled and scored soon after on Bud Metheny's double. The Bruins gathered seven hits in all off Pearce. Borowy struck out six and walked two for his 13th victory.

Baltimore Orioles nosed out Rochester 3-2 on Nick Etten's ninth-inning home run for their first victory in the other half of the playoffs. The Red Wings won the opening two games. With two down in the ninth and two men on bases, Etten slammed one of Hank Gornicki's offerings into the right field bleachers.

Ontario's All-Star Lacrosse Team Defeats Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Sept. 20—(CP)— Ontario's all-star junior lacrosse team today was en route to Vancouver to meet the British Columbia champions in the Dominion finals.

Ontario bowled over Manitoba all-stars 19-14 here last night to take their two-game semi-final series by a count of 38-24. They won the first game 19-10 Tuesday night.

Strengthened in last night's game by the addition of Ken "Red" Hunter of Winnipeg, who bagged one goal and assisted in two others, the Manitobans fought a game but uphill battle against a team superior in every department.

The long-range passing attack of the easterners led them deep into western territory while the Manitobans could not control their passes to make them effective.

Jack Gair led the Ontario attack with four goals from his wing position. His wingmate Bobby Goldham tallied three as did Mike Cunningham and John Hewitt. Tom Madsen picked up two counters, while Stan Hall, Doug Garriock, Jimmy Carsyell and Mervin McKenzie notched the remaining goals for the easterners.

American Loop Pennant Race Reaches a New Crisis Today As Indians Play the Tigers

Both Teams Are Even in Standings With 85 Games Won and 61 Lost

TIGERS SWAMP A'S

Greenburg and York Powdering Ball as Team Drives Down Stretch

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

The fantastic American League pennant struggle reached a new crisis today as Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers come up to their series with each other in an absolute deadlock—85 won and 61 lost.

Also for the first time it is possible to say positively that the conflict has become a two-club contest with nothing counting but their own mortal combat.

Chicago White Sox have been mathematically eliminated, not by the standings but by the schedule, and New York Yankees have been pushed to the very brink for the same reason.

The Tigers have to be considered favorites for the three-game series on their own field this weekend. They massacred Philadelphia Athletics yesterday 13-2 and 10-1.

In their first game with the A's rookie Floyd Geibell issued eight including homers by Hank Greenberg and Rudy York, each of berk and Rudy York, each of whom batted in five runs. In the second game Dizzy Trout gave only four hits and the Tigers collected 13, including homers by York and Pete Fox.

This made 17 consecutive games in which Detroit had hit one or more home runs.

Cleveland Outhit

Cleveland was outhit 8-6 and needed the help of a couple of Washington errors to beat the Senators 3-1 and keep a share of the lead.

Red Ruffing showed some of his old form in spacing seven hits as the Yanks overpowered the White Sox 10-1 with a 14-hit bombardment. St. Louis Browns beat Boston Red Sox 2-1 on Roy Cullenbine's triple with two on in the seventh.

Paul Derringer finally got his coveted 20th victory as Cincinnati Reds punctured the Phillies 4-1 although outhit (as usual) 7-5. The ace curveballer didn't give a run till the ninth.

New York Giants' losing streak was extended to 11 games in a pathetic 8-2 performance against Chicago Cubs, who made 14 hits. St. Louis Cardinals swept two from Pittsburgh Pirates 2-1 and 8-2 to get a virtual strangle hold on third place in the National League.

Buck Newsom Slated to Pitch Against Indians

Detroit, Sept. 20 —(AP)— The props were placed and the actors and the audience were ready today for baseball's spectacle of the year —Cleveland Indians vs. Detroit Tigers with the American league pennant as the probable prize for the winner.

Tied as few teams have ever been in the waning days of a baseball season, the clubs open a three game series at Briggs Stadium this afternoon that is expected to draw upward of 140,000 customers before its conclusion Sunday.

Detroit has Louis (Buck) Newsom, Lynwood Rowe and Tommy Bridges (three hurlers the Indians haven't beaten this season) ready to work in order. Cleveland will retaliate with Mel Harder, Al Milnar and Bobby Feller. Feller, a mystery to other clubs, has been beaten three times by Detroit.

Newsom, the self-appointed spokesman for the Tigers, assured his public that he would take care of the Indians today.

"I've pitched against that Cleveland team twice this year and beat 'em both times," Newsom said. "As soon as they show up ol' Bobo will take care of 'em."

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Hank Greenberg, Rudy York and Dizzy Trout, Tigers-Greenberg and York each batted in five runs in first game with Athletics and Trout pitched four-hit ball in nightcap.

THE LOAD GROWS HEAVIER

London.—Official sources declared today that besides 20,000,000 Reichsmarks (nominally $8,000,000 which France is required to pay each day for maintenance of the German army of occupation, the Germans have demanded 8,000,000 quintals (about 30,000,000 bushels) of wheat. These quarters expressed belief that some of the grain already has been delivered.

Buffalo Hockey Club In Int-Am League

Buffalo, N.Y., Sept. 20—(AP)— Louis Jacobs of the Buffalo Hockey Club, which was granted a franchise in the International-American Hockey League last winter, said last night the club will seek a 28-game home schedule, including 19 Sunday nights this winter, at the league meeting Sunday in New York.

Jacobs said he expects Buffalo will get into action as soon as a new municipal auditorium is completed, expected about Oct. 30.

The franchise holder, who had operated the Syracuse Club for the last several years, said he withdrew from that city at the close of the season last year and will not operate a league club in Syracuse this year.

Interscholastic Sports To Function this Season In Bay of Quinte Group

C.O.S.S.A. Holds Enthusiastic Meeting With Only Napanee Not Being Represented

OFFICERS ELECTED

B.C.I. and Albert College Will Operate Conventional Football Teams

Interscholastic sports will function, as far as possible, in the conventional manner in the Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. Interscholastic group in spite of war and military training conditions, it was decided at the annual meeting of the group held in the Belleville Collegiate Institute last evening. Seven secondary school from the Bay of Quinte group of the C.O.S.S.A. were present last night and included Trenton Collegiate, Albert College, Ontario School for the Deaf, Tweed and Stirling High Schools and the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School. Although not represented Madoc and Marmora High Schools will also be included in the grouping, leaving Napanee Collegiate the only school not having representation.

Conventional rugby football, six-man football, among the junior groups, hockey and basketball will be played in the boys' group, while both senior and junior girls' basketball will be featured. Already a "northern group" has been organized and will play conventional rugby football during the autumn semester, the four schools in this group being Tweed, Madoc, Stirling and Marmora. In the "southern section," however, only the Belleville Collegiate and Albert College will compete in the senior Interscholastic series of the C.O.S.S.A. rugby groupings. In the newly-proposed junior six-man rugby football project, headed by Convener N. A. (Pete) Beach of Albert College, efforts to enlarge a "southern group" were voiced, with Belleville Collegiate, O.S.D., Trenton and Picton being suggested as fertile schools for this type of game among the boys of 17 years of age and under.

Officers Elected

The result of the election of officers of the Bay of Quinte group in the C.O.S.S.A. was as follows:

Hon. President: Mr. Spencer, Trenton.

President: J. Good, Stirling.

Vice.-President: N. A. Beach, Albert College.

Sec.-Treas.: T. E. Moffatt, Tweed.

The various conveners named were: Football, Lester Shiels, Belleville; Six-man rugby, N. A. Beach, Albert College; Hockey, Messrs. S. McEwen and J. Garrett, Trenton; Boys' basketball, Cliff Yerex, Belleville; Girls' basketball, Miss McLaughlin, Napanee. The matter of the group annual field day was left in abeyance until the next regular meeting, with Trenton, Picton or Albert College as the logical sponsoring schools.

The schools and delegates present last night were: Albert College, N. A. Beach; B.C.I. & V.S., C. Yerex and L. Shiels; Thenton, S. McEwen, J. Garrett and Miss Townsend; O.S.D., J. Rickaby, J. Hodgson; Tweed, Messrs. Calnan, Sweetman and Moffatt Stirling, Mr. J. Good; Picton C.I., Miss Scythes and Mr. Goodbrand.

During the evening Mr. Moffatt tendered his annual report from the secretary's office and the financial statement as Treasurer. Mr. Moffatt, who has served the Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. group faithfully as secretary and treasurer for over 20 years, was tendered the appreciation of the delegates for his untiring efforts toward the furthering of sports in the district's secondary schools

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

To the general sporting public of Belleville the name of Thomas (Tom) Robertson doesn't relate much or even so much as arouse the interest of those who are connected with modern Canadian sports. However, in our midst and employed at the local Stevens-Adamson plant is Tom Robertson, the father of the Dominion Soccer Football Association and through whose far-seeing efforts in 1913 this Association grew to unbelievable heights. Incidentally Tom Robertson is the father of Glen Robertson, centre-ice player for the Belleville junior O.H.A. team and who is now employed in the mechanical department of this newspaper.

In 1913 Tom Robertson re-organized soccer football in Toronto and became secretary of the Toronto and District Football Association and later secretary of the Dominion Football Association for seven years. It was Tom Robertson who supplanted the Old Country style of play into Canadian soccer and saw the game reach wide proportions. In his enthusiasm for soccer football a quarter of a century ago, Tom Robertson had the misfortune to meet with an injury to his leg, which resulted in many months in hospital and ultimately the loss of the limb. However, after 25 years Tom Robertson is still keenly interested in soccer football and now that his son is established as a local hockey player, Mr. Robertson takes a marked interest in that great Canadian winter pastime.

After serving Provincial and Dominion Soccer Football Associations as secretary and president for over seven years, Tom Robertson retired from those official activities exactly 27 years ago last 16th of August, but the memories of the days when soccer football was fighting a life-and-death struggle in Canada just prior to the last war is still fresh. Much of the success of that Old Country game across Canada today can be attributed to the efforts of Tom Robertson from 1905 until he retired.

Norman Barriage, popular manager at the Hume arena accepted a call to join the Royal Canadian Navy Reserves and was instructed to report at Kingston for elementary training in the near future. Norm has been employed around the Hume arena for many years and two years ago was made manager, a post he has successfully filled.

Do you remember when after chasing Bob Pastor around a Detroit ring for 30 minutes a year ago tonight, World Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis finished the bout by knocking him out in 3 seconds of the 11th round. A crowd of 40,000 watched the Detroit brown bomber defend his title for the eighth time since winning it from Jim Braddock in 1937.

The wrestling promoters here have tried thrice in vain to entice grapplers into the Hume arena with one idea in mind—to beat George Pavish, the pugnacious and unorthodox Greek grappler, but without success. However, it looks as though they've struck upon the right name at least for Pavish's opponent next Monday night in one Jack Samson. Now they don't say whether this guy Samson is any relation to one of the first strong men to get publicity, but at least the idea is good. However, to made sure Samson beats Pavish Monday night it might be an idea to exclude all females; remember what that dame Delilah did to the No. 1 Samson guy when the chips were down. After all with women moving to the fore in professional wrestling circles, if Jackie Samson regains his strength sufficiently to push Pavish around and win, then's time enough to think of Delilah's "fleecing," but in the meantime they've imported Mike Fagan over from old Ireland to meet Pedro Valdez on the same card Monday.

Athletic-inclined students at the Belleville Collegiate need worry no more regarding the resumption of their annual sports feuds with Albert College. The Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. group reorganized last night and will function as in past years. Both conventional 12-man rugby and the new-fangled six-man game will be sponsored by the group with the local seat of learning being represented in both games. Albert College will provide their opposition in the true grid iron game, while O.S.D. and either Trenton or Picton will be into the picture with six-man squads. Hockey and basketball will be discussed later.

See where Cobourg is in the intermediate "A" finals of the O.B.A. with Alymer but what about the South Hastings "Combines"? A full week of splendid baseball weather has gone by and the "Combines" have remained idle. Seems too bad to waste such ideal baseball weather.

Sport Spice — As the Tigers and Indians are all-even in the American League derby, they open a three-day stand in Detroit today and conclude the league schedule with a three-day go at it in Cleveland next week....These two series will doubtless reveal a multitude of answers....If the two teams split even on the series and the Yankees strike a winning stride, most anything can happen, but if either the Tigers or Indians make a sweep of their two series with each other, that team is in....President Harridge is assigning four umpires to the Indian-Tiger series and taking no chances....Buffalo is back in the International Hockey League as the Toronto Maple Leaf farm team, replacing Syracuse.... The Stars disbanded and will not operate this winter....See where Camp Borden will sponsor an O.R.F.U. grid team and St. Thomas an Air Force hockey team in the O.H.A., so why all the "thumbs down" on hockey at the Trenton base?

DINGIEST MAN IN BELLEVILLE NOW THE SMARTEST

He used to scuff along the street —unkempt — sloppy — head down —didn't care. His clothes were never pressed and his shoes were always dirty.

But you'd never recognize him now! Shoulders back, arms swinging, eyes bright, he's a different man! And his shoes look like new.

That's what did it in fact—his shoes. Friends told him a lasting shine would make him be somebody. They advised him to just try Nugget Shoe Polish. And Nugget did all they said and more. He's a Nugget man from now on—the best dressed man in town.—Advt.

VICTORIA CROSS PROPOSED FOR LT. ROBT. DAVIES

Lt. Col. George Drew Joins Those Who Propose Highest Award for Davies

WORDING NOT CLEAR

Toronto, Sept. 20—(CP)—Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, today joined those who propose award of the Victoria Cross to Lieut. Robert Davies with the contention that the award is possible under the Royal Warrant governing this honor and that a Canadian precedent was set 74 years ago.

When Lieut. Davies, former St. Catharines, Ont., resident, led his "suicide squad" in disposing of an 1,100-pound German time bomb and saved St. Paul's Cathedral in London, the acclaim was instantaneous.

Press and public applauded the heroism of Davies, member of the Royal Engineers. The London News Chronicle called for a V.C. so did The New York Times. The London Daily Mail said the War Office was considering some recognition. Tommy Holmes of Toronto, who won the V. C. in the first Great War for capturing 19 Germans, said the high award should go to Davies.

But there was unofficial opinion expressed in London that a V.C. could not be granted because the deed was not performed "in the presence of the enemy." Behind this opinion was the implication that actual combat was necessary.

Conditions Wide Enough

"I believe that conditions in the royal warrant are wide enough to permit granting the V.C. in this case," said Col. Drew. "At no time since the highest of all awards for valor was created by royal warrant Jan. 29, 1856, has the wording made it clear that the act of bravery must be performed in immediate contact with the enemy. The original warrant provided that the V. C. might be awarded:

"To those officers or men who have served in the presence of the enemy and shall have then performed some signal act of valor or devotion to their country."

"In a later warrant, April 23, 1881, this provision was amended and it was stated that the award might be made for 'conspicuous bravery or devotion to the country in the presence of the enemy.' I understand this is the wording which still governs the award.

"Surely everyone in London today is in 'continuous presence of the enemy.' Certainly Lieut. Davies performed an act of 'conspicuous bravery and devotion to the country.'"

Col. Drew then cited the precedent, the only time a V.C. was granted for a deed within Canada.

On June 9, 1866, during the time of the Fenian Raids, the first battalion of the Rifle Brigade was travelling by train from Quebec to Montreal. At Danville Station a car filled with ammunition and barrels of powder took fire. Disaster threatened the whole train when private Tommy O'Hea forced the door open and, quickly organizing a bucket brigade, went into the car himself and put out the fire. The award of the Victoria Cross for this act of bravery appeared in the London Gazette Jan. 1, 1867.

Duke of Gloucester Visits Units of Canadian Division

By EDWIN JOHNSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Sept. 20—(CP Cable)—Maj.-Gen. The Duke of Gloucester who has been living with the British troops in the field, spent a busy afternoon Thursday visiting units of the Canadian 1st Division.

It was the second consecutive day that the King's brother visited the Canadians. Wednesday he inspected a Saskatchewan machine-gun unit.

The Duke was greeted at corps headquarters by Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton and met Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, commander of the Canadian 1st Division, Maj.-Gen. Victor Odlum, 2nd divisional commander and corps' heads of departments.

After lunch, the party made an extended tour of the 1st divisional lines, headed by a motorcycle escort of the Provost Company. On a big estate where an ambulance unit from Fort William Ont., is stationed, senior officers of the division were presented to the Duke.

RESCUES ORDERLY ROLLS HIM AWAY IN WHEEL BARROW

Heroic Deed Wins Second Lieutenant V.C. in Battle of Flanders

CANADIAN'S HEROISM

London, Sept. 20—(CP)—Bullets splattered through the black Flanders night fro ma German entrenchment under the Dyle River bridge.

His orderly was somewhere in No Man's Land, wounded, helpless, and he felt he had to get him.

The German sniping continued.. a pistol would be useless against that, and there were no other small guns around. Quickly Annand filled his pockets with hand grenades, and stepped out into No-Man's-Land alone, toward the Germans.

Drives Germans Back

As he got within throwing distance of the German position, he pulled out a hand grenade, plucked the fuse, and hurled it. The sniping subsided somewhat. Every few seconds, he followed it with another, and gradually worked his way toward the wounded man, driving the Germans back out of their position.

The orderly was lying on the ground, writhing with pain. Carrying him back throug hthat storm of bullets would be suicide for them both. Annand looked around, wracking his mind for some way out.

Rescues Orderly in Wheel Barrow

By a stroke of fortune, a flash of gunfire disclosed in the middle of the battle-scarred stretch of ground an abandoned wheel barrow.

The Lieutenant lifted the orderly into it, seized the handles, ducked his head, and rolled the barrow through the tortuous stretch back to safety inside the British lines.

That is the story behind one of the 10 awards, during the first year of war, of the Victoria Cross, highest and rarest honor a British fighting man can be given.

Canadian's Heroic Deed Wins V. C.

Another recipient was Lance Corporal Harry Nicholls, formerly of Calgary, Alta., whose miraculous story was told a few days ago when, after being reported "believed dead," he was discovered to be alive, a prisoner of the Germans.

Commanding a section as a counter-attack was ordered, the citation said, he "seized a Bren gun and dashed forward towards machine guns, firing from the hip."

His company went over a ridge and found enemy machine-guns commanding the other side, but Nicholls, although "at the very start of the advance he was wounded in the arm by shrapnel, continued to lead his section forward.

Alone he silenced three machine gun posts and although wounded four times "engaged the infantry massed behind, causing many casualties, and continued to fire until he had no more ammunition left."

RAYMOND MARTIN IS ACQUITTED

Charged With the Attempted Murder of his Former Fiancee, Audrey Clayton

A Supreme Court Jury deliberated nearly two hours before returning the verdict. Martin thanked Mr. Justice E. R. E. Chevrier, when told he was free.

Martin was charged after the automobile he was driving, with Miss Clayton as a passenger, plunged into a Hydro canal at nearby Lakefield last April. The girl escaped from the car through a window and swam ashore. Martin used an inflated inner tube to paddel to a nearby boom. The tube had been in the rear seat of the car.

Miss Clayton had testified that Martin drove straight into the canal. Martin said the machine plunged into the water because the girl grabbed the steering wheel and twisted it in an attempt to turn the car around. The couple became engaged last January and the betrothal was terminated the day before the car plunge.

In his charge to the jury, Mr. Justice Chevrier said Martin must be given the benefit of any reasonable doubt and added that the jury had to choose between believing the testimony of the girl or the accused.

HIS EXCELLENCY IS PIPED ABOARD

Plans Being Made For Warm Underground Shelters For Winter

London, Set. 20 (CP)—Londoners came out of their shelters at dawn today after all-night German air raids, to learn that authorities are preparing against the possibility that the nightly raids will continue throughout the winter.

It was announced plans are being made for warm underground shelters for winter use and that removal of more children, aged persons and invalids is advocated to spare them the rigors of life in the ground during cold weather.

Vast basement and cellar spaces of offices, shops, stores and factories would be utilized under the new plan as winter cover for thousands of persons who now go to subway stations and surface refuges when alarms sound.

The Daily Express, published by Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production, urged that "the old, the infirm, the children and all those whose labor is not essential to the life of the city" be sent to the countryside immediately.

London's normal population of 8,500,000 has been cut to about 7,000,000 by evacuation and conscription since the war began.

About 1,000 children are leaving the city daily under an official dispersal system, and railroads are crowded with families moving to the country.

So far, however, there has been nothing like a mass exodus.

STOUT RESISTANCE OF U.K. IS BLOW TO HITLER HOPES

Some Military Sources Believe Deciding Phase of War May be Fought in Mediterranean

SUPERIOR U.K. TANKS

London, Sept. 20 (CP)—British military sources estimated today perhaps 200,000 German troops are rehearsing landing exercises along the Norwegian coast.

These sources said they saw no greater threat in these troops than those gathered in French and Belgian ports across the English Channel.

But they said they believed the Royal Air Force's stout resistance to the luftwaffe's desperate attempts to gain mastery of the air plus the proven vulnerability of the German light tank to the British two-pounder anti-tank gun has upset any plans Hitler might have had of trying to invade Britain.

Hitler knows his light tanks are vulnerable to our two pounder, one of these authorities said, and he has no means of bringing over his heavy tanks.

Although raids on London may continue perhaps for months, these sources said the next and perhaps the deciding phase of war may be fought in the Mediterranean.

Germany may try to attack Gibraltar through Spain at the same time that Italy strikes at Egypt in force, they said, and the side the French possessions of Tunis and Morocco take may have an important bearing on the outcome.

The German troops in Norway are there for two reasons, these sources believe, 1. to keep the British worried; 2. to occupy the German army.

Federal Gov't. May Extend Daylight Saving Time Indefinitely

Ottawa, Sept. 20—(CP)—Indefinite extension of daylight saving time in all municipalities where it is now in force is expected to be announced by the government shortly.

Municipalities have had local autonomy in the matter of daylight saving and most of the cities and towns which adopted it for this year planned to discontinue it at midnight, Sept. 28.

It is understood the action of the government is at the request of the Ontario and Quebec Hydro Commissions in an effort to conserve electric energy.

The government has authority under the War Measures Act to enter this field which normally is within municipal jurisdiction.

PROSPECTOR'S BODY FOUND

Edmonton, Sept. 20 (CP)—Word was received here today that the body of Raoul Berthand, manager of Bear River operations for Northern Transportation Company, was found yesterday by two Indians.

No details of the discovery of the body were contained in the message to company officials here from Dr. J. P. Harvey, Indian agent at Fort Norman, N.W.T. The body has been turned over to the Roman Catholic Mission at Fort Norman where burial will take place.

FOUR FISHING VESSELS MISSING

Seventeen Men Aboard Attached to Fishing Fleets on North New Brunswick Ports

Chatham, N.B., Sept. 20—(CP)—Four fishing vessels with 17 men aboard were still missing from north shore New Brunswick ports today, four days after a disastrous gale whipped through the Maritime Provinces.

Meanwhile, the known death toll among fishermen along the shore rose to two with the arrival here last night of a caraquet schooner which reported her captain, Edmund Gallien of St. Simon, had been washed overboard. The surviving crew of five, injured and suffering exhaustion, were taken to hospital.

Earlier yesterday, the exhausted three-man crew of a Shippegan schooner reached Richibucto and said Captain J. Hache had been swept overboard.

Missing since Monday were a schooner from St. Simon with five men aboard and three Shippegan Island schooners, each with four men aboard.

Young Film Star, Seen at McCarthy's, Has Relatives Here

Charles Lang, handsome, stalwart young actor of Hollywood, appearing opposite Fay Wray in the film "Wildcat Bus" at the McCarthy Theatre, who has been admired by local theatre fans for his acting gifts and for his appearance, has relatives in Belleville.

As a matter of fact his father, Charles Lang, now of Brooklyn, was born in Belleville and lived on Yeomans Street where he grew up before he left this city. The talented young star, who was born in New York City, is a cousin of Mr. Ernie Lang of Catherine Street.

Charles Lang, who has been in films for several years, was discovered by a Hollywood scout and sent to Hollywood and afterward spent a year in a school of dramatic art at New York.

It is interesting to note that the young actor's grandfather also bore the same Christian name of Charles.

The War Today

(By Guy Rhodes Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Totalitarian newspapers dropped unwitting hints today that the axis partners are laying the ground for an alternative campaign to the battle of Britain by promising Egypt "independence" and threatening that she had better get in step with the "new order in Europe."

With conditions for an invasion attempt on Britain growing steadily worse, German Foreign Minister Ribbentrop, Italian Minister Ciano and Premier Mussolini continued their meeting at Rome, a meeting advertized as one to decide eastern as well as European questions.

Egypt, a non-belligerent ally of Britain whose territories have been invaded by Marshal Grazianis Italian troops, was urged to "throw off the British yoke" and play along with the axis.

Meanwhile Egypt refrained from fighting the Italians, leaving the task to British sea, land and air forces which were believed to have the situation well in hand. Italian troops, marching through the burning desert toward Matruh, railhead for Alexandria, important British naval base, were bombed from the air, shelled from the sea and harassed by mechanized ground forces.

In addition they faced torture from thrist as the British rear guard already has dynamited and salted the 12 old Roman wells at Sidi Barrani, present Italian headquarters. The Royal Air Force has been blasting their water tank cars and the Royal Navy threatens to cut off the supply altogether, for most of the water must be sent from Italy by ship.

There was no immediate reaction in Egypt to the axis kite flying, but there was no reason to suppose that Egypt would place any credence in Nazi-Fascist promises nor that she felt any particular need for freedom from the British "yoke" which has brought her considerable prosperity.

Italy has sought to sway Egyptian feeling by suggesting that the Italians have no designs on Egypt but are merely trying to oust the British who have no business there.

On the British front R.A.F. fighter planes patrolling high above the clouds roared down on a formation of German bombers and fighters as they started across the coast near Dover. A terrific battle ensued which ended in the Germans being driven away with undetermined losses.

Cliff watchers reported that yesterday's foul weather over the channel had subsided, that the sun had emerged and the mists lifted while the sea gradually flattened out. Looking out over the water at the German-held French coast they could spot no signs of an impending invasion attempt

In three days also the equinox will come to that part of the world, a phase usually accompanied by violent storms heralding the start of high winds, rain, sleet and fog that generally enshrouds the southeast coast of England throughout the winter.

Authorities began preparations for a winter in which the London population may have to live mainly underground and surveys were launched toward constructing warm, dry air raid shelters with improved sanitary facilities. Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express demanded that children, the infirm and elderly—in fact everyone not contributing to the city's essential work — be removed to country districts.

Tweed and District

Tweed School Children Means Of Large Donation Being Given To Aid British Air Raid Victims

Tweed, Sept. 20.— (Special) — Acting on a suggestion of their principal, S. H. Connor, the children of Tweed Consolidated School on Monday launched a campaign to raise funds in aid of the British air raid victims. Bringing their coppers, dimes and quarters, by Wednesday they had contributed $11.53, which was forwarded by Mr. S. R. Curry, editor of The Tweed News, to Jim Hunter of The Evening Telegram to augment the Telegram's fund in aid of air raid victims.

In his regular newscast on Thursday evening, Jim Hunter, referred very kindly to the spirit which had prompted the children to forego certain pleasures that they might aid those in distress.

Little did anyone realize that this $11.53 would in a few minutes grow into $3,200.00, but that is actually what happened. An American visitor to Toronto heard Jim Hunter's broadcast and as soon as it was concluded, called him by telephone to make an appointment.

Arriving at The Telegram office a short time later the American visitor said to Jim Hunter, "I listened to your broadcast tonight and was thrilled by the act of those youngsters in Tweed who have contributed out of their small savings towards this fund for air-raid victims. I haven't done very much myself so far," he continued, "so here's a cheque for your fund".

On examination of the cheque revealed that it was for the sum of $3,200.00.

This was the story which Jim Hunter phoned S. R. Curry, editor of The Tweed News, shortly before seven o'clock on Thursday evening.

Given Scholarship

Gerald Wagar, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Wagar of Tweed was today advised by the authorities of McMaster University that he had been successful in winning the Ontario Hockey Association Scholarship. This scholarship is awarded annually to the Upper School student playing O.H.A. hockey who had received the highest marks in Upper School subjects in 1939.

Gerald was a student of Tweed High School and is the second graduate of the school to win this scholarship. The other winner was Herbert "Buck" Leal, who eventually won the Rhodes Scholarship.

The O.H.A. scholarship has a value of $150 a year for four years and is planned by the Ontario Hockey Association to aid worthy students to obtain a University education which might otherwise be denied them.

Passengers on Liner Say Germans Lost Many Men Practising Barge Landings

Manoeuvres Reported on French Coast Interrupted by British Bombers Who Took Heavy Toll of Nazi Troops According to Stories

By JOHN A. MOROSO

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Stories of heavy German troop losses resulting from exercises and manoeuvres in the English Channel preparatory to an invasion attempt were told today by passengers arriving on the American export liner Exeter.

They both expressed the opinion that people of the Netherlands and France were supplying Britain wtih advance information of German exercises on self-propelled barges in the Channel and that British bombers had taken a heavy toll.

Says No Actual Invasion Attempted

Solberg said he had definite information that the Germans have attempted no actual invasion of England. The Channel exercises, he related, consisted of sending troops about two miles out in the Channel on self-propelled barges and then turning about to make practice landings on the French coast.

Solberg said the guns which the Germans used to shell Dover were heavy French guns which the invading German army captured and that French ammunition was used.

Ter Weele, a Lieutenant in The Netherlands artillery, said that he knew of many German invasion exercises off The Netherlands coast and that many men had been lost at a result of advance information reaching the British.

He said that some German troops had refused to take part in the exercises and that he had seen many of them sent back to Germany, their hands tied behind their backs. Ter Weele got out of The Netherlands through his friendship with a German officer he knew before the war.

He said the British, tipped off by the Netherlands and French, waited for the barges with planes and submarines and that "thousands of Germans have been lost in this fashion."

Solberg said he recently visited a French Channel port where bodies of German troops were washed ashore daily.

DR. SAM LEVINE HELD BY POLICE

Fellow in Branch of Physics Department of University of Toronto Held Under Regulations

Toronto, Sept. 20 (CP)—Dr Samuel Levine, fellow in the geophysics branch of the Physics Department of the University of Toronto, was arrested in his office today on a charge under the Defence of Canada Regulations. He was remanded one week.

Police said the charge, laid after long investigations, reads: "That he did have knowingly in his possession in quantity certain pamphlets entitled, 'A Political Letter on Our Present Tasks,' which pamphlets or letters were intended to cause disaffection."

Police said they are holding two men, Norman Freed and Muni Erlichman, who were arrested last week and who allegedly were using a room in Levine's house. They alleged the men are Communists, that Erlichman served in the Mackenzie-Papineau battalion in the Spanish civil war and that Freed was acting as substitute secretary of the Communist party in Canada during the absence of Tim Buck.

Levine was graduated from University College of Toronto University in 1932 and received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the same university. He was awarded a Fellowship in the Physics Department two years ago. He is 29 years old.

Italian War Correspondents Held by British

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 20.—(AP)—Three uniformed Italian war correspondents, captured by a British armored car patrol on the desert near Sollum, wryly commented today that "for us the war is over", but claimed that the problem of thrist on the sands of the Sahara would not defeat Italy's march into Egypt.

"We have fully met that difficulty", said Marco Franzetti, correspondent of the Rome La Tribuna. "Our trucks are hauling enough water to supply each man in the desert forces with three to five quarts daily.

Franzetti is a veteran of the Fascist march on Rome which lifted Mussolini to power and of Italian campaigns in Ethiopia and Spain.

BULGARIANS READY TO MOVE

Varna, Bulgaria, Sept. 20 (AP)—Six Bulgarian infantry regiments and four cavalry regiments were mobilized along the frontier today ready to start moving across it tomorrow morning to occupy the south Dobruja, ceded by Rumania.

Stone border markings will be blasted with dynamite as a signal for the advance that will give Bulgaria back part of the territory she lost to Rumania in the Balkan and first Great Wars.

ONTARIO GOV'T MAY CONSTRUCT VERY LARGE PLANT

New Hydro Plant Will be Built at Carillon on the Ottawa River, Says News Story

DEVELOP 400,000 H.H.

Toronto, Sept. 20—(CP)— Construction of a new Hydro plant at Carillon on the Ottawa River to cost $30,000,000 is under consideration by the Ontario government and the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, The Daily Star said in a news story today. Surveys of the site—about 40 miles from Cornwall—have been completed and engineers have estimated 400,000 electric horsepower could be developed there within two years.

Construction of the new plant hinges on the decision reached by the Canadian and United States Governments with regard to the St. Lawrence. It was understood here that Ontario's objections to the project in the U.S. would be eliminated if the two governments decided to develop the St. Lawrence entirely as a power project, unmindful of the shipping end of it until after the war.

"If it were decided to go ahead on this basis, we could obtain an additional 100,000 horsepower at Niagara Falls through the simple turning of a switch", the Star was told. "We also would be permitted to divert the waters of the Ogoki watershed into Lake Superior and would at once start to generate extra power at Sault Ste. Marie".

The spokesman also said that another $5,000,000 plant to generate 100,000 horsepower on the Madawaska River are planned. Contracts have already been let for the 10,000-horsepower plant on the Musquash River.

Surgeon Removes Appendix of German Prisoner

Toronto, Sept. 20 (CP)—A noted Canadian surgeon removed the appendix of a German prisoner-of-war at Christie Street Hospital here this week while military guards stood in the operating room with fixed bayonets, The Telegram said today. The patient was one of four Nazi prisoners removed from an Ontario internment camp to the hospital.

Only one of the prisoners was suffering a war disability. He was shot in the hand while fighting in Belgium. The wounds failed to heal and he will remain in hospital here for a month or six weeks.

Another prisoner is being operated on for removal of a loose cartilage from his knee and hospital sources would not disclose illness of the other prisoner.

The quartet—quartered in a separate room of the hospital—are under military guard throughout the day. Doctors and nurses are allowed to enter their room.

NAZI BOMBERS HAVE POOR AIM

One Hundred Bombs Dropped and Not One Hit Registered on a Convoy

Ottawa, Sept. 20 (CP)—Nazi bombers have poor aim, in the opinion of the Canadians serving on H.M.C.S. Skeena, one of the destroyers operating in British waters, naval service headquarters disclosed today.

Recently the Skeena was escorting a convoy of merchant ships which was attacked by German bombers about midnight. Although it was estimated more than 100 bombs were dropped not one hit was scored on the ships in the convoy.

The Skeena's crew jumped to action stations at the first sound of the aircraft. The bombers appeared overhead flying high. Although they could not be seen the anti-aircraft guns opened up on estimated positions of the aircraft.

One bomber dived and was caught in the full light of the moon. Hail of accurate fire from the Skeena soon drove it off.

One sailor on the deck of the Skeena had a box of matches and set a match aside every time a bomb exploded. When the action was over he had a pile of 76 matches and officers estimated at least 20 to 25 per cent of the bombs dropped did not explode.

75th Anniversary To be Observed by Shannonville Church

The Bishop of the Anglican Diocese of Ontario has given his approval to the congregation of Trinity Church, Shannonville, one of the religious landmarks of this district, to hold the seventy-fifth anniversary of consecration of the structure on Sunday, Sept. 22nd.

The original church built in 1854 was destroyed by fire the day following Good Friday in 1876. The present church situated near the highway was erected the following year. A harvest festival service will feature the anniversary services, as will prayers for victory for King and Empire.

Complete and Enduring Safety of U.S. Gov't. Rests on Free Elections

President Roosevelt Makes Stirring Appeal for Freedom of Vote in Speaking at 200th Anniversary of the Founding of Pennsylvania University

Philadelphia, Sept. 20—(AP) — President Roosevelt said today the "complete and enduring safety of our form of government" rests on maintaining free elections—and added that "no dictator in history has ever dared to run the gauntlet" of such an election.

Yet, he said, in an address climaxing observance of the University of Pennsylvania's 200th anniversary, there still were some well meaning persons who had suggested recently that the right to vote be denied people who had lost their jobs and were on relief.

"Only too often in our political history," the President declared, "the few at the top have tried to advise or dictate to the many lower down how they should vote.

"Even today in certain quarters there are, I regret to say, demands for a return of government to the control of those few, who, because of business ability or economic omniscience, are supposed to be just a touch above the average of our citizens.

"As in the days of Hamilton, we of our own generation should give them credit for pure intention and high ideals. Nevertheless, their type of political thinking could easily lead to government by selfish seekers for power and riches and glory. For the great danger is that once the government falls into the hands of a few elite, curtailment or even abolition of free elections might be adopted as the means of keeping them in power.

"As long as periodic free elections survive, no set of people can permanently control government. In the maintenance of free elections rests the complete and enduring safety of our form of government.

"No dictator in history has ever dared to run the gauntlet of a really free election".

Mr. Roosevelt spoke in Convention Hall, with three radio networks carrying his words.

"On candidates and on election issues", Mr. Roosevelt said, "I would rather trust the aggregate judgment of all the people in a factory—the president, all the vice-presidents, the board of directors, the managers, the foremen, plus all the laborers—rather than the judgment of the few who may be financially interested".

He cited what had happened in Germany.

A decade ago, he said, Germans were willing to lend an ear to a new cult called "Nazism". He described that cult as a minority group professing extraordinary patriotism and offering bread and shelter and better government through the rule of a handful of people boasting of special aptitude for government.

Nothing was said in Germany about abolishing free elections, he said, and many people of large business affairs allied themselves politically and economically with the cult.

"You and I know the subsequent history of Germany", Mr. Roosevelt said. "The right of free elections and the free choice of heads of government were suddenly wiped out by a new regime, still professing the same purity of purpose.

"It is a travesty on fact to claim that there is any free choice of public officials in that nation today, or that there ever has been one since 1933."

LIBERTY NOT WON WITHOUT BLOOD SAYS SIR L. DUFF

Chief Justice Duff Makes Address as He is Honored With Degree at Philadelphia University

Philadelphia, Sept. 20 (CP)—Liberty is not won without blood and tears, nor is it preserved without vigilance, Sir Lyman P. Duff, Chief Justice of Canada, warned today.

Speaking at the celebration of the bi-centennial of Pennsylvania University at which, together with President Roosevelt, he received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, the Chief Justice said:

"The democracies who cherish the morality and idealism of western civilization, must concern ourselves in ever-increasing degree with liberty, not as a negative thing but as a positive dynamic force."

Meaning of Liberty

Liberty had no meaning except in relation to the life of individuals in the society of men, he said. "Its significance may disappear and its purpose may be frustrated in a society which does not employ it in order to arrive at ever higher levels of moral, intellectual and social achievement. Hence our political and social order must be such as will call forth that devotion, tenacity and faith which will maintain and preserve liberty against perils within and without."

Recalling the association of Benjamin Franklin with the University, Sir Lyman said, "We are meeting here at a time when the ideals of the founders of Pennsylvania and the ideas which illuminated the life and work of Benjamin Franklin are challenged and threatened by the forces of darkness and reaction in Europe.

Empire Defends Ideals and Future

"With fire and sword but also with a deep sense of service the peoples of the British Commonwealth of Nations are today defending these ideals with the help of those among their former allies who have retained their freedom. They are defending, let me emphasize, not only the advance which they have already made along the road of progress, but the road itself for the further advance of humanity."

The British were animated, he said, by a spirit of grim determination not only to win war but thereafter to apply themselves to rooting out those conditions which prepared the ground for dictators who must make war because their power could not endure in peace.

SPANISH FREIGHTER TORPEDOED

Bilbao, Spain, Sept. 20 (AP)—The 6,000-ton Spanish freighter Cabo Tortos was torpedoed by a submarine off Cape Finisterre yesterday while enroute from Huelva to Bilbao. All the crew was rescued.

Battery Shells Kill Anything Within 90 Feet and Knock Off Wings of Planes at 150 Feet

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Anti-Aircraft Command, England, Sept. 20—(AP)— This battery felt pretty good. It had been credited with knocking down seven bombers in five days and even in the rain and mud its members were eager.

The guns were in a park in a suburb. They seemed absurd there. Every time they fired, the flash lit up neat streets and the crash went echoing past hedges and carefully clipped lawns.

It did not look much like a war front. But it is one, all right. These guns and Blenheim planes that go and play hide and seek with German Dorniers and Junkers are what stand between London and destruction.

The 4.5's sat there in emplacements on a spot where lovers used to walk and old ladies sunned themselves. They can toss a huge shell many miles and when it bursts it kills anything within 90 feet. Even at 150 feet it shears the wings off an airplane.

The British gunners aim them from a predictor. The whole battery takes ranges from the predictor which, in turn, works either from listening apparatus or visual observation.

We stood and smoked in the rain. The gun crews were silent until a spotter shouted, "aircraft approaching at 17,000 feet."

Then those on the listening apparatus started to yell out angles and latitude.

You could hear the Germans, lots of them, but couldn't see them. The predictor crew spun handles on a big steel box with a dozen dials. An officer shouted fuse numbers—shells are fused to burst the bombers' altitude.

Over the shouting and the grunt of men lifting heavy shells, the rain pattered serenely.

"Tea", said the Major, "have some".

We went back to the guns. A spotter chanted. Tiny lights winked behind the predictor dials. The guns started to speak. Shells ripped through the rain and mist.

Someone shouted "target inaudible" and the Major said, "stand easy".

We walked down the street from the battery to headquarters. They had fitted up a bar in the cellar of a suburban home. A captain and his wife were playing table tennis.

Concussion Shakes Newsman

Then an officer gave the order to fire.

The muzzle flare lit up the park, a big jagged spurt that ran half way down the barrels. The noise was not so bad, but the concussion hit you and shook you. You could head the shells whistle up into the mist and clouds, then explode.

I walked away from the guns and looked out over London. The flashes from a hundred guns ran around it like a necklace of fire. Guns several miles to the left started to slam, then others took it up. Finally the one here let go and the rain in your face was golden in the flashes.

I couldn't see much of the city. Incendiary or flare or explosive bomb explosion would light it up for an instant.

A private came up swinging a pail.

AXIS LEADERS TALK OF AFRICA SAY FASCISTS

La Tribune Says Mussolini, Ciano and Ribbentrop Discuss Spain

Rome, Sept. 20—(AP)—Fascist newspapers indicated today that the German Foreign Minister, Ribbentrop, and Italian leaders are indulging in a discussion of a "post-war division" of Africa with a share for Spain.

La Tribuna said Ribbentrop, Premier Mussolini and Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano are talking about "the future aspect of the African continent and the fate of those Africa peoples who will have been freed from British tyranny."

Foreign observers said there were indications the axis powers are endeavoring to bring Spain into the war on their side with a part of French Morocco as her reward. An attack on Gibraltar has been mentioned as a possibility in this connection.

Il Giornale D'Italia quoted a Berlin paper as saying the "attitude of the Spanish people in the decisive phase of the battle against Great Britain amounts to a declaration of solidarity for the powers of the Rome-Berlin axis."

Ribbentrop and Mussolini had their second conference in two days this afternoon.

Spanish Opinion

Madrid, Sept. 20 (AP). — Madrid newspapers took it for granted today that the Rome visit of the German foreign minister, Ribbentrop, is connected with his talk in Berlin earlier this week with Ramon Serrano Suner, brother-in-law of Gen. Francisco Franco.

They asserted it was significant that Ribbentrop and Suner are expected to meet in Berlin for another conference Monday.

"Von Ribbentrop is in Rome after having learned the role Spain wishes to play in the new Europe," said the newspaper Arriba. "A situation corresponding in the new set-up to the country which unleashed the first battle against the enemies of totalitarian countries will be taken into consideration."

The newspaper Ya, in a headline over a dispatch from its Berlin correspondent, said:

"The problem of the Mediterranean and that of Africa can be settled without further delay. Spanish sacrifices of three years will bear tangible fruit in Europe."

Ramon Garriga, correspondent of the Spanish News Agency, reported from the German capital that Hitler and Ribbentrop "now know exactly what Spain wants in this climatic moment."

SOLDIERS HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

Five in Car Plunge Into Old Canal Near Thorold

Thorold, Ont., Sept. 20—(CP)—Five soldiers of the Lincoln and Welland regiment had a narrow escape from possible drowning today, when the car in which they were riding missed the turn at O'Neils Bridge and plunged into the old canal.

The car, owned and driven by Private Beverly Davis of Port Colborne missed the turn going east on the Beaverdams road to a bridge across the canal and shot out across the grass into the water. The driver and his four passengers from Port Colborne all managed to get out of the car to the bank of the canal.

The other occupants of the car were, Privates Arthur Slow, Charles Ashender, William Cook and Roslyn Bandford.

The five young men had been at Private Davis' home in Port Colborne visiting with his brother Fred Davis prior to his leaving to join the Royal Canadian Navy and were on their way back to camp when the accident occurred.

RCAF Appointments

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—(CP)—Appointment of Air Commodore L. F. Stevenson, Air Officer Commanding No. 4 Training Command at Regina, to be Officer Commanding Royal Canadian Air Force overseas headquarters in the United Kingdom, was announced today.

Air Commodore Stevenson takes over from Air Commodore George V. Walsh who is returning to Canada on sick leave.

Group Capt. A. T. M. Cowley, Officer Commanding the Air Station at Camp Borden, Ont., will succeed Air Commodore Stevenson at Regina while Group Capt. R. S. Grandy, Officer Commanding the Air Station at Dartmouth, N.S., will take over command at Camp Borden.

Wing Commander A. L. Morfee, Senior Air Staff officer at No. 1 Training Command, Toronto, will succeed Group Capt. Grandy at Dartmouth and Wing Commander J. L. Jackson, already attached to No. 1 Training Command, will succeed Morfee.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Leading stocks milled over a slightly uneven route in today's market.

The proceedings were of the slow-going type from the start. Fractional price changes either way ruled near the fourth hour.

Stocks favored now and then included Sears Roebuck, Santa Fe, N.Y. Central, Anaconda, Kennecott, United Aircraft, Allied Chemical, North American and J. C. Penney.

Down occasionally were U. S. Steel, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Western Union, General Electric and Standard Oil of N.J.

Canadian issues were easy. International Nickel dipped 1-8 of a point and Lake Shore Mines 3-8. Canada 4s, among bonds, lost 3-4 point.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 20 (CP).—Trading continued slow on Toronto Exchange today. Price changes were highly irregular and narrow in scope. Volume totalled 63,000 shares.

Northern Canada showed activity, gaining 3 cents to .60. MacLeod Cockshutt failed to show any sales as did Abitibi Common. Abitibi Preferred eased ⅛.

B.A. Oil was active at 19¼, off ½ and Imperial Oil drew some attention at 11½, unchanged. East Malartic was an active gold but held unchanged at 3.20. Sherritt-Gordon and Pend Oreille gained 4 each and fractional losses were shown by Noranda, Aldermac and Nickel.

SIX MILLION FEET OF LUMBER SAWED

Approximately six million feet of lumber have been sawed during the past four or five months by the Sawyer-Stoll Lumber Company in their limits in Addington County, according to a news item in The Tweed News. They will complete the cut by the end of September, according to Supt. Wallace I. Johnston.

A great percentage of the cut of hemlock is being supplied to the Dominion Government for war purposes. At the present time the firm is employing nearly two hundred men and is one of the most thriving industries in that district. The Township of Effingham, in Addington County, was purchased by the Sawyer-Stoll Lumber Company last year and it is estimated that there is sufficient timber in the tract to keep the company engaged for fifteen years.

Struck by Japanese Shell

London, Sept. 20 —(CP)— A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Shanghai said the 593-ton British steamship Marie Moller was struck today by a shell fired from a Japanese warship as the vessel lay at anchor in the Yangtse delta port of Haimen.

The news agency said the steamship left but was detained outside the harbor by the Japanese.

Weekly Livestock Report

Toronto, Sept. 20 (CP)—Prices dropped 25 cents cwt on most grades of killers on the cattle section of the livestock market this week, with about 1,200 head unsold at the close.

Hogs dropped 25 to 35 cents cwt.

Calves were unchanged despite an increase of $1 cwt in the United States tariff.

The cattle supply included 2,200 westerns. Hold over from the previous week was 1,200 head. All grades of killers met with a dull trade but handyweight butcher steers and heifers were especially hard to move. Weighty steers sold at $7 to $8.65 with a load of choice at $8.75. Butcher steers and heifers brought $6.50 to $7.75 with tops at $8. Butcher cows were $4 to $5.50 with canners and cutters at $2.50 to $3.75. Bulls sold from $4 for light bolognas up to $5.50 for best butchers. Fed calves were steady at $8.50 to $10.50. Good stockers moved readily at $7 to $7.50 with best stock calves up to $8 cwt. Common to medium stockers were slow at from $4.25 to $6.75 cwt. Milkers and springers were steady at from $50 to $85 each.

Calves sold at $11 to $11.50 for choice vealers with occasional tops at $12. Common vealers sold downward to $6.50. Grass calves were mostly $5.25 to $5.80.

Hogs opened lower at $9 off trucks for bacons and at $12 dressed and held steady there for the balance of the week.

Lambs sold steady at $9 to $9.50 for good ewes and wethers, $8 to $8.50 for bucks and at $7.50 to $8 for culls.

Sheep held firm at $2.50 to $6 cwt according to quality.

Weekly summary:

	Cattle	Calves	Hogs	Sheep and Lambs
This week:	6,522	2,899	4,453	3,747
Last week:	8,423	3,586	4,866	3,073

General Quality Poultry Only Fair

Toronto, Sept. 20 (CP)—There has been no change in live or dressed poultry quotations during the past week, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

The live market continued steady and offerings were plentiful with the exception of broilers which are scarce. While dealers here have not raised their quotations on broilers there is evidently a good market for them for storage purposes. The general quality of supplies of live poultry is only fair, lacking finish.

Receipt of dressed poultry while not heavy were sufficient to take care of demands. There was a good enquiry for Grade B milk fed over 5 lbs. Supplies of fowl were more plentiful and were cleared satisfactorily. There was a scarcity of broilers. Quotations to producers and shippers for Grade A birds were unchanged from the previous week.

Produce Unchanged

Toronto, Sept. 20.—Previous prices were reported for all lines on the Toronto open produce market. Trading was quieter in butter and eggs.

A combination of limited offerings of top-grade Ontario solids at 23 1-2 cents per pound and the fact that buyers had absorbed considerable supplies in recent sessions slackened the pace on the butter market. The price remained firm at Wednesday's level with the prevailing light receipts and a number of holders endeavored to obtain 23 3-4 cents for the first grade product. Buyers, however, declined to pay this higher figure.

Fresh receipts arrived in fair volume on the egg market and they were sufficient to satisfy the slower demand. Prices in both sections showed no change, with Government inspected shipments of graded eggs still moving at 1-2 cent to 1 cent per dozen premium

Montreal Produce

Butter — First-grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 24 1-2c to 25c; first-grade solids, jobbing price, 24c to 24 1-2c.

Eggs—Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price. A-large, 34 1-2c; A-medium, 33c; A-pullets, 28c; B, 25c to 26c; C, 16 1-2c to 17c. Receipts: 1,409 cases.

WARSHIPS NAMED

The Minister noted that the former United States vessels would bring Canada's destroyer strength to 13. Four of the Royal Canadian Navy destroyers are already in service in European waters.

Will Go Where They Are Needed

Canada's destroyers, he said, will go "where they were needed."

He anticipated delivery of all 50 destroyers to be turned over by the United States to British naval forces by Christmas. The United Kingdom, he said had allotted six to Canada and "we will man them and fight them."

Mr. Macdonald announced that the destroyer Margaree was recently commissioned into the Royal Canadian Navy at a port "somewhere in England."

This destroyer was acquired to replace the Fraser, lost while on active service off the coast of France. The Margaree was formerly H.M.S. Diana.

In the First Great War Canada had only two heavy cruisers, the Niobe and the Rainbow which were turned over to the Royal Navy.

Canadians Task Today

In this war, however, Canada has assumed the task of guarding her own shores, aiding the Royal Navy outside Canada's home waters and in arranging convoy work on the east coast.

Canadian destroyers now in use are approximately 1,375 tons, 317 feet long with a speed of 35 knots and a complement of 152.

Aside from the matter of ships the Dominion's naval forces now are more than six times as large in terms of men as they were on the outbreak of war.

There is no lack of recruits because the navy has a waiting list of 15,000 men eager to aid in manning the additional ships which will come into commission in the next few months.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Sept. 20 —(CP)— Liveweight were down 15 cents at Brantford and prices were unchanged at Hull and Stratford in bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Liveweight: Brantford $8.35.

Dressedweight: Brantford $11.50 plus transportation, Hull $11.30 Stratford $11.50 plus transportation.

Chatham and London later reported unchanged prices. Chatham, liveweight $8.25, dressed $11, London, dressedweight $11.50 plus transportation.

Calais to Boulogne Appeared to Be A Sheet of Flame

Low-Hanging Clouds And Heavy A. A. Barrage Slows up Nazi Raiders

London, Sept. 20—(CP)— German bombers swooped down over London this morning in a resumption of daylight raids after the 13th consecutive nightlong attack on the air besieged capital.

Londoners rushed to shelters as nine Nazi planes dropped down through clouds over the London area. They loosed only two bombs, then split into groups and disappeared in different directions.

Bombers also were reported over a southeast inland town.

A formation of dive bombers capped the night attacks with a violent assault on the northwest and east sectors of London just before dawn while British bombers renewed their blastings of Nazi-held ports along the French coast and other objectives in Germany.

Thick, low-hanging clouds and a heavy anti-aircraft barrage lessened the blows of Nazi raiders until after midnight, when the moon broke through to light the way for the dive bombers.

Raid Considered Light

By comparison with previous nights, the raid was considered fairly light.

A rainstorm swept the Straits of Dover, pathway for a threatened German invasion attempt during the night and a southwest gale lashed the sea against Dover's chalk cliffs. The wind subsided this morning. The sea was reported calmer and visibility was clear, especially during sunny intervals.

Despite the storm, R.A.F. fliers bombed "invasion ports" for two to three hours, renewing the heavy blows they delivered yesterday at such points as Le Havre, Calais and Boulogne.

Watchers at Dover reported that for a time the entire coastal area from Calais to Boulogne appeared to be a huge sheet of flame.

May Attempt Invasion Soon

(Some observers have predicted Hitler might attempt an invasion before the autumnal equinox—next Sunday night—which usually signals falls storms that could increase the difficulties of transporting troops across the Channel.)

The thick weather apparently forced German raiders to take a new course in their bludgeoning of London. They approached the city over the northwest section to strike at widely scattered parts of the metropolis.

In various sections houses and industrial buildings were hit and in the east end a factory was set afire. There a number of casualties were reported, one fatal.

A bomb struck the escape hatch of a public shelter in North London and "some" persons were reported killed and injured.

Bombs also fell in the industrial Midlands and the southwest and southeast parts of England, a bulletin said, and a few people were killed and injured when two cottages in a Berkshire village were demolished.

Bombs Fell Indiscriminately

After but one brief alarm by daylight yesterday when two Nazi planes attacked East London, small groups of low-flying raiders launched the familiar nightly bombing.

As the night wore on, only intermittent gun and bomb flashes could be seen until parting of the curtain of clouds brought an increase in the tempo, especially in the northwest and east sections.

The north and northwest areas appeared to have suffered most, although large calibre bombs exploding in Central London lighted the street brilliantly and violently shook buildings in the area.

A German plane shot down by anti-aircraft fire in southwest London exploded as it hit the ground, demolishing a house and blasting out a huge crater. The falling craft barely missed a hospital building.

Ontario Government Considering Year-Round Daylight Saving

Toronto, Sept. 20—(CP)—Acting Premier Harry C. Nixon said today the Ontario government is considering the year-round establishment of daylight saving as a war measure to conserve Hydro Electric power.

"The matter has been discussed by the cabinet. While it may not go into force this fall, because we believe we have sufficient power for this winter, it is likely to become effective next year."

Mr. Nixon said daylight saving throughout the winter would save an estimated 125,000 horsepower of "peak power."

FRANCE HAS BEEN

Based on Tokyo-Vichy Understanding

He said the Japanese attitude is based on a Tokyo-Vichy understanding which provided that French and Japanese on the spot should settle details of the military facilities to be granted to the Japanese in Indo-China for facilitation of operations against the Central Chinese government armies under Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek.

Nishihara said the facilities sought included bases for land and air forces. The Vichy-Tokyo understanding was reached three weeks ago, he went on, but "French delaying tactics prevented settlement of details."

Nishihara said he would leave Hanoi today for Haiphong.

"When convinced there is no hope for an amicable, successful conclusion of negotiations I will leave French territory, then you may say the crisis has been reached," Nishihara declared.

He said that Japanese Nationals removed from the Indo-Chinese interior were gathered at Haiphong, awaiting those from Hanoi, as a precaution against such an eventuality as his own departure from Indo-China. Plans have been made for removing them from Haiphong on Japanese ships.

"If I leave Indo-China only the Japanese government can say what will happen," he added.

(Chinese under Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek have insisted their forces will move into Indo-China if the Japanese army enters. The Chinese expect a prompt "backdoor" attack by the Japanese across the Indo-Chinese border into the southwestern province of Yunnan, once Japan gains Indo-Chinese bases.)

Hong Kong, Sept. 20 (AP)— France was reported to be standing adamant today in the face of a Japanese ultimatum calling upon French Indo-China to acquiesce within 72 hours to new, secret demands.

Official foreign quarters here said they had been informed Japan gave the French until Sunday to comply.

The ultimatum threatened to wreck negotiations by which Japan has sought to move troops through Indo-China and thus facilitate Japan's three-year-old war against China.

cation of what the new demands comprised but some informed sources in Hanoi, French Indo-China, said Japanese negotiators had suddenly shifted their emphasis from the right of passage for 12,000 troops and supplies to a request for bases having little connection with Japan's China campaign.

Lost Desire For Invasion

Military sources in Shanghai said that since the Chinese had destroyed the Haiphong-Yunnan Railway, the Japanese seemed to have lost their desire to attempt an invasion of China's Yunnan Province.

Japan originally planned to invade Yunnan, in Southwest China, to cut the last "back door" routes by which Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek the Burma Road, recently closed by temporary agreement with Great Britain. The other was the railway.

Foreign quarters here doubted that the French attitude would provoke Japanese military action. They said Japan, instead of resorting to force, might reach a face-saving agreement at the last minute since the French response to the Japanese ultimatum might be regarded as a "called bluff."

Jap Evacuation Continues

In the meantime Shanghai sources and foreign quarters here both were informed that the evacuation of Japanese Nationals from the French colony was "proceeding." About 160 Japanese from all points in northern Indo-China were already at Hanoi, awaiting orders to leave, possibly today.

Japan previously had announced her intention of withdrawing civilian Nationals and consular personnel so as to lessen the danger of "unfortunate incidents" when her troops march in to take up "unlimited military facilities." This precaution had been interpreted as a prelude to possible fighting, since the Central Chinese government has threatened to invade Indo-China when Japanese troops enter.

The unexpected turn in the Hanoi conferences was announced by the Hanoi government, which made no mention of ay ultimatumn.

"Negotiations between the French authorities and the Japanese mission have reached a delicate stage, the Japanese having presented new demands which do not seem compatible with instructions from the French government and which deviate from previous agreements, but the negotiations are continuing," said the announcement.

Pressure Brought to Bear

There were reports in Shanghai that the Japanese navy had brought pressure to bear on Maj.-Gen. Issaku Nishihara, the Japanese negotiator to force the French to grant Japan two footholds in Indo-China —one at the southwestern tip near Cape Cambodia, site of a new French naval base, and the other in the northern Haiphong-Hanoi region.

(In Vichy yesterday, French Foreign Minister Paul Baudoin said France now recognizes Japan as the first Asiatic power, although no accord has yet been reached, that France has been left "all alone now in the Far East, given to understand she could expect no real support from the United States, and that she thus should not be judged too harshly for yielding to Japanese demands.)

Has No Official Information

Tokyo, Sept. 20—(AP)— Yakichiro Suma, spokesman for the Japanese Foreign Office, said today he had received no official information on reports that Maj.-Gen Issaku Nishihara, Japanese negotiator in French Indo-China, had delivered a 72-hour ultimatum to France in connection with new demands on Indo-China made by Japan.

Thailand's Demands Get Jap Backing Say Chinese

Chungking, China, Sept. 20 — (AP)—Tukungpao, a leading Chinese daily newspaper, said today it had been authoritatively informed from Hanoi, French Indo-China, that Japan now is openly backing Thailand's territorial claims against Indo-China.

(The government of Thailand announced last week it had opened negotiations for return of former Thailand territory from French Indo-China. The area sought was understood to include the Provinces of Luang-Prabang and Bassac in the territory of Laos and part of the territory of Cambodia, including the famous ruins of Angkor.)

Takungpau cautioned Thailand against repeating Poland's mistake. The paper said Germany helped Poland bite off a slice of Czecho-Slovakia but then Poland was gobbled up herself by Germany.

200 NAZI PLANES

major damage in the London attacks was to private houses.

Some fatalities were caused when a bomb hit the escape hatch of a public shelter in a north London park. The east end also suffered some casualties.

Damage in central London was less than on previous nights though plenty of incendiary bombs were dropped. The weather hampered the raiders and helped regular firemen and auxiliary fire squads to deal quickly with the blazes.

At least one enemy machine was shot down in the darkness, crashing near a hospital in southwest London.

High explosive bombs, however, made direct hits on two streets. In one a jeweller's shop and many flats were demolished. People in a basement shelter under a building were rescued unhurt by salvage squads.

Serve Customers As Usual.

A man was killed and many injured in another street. A gown shop and hairdresser's were partly destroyed.

There was a bomb crater in the sidewalk a few feet from the front of a west end provision shop where I went shopping after breakfast. Stores immediately in front of the crater were partly bashed in. But the provision shop was open and half the staff were sweeping up fragments of glass from broken skylights and the rest were serving customers as usual.

In the London night raids some people previously bombed from east end homes were victims for a second time when a high explosive bomb demolished most of a block of flats in central London. The eastenders were quartered there temporarily.

Five people who had not taken shelter were buried under tons of debris as the building collapsed. Auxiliary fire service squads toiled at the risk of their lives through the morning climbing over crumbling masonry and tangled girders trying to recover bodies.

A five-year-old boy was among a number of people rescued after being trapped in the flats for an hour.

One east end woman said: "This was more terrifying than the last time. I lay with another woman's small boy clasped close to me for what seemed eternity and then we heard someone scrambling over the wreckage towards us."

Hatch of Shelter Hit.

People were trapped in four underground trenches in the north London shelter where the escape hatch was hit. Bodies were recovered after 12 hours' salvage work.

Many of the victims had mattresses and blankets with them, intending to sleep in the shelter.

"We could hardly stand up in the mud and the air raid was going full blast all around us," a rescue worker told a reporter. "Shell fragments as well as bombs fell in the vicinity."

The German raider brought down by anti-aircraft fire over southwest London crashed into the side of a house 50 yards from a hospital at Merton Park. Its wing tips damaged four houses before it struck the fifth, exploding with such force that the building was demolished. People in nearby air raid shelters were endangered by the spreading flames but escaped.

Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production, Sir John Anderson, Minister of Home Security, and Lord Ashfield, chairman of London Transport, last night inspected the Holborn underground station where thousands of east enders have been taking shelter nightly.

Hotel is Destroyed

The Evening News called on the government to redistribute Londoners "evenly over a wide circle drawn from the heart of the city," as the only method of avoiding heavy casualties. It asserted bombing of cities and towns "will go on until we are strong enough to stop it."

A big central London block of flats was damaged when a high explosive bomb fell in a narrow street behind the building. A bus and many cars parked in the streets were destroyed, only metal skeletons remaining afterwards.

But west enders are defying the fury of the raiders just as residents of the east end did before them. From the tower of a damaged west end store a big Union Jack, its edges tattered, still flapped in the breeze.

Windows of the Japanese Embassy in fashionable Portman Square were broken by bombs dropped nearby in recent raids, which have forced the staff to transfer to a nearby building.

Cheese Board

Canada will discuss in the near future the possibility of new agreements with the British Food Ministry, in regard to the export of Canadian cheese to Great Britain, according to a communication received by Seretary Fred Mallory of the Belleville Cheese Board from the Hon. J. A. Gardner Federal Minister of Agriculture. The letter read to board members at their meeting Thursday night evoked no comment.

The best possible prices for Canadian cheese will be arranged for at the discussion, the Minister wrote, but warned there may be difficulty in securing increased quotations due to present overseas circumstances.

The communication was a reply to resolutions forwarded to the Prime Minister, the Minister of Agriculture and the Dairy Products Board recently, in which the Belleville Board, requested that better prices be sought in view of the difficulty encountered in the manufacture of the product due to military drains on labor and increased costs.

The board's request for cheese producers' representation on the Dairy Products Board will be forwarded to the proper government authorities for discussion and action, the letter stated.

Three thousand four hundred and seventeen white and 50 special colored cheese were offered on the Belleville Cheese Board on Thursday evening. All were sold at 13 7-16 cents with buyers McCreary and Hunter taking the board. The factories represented were:

OBITUARY

BRUCE M. McKINNEY
(Melrose)

After an illness of six months' duration Bruce Martin McKinney passed away at his residence at Melrose in the 3rd concession of Tyendinaga Township early this Friday morning.

The late Mr. McKinney was born 34 years ago at Melrose, his parents being Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McKinney. His father died in the year 1932 and his mother later, became Mrs. John MacFarlane. All his life was passed in the district where he was born and in the community he was highly esteemed To many friends his passing has brought sincere feelings of regret. In religion he was a member of the United Church at Melrose, and fraternally he was a member of Shannonville Loyal Orange Lodge No. 242.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

Berlin Communique

Berlin, Sept. 20.—(AP)—The German High Command issued this communique Friday:—

"Despite continuing bad weather conditions, the Air Force yesterday carried out armed reconnaissance in the course of which London as well as airports and harbor facilities in Southern England were bombed.

"During the night, battle planes continued retaliatory raids on London and war-essential objectives in western and central England. Numerous new fires resulted, especially at Liverpool.

"Several British planes last night dropped bombs on residential sections of western and southwestern German cities.

(German communications, including the Dortmund-Ems Canal, were the objectives in the Reich attacked last night by the R.A.F.)

"One British plane was downed and three German planes are missing.)

(A British statement said five German bombers were shot down over Britain yesterday, with no R.A.F. loss.)

Aged Convict Kept His Whiskers Until Ready for Release

San Quentin, Calif., Sept. 20.— (AP)—Louie Genopolis, 91, is a proud man. He kept his whiskers until he was good and ready to give them up.

Genopolis came to San Quentin prison five years ago. Among the first orders he received was "get shaved".

"The Lord Almighty gave me permission to raise this beard," he objected as a prison barber attempted to place him in a chair.

A minute later the barber dropped dead.

Genopolis was not bothered again about his whiskers.

Yesterday, with freedom less than a week away, he got a shave.

He didn't explain why.

MINERS GET INCREASE

London, Sept. 20 (CP)—A general wage increase for miners effective Oct. 1 was announced today by the National Executive Committee of the Mine Workers Federation. Under the new agreement, based on the cost of living, the increases will realize five pence a day for adults and half that amount for boys. The present war wage advance more than the peacetime scale is one shilling five pence per shift.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

Judith was lost in thought. . . . She must go on without Tex. She wondered if he knew about the crack-up. He'd hear. Her heart contracted, and he'd hope that he was free of her! If only she could go back to the days before the Cleveland races. She'd been happy then . . . thought it would last forever. Now it was all over. Her shoulders shook with her sobbing.

Dudley came over and sat down beside her, put his arm around her. "Cry away. It won't be long now. You've earned a right to weep as much as you like."

Finally she stopped from sheer exhaustion.

"Feel better? That's fine. In another couple of hours we'll be warm and dry. You'll be back in New York for breakfast—"

"No!" The protest broke from Judith's lips.

As she spoke, the Egyptian cried out: "Look! They come!"

In the distance there was a light, a faint glimmer. They strained their eyes to see. No doubt about it. Somebody was coming. Together they shouted. . . . No answer!

"They're further away than they seem," Dudley warned.

Anxiously the little group watched the slow progress of the rescuers. All but Roy. He had lapsed into unconsciousness.

Every now and then they shouted. But it was a long time before there was an answering hallo, which came faintly above the wind.

Dudley and the Egyptian were moving about. Judith rose, walked with them. Her legs and arms ached. She felt suddenly sick. She could not face going back to life.

Finally the rescue party was within hailing distance. It was Jenks' voice they recognized: "All right?"

"All right. Hurry! Roy must get to a hospital."

When the men came within sight of the dying fire, Judith realized most of them had on uniforms. They were Pennsylvania State Police. There were two farmers, too.

Ware was out there. "We sent him on into Pittsburgh, to a hospital," Jenks said.

"Where are we?" Dudley asked.

"South of a town called Thornhill. You've got a long walk ahead of you. Can you girls make it?"

Ellen and Judith both answered with a will. The police had brought a stretcher. The first thing was to get Roy on his way. Carefully they lifted him onto the canvas carrier.

"Ice in the carburetor, I think," Dudley said. "Let's get these people where they'll be warm. It will be a wonder if they don't all have pneumonia. We'll be available to testify."

They moved off slowly. Dudley, Judith, and the gentleman from Cairo, with one of the farmers went ahead. The troopers with Roy, and Ellen walking beside him, brought up the rear. So they began their tortuous journey.

"How far is it?" Judith asked.

He did not explain what those four miles would be. The Egyptian struck the pace and swung ahead, singing at the top of his voice. They kept close together, stumbling, slipping. The scrub trees scratched and tore at them. Now and then they stopped for another sip of coffee.

But Judith was no longer cold. She was burning up and her throat was sore. Dudley grabbed her arm, pulled her along with him. She slipped and fell, tore the knees out of her hose, and the bruises smarted and burned. Her feet felt leaden. Finally she sat down on a rock.

"I can't go on!"

But soon she got to her feet with his help. They plodded on. Finally Michael cried out: "See? The farm house. Come! Be a good soldier."

They came to the farm home about four a.m. When they walked into the warm kitchen Judith slumped into a chair, gasping for breath. Her voice was no more than a hoarse croak. Her clothes were mud caked, her shoes sodden.

"What about Roy?" Judith asked.

There was no telephone in the house. But the police car was outside the door. Dudley borrowed some articles for Judith, and a dry coat. It was torn and old, but Judith was grateful for its dryness.

"I'm better, Michael."

"Then here we go. New York for breakfast, Judith."

In the car, the trooper driving, put Judith and Dudley up front with him. The Egyptian was bundled into the bac, under many robes.

The heat of the car penetrated. Judith fell asleep on Dudley's shoulder. She must have slept a long time, for when she awakened, Dudley spoke: "See? The dawn. You didn't expect to see another one, did you, Judith?"

Then Dudley asked the trooper to take them directly to the airport. "We'll get out of here for New York on the first ship. They'll be flying."

Judith tried to speak a protest. But Dudley did not listen.

Their arrival at the airport created great excitement.

Wentworth, the airport manager, was there to welcome them. Some newspaper reporters were waiting for reports of the crack-up. But Judith was at the end of her rope. Wentworth told Dudley to take Judith to his quarters. So she was taken to Wentworth's apartment on the second floor. She threw herself on the cot, without removing her coat. That was where Dudley found her when he came half an hour later with the cheerful greeting: "Buck up. We're shoving off on the seven o'clock ship. They wired for seats for us from Newark."

Judith sat up straight: "Please! I'm not going back!"

Dudley ignored her. He was washing his face and hands, trying to look a little presentable.

"When I get through here, try to fix yourself up a little. You're a sight!"

"Suppose I am."

"No matter what you say, I'm not going back. You don't understand the situation. Tex and I are through."

Dudley kept on struggling with the comb:

"I'm not involved in your personal affairs, Judith. This is a practical matter. You have to testify at the investigation along with the rest of us. You've got to have clothes. Your clothes are in New York. We're about an hour and a quarter from home—on the cuff. If you prefer to pay your way back to get your clothes, that's up to you."

He turned to look at her, and he grinned: "I don't think you realize how comical you look right now!"

Judith wilted: "Maybe I don't" Her voice was just a croak. They both laughed at the sound.

"We leave in ten minutes," Dudley said, knowing he had won.

"Stand up Here's your coat."

Judith clung to the chair. He went over, lifted her to her feet, and led her to the door, his eyes dark with pain.

"Please don't make me!" she begged. "I have no place to go!"

"Yes, you have. A hospital, where friends can look after you."

"No!" She would not face New York without Tex. Her eyes blazed: "This is my affair, Michael."

"You're in no condition to know what you're doing," and after a pause, "Do you think I want to send you back? Why—why—I love you—love you enough to see you do what is best for you."

Dudley's voice was flat as he added, "Now will you come?"

Judith followed without another word. When they came downstairs, Wentworth was waiting for them. "The ship's just in. Five minutes and you can board her. The reporters are looking for you," he warned. There were many questions from the newsmen which Dudley answered. Photographers barked, etc.

"Please. I look so dreadful!" Judith begged. But it was too late. . . . Then they ran for the ship. Passengers asked questions. There was excitement galore.

Dudley finally sat down beside Judith with, "We always seem to be having our pictures taken together." She managed a smile. Then the pilot gunned the motors, they were taxiing down the field.

"Try to sleeep," Dudley suggested, but it was no use. Judith's thoughts were too troubled. If things had gone right, she'd be approaching Los Angeles, en route to Reno. . . . She must have slept, it seemed only a little while before Dudley touched her arm with, "Newark, in five minutes." Then he observed, "There'll be a lot of fuss when we land." And there was.

Dudley and Judith were the last passengers to leave the ship. When the usually immaculate Dudley stepped out, disheveled and worn, the crowd set up a cheer, kept it up when Judith appeared. People closed in about them. Questions. Dudley held tight to Judith's arm. Suddenly she saw her husband. Tex, towering above the crowd, smiling and waving.

Aimes fought his way to Judith's side, put both arms around her and, with a loud "Darling!" lifted her off her feet. Then he kissed her. It was a pretty sight, the famous pilot greeting his wife, just rescued from a near fatal crash. Photo flashlights flared, coruscations of them!

Then Tex was shaking Dudley's hand with, "Thank the Lord, you were along!"

"Yes, I'm glad."

With Judith between them, they made a rush for Dudley's car. He gave the address of a Newark hospital, ignoring Judith's protests.

For a little while nobody spoke. Tex sat with his arm about Judith's shoulders. If he was embarrassed, he showed no sign. One might think that he had put Judith on the westbound airliner the night before with a kiss. She simply could not believe it.

When they came to the hospital, Dudley did not get out. He held Judith's hand for a moment. "Good bye, Judith." That was all.

There was a finality in his voice which terrified her.

She wanted to protest, but her husband said, "Come, Judith."

Tex recognized nothing of what Judith was feeling. He got her out of the car and shook hands with Dudley, saying. "Don't wait. I'll take a cab back down town. My car's in the garage. I want to pick it up, anyway."

Soon Judith found herself in a clean hospital bed with Tex beside it. He did not stay long. Just before leaving, he said: "I'm going south tonight. Will be back Thursday. You should be ready to come home then, Flier!"

Just as though the break had never occurred; he bent and kissed her with, "Be a good girl and eat your spinach!"

He stuffed it into his pocket without comment. Saluted, as he went out the door.

Judith lay with her eyes closed trying to think things out. What had happened to Tex since she left, she did not know. But things were different. She tried not to think of Michael Dudley. He had sent her back to Tex. She was sure of it now. She concluded that Michael had talked to Tex on the telephone from Pittsburgh. . . .

Contrary to Dudley's opinion, she did not have pneumonia. Just a bad cold, and she needed a short rest.

Tex was due in Thursday morning but he did not get to the hospital until evening. Judith did not protest. She smiled a welcome.

"I'll take you home tomorrow."

Judith did not sleep much that night. She dreaded walking again into the apartment where she had hoped and where she had suffered so much. But she could not tell that to her breezy husband.

She dreaded, too, the moment when Tex might feel called upon to explain why he had changed his mind about a divorce. She was afraid to ask, afraid of what the answer would be. . . .

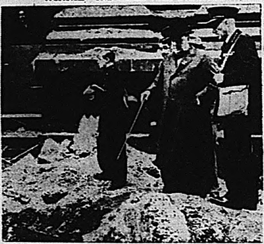
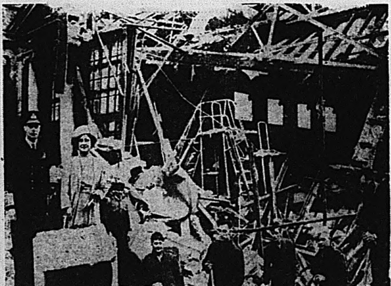
"WINNIE" INSPECTS THE DAMAGE



Prime Minister Winston Churchill surveys a great crater left by the explosion of a German bomb in a London street after one of the Nazi night raids on the capital. When he had surveyed the handiwork of the German bombers, the Prime Minister turned to a nearby crowd and asked, "Are we downhearted?" The answer was, in parliamentary language, definitely in the negative.

AS THEIR MAJESTIES INSPECTED DAMAGE TO THEIR HOME



The King and Queen watch workmen repair the damage done by the first Nazi bombs that hit Buckingham Palace. Before the work was completed, other German bombers revisited the scene and dropped more bombs, wrecking other parts of the palace grounds.

BRITISH MASTERY

with attacks scattered from the Libyan coast to Ethiopia and Somaliland, the Italian High Command reported today.

Striking to prevent the Italians from consolidating themselves after their 60-mile advance into Egyptian territory, the Royal Air Force raided areas about Derna, Bomba, and Tobruk in Libya, and Salum, and Sidi Barrani, in Egypt, the High Command's communique said.

Other attacks were reported on Diredawa, Gialo, and Mogadiscio in East Africa.

Friday's Italian High Command Communique:

(There was no confirmation of this claim from British sources.)

"In northern Africa British raids on the port of Derna and the zones of Bomba, Tobruk and Salum caused one dead, several wounded and slight material damage.

Italian Aircraft Set Afire

(A British statement said that in a British raid on Derna Wednesday aircraft were set afire. At Tobruk buildings were hit and between Salum and Sidi Barrani motor transport was set on fire.)

"At Sidi Barrani one British plane was brought down by one of our anti-aircraft defences. From further information it has been ascertained that the number of enemy planes brought down during the action reported yesterday amounted to seven. Two more planes were probably destroyed.

"The British steamer which had been damaged during the action in the Aegean Sea arrived at Pyraeus with a large fire on board and heavy damage. She is now in drydock.

(There was no confirmation of this from British or neutral sources.)

"In East Africa our air formations bombed an enemy troop encampment at Wadi Husu, northwest of Gallabat (The Sudan) During the enemy raids on Kassala, reported yesterday, one British Blenheim plane was shot down in flames. One British plane which had been reported probably shot down over Massaua was found 20 miles from this town. The crew perished. Enemy raids on Diredawa, Gialo and Mogadiscio caused slight damage and no casualties."

'Intrigues in Syria' By Germans, Italians, Turkish Paper Declares

Istanbul, Sept. 20 (AP)—The newspaper Yeni Sabah declared editorially today that Italian and German officials "apparently are conducting intrigues in Syria" and warned that Turkey "could tolerate no solution for Syria other than complete national integrity. We only desire that Syria does not become a menace to Turkey as the tool of another power," the newspaper said.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop went away on a business trip for a few days, and yestidday was the first day and ma said, Benny, dont you think it would be a nice thing for you to write your father a nice letter and surprise him on his trip?

Well gosh, ma, I mean G, I dont know his address, I said, and ma said, Now never mind the empty excuses, you provide the letter, and I'll provide the address, here's a nice sheet of writing paper for you.

Shall I add a postscript too, ma? I said, and ma, said, Well for land sakes, you haven't even started it yet and you're asking about a postscript, such a boy.

Meaning me, and I started to write it writing, Deer pop, you've hardly been away a day and ma misses you already. She claims she cant get used to the sensation of walking passed an ashtray twice in the same 5 minutes without having to empty it. Ma still has a little of her headake left over from yestidday, and this morning Nora almost resigned on account of ma scolding her at breakfist, but ma told her she didn't mean anything and finely Nora claimed it was all your fault for going away like a coward so ma couldn't take her headake out on you instead of on innocent people back in their kitchin.

Being as far as I got when I showed it to ma to see if it was all right so far, and ma read it, saying, Well of all things, such a lot of gibberish to write to your father.

Why, ma, what's a matter with it, it's all true, isn't it? I said and ma said, Well yes, I suppose it's true enough in a way.

Well then what's a matter dont you want me to tell him the news, said, and ma said, O, you can just add a postscript to my letter, considering you're so crazy on the subject of postscripts.

Wich I did, writing, Hello pop, come on home, your loving son Benny.

Wife of Actor And 3 Children Now in Hollywood

Hollywood, Sept. 20—(AP)—Ella Donat, slight, red-haired wife of actor Robert Donat, has said "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" to her husband "for the duration."

She and their three children, Joanna, nine, John, seven, and Brian, four, arrived yesterday to find a home and settle down.

Calling England's spirit "splendid" she said she didn't want any fuss over her arrival.

"I want my children to go to school just like other children and live sane, normal, happy lives," she explained.

Donat is doing war relief work on the London stage. He had left Hollywood before, early this year, he was awarded the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences' "Oscar" for 1939's outstanding male acting performance in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips."

Business Must Be Given a Chance To Make Profit Says Wendell Willkie

Aboard Willkie train en route to San Francisco, Sept. 20—(AP)—After calling for immediate, scientific tax revision and "a chance for business to make a profit," Wendell L. Willkie advocated today the development of United States peacetime aviation into a major industry.

In a brief talk prepared for a trainside audience at Barkersfield, Calif., the Republican Presidential nominee said:

"War planes? Yes! We must have them. We should have had them years ago. But great as is that need, the need of future peacetime aviation will be even greater.

"For it is the permanence of peacetime aviation—not the temporary emergency of preparedness—that will bring this nation into its rightful position of leadership in world aviation."

Follow-up to Address

Willkie discussed this industry specifically as a follow-up to his address last night in the Los Angeles Coliseum, where he offered a cheering crowd four steps which he said would "turn this country around" from a totalitarian system. He listed them as follows:

"1. The rules under which business is conducted must be clear and must be stable.

"2. Government policies affecting business should be consistent.

"3. Government competition with business must be kept within well-defined limits. It must not stop the flow of capital into new productive enterprise.

"4. Business must be given a chance to make a profit."

FAMED LONDON STORE CLOSED BY BOMBS

KISS THE BOYS GOODBYE

Madeline Babich, one of the girls the U.S. National Guard left behind, is shown saying good-by to Eugene Hellman, of the 104th Engineer regiment, 44th division, just before he left for Camp Dix. Scenes like this are now the rule in the 26 states from which 60,500 National Guardsmen were mobilized to federal service this week. Shortly similar scenes will take place all over the U.S. as the recently passed conscription bill goes into effect.

Precautions Taken To Guard President

Philadelphia, Sept. 20—(AP)—The city took elaborate precautions today to safeguard President Roosevelt in his inspection tour of defence work as Postmaster Joseph F. Gallagher warned that a package containing a bomb might have been mailed to one of the plants included in the President's itinerary.

Nearly 2,000 policemen and detectives were assigned to the route mapped for the President.

Tipped that a package containing a time bomb had been mailed from Norfolk, Va., postal inspectors segregated all mail from that city. Inspectors from Washington adopted similar measures in Virginia, Delaware and Maryland, said J. M. Johnston, Inspector in charge at Philadelphia.

"It may be the work of a crank," Gallagher said, "but we're taking no chances."

GENERAL AND WIFE KILLED BY BOMB

London, Sept. 20 (CP)—Brig.-Gen. William H. U. Smith, 71, and his wife were among six persons killed when a high explosive bomb struck a West End private hotel Monday night, it was announced today. He retired from the army in 1926.

AXIS ATTENTION FOCUSED ON EGYPT

Land of Pharaohs Believed Subject of Rome Conference

Berlin, Sept. 20.— (AP)—Axis attention was focused sharply on Egypt today as German quarters urged the land of the Pharaohs to "throw off the British Yoke" and fall into step with the new order in Europe which, it was said, Germany and Italy now plan to extend to Africa.

Egypt was advised through various Nazi channels that her independence would be assured by the Axis Powers if she does not oppose the present Italian thrust eastward.

Rome Conference

There was no indication whether the ideas expressed here in regard to Egypt had received official endorsement in the Rome conference, but inspired interpretation of uninformative Italian communiques left little doubt that Egypt was the centre of attention.

The Nazi Press warned Egypt to keep in line with developments which, it boasted, would follow quickly on the expected collapse of the British Empire.

The Lokalanzeiger said Egypt "can be sure that after an Italian victory on the Nile it can look forward to a free future".

Nazi Press Warns Egypt

The future, other quarters said, is, of course, conditioned on Egypt keeping out of the present African campaign.

(Egypt severed diplomatic relations with Rome some time ago, but thus far has made no move to declare war on Italy, whose troops began a drive across the Egyptian-Libyan frontier a week ago.)

Rome sources have repeatedly asserted that Italy is not making war on Egypt and that her African offensive is directed solely against Britain.

The future of Greece and Turkey, last holdouts against Axis domination on southeastern Europe, also was believed by Rome observers to have figured in the talks.

Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, commenting on the conference, said that other European nations, "particularly friendly ones", are involved in the war "not as spectators alone".

CANADIAN NAVAL PERSONNEL GROWS

11,197 Men on Active Service Today Six Times Number When War Broke Out

Ottawa, Sept. 20—(CP)—Canada's naval forces are more than six times as large in terms of men as they were on the outbreak of war and a waiting-list of 15,000 would-be recruits assures the Royal Canadian Navy of ample personnel to man the additional ships which will come into commission in the next few months.

Although small as the navies of the great seapowers go, the Canadian Navy contains the type of ship which has proved to be most in demand for continuous service in the present war.

Canada entered the war with six destroyers, commissioned a seventh shortly after the start of hostilities and by midwinter had despatched a part of the destroyer fleet overseas for action in European waters. There one destroyer, the Fraser, was lost and it has been replaced by an acquisition from Great Britain.

Destroyers' Service

The trend of war thrust the brunt of naval operations on destroyers and the small Canadian fleet was able to render useful help to the British destroyers in addition to patrolling Canadian territorial waters and aiding in the formation of an escort of convoys from Canadian shores.

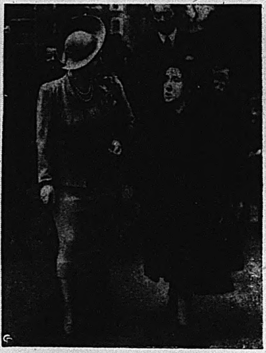
Although the destroyers are the most powerful fighting units of the Canadian navy, a total of more than 125 armed ships are in commission. These include three fast merchant ships, converted into auxiliary cruisers, and a large number of anti-submarine and mine-sweeping craft.

11,197 Men on Active Service

Two new destroyers are under construction for Canada in British ship-yards and a large number of smaller craft are being built in Canadian shipyards for naval use.

At the outbreak of war, according to ministerial statements in the House of Commons, the personnel of the Royal Canadian Navy numbered 1,774 officers and men. Now a total of 11,197 are on active service, according to naval service headquarters.

QUEEN COMFORTS BOMB WIDOW



Queen Elizabeth tries to comfort Mrs. O'Connor, grief-stricken by a Nazi bomb which fell on her South London home and took the lives of her husband, sister and nephew. The Queen's home, Buckingham Palace, also has been bombed.

Current Edition Of Swiss Newspaper Seized by Police

Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 20 —(AP)—Cantonal police today seized the current edition of "Action Nationale," organ of the Swiss Totalitarian Movement, on charges of publishing "false news damaging the good repute of Switzerland and the federal authorities." The National Movement is the party whose leaders President Pilet Golaz received 10 days ago, bringing upon himself a reprimand from other Swiss political parties for failing to consult his cabinet before granting the conference.

AT THE BELLE

"I Love You Again"

Designed expressly to make the world forget its troubles, "I Love You Again," co-starring William Powell and Myrna Loy, is scheduled to open next at the Belle Theatre. The film is the first in some time to present the popular Powell-Loy "husband and wife" team minus the "Thin Man" tag, and is one of the most hilarious of their careers together.

The story, which makes for one comedy situation coming fast on the heels of another, deals with the amusing plight of a man who, through an accidental blow on the head, recovers from an eight-year attack of amnesia. When he regains consciousness the world in which he is living seems strange. He has acquired a new personality, a charming wife who is about to divorce him, a bank account, the manager's berth in a large pottery factory and, more than that, the reputation for being a model citizen and civic leader in a small town called Habersville.

The fact that in his pre-amnesia days he was a high class confidence man adds humor to the already side-splitting series of events. How he plots to return to Habersville and perpetrate a gigantic oil swindle, how he checks up on his past eight-year record, and the laughable conclusion to a series of mad events, makes for the top entertainment of the current year.

The role of Larry Wilson, alias George Carey, is a happy choice for the actor, allowing him to depart momentarily from the slick, sophisticated detective roles of recent films. Myrna Loy is also permitted to depart from her "perfect wife" characterization long enough to cause Powell some anxious moments as well as to crack him over the head with a platter filled with scrambled eggs.

The supporting cast includes the always funny Frank McHugh as Powell's buddy, "Doc" Ryan, Edmund Lowe as a slick oil promoter, Donald Douglas as Miss Loy's boy friend, Herbert, and Nella Walker as her mother. The film was directed by Hollywood's leading hitmaker, W. S. Van Dyke II.

A funny comicolor cartoon "Swing Social," and the popular Belle Newsreel with its latest world news events precedes the feature attraction. On Saturday matinee a thrilling chapter of "The Oregon Trail" will also be exhibited.

Smart Show

Romance and jungle thrills abound in the latest Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Madeleine Carroll co-starring vehicle "Safari," featuring Lynn Overman and Billy (Sneezer) Gilbert now being presented at the Belle with Edgar Wallace's fast-paced detective thriller, "The Mysterious Mr. Reeder."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Cavalcade"

Classic now is Noel Coward's episodic tale of two English families, "Cavalcade"—the masters and the servants—and their lives as they crossed each other during the first 30 years of this century. Wars and passing events all played their parts in the moulding of character and in taking their toll of lives. Outstanding among the episodes which make up the plot are those depicting Queen Victoria's funeral, the Titanic disaster, the declaration of the First World War, the Armistice, and the final toast to the future—all of them intensely dramatic, simple and entirely human. At times it is difficult to believe that they were written by a man who has spent most of his many years in the theatre in turning out light, frothy comedies.

"That this England, which we love so much, will some day find dignity, greatness and peace again."

The quotation is from a toast to England, given at the end of "Cavalcade," which opens its first return engagement in Belleville at the Capitol Theatre for a limit engagement only, commencing with a Sunday midnight preview. There will be daily matinees. The picture has not been changed at all since shown here before, in 1933, but now it has an even greater impact than then. Technically "Cavalcade" has no flaws—photography and sound are still excellent. Emotionally it is stupendous.

Most movie-goers saw "Cavalcade" when it was originally issued. For any who did not, it is the story of one English family from 1900 to 1933, through two wars. The pain and toll of those wars are parcelled up and presented with terrible clearness. Many people will want to see it again, with the new understanding brought about by this war and they will find it both an inspiration and a challenge.

Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook have the leading roles, which they do with distinction and restraint. Before the current war "Cavalcade" was an impressive, deeply moving film. Now it is a poignant prayer for pace, and a thrilling reminder of what the British Empire has been through.

"Wings of the Morning"

The all-Technicolor picture will be shown on the same program starring Annabella, Henry Fonda and the world famous Irish tenor John McCormack. You will witness the Changing of the Guard, the famous Epsom Downs Derby, and all the beautiful scenery of England and Ireland wrapped around two lovers who will live in your memory forever.

"Carolina Moon"

Gene Autry's latest western is loaded with music and action that you will love. He is ably supported by Smiley Burnette, little Mary Lee, June Storey and the "Lone Star Cowboys" band. Bring the whole family and enjoy this wholesome treat. On Saturday at all performances Wrigley's Doublemint Gum will be given to everyone.

German People Given Hint War May Last Throughout Winter

Berlin, Sept. 20 (CP)—The regimented German newspapers today published hints to inform the people that the war may go on through the winter, damening their hopes of the quick victory promised them for a year.

At the same time the journalistic voices of the Government claimed that Royal Air Force bombers in their attacks on military objectives had struck hospitals in Prussia.

They made this allegation the basis for threats that "retaliation" will be "a thousandfold." The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung boasted: "The scoring of accounts will be terrible."

"Hereafter," declared the newspaper Nachtausgabe, "not the slightest consideration need be taken" for British civilians.

These "acts" would be against "vulnerable" points in the British Empire; the notion generally conveyed was that the war is going to open up in scope.

"Whoever contemplates the situation sees clearly before his eyes the next mission of the Allies (Axis). Reduced to a short formula it is the unification of all the powers of Italy and Germany for the last-round battle against Britain which now is in a decisive stage."

BRITISH SUPPLY MISSION AT BOMBAY

Bombay, India, Sept. 20—(CP-Reuters)—A British Supply Ministry Mission, headed by Sir Alexander Roger, arrived here today to study India's industrial facilities and determine how far they can be made available for production of war materials for Britain. The mission is composed of eight members, accompanied by 13 technical advisers.

French, Japanese Resume Negotiations at Hanoi

Japs Use Warships As 'Persuasive Gesture' Reported

Chinese Sources Say Crack Chinese Troops Mass Along Border

Hong Kong, Sept. 21 (AP) — Japanese warships have been moving into Tonkin Bay "since Friday morning" as a "persuasive gesture" to back Japanese negotiations for military rights in French Indo-China, the British-owned newspaper China Mail reported today.

At the same time Chinese sources said that crack Chinese government troops were massing along the borders of Kwangsi and Yunnan provinces ready to move into French Indo-China if Japan should resort to force.

Reports from the southwest said that Gen. Ho Ying-Chin, Chinese Minister of War, had twice visited Yunnan Province in the past week to supervise the military preparations.

Chinese government officials in Chungking were represented in Chinese dispatches as convinced that Japan's primary ambition in Indo-China is to usurp French authority there, with securing of a backdoor route for invasion of Yunnan a secondary objective.

The situation was tempered somewhat by word from Haiphong that negotiations between French and Japanese officials had been resumed at Hanoi after a breakdown which followed a 72-hour Japanese ultimatum.

Jap Demands Listed

The Chinese press said the Japanese demands delivered to French authorities included:

Why The Weather?

By Mayor A. H. Thiessen

Newfoundland fogs! These are probably the most famous fogs in the world. This is partly because of their density and persistency, and also because they are right in the way of vessels passing between here and Europe on the northern route. When warm, moist air passes over a cold surface, fog is formed. This is what happens on that coast: the warm, wet air off the Gulf Stream blows over the Newfoundland waters made cold by the Labrador current. There are about 70 days of fog there, and in the Strait of Belle Isle, which separates Newfoundland from the mainland, there are 116 days of fog annually.

Dutch Airman Goes On Nightly Crusade of Vengeance Against Hun

New York, Sept. 21.—A one-man air force in the person of a Netherlands' flier whose family was wiped out at the start of the Nazi offensive through the low countries last May is carrying on nightly "vengeance" raids from Britain against German military objectives in the Netherlands.

The airman is Koene D. Parmentier, former chief pilot for the Royal Dutch Airlines. His raids have been directed principally against the Germans at Rotterdam, where his family was killed during the Nazi bombing which signalized the start of the spring blitzkrieg, and The Hague and Amsterdam.

After each raid he drops a signed note overboard to advise the Netherlands inhabitants, for their own protection, where he will strike the following night.

I first ran on to the story of Parmentier in Bermuda two weeks ago. Today I confirmed it in United States aviation circles.

It is reported, but unconfirmed, that the Nazis have placed a price equivalent to $10,000 on his head.

When the Germans invaded the Netherlands, they levelled whole sections of Rotterdam with bombs. Of the sixty pilots in the Royal Dutch Airlines, forty were put into uniform for air defense. All were killed.

Of the remaining twenty, Parmentier escaped, first to France and then to Lisbon, Portugal. There he mingled with the flying fraternity of the port. He said he was going to repay the Germans many-fold.

He got to England, offered his services—with qualifications. He was to have the use of Netherlands planes. He was to make his raids alone. He asked nothing but supplies of bombs and fuel. The Royal Air Force agreed.

For weeks now, regardless of the weather, he has carried on his vengeance flights. He leaves by the clock and returns by the clock, stalking off without a word after he lands.

Reported Shortage Of O. A. C. Funds To Be Probed

Toronto, Sept. 21 (CP)—Attorney General Gordon Conant of Ontario, announced today he will direct Crown Attorney J. M. Kearns of Guelph, to investigate a reported shortage from Agricultural Department funds at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph.

Officials said an official of the department of Agriculture has been suspended pending further direction in the case by Hon. P. M. Dewan, Minister of Agriculture.

Government Rules Daylight Saving Time Will Continue Indefinitely

Ottawa, Sept. 21 —(CP)— Daylight Saving Time will continue indefinitely in those Ontario and Quebec municipalities where it is now in force, the Government has ruled. The order, under the War Measures Act, is designed to reduce the chances of a shortage of power in the many industrialized municipalities of both provinces.

Based on recommendation of H. J. Symington, power controller for are department of munitions and supply, the order was regarded by the government as one means of avoiding a power shortage that might interrupt the output of essential war industries.

The move would release 189,000 horsepower of electrical energy for industrial use by reducing consumption of power for lighting purposes, it was estimated. It is expected also to stagger the hours at which generating plants are required to deliver peak loads.

No Limitation Placed

No limitation was placed on the period during which daylight Saving will continue. The order, directed to "all individuals firms, corporations, except transportation and telegraph companies," said Daylight Saving Time "shall continue for the coming months" in those Ontario and Quebec municipalities which have been observing it during the summer."

Officials said no special consideration had been given those municipalities which have already reverted to Standard Time, after being on Daylight Saving during the mid-summer months.

The reason for the ruling here is the conserving of power, while in Great Britain, where the Daylight Saving period was extended last year, it was to give workers an opportunity to get home before the blackout.

It is the first instance since 1918 that Daylight Saving has been the subject of general Dominion legislation. It was general throughout Canada that year under a Dominion statute but since then has been adopted only on the initiative of municipalities concerned.

VILLAGES EN FETE OVER DOBRUJA'S RECLAMATION

Complete Occupation of Territory Ceded by Rumania Will Take Twelve Days

EXPANSION DEMAND

Many Bulgarians Urge That Greece Give Up Macedonia and Thrace

Varna, Bulgaria, Sept. 21 (AP)—Flag-decorated border villages today welcomed the vanguard of Bulgarian officials and troops reclaiming southern Dobruja, lost in war and regained from weakened Rumania without a fight after 28 years of dispute.

While today's formal entry into Dobruja extended Bulgaria's Back Sea front to the north, many Bulgarians clamored for similar expansion to the south.

They urged that Greece be forced to return Thrace and Macedonia, which Bulgaria lost in treaties after the last war, cutting her off from the Aegean Sea.

Although complete occupation of the territory ceded by Rumania is expected to take ten days, Bulgarian officials said the first section would be occupied in 24 hours after the dynamiting of the old frontier markers at 9 a.m. (2 a.m. EDT).

That section includes the strip along the border and the Black Sea coast including Balcic, resort port where the heart of Queen Marie of Rumania is enshrined.

Special Session of Parliament.

The occupation was celebrated in advance by a special session of parliament yesterday in Sofia. Government supporters cheered mention of axis help in winning back Southern Dobruja, lost to Rumania in the second Balkan war in 1912, but twelve Communist members of parliament rose in protest.

They declared "Bulgaria has nothing to thank the axis powers for" and said Soviet Russia's occupation of northern Bucovina was the move which actually made it possible for Bulgaria to get back Dobruja.

Channel Mists Fail To Check RAF Fighters From Chasing Nazis

One German Bomber, Ringed by Anti-Aircraft Fire, Finished Off and Plunges Into Sea—Indiscriminate Bombing Causes Some Damage in Wide-Spread Areas of Britain but Raids Not Intensive as on Previous Occasions

London, Sept. 21 (CP).—Hitler's air raiders, inaugurating their third week of mass assaults aimed at London, roared through channel mists and drizzling rain today but ran into a storm of anti-aircraft fire along the Kentish coast.

One group of raiders appeared over the capital after a night-long series of attacks and British counter-assaults on Nazi-held channel "invasion ports". Anti-aircraft guns blazed away for a short time in central London, the first formation of raiders soon disappeared and the brief raid alarm ended.

Three of the raiders over Kent retreated in the face of heavy British fire, one of them jettisoning its bombs in the sea. Later a lone Messerschmitt fighter tried to steal in above the clouds, only to turn tail when it was accorded a hot reception by the ground batteries.

Additional raiders dropped bombs near two southeastern towns and bomb fragments fell in several districts. One German bomber, apparently ringed by anti-aircraft fire, was finished off near the southeast coast by a fighter.

Casualties Not Heavy

An official announcement said last night's attacks on London caused casualties "rather less than on previous nights." East, Central and South London and the Thames area bore the brunt of the 14th. consecutive dusk-to-dawn assault.

One heavy bomb fell early this morning in South London near a famed football field, demolishing 12 houses and causing a number of casualties. It left a huge crater in a roadway.

Another high explosive caused widespread damage and inflicted casualties when it struck an apartment house at the edge of a historic Thames-side town.

The government's announcement said that in other parts of the British Isles there was very little night activity.

Two bombs fell harmlessly on a hospital in the London area last night.

THREE CHILDREN AND THEIR MOTHER ARE ASPHYXIATED

PROBE CONDUCTED

Toronto, Sept. 21—(CP)—Ten-year-old William Hitchings died in hospital today, bringing to four the death toll in a suburban York Township home that was filled with carbon monoxide gas fumes last night.

Mrs. Edith Hitchins, 36, and two other of her sons, four-year-old Kenneth and 18-months-old Jackie, were found dead last night when the house was broken into after neighbors became alarmed. William Hitchins was taken to hospital in critical condition and given a blood transfusion but he succumbed within a few hours.

The father is in the Royal Canadian Navy and is stationed at an Eastern Canadian port.

The body of the mother was found by neighbors on a couch in the main floor of the home. The

ONTARIO BRIGADE ON EXERCISES IN DEFENSIVE ZONE

DEAL WITH ENEMY

By EDWIN JOHNSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Sept. 21 —(CP—Cable)—Armed and equipped for its allotted role, an Ontario brigade of the Canadian 2nd Division moved off at dawn today for exercises in the advanced defensive zone.

The convoy of troop carriers, guns and other vehicles streamed along the road for hours displaying the "CZ" divisional identification patch for the first time.

For weeks these men have been learning battle tasks on the parade ground and in lecture rooms. Today they put the lessons to a practical test, and they will live in the defensive positions as if on service against the foe.

They will be called upon to deal with an imaginary enemy air invasion and other problems of open country warfare, returning to their billets at nightfall. These exercises will be carried out in rotation by the other brigades of the division.

PARENTS WILLING TO MEET DEMANDS OF KIDNAPPERS

AD PUT IN PAPER

Hillsborough, Calif., Sept. 21 —(AP)—The safety of kidnapped Marc De Tristan, Jr., was placed ahead of all other considerations today as the three-year-old boy's wealthy family uncompromisingly declared its readiness to meet the beak-nosed abductor's $100,000 ransom demand.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and local police withdrew from the De Tristan home and gave the family a free hand in establishing contact with the dark-complexioned kidnapper.

In a 600-word, typewritten note dropped where the boy was seized yesterday, the De Tristans were directed to get in touch with the kidnapper through an advertisement inserted in a San Francisco paper. This was done.

60 OF GERMAN DESCENT HAVE TRAINING CORPS

Organize Platoon and Are Ready for Active Service With Canadian Corps

U.S. CAPT. IN CHARGE

Listowel, Ont., Sept. 21.—(CP) —Sixty men, most of them of German descent, have set up their own military training corps at near by Kurtzville to prepare for active service.

The men are from 18 to 42 years old, and most of them are farmers. One night each week they gather in Kurtzville to march, drill with rifles and take physical exercises.

Now that harvesting is nearly over, many of them say they would like to join the Canadian Active Service Force to fight against Hitler's Legions.

The Kurtzville group trains as a platoon. Its three subalterns are Harry Lohr, Emerson Ruppel and Reuben Fatum, the men primarily responsible for reorganizing the corps.

'RAF DESTROYING HITLER'S POWER TO WAGE WAR'

Has 'Visited and Bombed' 90 Per Cent of Germany's Synthetic Oil Plants

NAZI PRODUCTION LOW

80 Per Cent of Nazi Regular Oil Refineries Hit, Says Economic Warfare Chief

Durham, England, Sept. 21 —(CP)—The Royal Air Force has "visited and bombed" 90 per cent of Germany's synthetic oil plants and 80 per cent of her regular oil refineries, Hugh Dalton, Minister of Economic Warfare, declared today in a speech at Spennymore near here.

"These targets have been heavily hit, even though production still continues at a reduced rate," he said.

Mr. Dalton added that German air raids "only are increasing our will to fight on until a decisive victory is won" and that the R.A.F. is "destroying Hitler's power to wage war."

BANGOR TWP. MAN FOUND DEAD

John Boyle Suffers Heart Seizure While Attending Bear Trap in Woods

Bancroft, Ont., Sept. 21.—Stricken suddenly with a heart seizure, John Boyle, pioneer resident of Bangor Township was found dead yesterday afternoon in a woods a short distance from his home.

Dr. O. W. Anderson, coroner, after investigating the circumstances surrounding the death decided that no inquest would be necessary.

The late Mr. Boyle left his home early yesterday morning to investigate a bear-trap he had set in his woods. Failing to return by noon, a son, George Boyle, instituted a search and found the body of his father lying in a pathway in the woods near the trap.

The deceased had attended Coe Hill Fair earlier in the week and had appeared to be in the best of health. Cause of death was attributed to heart failure.

SIX YOUNG MEN KILLED IN CRASH

New Kensington, Pa., Sept. 21 (AP).—Six young men were killed early today in the head on collision of two automobiles near this western Pennsylvania town 20 miles north of Pittsburgh. The autos were wedged so tightly together that a wrecking crew had difficulty in prying them apart. Both caught fire but the blaze was quickly extinguished.

The victims were:

Argentina Learns War Lessons Rearmament Costs $330,000,000

By HAROLD MILKS

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Buenos Aires, Sept. 21 (AP).—Argentina is working at top speed on a five-year rearmament program to cost 1,100,000,000 pesos (about $330,000,000).

Settlement of the recent political crisis precipitated by an army land purchase scandal gave the go-ahead signal for the vast program and technical experts now are preparing details for presentation to the national legislature.

The directing heads are Gen. Juan Tonnazi, Minister of War, and Navy Minister Mario Fincati, appointed to the cabinet by Vice-President Ramon Castillo, acting with full powers from the ailing president, Roberto M. Ortiz.

It is known they have borrowed heavily from the lessons learned from France in specifying heavy purchases of modern aircraft, anti-aircraft artillery and mechanized equipment.

Paralleling the five-year plan of defensive rearmament to make Argentina the ranking military power of South America is a supplementary program for speeding internal development of sources of supply for small arms, munitions, gun powder and small warships.

Well-informed sources say the most pressing item is obtaining some 500 new warplanes of all types for the army and navy, which would be more than double the present air strength.

Straits of Dover Scanned for Signs Of German Thrust

Comparative Quiet Enjoyed in London During Night, Only Two Small Raids Being Reported

London, Sept. 21—(CP)—Royal Air Force bombers renewed their pounding of German "invasion bases" on the French coast as Nazi raiders completed their second week of dusk-to-dawn forays over London with blows at the central, east and south parts of the city last night and early today.

British defenders, reporting a "marked improvement" in English Channel weather this morning after three days of gales and high waves, scanned the Straits of Dover for any sign of a German thrust by sea.

The southwest wind subsided considerably and visibility was reported fair, although the sea was somewhat rough in mid-channel.

Observers on the cliffs said the Royal Air Force concentrated a heavy assault on the Dunkerque and Calais areas of coastal France, where the Germans are reported gathering men and machinery for an invasion attempt.

Although the watchers said the sound of bombing and anti-aircraft fire did not reach the intensity of attacks of the three previous nights, bright bursts of flame rose from the coast to indicate new fires there had been set.

The 14th consecutive night of German assaults on London brought only two raids instead of the continuous hammering which has characterized most of the previous attacks.

After a lull in the middle of the night, the Nazis returned to strike anew, and at least half a dozen large calibre bombs exploded in central London early today.

An official communique said preliminary reports indicated casualties were "rather less than on previous nights".

EARL OF ATHLONE REVIEWS TROOPS

Quebec, Sept. 21—The Governor-General, the Earl of Athlone, passed in review Friday the Canadian Active Service Force and Non-Permanent Active Militia battalions of the 8th Royal Rifles of Canada.

The Viceroy, accompanied by Brigadier General E. J. Renaud, Officer Commanding of Military District No. 5, and Major-General T. L. Tremblay, Inspector-General of Force in Eastern Canada, took the march past salute at Earl Grey Terrace, close to the spot where General Wolfe defeated General Montcalm in the battle for Canada in 1759.

More than 1,500 soldiers took part in the parade which marched through one of the city's main thoroughfares before swinging on to the Plains of Abraham.

54,547 Tons Shipping Including 10 British Ships Last Week Sept. 9

(By The Canadian Press)

The sinking of two merchant ships was reported from neutral sources in the week ending Sept 20. They were the 6,000-ton Spanish freighter Cabo Tortosa, torpedoed off the Spanish coast Sept. 19, and the Panamanian tanker Beme, reported by New York marine circles to have been sunk in the Mediterranean July 11. The Beme was a vessel of 3,039 tons.

Most ship singings do not become known individually on account of the British Admiralty's wartime policy of announcing only total tonnage sunk in a week. The Admiralty's summary for the week ending Sept. 9 issued Sept. 17, listed the sinking of ten British, four allied and two neutral merchant ships in the period, with a total tonnage of 54,547 tons which was slightly more than the weekly average of 53,000 tons since the war began.

50 Tons Food Sent Weekly To War Prisoners

Winnipeg, Sept. 21—(CP)— Dr. Fred Routley, national commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross, said Friday night that the society has been committed to an expenditure of $2,000,000, unforeseen six weeks ago. He addressed several hundred campaign organizers and volunteer canvassers here, before leaving for Toronto by airplane.

Guarantees to purchase 50 tons of food weekly for prisoners of war and purchase of material for the making of 500,000 articles of clothing for refugees in Great Britain created the situation, he said.

Stressing the emergency nature of Red Cross policy and the impossibility of maintaining a budget, Dr. Routley appealed for public response to the Red Cross drive for funds.

"If the Canadian public should give $10,000,000 instead of the minimum quota of $5,000,000 asked in the Red Cross campaign, I can say that every dollar would be used wisely and advantageously toward the relief of suffering in the Motherland alone."

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

LUNGE SEIZES PLUG DANGLING OVER BOAT

The old story, "When a man bites a dog it's news" was brought to mind in the Peterboro district the other day, for when a fish bites a man it should be just as eligible as copy.

According to a story in the Peterboro Examiner a Mr. Charlie Nixon, holidaying from Grafton's Store, had the unhappy experience of being attacked by a fish on Thursday evening. Mr. Nixon, fishing with Mrs. Nixon on Chemong Lake, was just starting his motor when a lunge weighing some 13 pounds, seized a plug that was dangling over the side of the boat. Not being satisfied with merely taking the Nixons aback, the fish proceeded to come aboard and actually landed in the boat.

The story ends happily, however, for Mr. Nixon finally succeeded in getting the fish into the water and then back into the boat in the approved Nixon fashion. Their catch all told was four. Their respective weights were 13, 12, 9 and 7 pounds.

RED CROSS WORKERS ASKED TO CONVENE

All canvassers for the forthcoming Red Cross campaign in Belleville are requested to meet at the Y.M.C.A. at 8.00 p.m. on Monday evening in order to receive instructions pertaining to their duties during the drive. Final instructions as to the method of collections and districts allotted to the individual campaign workers will be announced and it is therefore important that all workers be on hand, Campaign Chairman Howard Clarke announced this morning. A Dominion-wide campaign to raise funds for the efforts of the Canadian Red Cross will be launched in the near future and a generous response is solicited.

Good Rich Workers Donate Ambulance

On behalf of the 350 employees of the Good Rich Oil Company and the Good Rich Refining Company, Miss I. Pretty recently presented to Dr. F. N. Routley, National Commissioner for the Canadian Red Cross Society, a standard type military purpose ambulance, fully equipped for overseas service. The idea of raising money to buy this ambulance originated among the employees themselves. By personal contributions, and from the proceeds of a garden party held at the company's headquarters at Port Credit, as well as by promoting various sporting events, the money required was raised in two weeks.

Dr. Routley, in accepting the ambulance on behalf of the Canadian Red Cross Society highly commended the initiative and enterprise of all those concerned in it; and expressed hope that the lead given by the Good Rich Oil Company employees would inspire others to similar endeavors.

The Brotherhood Of Victoria Ave. Church Has Opening Banquet

The Brotherhood of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church enjoyed a large attendance at their opening banquet on Friday evening. Mr. J. R. Pickering, district inspector of public schools, gave an interesting address on "Canadian Hymn Writers". Referring to the Canadian Baptist hymnary the speaker quoted with a depth of feeling hymns written by Jos. Scriven, D. A. McGregor, A. D. Watson, J. S. Cook, R. Roberts and J. L. Milligan, all Canadian poets who had contributed beautiful poems of praise to the Almighty. Mr. Pickering gave short biographical sketches of the poets' lives and it was interesting to note that one of the poets, J. L. Milligan, had been a newspaper man and had, in fact, worked at one time for the Belleville Intelligencer.

Mr. T. Gerow acted as song leader for the evening. The pastor, Rev. C. T. Olmstead, conducted the worship service, reading portions of St. Paul's epistle to the Romans, chapters 11 and 12. Two pleasing piano solos were heard when Mr. John Jury played "Melody" and "Andante". Several items of business were disposed of with the president, Mr. Chas. Franklin, in charge.

Business, Industry Approve Action Of Federal Gov't.

Belleville business and industry placed their official stamp of approval on the Federal Government's decision, enacted under the War Measure's Act, to continue Daylight Saving indefinitely in municipalities where it is in force, today.

A consensus of opinion secured today from prominent businessmen and industrialists revealed a firm approval of the decision to continue the scheme.

"I can't see what difference it will really make to our firm" a manufacturer declared," but I believe the earlier closing will be enjoyed by all of our employees."

Mayor Glen Thompson, also voiced approval of the measure." As a War Measures Act, I think the suggestion is alright," he said. "As I understand it, the government has the conservation of electric power in mind, and in my opinion, this will be a great factor in inducing new industries to start in cities and towns, where power has been stretched to the limit."

Parents Protest to Board Regarding School Re-zoning In Section of Murney Ward

Delegation Before Board of Education Up in Arms as Children Compelled to Attend King George School

SCHOOL OVER-TAXED

Lack of Accommodation at Queen Mary School is Blamed for Forced Re-Zoning in West Belleville

In protest to the forced action of the Belleville Board of Education in sending their children to King George School instead of Queen Mary, a delegation of representative citizens lodged a strong appeal to the Board of Education last evening to, in some measure, eliminate the existing conditions whereby the children residing in parts of Murney Ward are compelled to traverse long distances to King George School, owing to the new school zoning, which was made necessary owing to Queen Mary School being overcrowded.

"My daughter must take her cold lunch to school," complained one irritated mother. "My son's nerves are getting the better of him, as he has to rise earlier and run home and back at noon hour," complained another father. "What's going to happen in the winter-time when the snow is deep and my little girl has to plod over a mile and one-half to attend King George School just because the city won't make the necessary additions to Queen Mary School," added another member of the delegation, when a petition signed by 86 residents of Murray Ward, whose children have been removed from Queen Mary School and sent to King George School owing to the overcrowding of the former school, was presented to the Board of Education last evening in protest of the transfer of these pupils.

Enlargement Rejected

In reply Chairman Reg. Moncrieff pointed out that efforts to enlarge Queen Mary School on the part of the Board of Education a year ago, had been rejected by the city council. "We foresaw the increase of pupils and hoped to be able to take care of the additional number when the time came, but the council would not adhere to our pleadings. Now it is necessary to re-zone parts of Murney Ward as Queen Mary School is overtaxed. It is unfortunate that your children are handicapped, but the only redress your delegation has is to present your case to the council," explained Chairman Moncrieff.

"In the meantime the health of our children is being impaired through no fault of ours," interrupted another ratepayer.

The delegation was represented by R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.L.A. "I have a petition of protest here signed by 86 residents of West Belleville protesting against your Board compelling their children being sent to King George School instead of Queen Mary, which after all is their closest school property."

The signed protest was read and given to the Board.

Elements Are Dangerous

"Within your legal rights you can re-zone the city for school purposes, but this will work a hardship on the smaller children, some of whom are now forced to walk over a mile and one-half to school at King George. Also they must cross a Provincial Highway twice in order to get to that school, besides the dangers in the vicinity of the overhead bridge on North Front Street. These elements are against safety, to say nothing of the inconvenience, while the heavy traffic on North Front Street is dangerous to the tiny tots and therefore this delegation requests your honorable Board permission to continue the attendance of their children at Queen Mary School for another year, just as a temporary measure until enlargements can be made and additions erected to take care of the increased numbers of pupils in that community," appealed Mr. Arnott. Mrs. Walker, Messrs. Stewart, Warham, Ward and Brown all personally appealed to the Board in protest.

"The School Inspector condemned one room at Queen Mary School forcing us to re-zone that section of the city for school purposes this year. If all the parents are in favor of opening this ill-lit room we can take the matter up with the Department of Education, but this is highly improbable. The council refused this Board an addition to Queen Mary School a year ago, now you see the result of that refusal," stated Chairman Moncrieff as he welcomed the delegation and urged they solicit the council in conjunction with the Board of Education regarding the enlarging of Queen Mary School.

Up to Council

"We foresaw this. What we prophesied is here. Now it is up to the council to alleviate the whole situation," stated Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne.

"Yes, if I remember rightly the council turned down the addition to Queen Mary School the same night they voted themselves salaries, after telling us they had to curtail in expenses," added Russell Wotten. "But the council may see the need now, so let us invite this delegation to appeal to the council with us," interrupted Dr. Kinnear.

"We have proposed a bus service for these children four times a day. Of course the matter of a bus service would also have to be taken up with the council, if they do not already see the necessity of an addition to Queen Mary School," pointed out H. B. Petterly.

Another Angle

At this point of discussion, Frank Cushing rose to the question. "Yes, and while on the subject, what about that sidewalk on the west side of the overhead bridge? It must be built some day and I'd also recommend a new type of guard rail over the east side immediately. The present guard rail is not adequate protection for children," stated Mr. Cushing.

At this point Mr. Wotten suggested that the Board and the delegation present wait upon the council regarding an addition to Queen Mary School to alleviate the present undesirable conditions. The delegation agreed and retired.

In committee as a whole later Chairman Moncrieff asked if it were possible to open the auditorium at Queen Mary School, thus assuring appeasement. Principal C. I. Frederick of that school stated he had 410 pupils enrolled in a ten-teacher school already. "It is not fair to the pupils or a teacher to open that auditorium as a class room. The lighting and acoustics are not suitable for a class room," assured Mr. Frederick.

To Petition Council

After considerable discussion, Rev. Mr. Payne moved that the Board of Education, in view of the petition received, petition the city council regarding the erection of a two-roomed addition to Queen Mary School. The motion carried unanimously.

The new boundaries necessitating school children residing in Murney Ward to attend King George School are—"From Coleman Street south to Henry Street, hence west to Murney Street, hence north to West Moira Sreet (both sides) hence west to the city limits (both sides).

Letter to the Editor

Ex-Ald. Thos. H. Marshall Writes

Belleville, Ont., 21st Sept., 1940.

The Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ontario.

Mr. Editor:-

As a citizen and taxpayer of the City of Belleville, and a firm believer in the British democratic way of doing things, I feel that this is an opportune time to bring before the taxpayers a matter that, to my mind, should be dealt with by the Council immediately.

On the 4th day of January 1937, (Municipal Election Day) a question was submitted to the electors in the form following:—"Are you in favour of an application being made to the Legislature to pass an Act reducing the number of members of the Council to six aldermen and a Mayor."

To this question 1740 electors voted in the affirmative and 1415 in the negative. Steps were immediately taken by the 1937 Council to implement the majority vote and a Bill was prepared and submitted to the Ontario Legislature. The Private Bills Committee of the Legislature refused to approve of the Bill, for what reason I am and always have been at a loss to understand as the committee's action was directly opposed to the expressed will of the majority as stated above.

On the 15th day of May 1939 the Council voted themselves a salary of $5.00 a meeting, having as I believe the legal right to do so, but inasmuch as this was never mentioned by any of the candidates for the 1939 Council at the previous election, I feel that in fairness they should not have acted as they did, but should either have submitted a question to the electors asking them if they were in favour of such action being taken or in the alternative each candidate who favoured the proposal should have informed the electors of his attitude before Election Day. I venture to say that if the latter course had been followed few, if any, of the candidates in favour of the salary would have been elected. Since the salary By-law was passed on the 15th May 1939 as aforesaid up to the 30th day of June 1940 (before Council adjourned for the summer recess) the amount paid in salaries to the Council amounted to $4605.00.

On the 8th and 11th days of January 1940 a petition signed by a large number of taxpayers were presented to the council requesting that in view of the expressed desire of the electors in 1937 that another application be made to the Legislature for a Bill to implement the 1937 vote but the Council refused to do it.

Since a Comptroller has been appointed this has relieved the Council of a great many of its former duties, and I believe the appointment was a wise one, and that the Comptroller fills a very necessary office in our City affairs.

If it is the intention of the Council to continue the practice of paying salaries to its members then I feel, especially with the country involved in war, that as a measure of economy if nothing else the Council should be reduced in numbers in accordance with the vote taken in 1937, and that another application should be made to the Legislature wherein the facts outlined above should be brought to its attention.

Yours very truly,
Thos. H. Marshall.

MANY TEACHERS ADDED TO STAFF OF INSTITUTE

This Action Necessary by Board to Replace Those Enlisting and Resigning

NURSE'S REPORT

The advisability of the continuance of the War Training classes, as conducted in the Vocational Training School here during the summer months, or of combining these classes with the conventional night school classes was discussed at the initial meeting of the Board of Education held in the Board room following the summer vacation period last evening. A full attendance of the Board was announced.

The question of continuing the War Training classes was discussed and then left in abeyance to be taken up with Inspector Moon of the Department of Education upon his inspection here next week. The matter of subsidization and continuance will be left to Inspector Moon's digression, with J. W. Deacon as chairman to ascertain the question of continuance or affiliation with the regular night school classes.

Many Replacements

Several new names were added to the city's various teaching staffs to replace the vacancies left by several teachers who have volunteered for active service and others, who have resigned. After over 40 years of faithful service the resignation of Miss E. E. Styles, who was a valued member of Queen Mary School staff, was accepted with reluctance. Miss L. Arkils and Miss Mae Stevenson were added to the staff of Queen Victoria School temporarily to fill the vacancies left by the enlistments of Messrs. Jack Cousins and Bert Frink. Miss Alice Heasman and Miss Mary Mangold were also taken on to fill other vacancies. Mr. George T. Hosie, was appointed temporarily as science teacher at the Belleville Collegiate Institute at a salary of $1,700, while Harry Bates will replace Lieut. E. Fairman, who has enlisted with the 3-47th Battery.

Supply teachers whose names were added to the conventional list were Mrs. Geo. Gay, Mrs. Carl Read, Mrs. Laura Ragsdale, Mrs. Ada MacDonald, Mrs. Irene Weir and Robert Hinchey.

The summer accounts, amounting to $6672.90 were passed, while an order for 800 tons of soft coal, at $7.80 per ton, was given the Conger Coal Company, as well as an order for 100 tons of better grade coal at $10.90 per ton. In both incidents the above tender was the lowest received.

Nurse's Report

Miss E. A. Earshman, public school nurse, tendered her initial report since the opening of the present school semester. During the first two weeks of the school year, Miss Earshman made 18 visits to local schools during which time 43 post-vacation inspections were made and a total of 1533 children were examined. Twenty-one visits to homes were also made by Miss Earshman during this period. It was found necessary to have 33 exclusions from our schools owing to ill health. Dental clinics were opened at Queen Mary and King George schools. Miss Earshman also revealed, that through the efforts of the local Rotary Club several tonsil cases had been successfully completed during the summer vacation period at no cost to the student pupils or their parents.

PLOUGHING MATCH AT ST. THOMAS

Event Next Month Will be the Biggest Evver Held in Province

St. Thomas, Sept. 21 (CP).—The 1940 international ploughing match next month will set up several records for the big anual event. Already there is the largest exhibition list on record for any international, more tractors and teams will be employed than at any other match and more new machinery will be seen in operation for the first time.

It would probably be a poor match if there were not some inconveniences to be met though. This year it is the weatherman.

Rain has prevented a large portion of the crop on the grounds from being removed, and in addition rank growth following the crop is making it necessary to mow the entire 500 acres of ground. Machinery companies have co-operated in this problem by loaning mowers to do the cutting. Turf will have to be raked and the cuttings gathered up and taken away to be burned.

F. S. Thomas, agricultural representative in Elgin, and secretary of the local match committee said that they are fortunate in locating plenty of water on the Parish farm, part of the mental hospital acreage, and a well has been sunk within 100 feet of the location of the match headquarters.

In order to carry this water to the concessions, to the machinery row and other features of the exhibition, 3,000 feet of pipe will be employed. It is hoped to have this work done by Oct. 5, when the exhibitors and grounds committee start active work.

Mr. Thomas stated that the total value of the exhibited machinery will run to three-quarters of a million dollars.

Congregational Rally Of Tabernacle Church Well Attended

The Tabernacle United Church held a congregational rally last night. An excellent dinner was served by Mrs. Shorey's and Mrs. Duff's group. After supper devotions were conducted by the minister, Rev. D. T. McClintock after which Mr. Grafton led in prayer.

The guest speaker was Rev. C. D. McLellan of Grace Church, Napanee. His subject was "The Efficient Church." Four features of an effective church were mentioned. A responsible membership, a consecrated membership and a courageous membership and a worshipping membership. Each member should feel responsible for his share of the work should use his gifts for its service, should be courageous in living the Christian in all situations, and should nourish his life to this end by his worship of God in His house.

The congregation expressed its high appreciations for this excellent address and of the presence of Mrs. McLellan.

The following persons then gave reports for the different organizations, reviewing the past of the year and giving the plans for the future: For the Session, Mr. R. Edmondson; for the Committee of Stewards, Mr. Cecil Lent; for the M. & M. Committee, Mrs. Fisher; for the S. S., Mr. A. D. Archibald; for the Boys' Work, Mr. R. Edmondson; for the W. A., Mrs. Fisher; for the Comrade Club, Mrs. Irwin; for the W.M.S., Mrs. Bailey; for the Mission Circle, Mrs. Dougherty. These reports were encouraging retrospectively and prospectively and the congregation is looking forward with interest to a grand rally Sunday morning of the whole church.

QUEBEC PREMIER ILL

Montreal, Sept. 21—(CP)—Premier Adelard Godbout of Quebec was taken suddenly ill here last night. He was to deliver an address at a dinner here launching the Canadian Red Cross Society's $1,000,000 drive in the province.

It was anounced later at the dinner that the Premier had been ordered to bed by his physician who said he was threatened with an attack of grippe.

Canada To Be Rallying Point for Free Netherlanders

Halifax, Sept. 21—(CP)—Canada would be the rallying point for all free Netherlanders in North America, Lt. Col. G. J. Sas of the Dutch General Staff said in an interview here Friday. Col. Sas, who is on his way to Ottawa from London, has been appointed by The Netherlands government to command all Dutch troops in Canada.

"The Netherlands and Canadian governments are acting in close cooperation," he said. Arrangements had been made for all Netherlanders residing in the United States who wished to enlist in the Dutch army to come to Canada where they would be trained.

Col. Sas, former military attache of The Netherlands legation at Berlin, said Hitler's chances of a successful invasion of Britain were growing less each day. "He has put it off too late. It would be madness now. Only a man who has no regard whatever for the value of human life would consider such an attempt at this time of year."

SECOND WAR LOAN CLOSED AT NOON

Heavy Volume of Small Subscriptions Will Likely Oversubscribe Issue of $300,000,000

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—(CP)—Oversubscription of Canada's $300,000,000 war loan, second loan of the war, became apparent shortly before subscription books were due to close today, Bank of Canada officials informed The Canadian Press.

Officials, working on last-minute subscriptions, could not say immediately to what extent the loan had been oversubscribed. Subscription books close at 12 o'clock local time all across Canada, concluding the campaign started Sept. 9.

A statement covering the final subscriptions will be issued later today.

The Bank of Canada announced last night that reports from all parts of Canada indicated a heavy volume of small subscriptions yesterday such as had been noted all week and officials hoped for a "substantial oversubscription" of the issue.

Less than $6,000,000 remained to be subscribed Thursday night when latest figures were disclosed. Yesterday's sales will be added to today's and the grand total announced after closing of the books, after the two-week campaign. The first loan for $200,000,000 was oversubscribed by $60,000,000.

Canadians are offered another means of helping in the war effort by loaning their money in small amounts to the government under a new campaign announced last night by the National War Savings Committee.

It will be a national "smash Hitler" campaign in which an army of 2,000,000 regular "war savers" will be sought.

The committee has developed a special pledge from which will be delivered by mail to 2,500,000 householders from coast to coast. Using this form, a bank depositor will be able to instruct his or her bank to invest in one or more war savings certificates on the 15th of every month.

Once the pledge is signed and handed to the bank, the regular purchase of war savings certificates becomes automatic.

Battalion Parade Of A.L.I. Scheduled For Monday Night

A battalion parade, in full battle dress, of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) unit will be held in Belleville on Monday night, Lieut.-Col. A. B. Gribble announced today.

"In all probability the customary route of parade will be on the east hill and down Front St. We are holding a battalion parade following two weeks of elementary training at the N.P.A.M. camp at Petawawa in order that the citizens may see the progress our unit as a whole has made in military precision," added Col. Gribble as he requested a full turnout of the Argyll Infantry unit for Monday night's battle dress parade. Both battalion bands will parade with the unit.

"Regarding the compulsory training regulations, a number of young men to receive their notices to report for training have approached me relative to the procedure employed in the matter of medical examination. I might say that any authorized medical practitioner in good standing is authorized to complete the individual's medical examination. It does not necessarily have to be a military physician," Lieut.-Col. Gribble told the Ontario Intelligencer today.

"In cases where young men have received notification to report for compulsory training and who have completed their two weeks military training at Petawawa, under the N.P.A.M. program, all these men have to do is fill the card regarding their military activities to date and return the card to the printed address," added Lieut.-Col. Gribble in answer to numerous questions received pertaining to this subject.

Picton and District

Picton.—Hitler will be burned on the last night of Picton Fair, Sept. 28. This is part of a campaign by the local committee to promote the sale of war saving stamps here. On both days of the fair the committee plans to have a booth with a partly completed coffin containing an effigy of Hitler inside, and surrounded by pictures depicting his destructive work. Each person purchasing a war saving stamp is to receive a nail which he will drive into Hitler's coffin until it is completely built. On Saturday evening the drive will culminate with a parade to the grandstand for a funeral "oration" and Hitler will be burned. The committee expects to sell hundreds of stamps to those anxious to drive a nail into Hitler's coffin.

Conditions Given.

Condition sgoverning the employment of local labor at the Picton Gunnry and Bombing School were given County Council yesterday by Reeve H. Weese following an interview with the head of Hill, Clark, Francis, contractors, for erection of the buildings. This investigation followed discussion at Wednesday's session. Mr. Weese reported that 329 men are now employed. Twenty key men came with the company and of the 219, 160 are Prince Edward County men.

Questioning on the matter of boarding workmen in town, Mr. Weese was informed that when the project is fully under way between six and seven hundred men would be employed. This necessitates special accommodation and in order to secure a firm to provide accommodation and meals it is necessary to guarantee a certain number of boarders.

The reason some local men had not been able to secure work though experienced, was laid to the difficulty of getting lumber here. Some, which could not be secured in Ontario had to be ordered from the coast, and this caused a delay.

Expert carpenters are needed as soon as sufficient lumber is here and county men will be given preference, it was stated.

At present, foundations for the buildings are being laid, and splendid progress has been made.

Fire At School.

The public school at Milford was menaced by fire on Wednesday. Rubbish had been burned in a bonfire on the grounds and it is alleged that some live coals had been carried to a pile of stumps near the school and ignited them. These were of light wood for starting fires and burned fast. An alarm was soon raised and a gang of men attending an auction sale in the village subdued the conflagration which might have been serious. The side wall of the school, which was hastily evacuated by the pupils, was scorched. The teacher, Ralph Reynolds, suffered a scorched face and several of those putting the stumps away suffered minor burns.

Tendered Shower.

Cherry Valley hall was the scene of a miscellaneous shower on Wednesday evening, honoring Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Thompson who were recently married, the bride being Ida Rosebush of Cherry Valley and the groom a native of Napanee but now employed here.

The gifts were presented in a novel manner. From a sprinkling can decorated in pink and yellow, streamers extended down to the large piles of prettily wrapped gifts on the floor. The honored couple proceeded to the platform to the strains of the wedding march played by F. E. Rice and were seated in chairs decorated in pink with lovely flowers in the background. Mrs. Willard Metcalfe and Miss Josie Dodds assisted in opening the variety of gifts, for which the recipients expressed their thanks, and were greeted with "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows".

Mr. Rice presided for the program which included selections by an orchestra composed of Lyall Hicks, Norbert Kavanagh, Larry Bell and Mrs. G. Kavanagh. Mr Rice gave a humorous reading and sang two numbers. Mrs. A. Beckwith sang and the Bell sisters gave a duet. Mrs. Metcalfe read a "Psalm of Marriage" with Mrs. E. Foster playing a soft musical accompaniment, and she also read the presentation address. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Metcalfe, Josie Dodds, Mary Wharmby, Mrs. Arthur Fennell, Phil Dodds, Artie Beckwith, Mary Bell, Harold Fennell. A short period of dancing followed.

Reeve James Barber was appointed a member of the Old Age Pensions and Mothers' Allowance Boards by County Council on Thursday. He succeeds the late John A. Walker of Ameliasburg.

ARTIST AWAITS CALL OF R.C.A.F.

George Wally of New York Has Run Gamut of Achievements

Montreal, Sept. 20 —(CP)— Running the gamut of achievements from Golden Gloves boxing champion to violinist in a symphony orchestra, George Wally of New York is in Montreal awaiting a call from the Royal Canadian Air Force so he may crown his list of accomplishments by serving Canada as an airman.

Wally came here from Hollywood where he has been assistant art director at the Universal Studios for five years. He taught Deanna Durbin to draw while working on her sets.

Before that he was an artist in New York. At one time Mrs. Sarah Delano Roosevelt, mother of President Roosevelt, sat for him for a portrait. He won a Golden Gloves championship in 1932 and followed it up with a season under Mischa Pelz in the Portland, Ore., symphony orchestra.

In between all this he had time to discover and perfect a system of teaching the blind to draw and paint without the aid of Braille.

Hopes to Train as Pilot

Now he has passed his medical examination for the air force. He hopes to train as a pilot, having had some elementary flight instruction in California.

Wally considers his art system for the blind his proudest accomplishment. He got the idea while sketching characters in New York streets, his hand in his pocket to avoid notice.

"I merely transferred the mental picture onto the pad in my pocket," he explains, "by using my fingers and a pencil as a medium."

His system involves a series of raised dots, similar to Braille, which are used to divide the drawing paper by parallel lines. Once the student has mastered the art of drawing parallels, he is on his way to being able to draw and reproduce on paper objects which he can never see.

Hon. C. G. Power, Air Minister, States 16,600 of Number in Air Training Scheme

Ottawa, Sept. 21 (CP)—Well over half of the personnel of the Royal Canadian Air Force are engaged on the operation of the British Commonwealth Air Training plan, either as recruits in training or as instructors, administrative staff and maintenance staff, according to figures released by Hon. C. G. Power, Minister of Defence for Air.

The Minister said the total strength of the R.C.A.F. on Oct. 1st would be 26,500 of whom 16,600 are engaged on the training scheme.

The remainder, numbering 9,900 are on the home war establishment of the Royal Canadian Air Force and with the three squadrons serving overseas, R.C.A.F. personnel overseas numbers something over 1,000 and more than 8,000 men are engaged on the air defences of Canada.

Squadrons serving on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts are included in this number, as well as administrative and other personnel at Ottawa and in other parts of Canada whose duties pertain to home defence and not to training.

B.C.I. TO ASSIST THE WAR EFFORT

Students Have as Objective the Sale of $15,000 War Savings Stamps

An objective of $15,000.00 in War Savings Stamps and Certificates is being sought by the student body of the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School in an effort to raise that sum towards Canada's war effort during the next school term, Principal P. C. MacLaurin told the members of the Board of Education during their initial meeting, following the re-opening of the school term, last evening.

"Already the students have sold a total of $838.75 in both stamps and certificates, $398.25 being in War Savings Stamps and $440.50 being as the result of their canvas and sale of War Savings Certificates," Mr. MacLaurin proudly revealed to the Board.

When informed the student body of the B.C.I. & V.S. had pledged themselves to sell $15,000.00 worth of Canada's war effort savings, the members of the Board were high in their praises and congratulated the pupils through their Principal. "We merely desire to bring this point before the public so that they may know just what the students are doing and that they have the sanction of this Board," explained Mr. MacLaurin.

Mr. C. I. Frederick, principal at Queen Mary School, revealed that the students at his school had pledged themselves, as a body, to purchase at least $40.00 worth of War Savings Stamps every month during the school year as their contribution.

THE RED CROSS APPEALS

A challenge to the people of Canada, an emergency call for five million dollars, is being made for the Canadian Red Cross. That challenge is the assurance that the people of Canada will rise to the occasion and the duty which is theirs and give generously.

The reason is clear. The Red Cross performs services in such an hour as this which symbolizes the high idealism of our democracy and its love of humanity. What the Red Cross has done, what it is qualified to do, is so well known that there can be but one answer to the appeal for five million dollars for the Canadian Society and that is that the people will give generously.

Those who have read the daily stories in the newspapers of the course of the war realize full well the need in a time of war and will require no more prompting than that of their own sense of responsibility and duty to the nation and the Empire, to the men who are serving for the preservation of liberty and to the men, women and children who have suffered in maintaining British morale despite the attacks of the savage foe on their homes, to assure the success of the appeal.

DOG SAVES FARMER'S LIFE

Down at Adolphustown a few days ago, a farmer was leading a bull from the barn when all at once it made a savage attack knocking the farmer to the ground and started goring him. Fortunately a neighbor came along at the time accompanied by his dog. The dog immediately leaped at the bull and diverted its attention so that the injured man was helped from the ground and brought to safety.

Once again we have a demonstration of a dog's service to man. In this case the dog probably saved the life of a man not its master but that made no difference. At the bid of its owner it leaped into action against a large adversary and performed its duty in a manner that brings a glow of satisfaction to all dog lovers.

This is not an isolated case whereby the lives of humans have been saved by the intelligence and fearlessness of a dog. Every once in a while we read in the newspapers of a child that has been dragged from water where it might have drowned except for the action of the dog or the whining of a dog has awakened a family in time to escape from a burning house.

In all the animal kingdom there is no animal which is so universally loved as the dog, be it pure bred or just plain dog. The reason for this is probably the life-long affection the dog gives in return for kindness and food. A quiet, well-mannered dog is a grand companion for a boy or man. For the boy he provides a wholesome object for affection that most normal boys require while for the man there is a depth of satisfaction in possessing the whole-hearted affection of a dog that nothing else can give. The nudge on the arm by the wet nose in a hint that the dog wants a romp or a tidbit from the table, although many frown on this habit, the glow of devotion from deep brown eyes and the playful spirit that only illness can quench are ample compensations to the man or woman who sincerely loves animals.

We do not know what the reactions of the man at Adolphustown who owes his life to a dog may be but we can guess that all dogs will have a big place in his affections from now on.

NATIONWIDE FOOD FORTIFICATION URGED IN U.S.

Fortified foods have been urged under a revolutionary national defence health plan upon the U. S. Government by the California Institute of Technology. This would mean the fortification of staple foods on a national basis with vitamins and minerals during the process of making. It is said that the U. S. nation would be "sparked" into increased efficiency.

Eating habits would not be changed as foods would look and taste the same as before.

Scientists claim that the nation's vigor could be stepped up immediately and Americans would become a taller, stronger and stronger-lived race. The cost of fortification would not be more than a dollar a year per person, if the program was adopted on a national scale.

The claim has been made that "probably one half of the nation is poorly nourished, largely because of a chronic vitamin famine. The scientists say that even the best of diets lack the vitamins and other essentials required for the most buoyant possible state of health and vitality."

This food proposal is important in the light of the defences of a people. The report says that "the new knowledge of nutrition can make its contribution to our national defence preparations by providing freedom from fatigue, capacity for work under pressure and the feeling of wellbeing. These things constitute one of the chief determining factors in the ability of a nation to rise to an emergency.

Here is how the report puts it. "As the spark is necessary to release the energy in an automobile, so the vitamins release the energy in our food for all vital processes. Today a scientific analysis breaks down the human diet into calories, protein, calcium, iron, iodine and not less than six of the ten known vitamins.

It is said there is only one effective way to improve nutrition—by adding vitamins and minerals to such foods as flour, corn meal and sugar and also to some canned and bottled goods at the sources where they are processed.

Reference is made to the revelations due to the expansion of military forces. Airplane pilots, it says, require to have special attention paid to their intake of vitamin A, a deficiency of which causes night blindness. A pilot who relied on butter alone for his vitamin A would have to eat at least fifteen squares, although the same amount of vitamin in contained in a drop of halibut liver oil. It would be necessary to eat 25 slices of whole wheat bread or 125 slices of white bread for an adequate daily vitamin B1 intake. But an adequate daily B1 ration is contained in only two teaspoons of dried brewers' yeast.

Tragically enough mankind grows more than enough vitamins but the most of them are fed to animals in their feeds, the report indicates.

STREET NAMES IN PRAGUE

London Times.

The names of the streets in Prague have been altered so that none of them shall have British or French associations. Chester street has become Emden street, London street is Munich street. A tribute has been paid to the neutrality of Eire, for English street has been changed to Irish street; but a change from Washington Square to Weber Square suggests that the neutrality of the United States has been ignored. Even the concern of a former President of the United States about the food supplies of German-occupied countries leaves the German authorities in Prague unmoved. Hoover street is to be known as Richard Wagner street. About 2,000 plate-names of streets in Prague are being displaced by bilingual plate-names in German and Czech.

Wit of the Irish

(From the Eganville Leader.)

Anecdotes about the sayings and doings in Eganville in those good old days before radios, telephones and automobiles destroyed individual and local wit, if collected together in one volume, would make the so-called wisecracks of today's screen and radio seem puny and sick. For instance, there is a story told about the late Con McElligott, able and genial proprietor of the Ottawa House. Once a bumptious and stupid traveller from the city enquired loftily from Con: "Have you a room with a bath?"

"Yes, certainly," came back Con, "but there is no bed in it."

Then there was James Malloy, whose advancing age never impaired his wit. Once he was working for the late Michael Kelly on the Kelly farm in Grattan. Farm work begins early—too early as far as Jim was concerned. "Get up, Jim!" said Mrs. Kelly, one morning about 4.00 o'clock. "It's time for breakfast."

"Thank you, ma'am," replied Jim, "but I've just had my supper.'

Another old chap whose name has been lost was driving home one night in the wagon with his wife. Deaf to her scolding, he had stayed late at the bar, and now he was in disgrace. His better half would not speak to him. Gradually as the wagon jolted along a full moon climbed into the sky. From it the husband gained inspiration. "Well," he began, "the moon is full, I'm full, and", turning to his wife's averted countenance, "you are beauti—full." Who could resist such wit? Wifey melted and they bumped along in peace and happiness.

'I AM GLAD THAT I WAS BORN WHEN I WAS'

By E. C. BENTLEY
In The London Listener

My own strong feeling is that I am glad I was born when I was. I have that feeling for more than one reason; but the principal reason dates from the time when we as a nation decided to take our stand, cost what it might, against the barbarians.

Few of us I dare say, care to deal in the language of sentimental exaggeration on this subject, because it would be waste of breath, or of ink. The plain facts about what has been happening, and about our own moral response to those events, do not need any artificial emphasis. Sir Walter Scott made the claim that, if it came to writing in the heroic vein, he could "do the big bow-wow" as well as any man alive; but our difficulty is to find terms that rise to the height of the situation that we are in. Anyhow, it is my difficulty; and it is my own opinion and preference that I have been invited to explain. I think, and indeed I know, that we are living as a nation in conditions of greater danger and higher moral tension than we have ever known in the past. If we showed any signs of depression or of fear on that account, I should not be glad that I was born when I was. As things are, I exult in the fact.

It may be pointed out—I have pointed it out to myself—that I am not young enough to be a combatant, which may help to reconcile me to the situation. The shortest of the various answers to that reminder is, that I am not reconciled to it at all—I merely take a pride in belonging to a country that is facing that situation as my country is.

The British people are not all saints and heroes: I am one of them, and I know. But just now they are determined to have it out with a thing which they feel from the bottom of their hearts to be utterly and essentially evil. In all our fighting history we have never had such a cause; and I am glad to have been born in the time which has seen us espouse it.

* * *

Lord Gort, in an address which he delivered lately, said that we were engaged in a Crusade: and he is not the first to have said it. In my own opinion, we are committed to something more satisfactory by far than were the series of expeditions which are known as the Crusades.

To begin with, the Saracen Turks were much more civilized and enlightened opponents than are the hordes of Hitler; and the Crusaders, for all the devotion and the chivalry which inspired their movement, included very many unprincipled and self-seeking bandits who were in the Holy War merely for what they could get out of it in power and plunder. When Godfrey took Jerusalem in 1099, a general massacre of the inhabitants followed: when Saladin recaptured it a century later, there was no massacre.

Another point to be remembered is that the Crusades failed in their object, which was the delivering of Palestine from infidel rule. I think we shall be on safer ground in taking our war against Hitlerism simply for what it is—an explosion of the instinct of civilized humanity in favor of freedom and toleration, and against cruelty, greed and unbridled wickedness in general — what Gladstone once called, in an immeasurably less serious case, "the negation of God erected into a system".

On this ground, then, I should say that the manner in which the whole people has responded to the challenge of Hitlerism is the most impressive thing of the kind that has ever happened among us. Mr. Duff Cooper has drawn a parallel between that response and the way in which England prepared to resist invasion at the time of the Armada. The parallel is a good one; but there is the fact that the nation was divided on the religious question, and that the English Catholics, though the mass of them joined in the resistance to a foreign invader, had no objection at all to the principles of the King of Spain, and believed him to be in the right in the great quarrel that was then convulsing Europe. No one here today takes any such view of Hitler, for I imagine that even the tiny fraction of political imbeciles who used to approve of him have had their eyes opened during the past few months.

As for the danger from Napoleon, our nation was at one in making head against it; but even then it was resistance to an ambitious tyrant only. Not even the most ignorant ever believed Napoleon capable of slaughtering tens of thousands of unarmed men, women and children at a time. The instructed world knew him to be a genius of civil administration, an apostle of tolerance, a ruler whose passion was not for destruction but for building up, and to whom mere hatred and cruelty were despicable. In these cases, our country was moved by the impulse of self-preservation. So it is now, assuredly; but my confident belief is that there is a great deal more in our state of mind than that.

I do not believe any period of the past, even the most highly-regarded, was without crushing disadvantages as a time to live in compared with our own. The more we get to know about the past, the less pleasant it appears.

Look at the Athenians. Not Socrates or Euripides, but the people one had to live with. At their best what a crew! Fickle, thankless and violent; also, in the sympathetic sense, a very hard lot. The Elizabethans, as a nation, were not nearly so happy as we are, war or no war; their politics were savage; even after the Armada, they regarded themselves as second-raters, for the Spaniards included most of the American continent and a large part of Europe in their Empire, while the English had no Empire whatever. The age of the Crusades was also an age of the most detestable wickedness. The society of the 18th century has been described—by Henry James, I think—as "a filthy little pigsty of a world". As for the ages of mere peace and prosperity, they were probably found comfortable enough by the minority that was in the way of enjoying those advantages, but not comfortable to those whose life was that of the slaves' quarters and the ergastula, the slums, the factories and the workhouses.

NO: I am glad that I was born when I was.

Test Diet For Food Allergy or Sensitiveness

There are some individuals who can eat the white of an egg but not the yolk because the yolk is almost solid fat, while others cannot eat the white because it is a protein food but can eat the yolk without any symptoms arising.

This condition of being sensitive to various substances is called an allergic condition and a new specialty in medicine which treats these allergic conditions is called allergy. These specialists are called allergists.

One of the ways of finding if individuals are allergic to certain foods, in that these foods cause upsetments of the stomach and intestine, is by means of test diets.

I have spoken before of the great amount of research work done by Dr. Walter Alvarez on food allergy. Some new findings are reported by Dr. William Lintz, Long Island College of Medicine, in the Gastroenterology (stomach and intestine) Review. His method is to ask the patient to name not only which foods disagree with him, but various members of the different food groups; for instance, under dairy foods distinguish milk, cream, butter, cheese. The patient may be able to eat the white of an egg without discomfort but the yolk will cause distress. Some will say that everything disagrees with them.

The suggestion is that these "allergic" patients be placed on a few simple foods which experience has proven produce the smallest amount of distress or allergic symptoms. Such foods are: rice in all forms, cooked or canned fruits and vegetables (like spinach, asparagus, carrots). The best meats are lamb and chicken. Others which help in making an all round diet are sugar, honey, lemonade and olive oil. If at the end of a week on such a diet all symptoms disappear, the problem as to the cause of the allergic symptoms is solved. Every two days from then on, one new food is added to the list. If a new food causes symptoms, it should be avoided and another tried. The patient keeps a diary and learns which foods cause symptoms and which do not.

If, however, symptoms persist after the week on the trial diet, one item of the suspected food is avoided every two days until symptoms disappear.

The foods found by Dr. Lintz to give the most difficulties are, in their order of difficulty, cabbage, cucumber, cauliflower, milk, eggs, apples, bananas, oranges, fish, potatoes, chocolate, nuts, celery and wheat.

Rural Criticism Of "Gone With The Wind"

Out of the Deep South has come a critic to tell David O. Selznick, producer of "Gone With the Wind," and Margaret Mitchell, its author, exactly what the story is all about. The movie review by one Jack Tarver says Shapiro in his column in the Montreal Gazette, appeared in the esteemed Democrat of Lyons, Alabama. It is an example of "country" writing at its smoothest and best. Listen to some parts:

"Katherine Scarlett O'Hara was our hero. A winsome winch with a figger like a marble statue and a head as hard. Gerald O'Hara was her Pa. By nature he was most animal-like. Proud as a peacock, he roared like a lion, and rode like a dog-and-pony show. After Sherman came he was crazy as a bedbug. Anyway, Scarlett was in love with Ashley Wilkes, who was in love with his cousin, Melanie, who was in love with Ashley, and so they were married. (Ashley and Melanie, in case you're getting confused.) This irritated Scarlett no end and so, in quick succession, she married for spite and cash, respectively, a couple of fellows whose names we didn't get. But then, neither did Scarlett, for long.

"The other major characters were Rhett Butler, Belle Watling and a colored lady exactly like the one on the flapjack box. Rhett, who was somehow strangely reminiscent of Clark Gable, was a cross between Jesse James and Little Boy Blue. If Rhett had joined the Lost Cause in the second reel instead of after the intermission, the Confederacy would have won the war — and Belle. You'd have loved Belle . . . During the siege of Atlanta only three things were running — Belle's place, Prissy's nose, and the laundry that kept Rhett's white suits snow-white.

"Melanie's baby arrived about the same time Sherman did. Both were equally welcome to Scarlett. It was, so far as our painstaking research has revealed, the first baby ever born in Technicolor."

Mr. Tarver, we hasten to admit, is a great critic.

Lavish Spenders

(Calgary Herald)

Some millionaires like plenty of room. One man has an apartment in New York with forty-one rooms and fifteen baths, a private switchboard and twenty-six extension phones. Another has a living room in his apartment which is sixty feet long, twenty-five feet wide and thirty feet high. At a Philadelphia wedding in 1925, the bridegroom's gifts to the bride were valued at $4,000,000. Among them was a pearl necklace which reached the floor.

The oddest spender of all time, perhaps, was Coal Oil Johnny, a naive farmer of Pennsylvania, who found $500,000 hidden in an old safe. He immediately went on a spending spree with it. First thing he did was to buy a locomotive with sleeping and baggage cars and go on a tour of the States. Every city he stopped in, he gave a dinner to anyone who would come. Few of them cost less than $1,000. His money was soon gone and he returned home to take up work as a station agent. Right up to the end, he insisted that he had had a barrel of fun. When people ribbed him about his comedown, he would answer: "Money was made to spend."

It would be nice to say that all this has finished, and that wealthy people use their money for decent purposes. But I regret to report that there are still plenty of $2 cigars sold on this continent, and the odd $2,000,000 yacht changes hands. Last week, a Toronto man paid $12,000 for a bulldog. I wonder where all the money comes from?

A Fair Tourist Rides Across Canada

Miss Mary Bosanquet, of Devizes, Wiltshire, England, has reached Ottawa from Vancouver on horseback, and is about to enter Montreal. This fair cavalier, for all we know, is the first woman to ride across Canada for the fun of the thing. It was in June, 1939, that she left the British Columbia coast and her progress has gone with little public notice because of the war, which overshadows all else. She has had a wonderful journey, she says, the people everywhere being so kind that it was often hard to say good-bye. Crossing the Rockies was the most exciting part and that was the only section in which she had to camp out.

There are many records of long-distance riding, several of these having been discussed by that famous horseman, Roger Pocock, in his book, "Horses." This founder of the Legion of Frontiersmen records that in the late nineties Lieutenant Peschkov, a Cossack officer, rode a Don pony from Vladivostock to St. Petersburg, a world record for a road ride. The story is that Peschkov averaged thirty-eight miles a day for the six thousand miles, but Pocock thinks the average too high, as he himself did 1,370 miles across country with his best horse at twenty-one miles a day. On the whole trip, he made with four successive mounts, the 3,600 miles took two hundred days, which, he says, works out at the poor average of 18 mills. Pocock tells of a constable of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police of Canada, with a 42-pound stock saddle on a buckskin gelding, who rode from Regina to Wood Mountain Post, 132 miles, by sunlight, and the horse bucked him off at the finish. Pocock also states that the trail between Fort Macleod and Calgary, 108 miles, has been ridden in a day by most of the Mounted Police and by cowboys who happened to be going that way in the old horse days.

Concerning six-day rides, the author of "Horses" recalls that Kit Carson, famed character of the American West, carried military despatches from Omaha to Los Angeles and back, about the year 1841, which was a long ride, through hostile Indian tribes, of 4,400 miles. At Los Angeles Carson joined a party of Mexican gentlemen, each taking one saddle horse. The six men rode along the California coast to San Francisco, 600 miles, in six days, and only two of the party changed horses.

Unlike some of these horsemen of the past Miss Bosanquet met with no hostile Indians, but she did have a check when her horse went lame last December. She stopped at a farm on the shores of Lake Huron, remained there for the winter and helped with the haying this summer. She left on August 1 and now is at the capital, with a wealth of experience and a love of Canada. Her notable journey testifies that this is a land in which a woman can safely travel alone at all seasons of the year, even on horseback.

Patriotic Dionne Quintuplets Do Their Bit; Sing For Soldiers, Give Red Cross Ambulance

By WILLIAM A. BAKER, JR.

Central Press Canadian Correspondent.

CALLANDER, Ont.—The Dionne quintuplets are now helping Canada in the war, after reputedly bringing this country's tourist business out of a slump by means of a radio broadcast with their famous doctor, Allan Roy Dafoe.

"This month they are giving the Red Cross an ambulance which will be marked 'Dionne Quintuplets'," Dr. Dafoe said, "and they've already given the Red Cross $1,300.

"They know there's a war," the doctor added, "although we don't let them know much about it. They like to sing for soldiers in the gallery, and we tell them when there are soldiers there.

Dr. Allan Dafoe

Five Little Song Birds

"'Oh, Johnny' is one of the songs they sing for the soldiers," Dr. Dafoe explained, "and they are learning another song now—'There Will Always Be an England'—but they haven't got it down very well yet. I want them to learn it right, so I put them in front of the radio and let them listen. They weren't taught 'Oh, Johnny'; they listened to it on the radio and thought it was fine.

"They like to sing, and we like to have them sing, especially old-fashioned folk songs. One of them Annette, has an organ—they have five organs, in fact—but Annette goes ahead and plays for the others.

"When the war started we had all sorts of offers by people in the United States to take the children away," Dr. Dafoe said. "Those people didn't seem to know that we are just as safe as they are."

A number of families in the United States have offered to adopt the quints. Children from the United States frequently write asking whether they may have one of the five sisters. Many American children request permission to come and live with the quintuplets; others invite the quints to spend their vacation with them.

Visitors may see the famous little girls at 10.30 a.m. and at 3 p.m. at the Dafoe Hospital, just across the road from the storey-and-a-half farmhouse in which they were born and in which their parents live with seven other children.

A nurse always is with the quints in the playground, and frequently their mother or a brother or another sister is there. Visitors, permitted to glimpse the quints for about three minutes from a distance of some 15 feet as they pass along the gallery, often are heard to ask: "Where is the doctor?"

The modest doctor avoids the crowds that hurry past his house in Callander. He visits the hospital, 2½ miles away, early every morning, then unless he has business somewhere he returns to the little office at his home, where his secretary tactfully turns curiosity seekers aside.

The quintuplets have play periods every day, and Dr. Dafoe invites the public to see them. Although the quints are aware of visitors in the gallery, they don't pay any attention, Dr. Dafoe stated.

Quints Kept Busy

"We keep them busy so they don't have time to go around and explore," he commented. "We don't allow them to think they're such fine children—we have them trained that they musn't get gay on that. It's all a matter of training.

During the last two years the quints have had some 1,500 visitors every day during the tourist season from about June 15 to September 15. This is their seventh summer. The only time they ever were away was last summer when they were taken to Toronto to meet King George and Queen Elizabeth. There is no intention of moving the quints at present.

The quints' present wealth is $900,000, according to officials; their annual income during the last three years from all sources was $200,000 and their annual expenses were $50,000. Income from endorsement of commercial products is invested in government bonds. They received $300,000 in one contract from three motion pictures, and $50,000 was received for another production.

Dionnes Like Autos

The quints' father receives $300 a month from the guardianship, also $2,500 a year for serving as guardian. From a souvenir stand near the Dafoe hospital and from concessions and endorsements, the father has an annual income estimated at $15,000.

Before the quints were born, Dionne's income from his farm was probably a few hundred dollars annually. Dionne's only extravagance is said to be a new high-powered American atuomobile every six months or so. Mr. and Mrs. Dionne sometimes are seen by tourists motoring over the good roads which the quints have brought to Callander.

They'll Get Candy Soon

Dr. Dafoe recently retired from the guardianship, but as "physician to the quintuplets" his judgment is generally acknowledged and respected. He has decided to give the quints their first candy this fall. "We think it's about time," he said, "but we'll start it very mildly."

Quietly in his spotless office, looking out past a modern hotel, Dr. Dafoe named the four things he considers most important in taking care of premature children. The quints were seven months' babies.

"Mother's milk comes first," the doctor stated; "second, leave them alone; third, proper heat is necessary—heat and moisture; fourth, if possible, development of nurses trained in this work.

"Their good health comes from proper care and diet altogether. The smallest baby here when a week old weighed 1¼ pounds. All five of them together weighed 9¾ pounds. Now they weigh about 52 or 53 pounds apiece and they are virtually the same in weight and height."

82nd Birthday Celebrated

One of the oldest and most respected ladies in this community, Mrs. Andrews and her great grandson, John Anderson, celebrated their birthdays together Sunday September 15, Mrs. Andrews being 82 the 13th and John, 3 the 16th. It was in the form of a surprise. Two sons and one daughter, Mrs. John Anderson, in whose home she resides on the Third of Thurlow, also a number of grandchildren and great grandchildren were present. The home was tastefully decorated with gladioli and other fall flowers. All guests were assembled by noon and sat down to a sumptuous dinner, the grand old lady taking the seat of honor with John at her side. After dinner all adjourned to the guest room where Mrs. Andrews opened her gifts which were many and beautiful. Singing and music were the order of the afternoon. Mrs. Andrews' eyes were shining with happiness, thankful to be spared so many years with a family she loves and they are so devoted to their mother, grandmother and great grandmother. Mrs. Andrews is blessed with remarkable health, still working in her garden, also reads without glasses, knits and sews. A very delicious tea was served, the table looking very pretty with the birthday cakes gracing each end, the one with Happy birthday and 82, the other with 3 candles. Mrs. Andrews very gracefully cut her cake, while guests sang "Happy Birthday to You". It was sampled by all. Too soon the happy event came to a close and all gathered around Mrs. Andrews and very reverently sang "God be with you Till we Meet Again". Reluctant farewells were said and all returned to their different homes, leaving Mrs. Andrews happy.

Marmora

Marmora — The annual meeting of the Marmora Branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society was held in St. Andrew's United Church on Thursday evening with the president W. J. Cottrell in the chair. Swelling the attendance was a number of children who sang children's hymns while the adults were assembling, with Lucille Green as accompanist. The meeting opened with the singing of "Take time to be Holy," which was followed by the Lord's Prayer. After Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell had offered prayer, all joined in the recital of 23rd Psalm. The minutes of the last annual meeting and treasurer's report were read by the secretary-treasurer, H. W. Sabine. Approximately fourteen dollars was raised locally for the Society's work during the past year.

Rural Dean Caldwell presided for the election of officers which resulted in the re-election of last year's executive as follows: President, W. J. Cottrell; Vice President, L. R. Rundle; Honorary Presidents, Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell and Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher; Secretary-treasurer, H. W. Sabine.

Rev. F. B. Allnutt, B. D., Field Secretary of the Upper Canada Bible Society, who was present, brought greetings from the Society's executive and after expressing his appreciation of the labours of the local branch drew attention to the fact that owing to the war, much less financial assistance for the work of the Bible Society would be forthcoming in England with the result Auxiliaries in Canada, Australia, New Zealand and other parts of the Empire were endeavoring to sustain the revenue by seeking larger contributions. Dr. Allnutt also touched upon the Society's added activity in furnishing copies of the Scriptures to the forces and members of the nursing profession. He then showed motion pictures which depicted the conversion and dedicated life of Bamba, a native boy of the Belgian Congo. After the offertory the hymn "Faith of Our Fathers" was sung and Dr. Allnutt pronounced the Benediction.

The regular monthly meeting of the Marmora Women's Institute was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Ethel Gray with the president, Mrs. H. W. Sabine in the chair. The attendance consisted of twenty-three members and six visitors. One new member was added to the roll. Following the usual opening ceremonies, the roll call "A Wife Saver" was taken. Reports were then given. About twenty-five dollars was made at the refreshment booth on Fair Day, while the Tag Day undertaken for the National Institute for the Blind netted $14.20. Two blankets have been forwarded to the Red Cross headquarters in Toronto. Seven dollars will be sent to the Superintendent of Women's Institutes, Toronto, for the purchase of sugar in connection with Red Cross work. Mrs. J. Gordenier was appointed as delegate with Mrs. W. Lavender as alternate to attend the Area Convention in Belleville, Oct. 3rd and 4th. It was decided that members meet at the home of Mrs. E. C. Prentice on Thursday, September 26th to complete the quilt. Local leaders who attended the recent demonstration at St. Andrews Hall, given by Miss Gertrude Gray of Toronto on "Making the most of Vegetables" brought in splendid reports and branch members are invited to the same hall next Tuesday for a demonstration to be given by the leaders. Reports of the District Annual Meeting at St. Ola and the Meat Summary Day at Ivanhoe last June were furnished by Mrs. J. Gordenier. Miss L. Aunger handled "Current Events" in an interesting style and also gave a splendid paper on "Some Poetic Impressions" reciting three well known poems in course. Some games of bingo were enjoyed. The meeting closed with the National Anthem and the serving of refreshments.

WEDDINGS

SHARPE—LUFFMAN

The marriage of Miss Merle Luffman, daughter of W. H. Luffman, and the late Mrs. Luffman, of Belleville, Ontario, to Edward F. Sharpe of this city, took place Thursday, September 19, at 5 p.m. at St. Paul's Church parsonage, Cornwall. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. A. Halpenny, B.A., D.D.

The bride, being a sister of Ward Luffman and Mrs. A. W. Brown, of Cornwall, a dainty supper was served at the latter's home, 219 Augustus Street, where pink roses and asters were used for decorations.

Mr. and Mrs. Sharpe left later by motor for Ottawa and Muskoka. On their return, they will reside in Belleville.

LATTIMER—DUFF

The marriage took place Saturday afternoon, in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, of Margery Stewart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Duff and William Bruce, son of Mrs. Lattimer and the late Mr. W. H. Lattimer. The Rev. W. J. Walker officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father was attended by Miss Margaret McLean of Walkerville. Mr. Kenneth Windeler of Toronto, was the groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Douglas Lattimer and Mr. Jack Duff of London. The wedding music was played by Mr. Leo Riggs.

Out of town guests were present from St. Thomas, Toronto, Cayuga, Walkerville and Detroit.

ACKERMAN—McCREDIE

On Saturday last, the beautiful country home of Mr. Peter A. Scott, was the setting of a very pretty and charming wedding, when his niece, Miss Ruth Scott McCredie, the younger daughter of Mrs. Margaret McCredie and the late John McCredie of Winnipeg, was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Jack McCredie to Mr. Gerald Lewis Ackerman, only son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Ackerman of Belleville.

Rev. B. Simpson Black of St. Andrew's Church, Campbellford, officiated in the presence of the immediate friends and relatives. Mrs. R. Wragg, cousin of the bride, played the wedding music and Miss Margaret Hall of Colborne, sang "Because" her mother, Mrs. A. D. Hall, accompanied her.

The bride looked charming in her going away costume of Soldier blue wool and she wore the groom's gift, a beautiful locket and chain. Her bouquet was a nosegay of white asters, blue delphinium and pink roses with long satin streamers of blue and white ribbon.

Miss Helen McCredie was her sister's attendant and was gowned in powder blue wool frock and carried a nosegay similar to that of the bride.

Mr. Ralph Ackerman of Belleville, cousin of the groom, was groomsman.

After a very dainty luncheon served by four friends of the bride, Mr. Ackerman and his bride left by motor for Muskoka district, and Ottawa to spend their honeymoon.

They will reside on Sebastapol Street, Campbellford, on their return.

There were several guests from a distance present.

HOLLOWAY ST. WOMAN'S ASSOCIATION

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Association of Holloway Street Church, was held in the Church parlours on Thursday afternoon, September 19th. The meeting opened with the President Mrs. Sweetnam in the chair, by all singing a hymn, followed by prayer. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The Scripture reading "Holding Life Sacred" was given by Mrs. G. Coulter followed by a beautiful solo by Mrs. S. P. Hagerman, "Is the World a Happier Place Because of You".

Reports of various secretaries were given and several matters of business were discussed. Roll call was taken with 23 present and the meeting closed with the theme song followed by the benediction.

FASHION FLASHES

PLANNED around the pompadour hair-do are many of the new hats. A black felt beret has its shell-shaped crown standing up and away from the felt frontpiece allowing the pompadour to show between. Black jet studs this band and there are attached jet ball earrings.

Join the Conga line with a smart evening ensemble. Youthful and charming is a frock with deep laurel green velvet for the fitted top with deep neckline and short puffed sleeves. The full skirt is of sage green taffeta.

The squirrel leaps into fashion favor this season. A beautiful brimmed hat in gray felt has a wide flange of squirrel on the dipped brim and crown. Fine meshed pearl gray veil. An enormous gray squirrel muff has pink roses tucked through one side.

A change from black is nice. Deep plum-colored velvet makes a useful afternoon frock made with scroll encrustations of matching faille at the neck. A big bow of faille marks the side draping.

Smart is the world for a white wool evening coat trimmed with bands of jet forming a joke. Bands of jet down the centre front and at the cuffs. Full skirted with slim waist.

IVANHOE W.M.S.

The September meeting of the Ivanhoe W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Donald Fleming on Tuesday, September 17. During the day a Sunburst Star quilt was pieced and later sold, the proceeds going to the associated members. A number of things made by the associated members were also sold. At 12.30 twenty members and five visitors sat down to a delicious pot luck dinner served by the hostess.

Promptly at 2.30 in the afternoon the president, Mrs. F. Palmer called the gathering to order and conducted a brief worship service which included the National Anthem and then the gathering was led in prayer by Mrs. Lovibond, after which the Lord's Prayer was repeated. The key word for the month was "Go". During the business period further plans were made for the autograph quilt. A number of letters were also read. Miss Cora Prest the Group Leader, for the month, then took charge of the program and used as her theme "The Way of the Father's Will". Short prayers were given by four women. Hymn 556 was sung. The Scripture reading found in John 14, 1-4, was taken by Mrs. C. Mitz. Responsive readings were read by the ladies. The offering was gathered and dedicated by Mrs. George Wood. Hymn 358 was sung. The Watch Tower was taken by Mrs. Lorne Hagerman, Mrs. George Wood and Miss Margery Prest. A very interesting report was given by the two Strangers' Secretaries on their work so far this year. Mrs. Mitz and Mrs. Rollins led in prayers for the safe keeping of our missionaries. Hymn 499 closed the meeting. Proceeds of the meeting were $6.80.

HALLOWAY W.M.S.

A most successful dinner and meeting of the Halloway Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. Percy Kelly on Wednesday, Sept. 18.

The opening exercises were conducted by the president who presided over the entire program. Nineteen responded to the roll call quoting a verse of Scripture containing the word "charity". A poem on "Hope" was read by Mrs. Don Rose. An excellent story, "The vision of an intercessor" was read by Mrs. Embury Hough. In the story a woman saw in a dream a Chinese child with bound feet, an African woman in poverty and a Hindu child bride but did not think it in her power to do anything for their relief until she saw the child as her own daughter, the woman as her sister, etc., and then she saw she must do something. When she came to die, feeling that she had done very little, the vision returned and she was assured that through her intercession doctors, teachers and missionaries had helped to improve the conditions for these people

Scripture lessons were read by Mrs. Herb Townsend, Miss Bessie McMullen, Mrs. John Townsend and Miss Bessie Spencer. Then followed a period of prayer for peace, for our enemies and for our missionaries, the leaders being Mrs. Harry Townsend, Mrs. Ernest Wilson and Mrs. Earl Snider.

It was decided to accept the invitation to the open meeting at West Huntingdon Sept. 23. Regarding the sectional rally at Cannifton Oct. 10 Mrs. Harold Wilson and Mrs. Kenneth Kingston were the delegates appointed. The October meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. John Townsend. The next Red Cross meeting was postponed until Oct. 3. Reporters of the work of our missionaries in foreign fields were appointed as follows: Honan, Mrs. H. Wilson; Japan, Mrs. D. Rose; China, Mrs. John Townsend; Africa, Mrs. E. Hough; India, Mrs. H. Townsend; Trinidad, Mrs. E. Wilson; Korea, Mrs. C. Townsend.

A report is to be given every month when possible. A reading, "Thank God for Missionaries" was read by Mrs. C. Townsend and "Duties of a Steward" by Mrs. H. Wilson. Following the gathering of the offering which amounted to $4.25, the offertory and closing hymn were sung.

The Art of the Home Shampoo

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEN the hair looks dull, lacks a normal glitter, it is usually because the shampoo has not been done thoroughly and soap scum lodges upon the shafts. Those beauty candidates who wash their locks instead of trot-trotting to the beauty shop seldom make a good job of it. They're fighting a combination of dirt and oil which does not give way quickly.

To make a shampoo agent place a small bar of bland soap in a quart mason jar, add one half teaspoonful of borax, fill the jar with boiling water, let stand three days before using. That will be sufficient for eight or ten shampoos.

Use a bath spray; without a spray all the lather cannot be removed. Rinse the hair first to take out surface dust. Pour on some of the melted soap, friction vigorously, rubbing the scalp well, lifting up the hair to distribute the suds. Follow with a rinsing strong enough to rattle your brains. Three soapings, as many rinsings.

When the hair is thin and inclined to be oily it is a good idea to dry it instead of putting on the setting lotion at once. Locks will look thicker then. Of course the hair must be moistened before it is put up on metal curlers. A good strong permanent is a blessing to the lady with scanty tresses who looks as if her wool had been buttered.

Keep the hands out of hot and cold water as much as you can. When washing use water just warm enough to form a lather.

Frequent immersions in hot water will cause the flesh to swell; in time the hands will look old and wrinkled. Cold water insults the cutaneous covering, and causes it to be rough and, in the winter season, will produce a painful chapped condition.

Use a lotion freely all the year round. Once a week massage with cocobutter to compensate for the loss of natural oil.

"Beauty candidates who wash their locks instead of trot-trotting to the beauty shop seldom make a good job of it."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Irked by Her Family's Birthdays

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm very fond of this girl. In act I'm on the point of asking her to marry me. I don't think I'm a tightwad, but I'm tired of her custom of wanting to include her whole family in everything.

Birthdays are what are bothering me now. She's the oldest of several children, and she never fails to tell me the day, if not the exact minute, each one of them was born. And of course it calls for a gift.

At first I thought it was grand to be the Big Man, but now I hate the very sight of these youngsters, fearing they will spring another birthday on me. They are all very lovely children, but I'm getting sick and tired of it. Do you think I ought to quit going with her?

Getting Cooler

Well, Mr. Cooler, I wonder if you're not partly to blame yourself? When you first met these "little angels" did you make a big fuss over them, thus giving them a false idea of your interest? What about the girl? Are you getting cool about her? If not, I think you can manage the "kids".

Days Are Like Years to Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Six months ago I met a very nice man, who came to call three nights a week and took me to the best places. Once he took me to dinner at his home. I believed he really cared for me, although we went together only two months. We had no agreement on going 'steady'.

The last time I saw him he said he was leaving town to see about a transfer to another city and would be gone over the week-end. He returned, but left without even calling me. And that was three months ago, and I haven't heard from or seen him.

I have nice clothes and enough money to entertain myself but I just don't care to go anywhere because I think of him constantly. Do you suppose he thought I didn't care that he was leaving and was only using him for a good time? I'm a little shy about writing him for I've never chased after a boy, and wouldn't want him to think I was.

Please-Miss Fairfax, tell me what you would advise. Waiting patiently, with days like years to me, I am Lonesome.

Men do unaccountable things like this sometimes, and there's no telling what's back of their strange behaviour. Perhaps instead of getting the transfer he lost his job. Again he may have misconstrued something you said or did as unfriendly. Why not send him a card and ask him if he has completely forgotten about the old town.

Perhaps He'll Jilt Her, Too

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I secretly admired a certain young man for a long time, when all of a sudden he asked me for a date. Although I knew he was engaged to another girl I thought we might be good pals, so I went out with him. But after several dates, I find I'm in love with him, and he's on the verge of falling in love with me.

What should I do, Miss Fairfax? I love him very much and it's only natural that I want to keep him. However, what if he treats me the way he treated the girl he was engaged to when he started going with me? He might meet still another girl and fall in love with her and drop me, I'm all mixed up.

Wondering

A generation or two ago, young people went grimly through with their promises, even when they had learned to care for someone else. Today they're more sensible and do not marry, even when engaged, if their affections have strayed elsewhere.

Inasmuch as this young man seems willing to take up with one girl when engaged to another, it might be just as well for both of you to go slowly until you discover whether or not your love for each other is real.

Planning a Simple Wedding Anniversary Celebration

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My parents expect to observe their fortieth wedding anniversary early next month, and while they would like to have some observance of the occasion, they do not, as they say, "wish to have a display". There are several brothers and sisters in our family, a few relatives, but my parents have very few intimate friends. However, we sisters and brothers are anxious to have some kind of reception to which we could invite former neighbors and acquaintances of our parents, as well as some of our own friends.

At present our plan is to have a Mass offered in the church in which the original ceremony took place, and to have all the family and as many friends as possible attend. After this we would like to have the family have breakfast at a nearby hotel.

Our problem is what we can do after that in order to observe the occasion properly, without too much expense. We thought of having "Open House", but we do not know just how to go about this, as we feel the formality of invitations would suggest gifts, and this we very much want to avoid.

There is also the question as to what kind of meal to serve the family between breakfast and the "reception" if one is held. Could you offer a solution?

In the event of a newspaper announcement of the event, would it be proper to include wording to the effect that "Open House" would be held during certain hours?

ROMA

Deep salutations to you on the plan to have a Mass offered at the marriage Church . . . that is a beautiful idea. And it would be an appropriate plan to have a breakfast after the Mass for the family.

The reception part of your plan seems to me not so important as far as your parents are concerned. However, if they wish to have this Open House, say in the tea-hours, from four to six or seven, with former neighbors, acquaintances, and friends of yours and of your sisters and brothers, this is, of course, proper. If the members of the family don't live near enough to go to their homes in the time between breakfast and these afternoon hours, then you would have to make arrangements to serve lunch to them. However, this might appropriately be a simple buffet lunch served at your parents' home.

You may, in the newspaper announcement of the event, include the fact that there will be Open House during the hours you choose. But this should not, of course, be in the form of a general invitation.

You will want to keep your invitations very informal, and you might properly invite your guests by telephone or by informal notes. Don't worry about these invitations "suggesting" that your guests should bring gifts. . . . just let nature take its course.

Thanks For Postcards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When friends send you cards from different places they are visiting, is it correct to thank them, or just tell them you received their cards and that it was nice of them to think of you?

Thank You

A thank-you for a courteous thought . . . that's always the best rule. It's easy too to make this your pleasant habit. You might say, for example, "Weren't you kind to send me cards while you were away! Thank you so much . . . . I enjoyed them immensely".

Family Pets Rate Love And Care

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Kindness to dumb animals seems to go along with kindness and consideration for people. On the contrary, harshness and cruelty to dumb animals appear to spring from a hard and inconsiderate human heart. Such was the conclusion I arrived at when a boy on the farm, from the observations of the farm folk among whom I grew up. Such is my opinion still, shared I think, by most who read this column. Therefore, we parents believe we should bring up our children to be kind to pets and other domestic animals, even to the creatures of the wild.

Value of Pets

Pets are good means through which we may cultivate in the growing child a wholesome attitude toward the lower animals. All too often the child is allowed to be cruel to a pet, in which case he is morally harmed. Don't let the tot torment the dog or cat or torture any other pet.

If you spend sufficient time and patience you will be able to train a child in tenderness and kindness toward the pet, almost solely by suggestion. Most parents, however, in order to succeed, will find it necessary to give the little child bodily pain to prevent it from habitual annoyance and injury of the pet. Unless this child learns in some way to be kind to the lowly creature, it is not fair to it nor wholesome for the moral character of the child to keep this pet. Train the child or get rid of the pet.

Children On Farm

There is the problem among children on the farm of educating them not to throw things at the farm animals, the fowls or wild birds.

As I look back, I feel grateful for the way my parents taught me to be kind to farm animals, though I regret I did not always respond as I should to their wise instruction. Not always did I willingly walk up a steep hill instead of riding on the load drawn by the faithful horses. Sometimes I hurried these willing brutes drawing the plow, mower or reaper on a hot day; nor was I always quite so conscientious about blanketing the horses on cold and wintry days as I should have been. Yet, as I grew older, I have grown in a kinder attitude toward dumb animals since, thanks chiefly, I think, to the patient and continuous teaching of my parents during my childhood.

Waning Novelty

After the average child over six or eight clamoring for a pet receives one, his willing and faithful care of it soon wanes and he will neglect it, if allowed. Thereafter the pet may become a burden to the mother and a source of family irritation.

The wise parent will aim to cultivate in this child responsibility for the pet's care. If all persuasive measures fail, it may be well to let the child go without a meal for each time he fails to feed his pet.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, September 22

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds much encouragement for not only conventional Sabbath activities and interests but also for dealing with superiors, employers or those in authority. It is opportune time for seeking promotions, favors or honors. But in other directions, especially relations between elders and women, the signs are not auspicious. Be cautious with writings of all natures.

Those whose birthday it is should have an encouraging year, with definite prospect for promotions, favors, tokens of preferment and esteem. Otherwise the auguries are not so favorable especially for the feminine element or in social or domestic affairs.

A child born on this day may be talented and ambitious, rising to fine place in the esteem of its superiors and employers. It may attain public position.

For Monday, September 23

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a particularly lively and pleasant day, with all things, business and private, moving at swift tempo. All of a cultural and intellectual nature is encouraged, with the aims and aspirations of the young and romantic flourishing. Pleasure, courtship, perhaps marriage, are among the predictions.

Those whose birthday it is are assured of a lively, pleasant and productive year, in business, speculation, writings, art—any line of creative effort. In private life—much pleasant experience courtship and for the eligible, marriage. But shun extravagance and impetuosities.

A child born on this day may be exceedingly versatile and talented making a success of almost any creative or cultural work.

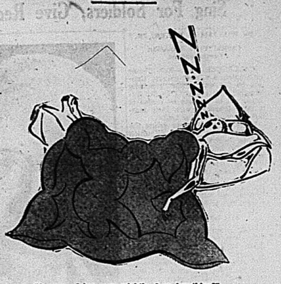
Make Your Complexion Pack



"Are you doing your nightly deep breathing?"

By HELEN FOLLETT

COMPLEXION packs are fun. They make you look so terrible while they're on you're sure they'll do a lot of good, and faith is an influence for success.

Begin with a clean skin surface. To make a clay pack mix kaolin with olive oil if the skin is dry, with witch hazel if it is oily. Spread it on smoothly, read your mystery story for half an hour, remove the mixture with tepid water, dry and ply the old friend cold cream. Nice to clear away blackheads, to give the flesh softness and color.

Beaten egg white is the right pack for the woman whose tissues have started to sag; it is also recommended for enlarged pores. When it starts to dry and draw, apply ice cold compresses, holding them to the face until the flesh is warm and steaming.

Done By a Neck

For chapped skin you can use a mask made by combining almond meal and a liquid cream until you have a mixture the consistency of whipped cream. You'll need only a thin film. Be sure to include the neck in this treatment. Necks are poor little Cinderellas at the beauty parties.

Remove the pack with a moist cloth, then friction with an ice cube. Just the right treatment when you've had a rush-about day and want to get in form for the gay evening party.

x x x

Are you doing your morning stretching and your nightly deep breathing? Good ways to start and finish the day.

Lie on your back, hands clasped at the back of the neck. Stretch the neck, lift the elbows and stretch the arms. See how far you can make your toes go down in the bed, tensing the muscles of the legs, thighs and hips. See how long you can make yourself.

After getting in bed at night take deep inhalations. This habit means that you will free your lungs of stale air, stir up circulation, quiet the nervous system. In five minutes the sand man will close your eyes.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Night Terrors

Here we are back on the subject of night terrors again, because so many mothers have written to me about their experiences with their children.

In other columns devoted to these nightmares of children, I neglected to refer to two common causes of bad dreams in children—story books and radio programs.

One mother told me of her young son, who awakened at night, agitated, with alarming regularity. The family doctor was called and in studying the case, he observed that the spells seemed to come always on certain nights of the week. That made him suspicious, and he advised the parents to watch what radio programs the boy heard regularly. The mother found the child followed devotedly a certain program on these nights, a program with a gangster theme. He had a radio receiver in his room, and was in the habit of lying in bed, listening to a succession of programs, before lights were turned out.

The mother confessed how upset she was when she realized that this gangster program was the cause of the child's nightmares. It had seemed to be a good thing to let him have a radio in his room. It keep him quiet and out of mischief. She had never listened to the gangster program.

"When I did", she wrote me, "I wasn't a bit surprised that my boy had nightmares. Why, I don't think an adult could have listened to that program just before going to bed without dreaming about it. I am very much gratified to read that in the Middle West there is a movement to boycott these 'scare' programs supposed to be for children."

Reading certain types of stories is another cause of bad dreams in children. I had them myself when I was a youngster of nine or ten, because I was a great reader. One day I got hold of a horror story. It was one of those genuine blood curdlers, with sinister figures creeping through dark passages in haunted houses. The resultant nightmares I remember vividly after all these years, because I was afraid to go to sleep for nights. I knew I would have more of those horrible dreams, and I tried to stay awake so I wouldn't have them.

I have known children who continued to read such books in spite of the dreams. The fascination of them was irresistible, and so until the parents got to suspect what was wrong, these night terrors continued.

Motion pictures must be blamed to some extent for giving some children night horrors. Perhaps I shouldn't blame the movies as much as the parents for allowing them to go to such pictures. It is a parent's duty to know what kind of picture a child sees. If the parent neglects this duty, wild dreams and broken rest may be the lot of the child, whose youthful mind is always more impressionable than an adult's.

We Never Forget

Lessons Once Learned Always On Call

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

SOMETIMES we suppose we have forgot everything we ever learned at school. But we haven't. Though some of it cannot be recalled at the moment, some can; after a little practice, all may be. We don't forget nearly so much as we think we do.

Perhaps we never entirely forget anything we once memorized. Oh, yes, at the moment we try to recall it we may fail, but at some later, more favorable time, it may flash into the mind. Often this happens at the time we need it least. Nevertheless, the very fact that it came back at all is proof that it was not entirely forgotten.

How Much We Remembered

Some years ago Mrs. Myers and I published in the American Journal of Psychology a research, "Reconstructive Recall." Each of us wrote down at regular intervals, over a period of several months, all that could be recalled of selections memorized years before but partially or almost entirely forgot in the meanwhile.

During the months over which we tried to dig out of our memories what seemed to have been forgotten, we did not see the original selections nor have any help. All we reconstructed was from our own heads. Through this long, persistent effort at recall we were able to reconstruct from about twenty to eighty per cent, of what at first appeared to have been wholly forgotten. We have no doubt that if we had had the persistence to continue at this task over several more months or years, practically all of the selections would have been recalled.

Practice Frequently

Of course, for our recalls to be most useful we must be able to make them when we want them. In order to do this we need to keep our memories alive by frequent practice and recalls.

The permanence of skills is more apparent. Only a few weeks ago I discovered that some of my skills at handling hay, learned years ago, still persisted.

The next-farm neighbor to where the Myers family spend most of their summers was almost killed by the front feet of a vicious horse, so my youngest son and I volunteered to make hay for him. I was proud of the skill with which I could pitch hay.

Applied to such skills is arithmetic, spelling and typing, the quality of skill one has at any age depends not so much on the quantity of practice as the quality of it, the degree of accuracy in the early steps of getting this skill. Such school skills as the child will want to use all his life are most useful when learned with precision. This is why I so often urge that the child learn the simple addition and subtraction facts by heart, and without error, early; and that those who still have trouble with these basic items in arithmetic be encouraged to master them at once. The task is easy, if intelligently attacked.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Suppose a child, at the age of eight, twelve, or fifteen threw a book across the floor in rage. What should you do?

A. Bite your tongue or do anything else to keep silent and appear serene. Under no condition should you command the child to pick up the book—if you wish to get best results. Several hours later when there seems to be no wall between you and the child you might say to him in a gentle way, that he probably would like to manage himself better next time he gets awfully mad, seeing that he wants to have many friends. Then if you have been so persuasive as to cause him to ask you how he might effect improvement, you have scored a great victory; so has he.

Q. You see crayon marks on the wall and suppose your two-year-old tot made them. Would you ask the child if he did it?

A. I hope I would not so tempt him to lie. I should spend considerable time and patience at helping him enjoy only the correct use of the crayons. I should not leave the child alone with the crayons until he had learned to use them properly.

When Dentures Prove False

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

"I HAVE confirmed by repeated experiments," writes Dr. Everett Lain, of Oklahoma City, "that human saliva, whether acid, alkaline or neutral, makes a good electrolyte through which metallic electrons freely circulate from a higher to a lower electro potential. Thus within every oral cavity which contains dentures such as plates, bridges, crowns or fillings of dissimilar elemental consistency, there is constituted a complete galvanic battery."

Many must have felt the electric shock between the teeth when two dissimilar mental dentures are in place, one in the upper, the other in the lower jaw. Again there may be more or less contiuous nerve soreness from the same cause. These subjective feeling become gradually obliterated with the passage of time. But some patients stay nervous from this obscure cause, have indigestion and loss of weight. A continuous metallic, astringent or salty taste in the mouth, and increased salivary secretion also result.

One man I heard of, a carborundum grinder, who had metallic deposits all over his teeth found he had a complete crystal set in his mouth and could hear radio programs day and night. It took the facilities of the research department of the NBC network to discover what was the matter with him.

Hollander has described galvanic electric burns of the mouth cavity from this cause and others have described blanched or grayish patches and erosions on the tongue and inner cheeks.

This brings up the subject of bad dentures in general and the relation of systemic disturbances of the body to traumatic difficulties in the teeth. We discussed the relation of teeth infection to systemic disturbances yesterday. But all the body disturbances that come from teeth do not necessarily have to have a germ origin. The loss of some teeth places an unequal stress on the remaining teeth, and results in inadequate mastication and poor nutrition.

Improperly constructed dentures put an unusual strain on the jaws and result not only in poor digestion and nutrition—a few months ago we recited the case of a colleague who lost thirty pounds right after acquiring a poorly fitted denture—but to neuralgia, headaches, head noises and partial deafness.

In other ways, aside from invasion by germs, the teeth may cause constitutional trouble — impacted teeth, overhanging fillings, leaky fillings causing nerve exposure, traumatic occlusion—all these should be rectified by the dentist and not carelessly submitted to wholesale extraction.

Sight Seeing Trip Into the Canal Zone

By TEMPLE MANNING

A vacation on magnificent ships that are the last word in luxury, service and appointments: how's that for a holiday program? Now that the ships Washington and Manhattan have been put into the New York-California run via the Panama Canal, that program is waiting for the travellers who have been clamoring for just such a trip. The new ship America is also to start soon on a West Indies run.

The first stopover on the new service is Havana, which gives a chance to see all the beauty and heredity for which this wonderful city is noted. The transit throuh our own Panama Canal is worth the price of the trip alone, a marvelous feat of enigneering and American ingenuity in operation. The scenic beauty is beyond all words—the gleaming lakes, the locks, the tropical vegetation lining the canal banks—there's nothing like it anywhere else in the world. We've been through the Suez many a time and can report that it is neither interesting nor beautiful.

As for the stop at Balboa with visits to Panama City, it's a delight. Balboa, Colon and Cristobal are all worth a good look-see. And as for shopping, Panama City is a shopper's paradise.

Much to Enjoy

There is so much to see and to do in the Canal Zone that most folks make a vow to come back and stay for a regular visit. Our government runs two beautiful hotels there and there are other good hotels.

Once the ship has passed into the Pacific, the last stop before Los Angeles is at lovely Acapulco, a Mexican port about which we will tell you later, for it is a story in itself. It is a taste of Mexico that leaves one with a longing to explore further in this fantastic and fascinating land. Then the ship runs along the coast to Los Angeles, and after a stop-over there on to the Golden Gate, the last port of call on this delightful trip.

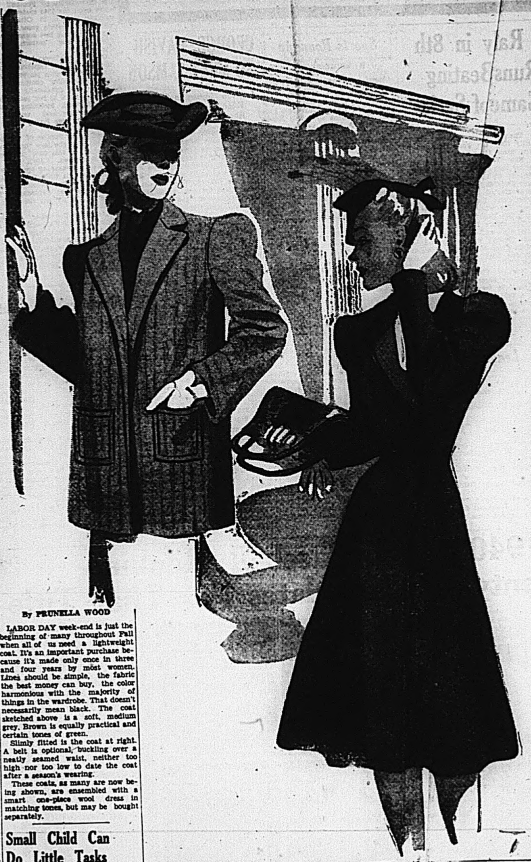
COATS OF MANY USES



By PRUNELLA WOOD

LABOR DAY week-end is just the beginning of many throughout Fall when all of us need a lightweight coat. It's an important purchase because it's made only once in three and four years by most women. Lines should be simple, the fabric the best money can buy, the color harmonious with the majority of things in the wardrobe. That doesn't necessarily mean black. The coat sketched above is a soft, medium grey. Brown is equally practical and certain tones of green.

Slimly fitted is the coat at right. A belt is optional, buckling over a neatly seamed waist, neither too high nor too low to date the coat after a season's wearing.

These coats, as many are now being shown, are ensembled with a smart one-piece wool dress in matching tones, but may be bought separately.

Small Child Can Do Little Tasks

Even young children can do their share in keeping quiet and order in the household. They can help to care for the garden, to train and feed household pets, to relieve busy mothers of many responsibilities by doing things for themselves.

At the age of five, they should help to put on and fasten their clothing. At six, they should be able to wash themselves, bathe and dress alone.

Children of seven or eight can be helpful at mealtimes—setting and clearing off the table, washing and drying the dishes, and putting them away. Most children like to swish dishes about in soapy water long before they realize that clean dishes are a safeguard to health.

By the time children reach the age of eight they should be able to straighten their rooms, feed the dog, make their own beds, and help themselves to clean towels and wash cloths as well as changes of handkerchiefs, underwear and stockings. At 11 or 12 they can help to get breakfast, dust, and vacuum clean the rugs. However, no child at school should be expected to spend much time doing housework.

A CASUAL TREATMENT for costly mink seems to be the fur code this season. Magnificent dark mink is used for a full length coat made with a mere suggestion of a collar that rolls into the narrow tuxedo front.

DRESS UP your simple dark frocks with bright jewelry. A grand necklace consists of eighteen strands of simulated emerald beads held by a deep rhinestone and silver ornament.

BROWN TO THE FASHION FRONT A STRONG RIVAL TO BLACK STYLE COLORIST FORECASTS

A rival to smart black for the new season is Brown. It's in the front line of fashion in sports and casual clothes and foremost in fur coats and jackets in popular beaver, luxurious mink, mouton lamb, the new mink and sable-dyed muskrats and squirrels (which are difficult to tell from the real thing!) Brown is also smartly pronounced in dresses, plain and patterned, in plaids, in richly furred cloth coats, costume ensembles. The new brown color coats take their cue from brown furs that are soft, deep rich browns....definitely not to be confused with unbecoming dull black-browns.

Brown is Versatile

Besides which brown is so versatile, harmonizing with all the other important Fall colors, such as olive greens, soldier blue, rocky blue...... and it's smart this season to combine brown with blue. Mix your brown with these colors through your dress or coat and accessories. For example, green coat over brown dress, accessories in both colors. Or reverse the order, or an all blue costume with brown accessories, or an all brown costume with rocky blue accessories. Last but not least, bright tawny red is a perfect new foil for brown, while soft prairie rose is a lovely Winter rose harmony with brown. You'll find browns already mixed for you in plaids with blues, reds, copper, [illegible] and golds. A new note is the combination of nutria with black. Add a bit of gray, a dash of plum wine, and a little of the new violet and lilac mauve tones and you have the color panorama for Fall and Winter fashions.

Brown is particularly important in accessories because of its versatility. Brown is wonderfully smart and fresh looking with the new muted blues and greens and with the brilliant Autumn tweeds. Various shades of cocoa, nutria and rich brown shades are seen in bags, gloves, belts and hats......all perfectly color-coordinated to match each other. A deep rich brown shade is definitely high fashion color note when worn with black. In addition, brown is strikingly new with the new purple and mauve tones and it is wonderfully wearable with grey, and the new golden yellow shades. Since brown is so fashionable and so wearable in accessories, a complete set of brown accessories are recommended as smart Fall investments. Butter-soft suedes, calfs, alligators and novelty grain leathers are some of the important mediums in brown accessories.

THERE'S NEW LUXURY in this season's fur-trimmed cloth coats. A smart black woolen coat has a neckline of Persian lamb that extends right down the side and around the hem. Side closing.

Mr. Boss Requests

And Miss Secretary Makes That Business Trip, too

By ALICE DENHOFF

NO MATTER how competent a secretary may be there is one thing that generally stumps her and throws her into a dither of doubt and indecision. That is, how to act, should she have to go along with her employer on an out-of-town business trip. It is a situation that frequently arises in business, professional and political life. No girl need think hers is an isolated instance.

Social Graces

We will assume that our heroine is an intelligent, well-bred young woman, or else she would not be a private confidential secretary and important to her boss. The average man doesn't usually care about putting himself in a situation that might have an unpleasant kick-back.

So our secretary will draw from the resources of her intelligence and breeding and so strike a nice balance between her office air and her personality when she is off duty. She will dress and groom herself smartly but without ostentation, softening her tailored clothes with a flower, an ornament or some other dainty touch. If the occasion for the trip is a convention, she should include a simple dinner dress in her luggage. The chances are that the wife or daughter of a colleague or friend of her employer may see to it that she enjoys some of the events arranged for the ladies attending the convention.

Meal Manners

So far as meals are concerned, it is likely that the secretary will lunch and dine with her employer while en route, if he asks her to do so. At the hotel she may have to eat in his suite if work is pressing, and she should make it a tray lunch and eat at her desk. When possible, she should take her meals alone in the hotel dining room, or ask her employer if it is all right with him if she explores the town and eats at another restaurant. It would be simpler, however, if she took these meals separately in the hotel and charged it to her employer's bill. As for her room, she will reserve a suite of rooms for her employer on one floor and for herself a room on another. There is no reason to register at another hotel, for big hotels are impersonal places offering solitude and isolation for those who seek it.

Dinner for Two

It is likely that our little heroine will receive an invitation from her employer to dine with him in the hotel restaurant or grill. The thing to do is to make the event as simple and natural as possible, and not in any way to make it an occasion. She should not put on that dinner dress. A simple afternoon frock, or a soft, frilly blouse with her suit is just right. It is up to the girl to steer a nice course between office conversation, purely social chit-chat, and the personal. Surely there are enough events transpiring in the world today to make stimulating and interesting conversation.

If there is music, enjoy it, make it the background for a friendly, pleasant meal. But do not dance, for that will at once invest the occasion with a personal note and put it on a plane that a wise girl will wish to avoid, if she is to keep her reputation and her job.

Happy Family Life Is Nearest Approach To Heaven on Earth

The other day at a public gathering I sat behind a typical American family of moderate means and as I watched the little group I said to myself: there's the nearest approach to heaven on earth. Papa was tall and slender, greying slightly at the temples but youthful in appearance. Mama was pretty and plumpish and in between sat four children. The little boys looked as though the cat had licked them and the girls were quite prim and proper until they got tired and began to wriggle and twist and look inquiringly at their parents, saying eloquently: "How much longer?" Papa and mama exchanged sympathetic glances now and then when the giggling assumed proportions and quiet had to be restored by one or the other.

Does anybody think this sort of family is a miracle of chance? Does anybody think this couple got married, lived gaily, had plenty, brought four children into the world and let them grow up in irresponsible fashion. No this isn't a miracle of chance nor even good luck. This sort of picture is painted by a couple of straight-thinking, square-shooting, right-living adults who are devoted to each other and have a fine sense of responsibility toward their children.

I happened to know that this couple had, in their early married life, known the pinch of poverty, that they had to struggle to feed and clothe and train their little brood. I can imagine that before this they had had the struggle of adjusting themselves to each other, rubbing down rough edges, accepting irritating traits of character which neither could change in the other. No doubt they had known the temptation to fight and fall out and set the children a bad example, which children always follow. But they had dealt with all their problems as they came along, had met them and mastered them. Now they were reaping the rewards.

One glance at that little family and a perfect stranger would know they were happy and lived in a well-ordered home. One glance revealed the fact that papa and mamma were in perfect accord and that a fine comradeship existed between the children and parents. A peaceful, contented little world within themselves! The children growing up with a sense of security which all the experts say is necessary for normal childhood. The children being marched to church and taught to worship God.

Talk about old age insurance? Such parents as these are taking out old age insurance. Talk about the future of America? These are the men and women who are building it strong and safe. Talk about personal happiness and contentment? These are the men and women who know it, these who keep the home fires burning, live within their incomes, stay at home with their children and when they go out frequent places their children can go with them.

Double Duty Frocks Prove Handy to Co-Eds

New York—Looking forward to football days, it is well to select tailored dresses that will do both for classes and going to the games. They can be of wool, wool jersey, velveteen or corduroy. Every girl requires some attractive frocks to make a hit in, whether for "rushing" or "dates"; it is just as important to win the approval of girls as it is of boys.

If she plans to come to town a lot, she ought to have a good dress coat, a woolen one with a flattering fur collar. A fur jacket or coat is a grand extra number to have along. It can do double duty—be useful around the campus and serve as an evening wrap.

For evening requirements at college are not large. A dance frock and a dinner dress can be made to suffice. The formal one can be of velvet, faille, taffeta or even in a floaty net (this is not very practical, however); the dinner frock will be most serviceable if it is of crepe.

Slacks are almost a necessity. For roughing it they come in corduroy. Dormitory pajamas are talked of wherever college togs are under discussion. They may be had in light woolens. Many are in gay plaid, like a Scotsman's; with them are worn casual jackets in a blending shade or a bright skirt. A useful outfit has an extra skirt so that the girl has two complete costumes.

A flannel robe is indispensable. Say our college informants: "Be sure to have a nightgown and negligee ensemble." There are, of course, all the other necessary undies.

Feet must be considered. Saddle oxfords and moccasins, one pair of each, are important items. For the dressy daytime frocks dressy pumps should be included on the list and for evening a pair of pretty sandals. Bags and gloves and hats must all be taken into consideration on the shopping tour, for they must be correct accessories for the costumes bought.

NEWARK BEARS IN PLAYOFFS FOR LOOP TITLE

Crushed Jersey City Giants 17-5 to Win Series in Four Straight Games

ORIOLES WIN

Baltimore Evens Series With Rochester by Exploding Three Homers to Win 9-5

By The Associated Press

Newark Bears have travelled a familiar trail to the finals of the Governors' Cup playoffs and from what they've shown in eliminating Jersey City they never were better equipped for the battle to decide the International League's representative in the Little World Series.

Bears crushed the Little Giants 17-5 last night to sweep the best-of-seven series, 4-0. They can spend the next few days resting and waiting for the winner of the Rochester-Baltimore series, now tied at two games each.

Last night's victory marked the fourth consecutive year that Newark has reached the finals. In doing so they rolled up the second largest score since the playoffs were inaugurated.

Tommy Holmes paced the Bruins' 19 hit attack on four Little Giant hurlers with five safeties in six trips to the plate, driving in six runs. Allan Gettel, who succeeded Norman Branch in the second inning during a Jersey City rally, was given credit for the victory. He allowed only five hits, walked one and struck out five in the last eight innings. Roy Henshaw, second pitcher for the Little Giants, was charged with the defeat.

Explode Three Homers

Baltimore Orioles exploded three homers in downing the champion Rochester Red Wings for the second straight night, 9-5, to deadlock the other half of the playoffs.

Air-tight pitching, which had marked the three previous games, gave way entirely as the clubs divided 26 hits between them. Nick Etten, Gene Sankey and Jack Remond connected for the Orioles four-baggers. Italo Chelini went the distance for the victors while the Wings used a quartet of hurlers. Charley Brumbeloe started and was the loser.

The fifth game of the series will be played this afternoon at Baltimore and although the pitching choices are doubtful, Herschel Lyons and Floyd Stromme, first game opponents, should be sufficiently rested to take the mounds again.

Detroit Tigers Rally in 8th To Score Five Runs Beating Indians in 1st Game of Series

Tigers Now Lead American League by Full Game and Play Indians Today

BROWNS WIN

Harlond Clift Smacks Homer With Bases Loaded to Beat White Sox

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Every September some Major League club gets steaming hot. With a week of the season remaining Detroit Tigers appear to be this year's hot team.

The heat was turned on in the American League Sept. 4th when Cleveland Indians and the Tigers came together in the first of a series of collisions that are destined to decide the championship.

Since then the Tigers have won 14 out of 18 games and the Indians have won 10 and lost 10. That's why the fiction-like 6-5 triumph of the Tigers over the Indians yesterday was significant beyond its immediate effect upon the standings.

These two clubs still have five games to play with each other and in baseball anything is possible. Cleveland might win today or it might win both today and tomorrow, but in September a team that is cooling off doesn't have much chance against a club that has just reached the boiling point.

Score 5 Runs On Six Hits

That's what the Tigers touched in the eighth inning yesterday when they blasted across five runs on six singles, five of them in succession off Mel Harder, Bob Feller and Joe Dobson.

New York Yankees, the only other club still with a mathematical chance at the championship, were idle yesterday and their status was not affected particularly. The two front-rank foes must break even over the whole six-game route to help the Yanks.

The entire National League was idle, also, and the only action outside Detroit was the season's last night game at St. Louis, where the Browns beat Chicago White Sox 7-6.

Harlond Clift hit a home run with the bases loaded in the first inning to send the Browns away to a 6-0 lead in the first four frames. This dwindled fast in the late innings, but the Sox never were able to catch up.

GEORGE PAVISH TO MEET SAMSON

Samson Comes to City Well-Recommended as Strong, Rough Grappler

Having never been defeated in a local wrestling ring, George Pavish, the pugnacious Greek heavyweight, will endeavor to keep his ring record intact at the Hume Arena on Monday night when he meets Jack Samson, the Chicago wildcat. On the other hand the local wrestling promoters signed Samson to a contract expressly with the hopes that Pavish's local reign would be terminated and the patrons of the game have their hearts gladdened.

Samson comes to Belleville highly recommended as a strong rough-type grappler, who knows no scruples when it comes to plying his ring trade. Pavish is known for his unorthodox fighting, but may meet his match in the wild Samson. In the semi-final bout of the evening Tom George, who wrestled Freddie Meyers and Dr. Ralph Wilson here some years ago, will meet Jack Pavlos of Greece.

Another newcomer to Belleville wrestling circles, Morris Fagan, the Irish-born grappler, will meet Pedro Valdez, the lithe Mexican wrestler, in the preliminary bout of the evening. Both Fagan and Valdez are noted for their keen knowledge of the modern art of wrestling, which should assure a sterling bout filled with thrills and excitement for those who enjoy this type of sport.

Yesterday's Stars

Hank Greenberg and Rudy York, Tigers: Their bats helped decide game with Indians, York driving in two runs and Greenberg batting one home and scoring himself.

FOOTBALL SEASON OPENING TODAY

(By The Canadian Press)

If the early bird really does snap up the prize then watch Ottawa Rough Riders and Toronto Balmy Beach in their respective senior rugby circuits this season.

The Interprovincial Riders and the Ontario Rugby Football Union entry open the 1940 eastern Canada gridiron season in Ottawa today with an exhibition game. They did the same thing last season and the Riders became eastern Canada champions.

Ottawa are favored to whip the Beaches, who are experimenting for the most part with players inexperienced in senior company. The Riders have practically the same powerful squad as last season and a few additions, including middle Lloyd Langley and outside Bert Haigh, who wore Balmy Beach jerseys last fall.

Coach Alex Ponton of the Balmies asks that the fans "don't expect too much of this club" in the tilt against Ottawa. He'll use the game as a measuring board for the Beaches match with Toronto Argonauts of the Interprovincial circuit in Toronto next Saturday. That game will be for the championship of Toronto.

Meanwhile the other Interprovincial and O.R.F.U. clubs are busily practicing each night and acquiring new members in an effort to bolster weaknesses. All are hampered by military training periods which cut down attendance at grid iron drills

'Combines' to Meet Port Hope Next

Word was received in the city today, from the office of W. J. Snyder, secretary of the Ontario Baseball Association in Hamilton, to the effect that the South Hastings "Combines" would meet the Port Hope "Ontarios" in the third round intermediate O.B.A. playdowns. According to Mr. Snyder's instructions the series must open by Wednesday, Sept. 25th.

Manager "Doc" Empson stated today efforts to have the first game played in Belleville had been launched by the "Combines" but that no reply had been received from the Port Hope management at noon today. The second game will be played either on Friday or Saturday of next week.

The Giants were hot in this inning scoring three runs to take the lead which they kept until the seventh inning; then the Cubs came on to win the ball game 6 to 4.

Who Is 1940's Best Baseball Rookie? Plenty Of Candidates For That Title

By WALTER L. JOHNS

Central Press Canadian Sports Writer.

Along about this time every year, it is appropriate to consider the major league rookie crop and gauge its worth this year and possibilities for the next campaign.

The crop was a bumper one this year, but should be exceeded next season for many of the aging ancients still cavorting in major league uniforms are certain to be scrapped for much-needed youthful replacements.

The Cleveland Indians need some outfielders and can use pitchers, too. The Yankees need many new men, including replacements for the veterans who have been winning flags year after year but finally have shown weakness. The Red Sox need pitchers badly.

Terry Has Problem

The Browns and Athletics have young teams and won't have to scrap too many oldsters. The White Sox could use a few youngsters in key positions. Detroit has several ancients who may or may not manage to answer the call next year. Washington needs many replacements, not necessarily for veterans, but help for many positions.

In the National League, the Giants' problem is a big one. Bill Terry's club, like the Yanks, has been crowded with stars of yesterday who have lost the stamina and ability that made them famous in other days. Terry will have to rebuild the team and almost every man is in danger of losing his job.

The Cardinals need pitchers. The Cubs have several young pitchers who came up this year and have made good, but always can use some new men. The Dodgers could use a good young pitcher and more punch at the bat.

Hudson is Standout

The Phils and the Bees are well-equipped with youthful talent and more seasoning plus pitching and hitting strength may make a vast difference in the ultimate standing. The Pirates need pitchers and must drop a few old timers. The Cincy Reds are well-balanced, but reserve strength is poor. A couple of hard-hitting outfielders could do much here.

Glancing at the American league harvest this season we find four pitchers with very creditable records and who have proved of immense value to their clubs. Sid Hudson, who made the jump from a Class D Florida State league to the Washington Nats, easily is the most-talked-of hurler to come up this year. Already winner of 13 games, Hudson also is credited with two one-hit victories which isn't minor league stuff in any sense of the word.

Ernie Bonham
Maurice Van Robays
Bob Kennedy
Carvel Rowell
Johnny Babich
Danny Litwhiler
Walt Judnick
Sid Hudson

The value of Righthander Ernie Bonham to the Yankees is realized when one considers the remarkable rise of the Yanks in the last month from a second division club to a pennant contender. The Kansas City rookie has won six games after losing his first and appears to be the "hottest" thing in pitching harness at the moment.

Detroit Has Pair

Lefty Al Smith, a Giant castoff was brought in by Cleveland from Buffalo of the International league. Smith has turned out to be a regular winning pitcher for Cleveland and one of the leaders in the loop.

Johnny Babich of the Philadelphia Athletics, playing with a last-place club, also must be classed among the rookie hurling "finds" and should be among the leaders next year.

Other American league rookie pitchers of promise are Yank Terry of the Red Sox, Detroit's Johnny Gorsica and Harold Newhouser, and the Yankees' Marvin Bruer.

Outfield and infield talent in the American this year is headed by Bob Kennedy, sensational third baseman of the Chicago White Sox.

DiMaggio Successful

Dominic DiMaggio of the Red Sox, finally is hitting his stride after sitting on the bench in the early part of the season. Walt Judnich of the St. Louis Browns, has developed into a homer hitter and one of the best Brownies to come up in a long time. Benny McCoy, the high-priced Athletic second baseman, has played steady baseball, but his batting average isage. woefully weak.

Cleveland's second base combination, Ray Mack and Lou Boudreau, the class of the league, came up in midyear last season so won't be included in a size-up of the 1940 talent. Bob Swift of the Browns, Al Brancato and Al Rubeling of the A's, Russ Peters and Clarence Campbell of the Injuns, and Jake Early and Jimmy Pofahl of the Nats are others to make a 1940 debut and stick through the season.

In the National league, the rookie brigade is headed by Mike McCormick of Cincinnati and Carvel (Cintronella Rowell) of the Boston Bees. Rowell is a contender for the batting crown. McCormick has been a regular all year and keeps his average close to .300. Danny Litwhiler of the Philadelphia Phils also is a late-season sensation with a mighty batting average.

Cubs' Pitchers Click

Jimmy Wasdell, Peewee Reese and Pete Reiser of the Dodgers have come through as well as expected. Reese is out now with an injured leg. Dominic Dallesandro of the Cubs hasn't been belting the ball as heavy as in the coast league but he has played regularly.

Maurice Van Robays of the Pirates is a gem, and with more experience probably will boost his batting average. Nick Witek of the Giants came through, but his bat mark fell. Art Mahan and Bob Bragan have been Phil regulars but weak at the plate.

National league rookie hurlers are headed by Vern Olson and Jake Mooty of the Cubs. Other promising slabsters up this year the first time include Johnny Hutchings of the Reds; Roy Joiner of the Giants and Nick Strincevich of the Bees.

Six-Day Bike Racing In the Doldrums Says Torchy Peden

Washington, Sept. 21—(CP)—Maybe it's because of the war, but Torchy Peden says bike racing is in the doldrums.

The big Victoria, B.C. rider, recognized as the world's No. 1 cyclist, is going to do what he can to stir up interest in the sport when Washington's first international six-day bike race opens in Riverside Stadium tomorrow night.

He probably won't win the race as the new stadium track is on the small side for the six-foot, 2 1-2-inch Canadian. As he puts it: "A big track is best for me. The little fellows are better on the turns. I usually can wear 'em down on the final day but it's easier when I have more straightaway, like in Madison Square Garden."

As to what's the matter with bike racing...."It might be European conditions," says Peden. "You see, there aren't many good Americans in the business. I'm a Canadian, and a lot of others are Canadians, French, Germans and Belgians. They're a bit busy at the moment ...."

Ken J. Colling

Now that senior Interscholastic rugby football has been assured for the Bay of Quinte group in the C.O.S.S.A., convener Les Shiels is anxious to enlarge the local group into either a three or four-teamed loop. Last year Albert College and the Belleville Collegiate squads played a series of games, but the competition proved inadequate to season the ultimate winner for subsequent C.O.S.S.A. competition. N.A. (Pete) Beach, energetic athletic director at Albert, has been working on a plan of possible enlargements of the Bay of Quinte senior Interscholastic group for some weeks and recently received favourable replies from both Port Hope and Cobourg Collegiates. It seems those schools have been dominated over by Peterborough and Lindsay interests to such an extent they are seeking other football groupings. A senior Interscholastic football group including Cobourg, Port Hope, Albert College and the B.C.I. & V.S. should prove not only advantageous from a local viewpoint, but provide a compact loop for competition this fall.

Convener Les Shiels is almost certain that Cobourg Collegiate will accept an invitation to play football in the Bay of Quinte group along with Albert College and the Belleville Collegiate, while the decision of Port Hope is not determined as yet. Such a step-up would prove a paying proposition, providing the games with Cobourg or Port Hope were played here on a Saturday afternoon at which time sufficient revenue could be realized to assure the financing of the return trip by the local "Collegians." When first approached by Mr. Beach on the subject Les Shiels was quite dubious regarding the matter, as the question of transporting a football squad runs into considerable money. However, after discussing the matter with Principal MacLaurin today Mr. Shiels assured Pete Beach, that the B.C.I. "tri-color" would be interested in such a loop, thus assuring local football fans of a little of their favourite diversion after all.

For those who like their "streamlined rugby", that new-fangled six-man football game, Pete Beach, of Albert, was named as convener for the Bay of Quinte sector and the untiring Mr. Beach is the proper man in the right position. Although he was only assured of two starters at the annual meeting of the district C.O.S.S.A. group, convener Pete has the Belleville Collegiate sextette and Jim Rickabys O.S.D. squad to form the nucleus of a group and he hopes to add Picton, Trenton and possibly Napanee Collegiates to the set-up. Mr. Beach strongly advocates the sponsorship of athletics within the junior range of 17-years and under, especially during the war period. The newly instituted six-man group will be wholely for juniors of 17 and under, explained Mr. Beach. With this thought in mind there is no reason why the Belleville Collegiate could not sponsor two junior six-men teams, which would be about equivalent to one junior squad of the conventional game.

A member of the Belleville "Quintes" junior O.H.A. squad of last season, Gerald Wagar of Tweed, was awarded the annual O.H.A. junior scholarship, which entitles him to $150.00 per year for four years at McMaster University. Gerald Wagar is the second Tweed boy to receive this distinction, Herbert "Buck" Leal obtaining the same honours some years ago. This scholarship is awarded annually to the Upper School student playing O.H.A. hockey and who attains the highest marks in his upper school subjects during the year. Two members of the "Quintes" were seeking their scholarship, Wagar and Ross Clare, which shows the high class type of hockey players who play the game in Belleville. Incidentally after winning his O.H.A. scholarship a few years ago "Buck" Leal continued to win the coveted Rhodes Scholarship, which gives Wagar something to shoot at. It would be "one for Ripley" if Gerald Wagar duplicated Leal's success of the past and we hope him success.

Do you remember when Ormond Beach, 27-year-old halfback with Sarnia Imperials football team was killed in an explosion at Sarnia three years ago today. Weighing 260 pounds, the former University of Kansas ace was one of Canada's greatest players.

Until some authentic word comes along regarding baseball and city league softball play-offs, local sport fans can content themselves with the weekly Monday night wrestling bouts at the Hume arena. On Monday we find Geo. Pavish meeting Jack Samson, the Chicago wildcat, in the main bout, while another newcomer to local grappling circles, Morris Fagan, meets Pedro Valdez, the people's choice from Mexico. A third bout is also carded.

Word was received in the city today that the South Hastings "Combines" would meet the Port Hope "Ontaries" in the third round intermediate O. B. A. playdowns to commence next Wednesday. Arrangements for the series will be made over the week-end with both games being scheduled for next week. Incidentally Tommy "Lefty" Pointer, former Belleville National pitcher is with the "Ontaries" which should make the series between the Port Hope nine and the "Combines" an interesting one. Tommy hasn't pitched ball in Belleville since he was here with the Napanee Gibbards nearly a decade ago and all the baseball fans ask is continued ideal weather and a goodly crowd will welcome the return of Tommy Pointer to the diamond where he first rose to prominence.

SPORT FLASHES—It's in the air, the grid iron season unofficially opens today with Balmy Beach at Ottawa...... Not actually in full swing, but even in the U.S.A. the footballers get underway with several test warm-up games today also and by this time next week the experts will be calling their season's football shots...... All of which reminds us there may be a major surprise in senior Interscholastic football circles right in our own fair city—it concerns the possible switching of affiliations of one star player...... Although Buck Newsom, ace Detroit hurler, went to bed at 6.30 p.m. on Thursday night, the additional rest proved a boomerang as the Cleveland Indians ganged him and Bob Feller in the season's most hectic one-inning rally yesterday, as the Tigers scalped the Indians 6-5.... Del Baker's nine rallied to score five runs in the eighth, driving Mel Harder and Feller both from the Cleveland mound...... It was the wildest rally seen in years and now the Tigers are leading, but these two teams have games today and Sunday, but the Tigers have a slight edge now.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Cavalcade"

When "Cavalcade" was filmed the London stage production was photographed from beginning to end, and this was used as a basis for the eventual motion picture.. Thus it follows the stage script rather closely, and in the unreeling you can see in most cases Coward's original stage directions unfolding before your eyes. Thus the famous "Titanic" scene with its terrific dramatic and emotional impact, comes to you just as it was written, and the "montage" of the war is a film version of the effect Coward strove to achieve on the stage.

"Cavalcade" is the story of Britain's greatness, her spirit and her courage, and her history over the first quarter of this century, told in terms of one family. It opens with the family celebrating New Year's Eve at the turn of the century. You follow the family story, interwoven with story of the servants, through the Boer War, the relief of Mafeking, the death of Queen Victoria, the sinking of the "Titanic," the flying of the Channel for the first time, the first Great War, and then the social chaos of the early twenties and the reconstruction period, to that classic toast to England spoken by the aged but unbroken Jane Marriot as she and her husband stand together once again to welcome the incoming year.

The more you study "Cavalcade" the more you'll find in it. The detail and the amount of fact that is included is perfectly amazing; likewise its courage of changing times and manners. A brief flash on the screen says more than a volume (to wit, the contrasting brief shots of an empty church and a crowded night club). It even covers the gradual changing social order, the passing of the aristocracy, and the opportunity now given every person to rise above their environment by their own achievement.

"Cavalcade" is not just a story or a movie, it's a living vital document, the story of a nation told in terms of a specific case history; there should be a copy of it in every school . . . but meanwhile, it's back again, and I still think it's an emotional experience that defies comparison.

"Wings of the Morning"

The added outstanding attraction for your added enjoyment is shown all in glorious Technicolor, starring Annabella, Henry Fonda, and the world's famous Irish tenor John McCormack. In "Wings of the Morning" you will see the colorful changing of the guards at Buckingham Palace, the English Derby at Epsom Downs as well as London's busy thoroughfares.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Charles Lang" in 'WILDCAT BUS'

Born in New York City, Charles Lang spent his boyhood in a little New Jersey town and grew up with his ambitions centred upon becoming a baseball star. As soon as he finished school he started playing semi-pro ball in Brooklyn.

He had a try-out with the Brooklyn Dodgers, but was told to get more experience and come back in a year or two and try again. However, a vacation trip to California resulted in his playing an extra part in an R.K.O. Radio Film for a few days and he decided to go after a screen career instead of one on the diamond.

Two years of study at the Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York won him a summer stock role and then a part in a short-lived show on Broadway. But the show lasted long enough for an R.K.O. Radio scout to see him and sign him to a contract. Five days later Lang was back in Hollywood and found himself assigned to the male lead opposite Fay Wray in the studio's production of "Wildcat Bus."

Two inches over six feet and weighing 180 pounds, Lang has blue eyes and blond hair, the building of a true athlete, and keeps himself in constant training, including plenty of pitching practice against a mattress in his backyard, just in case. But studio executives insist that he needn't bother; he's a real screen find and on his way to stardom.

AT THE BELLE

"I Love You Again"

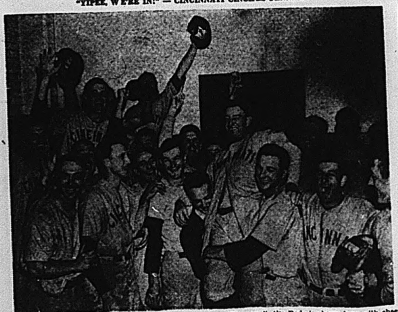
Laughs, long and hearty, will be the order of the day when the new comedy, "I Love You Again," co-starring William Powell and Myrna Loy, reaches the Belle Theatre. Never in the careers of these two favorites have they appeared in a more hilarious film. From beginning to end, the pictures piles laugh upon laugh in a series of maddest situations ever conceived by a group of authors.

The story, now playing at the Belle, in brief, deals with the plight of a man who, through an accidental crack on the head, suddenly recovers from an attack of amnesia which has lasted over a period of eight years. It is a definite shock to him when he learns that during this eight year's time he has acquired not only a charming wife who is about to divorce him, but a spotless reputation as a civic leader in the community of Habersville, a fair-sized bank account, and the manager's berth in a large pottery factory. Adding humor to the situation is the fact that in his pre-amnesia days he was a confidence man of no mean abilities. His decision to return to Habersville and ply his former trade behind his snow-white reputation makes for the tops in comedy.

Not in some time has Powell been handed a role more suited to his abilities. Myrna Loy gets a brief vacation from her characterization as the "perfect wife," a vacation long enough for her to plant a plate of scrambled eggs over the head of her spouse. The supporting cast includes Frank McHugh as Powell's buddy, "Doc" Ryan, Edmund Lowe as a slick oil promoter, Donald Douglas as Miss Loy's model boy-friend, Nella Walker as her mother, Carl "Alfalfa" Switzer of the "Our Gang" comedies, Pierre Watkin, Paul Stanton, Morgan Wallace and Charles Arnt. The picture was directed by W. S. Van Dyke II, Hollywood's leading hit maker.

"Swing Social" is the title of a funny comicolor cartoon to be presented on the same program with the popular Belle Newsreel with its latest world news events.

"YIPEE, WE'RE IN!" — CINCINNATI CINCHES PENNANT



The Cincinnati Reds won their second straight National League pennant when they beat the Philadelphia Phillies 4 to 3 in 13-inning thriller at Philadelphia. They can't lose now no matter how they make out for the rest of the season. After-game dressing room celebration of the Reds is shown here with cheering players hoisting Manager Bill McKechnie to their shoulders for an ovation.

I rely on advertising when I buy. Advertising saves me time and saves me money.

"I've heard that someone has said that Russia gets along without Advertising. Well, so did Ancient Egypt, but I'd rather live here and read the Advertising . . . I'm not trying to be funny. First of all, it isn't true that Russia gets along without Advertising because I have seen advertisements of the Russian Government and Russian Travel Agencies in this country. But that's not important . . . Advertising does a lot for me that I couldn't do for myself. It tells me which products are good. When I see an ad for a breakfast food I generally know what that food is and what its general characteristics are; and I can tell whether the price is right. That is so true and so important to me and to other women that to-day even potatoes and onions are being packaged, branded and advertised—they are of select quality and size; are clean, and come in accurately measured quantities in standard packages.

"I Rely on Advertising"

"I have confidence in advertised products because I have found them to be reliable.

"I BUY Advertised products—without hesitation. That saves me time. As for price—I have found that Advertised products sell on a quality price basis. For the price the Advertised product usually offers more than the unadvertised product of similiar quality.

"I say without hesitation, that ADVERTISING Saves Me Money, Too."

This advertisement is one of a series prepared in the interests of Better Advertising by the Advertising Department of The Ontario Intelligencer.

WHITEY DAHL NOW IN R. C. A. F.

Harold E. (Whitey) Dahl, American flier who fought for the Loyalists in the Spanish civil war and was captured and almost executed by the Franco regime, has joined the Royal Canadian Air Force. He is shown, LEFT, with Flying Officer J. W. Reid before a high altitude test at Camp Borden. After a refresher course, he and other experienced U.S. pilots will take instructors' courses.

SO-O O-OH CLOSE

As close as they come is this nose-and-nose photo-finish of the fourth race at Aqueduct Park race track. Yankee Flirt, away from the camera, huffs and puffs and wins the event by a distended nostril. Lively-hood's nose is just at the wire, but that nostril-length means victory for Yankee Flirt. This is the official photograph by which the track judges decided Yankee Flirt the victor. Distant Isle is third.

LONDON FIREMEN RANK AMONG GREAT HEROES OF BATTLE OF BRITAIN AS THEY COMBAT INCENDIARY BOMBS

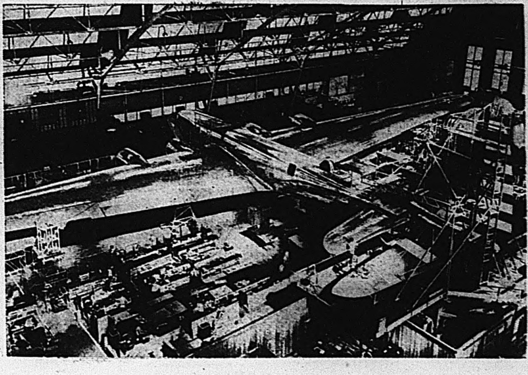
OTTAWA'S MAYOR ADDRESSES CONFERENCE

Mayor Stanley Lewis, of Ottawa, Canada, who is president of the conference of Canadian Mayors, pictured as he addressed the initial meeting of American and Canadian mayors at the New York city hall. The conference, called by Mayor La Guardia and to be held for three days, is to discuss western hemisphere defence.



WORLD'S LARGEST MILITARY PLANE NEARING COMPLETION

The world's largest military airplane, "Guardian of a Hemisphere," will be flown late this fall from the Douglas Aircraft Co.'s airport in California. Fully loaded for emergency mission, it can take off with a gross weight of 164,000 pounds. It will be powered with four 2,000 horsepower engines. Its armament is a closely guarded secret.

CHARGED UNDER DEFENCE ACT

Dr. Samuel Levine, 29, fellow in the geophysics branch of the physics department of the University of Toronto, has been arrested and charged under the defence of Canada regulations.

Little Benny's Note Book

My cousin Artie came over this afternoon and we had to stay in till the rain stopped, wich it kept on not doing, and me and Artie were playing my game of Hop the Atlantic on the floor in ma's room while ma was sewing on her electric sewing machine, and Artie saw, Hay, wait a minute, you chiseler I get another move, you landed on that engine trouble space.

I did like fun, just missed it, and who's a chiseler, you gyp artist? I said, and Artie said, You are, you're so crooked you cant walk straight.

O is that so, well you'd steal pennies from a blind man and try to use them in telephone slots for dimes to call up innocent peopa and tell them a buntch of lies, I said.

Being a swell dubble pointed insult, and Artie said, O you dont say so, well you're so low you could walk under a snake and the snake wouldn't even try to stop you because it would mistake you for a friend of his.

Now that will do, such talk, ma said. It's giving every indication of clearing up, but you'll stay right in this house unless I hear you say something nice to each other, she said, and I quick looked out the window, saying, G, a rainbow, the rain's over. Hay Artie, you're not such a bad guy. If you live to be about 200 years old a few people might start to have some respect for you if they're dum enough, I said.

Thanks, you're pretty good yourself when youre asleep and not even dreaming, Artie said, and ma said, All right, all right, if that's the best you can do I'll take the will for the deed and consider you've given each other a compliment.

Wich just then it started to rain harder than ever, proving it didnt have any idea of stopping, and Artie and I started to talk fast to see who could give each other the first insult, and ma made us go up in my room out of her site and sound.

HELD FOR SMUGGLING

USE SHELTERS AT NIGHT

London, Sept. 21—(CP)—A large number of air raid shelters in London which have been labelled "day only" will be thrown open as havens for Londoners at night. The shelters, beneath stores and office buildings, were intended originally for crowds caught during shopping and business hours. The Ministry of Transport announced the Aldwych branch of the Piccadilly subway would be closed after the last train runs tonight. The line provided a shuttle service between two important stations.

U.S. PEACETIME CONSCRIPTION BILL SIGNED BY PRESIDENT

The first peacetime conscription of manpower in the history of the United States became law as President Franklin D. Roosevelt affixed his signature to the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill. Witnessing the signing of the bill are, LEFT to RIGHT, Secretary of War Simson; Rep. Andrew J. May, chairman of the house military affairs committee; General George C. Marshall, chief of staff, and Senator Morris Sheppard, chairman Senate military affairs committee.

"BRITAIN WILL WIN"

Awarded the Iron Cross and wounded eight times while fighting with the German army in the last war, Ernest Richard Saran is now a lance-corporal in the 2nd Battalion, Calgary Highlanders. Naturalized since 1933, Saran is certain that "Britain will win the war."

MYSTERIOUS RUDOLPH

Austria's patriot and man of mystery who goes only by the name of Rudolph is shown in New York, following his escape to the United States. The Nazis have placed a price of $10,000 on his head. Rudolph, who was chief of the Austrian Freedom Station which broadcast anti-Nazi propaganda from France, barely escaped when Germany overran the country.

THE PRIME MINISTER SEES FOR HIMSELF

Prime Minister Winston Churchill doffed his famous chapeau to the photographer who snapped him while strolling through one of the bombed areas of London after a raid. Fire ladders may be seen in background at the scene of an incendiary bomb fire. The Premier has made it a practice to visit all blitzed areas to get first-hand information on the situation.

Hog Quotations

Dressedweight: Hull $11.30; Peterborough $11.30 plus transportation; Stratford $11.30 plus transportation.

WALL ST. CLOSE

Steels, farm implements, rails and an assortment of preference issues were among the favorites. With the exception of the latter, however, some of which pushed up 1 to 3 points or so to new 1940 tops on 10-share trades, advances generally were limited to minor fractions.

While the trend, during most of the proceedings, was moderately higher, many leaders were unchanged or slightly under water at the close.

There were occasional active flurries over the two-hour stretch and transfers approximated 275,000 shares.

In the Canadian list Hiram Walker and Distillers Seagram stood at slightly higher levels. Dome Mines were easy while Canadian Pacific and Lake Shore Mines held unchanged.

Common shares in front the greater part of the time included U.S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Chrysler, International Harvester, J. I. Case, Deere, Oliver Farm, Glenn Martin, International Nickel and Eastman Kodak.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 21 (CP)—Firming tendencies and activity in golds featured today's abbreviated session of the Toronto Stock Exchange. Base metals also attracted some attention, but industrials and western oils were dull and generally neglected. Volume was about double of last Saturday's turnover.

Active and strong golds included Kerr Addison which gained 10 cents to $2.75, its high for the year, and Madsen Red Lake which improved a couple of cents. Upper Canada ranged between 90 and 92 in fair volume and finally closed around yesterday's closing level at 91. MacLeod resumed its climb of a few days ago and registered another 4-cent advance. East Malartic and Perron each showed 5-cent gains, and Oro Plata advanced about 6 cents.

Aldermac was active and strong at 19, up 1¼, while Ventures advanced 9 cents to 3.49 and Pend Oreille got up 5 on a late sale. Among other base metals Smelters eased a fraction.

Industrials showed more gains than losses but majority of price changes were narrow and interest failed to crop up in any special group. Canada Northern Power advanced 1 1-8 and Walkers touched 41, up a point. Canadian Locomotive and Ford advanced fractions and C.P.R. eased 1-8. Russell Industries advanced 5 points to [illegible] on the first sale in some time.

In western oils Alberta Pacific gained 1 1-2 and Calgary and Edmonton dropped a cent to 1.45. Home lost 3 cents.

Requirements of Export Market Displayed

The Canada Packers' special prize at the Tweed Fair for a pen of five bacon hogs has several attractive features. The object of the competition is to acquaint farmers with the requirements of the export market. The hogs will be displayed at the fair and judged as carcasses at Canada Packers Limited, Peterboro. The placings and reasons will be published the following week.

All the hogs shown in this class will be purchased by Canada Packers Limited on the dressed weight and grade and the price will be the F.O.B. price, Peterboro, on the day of the fair—plus twenty-five cents (25c)) per 100 pounds dressed weight.

Produce Prices Firm During the Week

Toronto, Sept. 21—A firm tone prevailed on the local butter market this week, due to light receipts, which apparently moved steadily into consumptive channels. Deliveries here have been minimized by shipment of fresh supplies from country points to military camps. Trading volume was not heavy, but sellers were able to advance prices ½ cent per pound on the first grade Ontario product when the buyers found offerings limited.

In the background of the market is the report that Canadian butter distribution last month increased 1,429,364 pounds over a year ago, bringing cumulative increase over 1939 since the first of January to 6,511,630 pounds. Diversion from butter to cheese is continuing to some extent in the cheese producing areas of Ontario, while in non-cheese producing districts butter output is above this time last year. The butter production this month, states the Dominion Department of Agriculture, is expected to exceed slightly that of a year ago, and the make of cheese is expected to be at least 10 per cent. higher.

Although the butter market is more of a domestic nature this year as exports have been practically negligible, the department notes that New Zealand has agreed to supply the United Kingdom with 120,000 long tons of butter in the coming season, and that Great Britain has undertaken to accept 10,000 long tons of Australia butter and 20,000 long tons of cheese.

The pace quickened on the egg market this week following a quiet opening. Moderate receipts cleared well, and both sections recorded price advances, which were pared in the graded division when trading slackened toward week-end. Government inspected shipments were in good demand all week at ½ cent to 1 cent per dozen premium. Fair shipments were sent to Northern Ontario and a fair movement of l.c.l. shipments to the Maritimes was reported.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Sept. 21—Produce market prices here today, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Police Blotter

Engaging in an old-fashioned rock fight that resulted in electric street lights being shattered, a gang of teen-age boys disrupted the peace and tranquility of West Belleville early last evening.

The stone-battle took place in the vicinity of "vinegar hill" off Hillside street and saw upwards of forty boys engaged in an old-fashioned stone-hurling battle. Upon the arrival of Constables W. T. Evans and J. J. Hatch the stone throwing hostilities was abruptly halted as the lads beat a hasty retreat under cover of darkness. In their retreat before the law, two of the boys were forced to leave their parked bicycles in abandonment.

The police merely confiscated the bikes and took them to the police station where the officers calmly awaited the arrival of the owners, who appeared seeking to recover their bicycles some time later. It was when these lads were forced to seek recovery of their bikes at the police station that the identity of the youthful gangs were made known. Further investigations are pending, Chief Kidd warned today.

Bernie White, formed third baseman with the old Kingston Ponies, sustained a nasty gash on his head when the automobile in which he was riding overturned on the old York Road, a few miles east of Marysville, last evening. R. B. Amey, Deseronto, who was the driver of the car, told P.C. Ellis at the police station here, that he had suddenly come upon an excavation in the roadway and had been forced to swerve his car in order to avoid a more serious accident. The vehicle turned over in the ditch with little damage resulting, except to White's head.

STRAITS OF DOVER

As in recent nights, the Germans struck first with incendiary bombs to set fires to guide them to their targets.

South London suffered heavily from the fire bombs. Scores of blazes sprang up, but they were extinguished in rapid order. The government said dwellings and industrial premises were damaged.

A church hall in central London and a factory next door were among the buildings set afir. Authorities said scores of persons who had taken refuge in a cellar under the hall were unhurt.

Heavy anti-aircraft fire rising all about the city marked the first raid.

In the later hours of the second raid there was sporadic firing of anti-aircraft guns near the centre of the capital, where several times the raiders glided in from great height to drop projectiles from just above the balloon barrage.

Towns in southeast England and the coastal area also were bombed, but the attacks there were reported lighter than usual.

Nazi Plane Blown To Pieces.

In a region just east of London, anti-aircraft gunners destroyed two German planes within five minutes early today. The first plane exploded in flames after a direct hit, and the second, flying toward London, was blown to pieces by the gunfire.

Three large bombs fell on the southwestern quarter of London during the night. The first wrecked practically every house in one street, killing two persons and injuring others seriously.

Another bomb crashed through several floors of a large block of flats, but most of the occupants were safe in shelters. The third missile damaged a house. One of the blasts shattered windows half a mile away.

Some 500 persons, mostly children, who were sheltered in vaults under the church, were shepherded to another shelter before the fire spread.

A bomb which struck an East London factory early today also damaged adjoining houses, making a number of residents homeless. While they were inspecting the damage, three more bombs fell, killing one person and injuring another.

One of the high explosive bombs dropped in a southeast area last night demolished a garage and killed two young girls. Their parents were injured.

A hundred small incendiary bombs showered one residential area but all of them fell in gardens or fields.

One German bomber, crippled by anti-aircraft fire, was shot down by a British fighter plane near the southeast coast.

JAPS USE

First, Hanoi and Langson to become Japanese military bases. Hanoi and Laokay to become Japanese air bases; Haiphong, Tonkin Bay and Kwangchowan to be leased as Japanese naval bases.

Second, Indo-Chinese tariff rates to be revised in order to effect close Japanese-Indo-Chinese economic cooperation.

Third, the number of Japanese troops to be allowed passage through the colony to be unlimited.

Highly connected Japanese quarters here said Japan was ready for military action aimed at seizing the whole of Indo-China should the latter demand be refused.

Meanwhile, Chinese dispatches said Thailand has threatened to cancel its non-aggression pact with Indo-China unless the French colony accepts Thailand's demands for disputed border territory and for guarantees of fair treatment for Indo China's Thai minorities.

Say Japanese Demands Modified

Hanoi, French Indo-China, Sept. 21—(AP)—An impending crisis over Japanese demands for military facilities in Indo-China apparently was averted today as French and Japanese officials resumed conversations.

The French colonial government announced the Japanese had "modified the range" of demands which caused the collapse of negotiations yesterday in the wake of a 72-hour ultimatum submitted by Japan.

"It is believed these conversations will terminate in an agreement taking account of the interests of both sides," the French communique said. "It is emphasized that during these negotiations Indo-China's territorial integrity and French sovereignty over the country were never open to question."

GERMAN PRISONER CAPTURED

Port Arthur, Sept. 21.—(CP) — Fritz Fuchs, German civilian prisoner who escaped Sunday from a Northwestern Ontario Internment Camp, is under arrest here, Police Chief George Taylor announced today.

THREE CHILDREN

other children were found in their beds upstairs. The accident was discovered by neighbors who forced an entry after receiving no answer to their knocks.

Water May Have Boiled Over

Mrs. Hitchings had been boiling water in a large clothes boiler on the gas stove in the kitchen. It is thought she may have decided to rest on the couch and that the water boiled over, putting out the flames of the gas jet. Firemen and gas company experts worked over the bodies more than three hours with inhalators.

Officials of the Ontario Fire Marshal's Department, along with police, fire and as company experts conducted an investigation and findings led them to believe that carbon monoxide poisoning, rather than illuminating gas, caused the deaths.

Tests conducted with the stove and boiler showed that carbon monoxide fumes were being formed under the boiler, a fire department official said. He added that illuminating gas, burning with a restricted oxygen supply, will form carbon monoxide.

60 OF GERMAN

None of the men has had previous military experience, so they asked Capt. Anthony Holt, former officer in the United States Army and National Guard, to take charge.

"I was delighted by their enthusiasm and accepted", Capt. Holt says. "We base our training along the lines of the Non-Permanent Active Militia and Ontario Civil Guard Units. We have been training every Wednesday evening for about three months now, but the men are just as enthusiastic as they were at the start".

All Joined Voluntarily

He says that the men all joined the Unit voluntarily. Some of the men "were not treated as they should have been after the last war", and that was one reason why he was glad to supervise their military training.

"We who are not of German origin are certainly proud of these men," Capt. Holt says. "If I were going to take a unit of soldiers away, there is no other group in Canada I would rather take with me".

Capt. Holt was born in the Listowel district, but moved to the United States as a young man. He joined the National Guard and held the rank of captain when the United States entered the First Great War in 1916. Until the Armistice he served as an instructor at officer's training schools. He came back to Canada in 1931.

FLORAL RARITY BROUGHT TO OFFICE

A floral rarity consisting of two dahlia blooms of different colors growing on one stem was brought to the editorial rooms of The Ontario Intelligencer today by Mrs. Charles Aikens of Rossmore. The blooms were approximately three inches in diameter and were of unusual color and beauty. One bloom was of a deep mauve while the other was of the variegated variety.

CANADIAN CHEESE GIVEN A BOOST

That Canadian cheese as well as Canadian hospitality is appreciated by our cousins across the United States border is proven by a communication received by Mr. J. L. Irwin, local cheese grader, from Mr. T. S. Blain of the J. B. Ford Sales Company of Wyandotte, Michigan. The writer had occasion to stop over in Belleville on one occasion and was especially pleased with the courteous treatment received and says he will recall for many years the fine cheese served during his stay at the Queen's Hotel. He says in part:

"The writer has not done a lot of auto driving in Canada, but I do wish to mention that my most courteous treatment in your part of North America has come in Belleville. You should be proud of your hotel and its very fine food service. I will recall for a great many years the fine cheese and the fine appearance of the cheese tray which is passed at the end of the meal to each person dining in your hotel".

CEDARDALE SCENE OF HAPPY OUTING

Cedardale was the scene of a happy evening party and wiener roast on Friday evening as about forty young people of the city including members of the newly formed "Torch Club," journeyed to the popular western resort for an evening's fun. Last night's party consisted mostly of boys and girls of high school age who had an enjoyable time as they indulged in a sing song, played games and roasted wieners around a huge bonfire which was built for the purpose. After a full evening's fun the party arrived back in Belleville around midnight.

When completely organized the "Torch Club" membership will include male members between the ages of 16 and 21, who will hold regular meetings throughout the winter months. Officers for the club will be chosen at a weekend party to be staged at Moira Lake camp in the near future.

PEACHES, PEARS AND PLUMS LEAD ON LOCAL MARKET

Apples Remained Steady With Eggs Retailing at Last Week's Close

CORN 25 CENTS DOZEN

District gardeners and farmers displayed a most complete offering of fall fruits and vegetables on the Belleville market on Saturday morning as all kinds of produce was displayed in profusion. Peaches, pears and plums led the fruit list with peaches declining 5c in price from Thursday's quotations. Selects sold at 45c, No. 1's at 40c and No. 2's at 35c per basket. Pears were quoted at 50c the basket, with Lombard plums at 40c and Raine Claude plums 30c the basket. Blue Damsons were plentiful at 25c the basket. Grapes sold at 40c the basket.

Apples remained steady, selling for $1.00 the bushel for cooking varieties with St. Lawrence selling at $1.25 per bushel. Crabapples sold at 25c the basket. Tomatoes sold at 15c per basket or at 75c the bushel, while potatoes were 25c the peck or 85c per bushel.

Cucumbers were seen in increased quantities but gherkins still sold at $1.00 per six-quart basket with larger varieties selling downward to 30c. Cauliflower ranged downward from 35c each, as did watermelons and muskmelons. Corn sold for 25c per dozen ears while bunched vegetables sold at the usual price of 5c per bunch.

Eggs held at last week's prices with Grade "A" large selling at 35c per dozen with other grades selling down to 33c. Grade "A" pullet eggs were 30c the dozen. Butter sold at 30c per pound. The fowl offering was not large ranging downward in price from $1.35 for large roasting fowl to $1.00 for smaller birds. Broilers ranged from 65c to $1.00 the pair.

The season's first offering of puff balls and mushrooms were displayed by vendors with large puff balls selling at 25c and down to 5c for small ones. Mushrooms were offered at 20c the berry box.

White fish sold at 20c per pound with lake trout at 25c or at 30c sliced. Lake rock fish were offered at 2 for 15c, pike at 10c per pound and mudcats at 2 pounds for 25c.

Young porkers were offered at the usual price of from $4.50 to $5.00 each.

Nazi Troops Muting Against Suicidal Invasion Practice

(By JOHN A. MOROSO)

New York, Sept. 21.—(AP)— A former Netherlands artillery captain told of rebellion among Nazi troops training for the attempt to invade Great Britain and described columns of mutineers being marched back to labor camps with their hands trussed behind their backs.

The story was told by Captain Carl Ter Weele, 37, who arrived on the American export liner Exeter from Lisbon. Other passengers said the morale of the German Army has suffered such a severe blow through heavy losses of life during practice manoeuvres that invasion of Britain now is unlikely.

They reported also that occupied France and Holland are teeming with civilian informants who advised British authorities when German ships and self-propelled barges put out into the English Channel for "exercise manoeuvres".

As a result British submarines and planes were waiting, and blasted the troop carriers out of the water, bringing death to thousands, they said.

A highly-placed Government official of a conquered nation, who asked that his identity be withheld, said German officers told him an attempt to invade Britain by sea would be suicidal, that practice manoeuvres had cost the Germans 10,000 men.

Robert Solberg, 48, vice-president of the Armco International Corporation, makers of sheet steel and airplane part in France, said that when he went to a French Channel port to try to reopen a company factory he saw bodies of German soldiers being washed ashore every day.

"The Germans made no attempt actually to invade England", he said. "They made practice attempts which were repulsed with heavy losses. The news of these exercises slipped through to England and British submarines sank the steel barges."

Solberg said the long-range guns being used to shell Dover were captured French guns of .280 and .380 calibre. He said they were based near Calais on railroad cars and the Royal Air Force had bombed the area severely.

John J. Mangan, Paris correspondent of Time magazine, likewise reported heavy loss of life among German troops engaged in practice manoeuvres.

A United States Government official, who asked that his name not be used, said "England will win this war if she can keep the morale of the people up and the R.A.F. in the air.

"These air attacks only make the people mad, and they fight back twice as hard".

Accommodating Bass Returns Lost Rod and Line to Lucky Fisherman

This is the prize fish story of the year. It has a decided Ripley aspect but it is vouched for by not only the participants but other witnesses besides.

It seems that Wilson Bird, Bleecker avenue letter carrier, while on a fishing foray in the Bay of Quinte near here on Thursday, a bit disgusted perhaps at the unwillingness of the bass to bite, laid his rod against the side of the boat. A few minutes later, he heard a whirl, and turned to see his rod and line disappear overboard in a swirl of water.

That ended the day's fun. Disconsolately he turned homeward bemoaning the fates that deprived him of his prized fishing tackle.

But Friday thinking the matter over, and securing another rod and line, he decided to revisit the scene of his loss. For an hour he trolled. He tried casting unsuccessfully for an hour, then came the belated strike.

As he hauled his "catch" nearer the boat, his eyes nearly popped out on his head. For the bass that had taken his bait had a familiar plug dangling from its jaws. And on the end of the line attached to the plug was the lost fishing rod.

Mrs. Bird vouched for the story this morning, although several friends of the Bird family scoffed at the idea. The fact remains, however, that the rod was seen to disappear into the water, and it reappeared last night at the Bird home. Believe it or not.

Free Elections Guarantee No Group Can Control Government Says FDR

The Matriarch of Hyde Park House was on the front portico when her son arrived last night from Philadelphia, where he had pointed to free elections as a guarantee of "the complete and enduring safety of our form of government."

"As long as periodic free elections survive," he said in an address at the University of Pennsylvania, "no set of people can permanently control government...No dictator in history has ever dared to run the gauntlet of a really free election."

Mr. Roosevelt spoke at exercises at which the University observed its 200th birth and awarded him an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

In his address, Mr. Roosevelt referred to the present as a period of "relapse" in the history of world civilization and said "this is no time for any man to withdraw into some ivory tower and proclaim the right to hold himself aloof from the problems and the agonies of his societies."

"The times call for a bold belief," he said, "that the world can be changed by man's endeavor, and that this endeavor can lead to something new."

Regrets Demands

The President expressed regret that there were demands "in certain quarters" to return control of the government to "those few who, because of business ability or economic omniscience" are supposed to be "just a touch above the average of our citizens."

"We should give them all credit for pure intention and high ideals", he said. "Nevertheless, their type of political thinking could easily lead to government by selfish seekers for power and riches and glory" and to a subsequent abolition of free elections that would keep them in power.

In Nazi Germany, the President asserted, a minority group which placed loudly professed emphasis on "their own purity of purpose' came into power, and the rights of free elections and the free choice of government heads were 'suddenly wiped out."

The War Today

By DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Cable Editor

Royal Air Force bombers attacking enemy barge concentrations along the English Channel coast in nightly forays were believed to have seriously disorganized Nazi plans for the attempted invasion of Britain in the 55th week of the war. But Prime Minister Churchill warned anew against any relaxation of vigilance, declaring the attempt will be made when Hitler finds "his best opportunity."

The exploits of the bomber command in making this timely contribution to Britain's defence were rivalled by the fighter command, which on Sunday recorded its most "brilliant and fruitful" day of the war in destroying 178 of the 185 German aircraft shot down that day while losing only 25 of its own machines.

These were bright spots in the battle of Britain, against which must be balanced the heavy toll of civilian life and industrial property exacted by the German raiders in a week of incessant day and night attack. In the first half of September 2,000 persons were killed and 8,000 wounded.

The press, however, was quick to publish figures showing that these losses in life and property, severe as they are, represent only the tiniest fraction of the metropolitan area's buildings and manpower, and Prime Minister Churchill assured parliament that damage to the country's war-making capacity has been "surprisingly small."

Italians Cover Sixty Miles.

In North Africa, the Italian forces under Marshal Graziani finally put themselves in motion, crossing the Libya frontier into the western desert of Egypt. Advancing along the coastal road, they covered some 60 miles to occupy Sidi Barrani, a town noted mainly for its twelve water wells which had been spoiled by British troops. Their next objective will be Mersa Matruh, a British base which will undoubtedly be defended by the main British forces. So far only harassing tactics have been employed against the Italians.

The extent of Britain's naval supremacy over the Italians in the Mediterranean was demonstrated when fleet units and naval aircraft severely punished troop concentration and destroyed supply bases along the coast without encountering opposition from the Italian navy or air force. The British ships returned intact and undamaged.

Not Waiting For Outcome.

Axis diplomacy is not waiting for the outcome of the north African campaign to split up the African continent for the benefit of Germany and Italy and their friends. Ribbentrop travelled to Rome in an armored train and in conferences with the Fascist leaders decided how the dark continent is to be freed from "English tyranny".

A possible role for Spain in the war was also discussed, the Nazi foreign minister having carried on consultations with an emissary of Gen. Franco before leaving Berlin. An attempt to wrest Gibraltar from Britain's grasp was suggested, with Spain participating in an attack from the land side of the fortress.

Glancing back 25 years: Activity increased on the western front in the week of Sept. 15-21, 1915, as a prelude to the autumn offensive which resulted in big advances by the allied armies. In the Balkans, Bulgaria gave unmistakable indications of sympathy with Germany and Austro-Hungary. Greece asked for 150,000 allied troops as a condition of her entry into the war.

Trenton and District

Trenton, Sept. 21.—Large quantities of fruits and vegetables swamped the market here today, while the fall flowers added color to the market that was considered one of the largest this year.

Eggs were offered in small quantities at prices of 35 cents for grade "A" selects and 34 cents for smaller eggs. Chickens were offered at $1.00 per pair and ranging up to 85 cents each.

Potatoes were plentiful and were sold at $1.00 for a 75-pound bag and 25 cents per peck. Tomatoes sold for 50 cents per bushel.

Large quantities of plums were prominent on the market. Blue Damsons and Green Gage plums selling at 25 cents per basket and five cents per berry box.

A number of minor cases were dealt with by Magistrate E. J. Butler, in police court here yesterday. Claude Banken, no address, was fined $5.00 and costs on a charge of loitering.

Lillian Nickle paid a fine of $5 and costs when she pleaded guilty to a charge of careless driving. Wm. D. P. Jarvis of Toronto, was fined $10 and costs for speeding. It was alleged that he was driving his car at 45 miles per hour on Dundas Street, in the town limits.

Pleading guilty to his second offence of being intoxicated, Stanley Cooney was fined $50. and costs by Magistrate Butler. He was given three days to pay the fine.

Charged with assaulting his two sisters, Willis Cronkwright was fined $5. and costs. It was alleged that he went to his sisters' home while intoxicated, and attacked them.

PARENTS WILLING

Little Marc, the son of Count and Countess Marc De Tristan and step-grandson of Louis Shattuck Cates, President of the Phelps Dodge Corporation, was out for an airing in his go-cart, accompanied by his nurse, when the kidnapper drove up in a car and roughly carried him away. The man threatened the nurse with a pistol.

The middle-aged nurse, Mary Foley, was knocked to the ground and painfully bruised when she tried to save the boy. In her futile struggle she knocked off the man's gray hat. It is expected to be a valuable clue in trailing him later.

The chubby, curly-haired lad was speeded away in a dark sedan, pursued ineffectively for some distance by Albert Williams, a Negro chauffeur who drove up in a station wagon just as the kidnapper fled. Persons in the neighborhood managed to catch a glimpse of part of the licence number.

ANOTHER PLATOON VETS HOME GUARD IS TO BE RECRUITED

Another platoon of the Veterans Home Guard will be recruited in the city next week, according to an announcement made today.

Recruits are asked to report to the Orderly Room in the 34th Battery headquarters on Church Street where officers will conduct attestation.

Category A, B and C men only will be considered while regulations which governed enlistment of former platoons such as C.A.S.F. pay and allowances, are still in operation. It was stated that forty men from this city and district will be recruited, and sent to Ottawa for preliminary training previous to their regular duties.

NAZI LUFTWAFFE CAP FOUND

Halifax, Sept. 21—(CP)—An authentic Nazi Luftwaffe cap was found on Citadel Hill of this city where Canadian armed forces are based. The grey-like forage style cap, complete with Swastika, ring and wings and identification number was turned over to army intelligence officers. It is believed possible it is a souvenir dropped by a seaman from the "other side."

BRITISH POET DRAWS CONTRAST

Praises Attitude of Canada and United States in Offering Sanctuary to Children

By KEN CLARK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Sept. 21 (CP)—The gesture of Canadians and Americans in offering sanctuary to children of the United Kingdom is in startling contrast to the gesture of the Nazis toward children, Alfred Noyes, the British poet, said in an interview today.

"The Polish children," he said, "were thrown into trucks and rushed from one part of Europe to another. Trains arrived with dead and dying. Then French children were fired on by machine guns and along the beaches at Weymouth our own children were machine-gunned.

"Put that in contrast with what Canada is doing, what the English speaking people are doing, and you have a perfect example in one act of the difference between the causes."

Mr. Noyes is on a lecture tour through Canada under the auspices of the National Council of Education. Proceeds will go toward the fund for the evacuation of children.

In appearance, young and rather more like a lawyer than the conventional idea of a poet, Mr. Noyes sat lively and easy in the back drawing room of his Ottawa host, Duncan Campbell Scott, and discussed with candor poetry, politics and morals.

Lt. Davies Again Active in 'De-Stinging' Nazi Time Bomb

By SAM ROBERTSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

London, Sept. 21 (C.P. Cable)—The "de-stinging" of a Nazi time bomb which ironically landed in the grounds of the German hospital here is the latest exploit of the daredevil demolition squad commanded by Lieut. Robert Davies, formerly of St. Catharines, Ont.

The bomb, which was hauled from its crater by block and tackle after Lieut. Davies had crawled in the hole and sandwiched himself under the missile to remove the fuse like a dentist calmly extracting a tooth.

The bomb was taken to outlying marsh country and detonated where it could do no harm.

After completing the most recent of his many gambles with death, Lieut. Davies slumbered soundly for half an hour and then took his small squad of Royal Engineers to another part of the city to crack another high explosive egg.

The fact that he is among London's busiest men is making it difficult to clear up the uncertainty regarding his connection with Canada. After he became an international hero for removing the time bomb which threatened to wreck historic St. Paul's Cathedral he informed The Canadian Press that he was born in St. Catharines. However ,war office records say he was born in the County of Cornwall, England.

His statements that he was educated at St. Catharines and the University of Toronto and spent years working on the Welland canal are seemingly borne out by his Canadian accent.

REBEL ASKED TO SURRENDER

"Flying Blind" by VERA BROWN

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

In those three hospital days there had been no word from Michael, except some flowers with his card. Judith wondered whether he was ill. On the last day she wrote him a little note while she was waiting for Tex to come for her. He was to be there at one, but it was almost five when he finally arrived in a rush.

"Here's your coat. Hurry up! I've paid the bill."

"Why such a rush?" Judith asked, smiling at his boyish impatience.

Judith laughed out loud. The picture of the famous aviator struggling with an apartment was too much! A pilot among pans!! A dish-washing hell-diver!!!

Tex jumped to his own defence. "You don't know how domestic I can be!"

"I certainly don't!" Judith smiled.

"You'll be sorry you laughed, when you see all I've managed to get done while you were sick!" he predicted most solemnly.

In the car Tex drove like mad. Judith held her tongue until she noticed that they were not on the familiar home route; then she said: "You're taking the wrong road, Tex."

That satisfied Judith. She settled back to enjoy the air. She felt marvelous. It was good to be alive, after all. No matter what was ahead she felt she could face it.

Tex was in a fine fettle. He teased Judith about the newspaper stories which called her a great heroine in the air crash. "You're hogging my publicity," etc., etc.

"What will happen to Roy's job?" Judith asked. "The heat's on with his company," answered Tex, "but it wasn't Roy's fault. They'll try to make Roy the goat, maybe."

"But they can't!"

"The Department of Commerce is being pretty sharp about you and Ellen riding on the trip. Bud Dudley is trying to smooth things out."

"And Ware?"

"He's all right. Flew on to Hollywood yesterday. I never thought that pretty boy could take it."

"He did! Splendidly!"

Shortly before dark, Tex pulled up into the driveway of a small house on the outskirts of Newark. There were trees, and back of it was space where in summer a garden grew.

"What a sweet house. Who lives here?"

"A pilot friend of mine. Come on in."

"No, Tex. I'd rather not, tonight."

"Be a sport. Come on along!"

Judith reluctantly got out. She followed Tex up to the colonial doorway, and he rang the bell. A woman in a white apron answered, bowed.

"This is Mrs. Aimes, Emma."

Tex and Judith went in to the hallway. There was a fire in a grate in the living room. "Tex!" Judith pointed to the mantle. Over it was a huge handsome map of the world, pointed on silver, tracing in red the airlines of the world. It was just like a map which had been sent to Tex by one of his French flying pals.

"Tex, it's framed like ours."

Judith walked into the living room and stood there stunned. In the corner was her own davenport, the one she had shopped so hard to find. Her chairs, her books!

Judith stood on tip-toe, kissed Tex's chin. . . . Hand in hand they went into the shiny kitchen, with its new stove and refrigerator.

"Something smells awfully good!" she said standing over her own stove. "That your dinner?"

It wasn't until they were in Judith's bedroom, that Tex spoke. "Judith, this home is a sort of peace offering. I had the boys hunting for a place to rent before I left for the south. Lee found this one."

"It's perfect, Tex!"

"That's all I want to hear."

Nothing about Sonia, nothing about their separation. He put his arms around her. "Then I'm forgiven?"

"Yes, Tex. I have forgotten."

They went down to their first dinner in their own home. It was a gay affair. At one point Judith asked, "What about next year's trophy ship?"

"There isn't going to be one. I'm washed up with that stuff. I'm going to quit while I'm alive!"

He raised his glass, threw her a kiss across the room: "Well, here's to you, Mrs. Aimes!"

She raised her glass to meet his: "And to you, Mr. Aimes!"

Later that evening, some of their friends called. The party that night was a great affair.

Hugh Lanning and Lee Holt came at eleven, and Dick Van Mathas arrived with a huge box of yellow roses which were gorgeous in her favorite vase in the living room.

Judith was radiant. Lee caught her in the corner of the hall late in the evening: "The old boy's reformed, that's sure!"

"Yes. And I'm happy."

"Think it will last?" Lee offered, peering into the depths of his empty glass.

"You never know about Tex."

Lee shook his head; "You never know! That's why I love the mugg. Never know what he'll do next."

During the evening somebody mentioned Michael Dudley. "Lucky stiff! He's going to London and Paris. Something about the Trans-Atlantic lines this summer!" Tex remarked.

"When's he going?" Judith asked.

Tex laughed. "My wife has a crush on old Dud! He's off tomorrow, pet."

"He can't go without saying goodbye to me!" Judith was appalled at such an idea.

"Nonsense, how many men do you want?" Tex came over to her, put his arm around her shoulders. "From now on I occupy all your time. Understand, Flier!"

• • •

Next day Dudley sailed at noon. There was no word from him. Judith was disappointed.

The days flew. Now and then Judith saw items in the newspapers about Sonia Winthrop, but her name was never mentioned in the Aimes house.

As Christmas time drew near, Judith's mother wanted her and Tex to come to Detroit. But neither she nor Tex could bear to leave their new home.

"Make them come here!" Tex pleaded. So that is the way things worked out.

Tex had invited everybody from the airport who had no other place to go, to come for Christmas dinner. Judith was in a flurry of preparation.

"What do you want for Christmas, pet?" Tex asked one morning early in December when he'd just come back from Florida. "A ring or a piano?"

"Piano!" she answered. . . . Two days before Christmas the piano came, a handsome affair, which filled one corner of the living room perfectly. Judith had never been so happy in her life. . . . Yet often she thought of Dudley. He was still abroad. She missed him.

Her mother and father arrived Christmas Eve in time for the tree-trimming party. . . . The whole holiday week was perfect. . . . Her mother and dad went home before New Year's.

• • •

Judith and Tex were to go to a big party which Dick Van Mathas was giving. It was the first time the Aimeses had been asked to the Van Mathas Long Island home.

And Tex was delighted. "We're getting into society!" he grinned.

"But we shouldn't be, darling. We can't afford it."

"Don't always be talking about money!" The old scowl appeared on Tex's face.

Dick Van Mathas had arranged for Tex and Judith to come over by train. He would meet them at the station. Judith looked forward to the party with some misgivings. There would be nobody there whom she knew except Dick. Tex of course would get along all right. He always did.

Tex went downtown during the afternoon. When he came back, he held out a purple box to her.

"Orchids! Tex, that's perfect! Just what I needed!"

Her fingers termbled as she opened the package which contained the first orchids her husband had ever purchased for her. When she dressed later she sang happily. Her hair went up well. . . .

So Mr. and Mrs. Aimes started out gaily in a cab. Judith threw a kiss at their home sitting so peacefully in the snow and moonlight with a fond, "Goodbye, house!"

The ride over was long. They had to change at the Pennsylvania station for a Long Island train. When they came to the Hampton station, Dick was waiting for them with: "Gee I'm glad to see you. The house is full of stuffed shirts!"

At the Van Mathas manse, lights were blazing, and a long line of cars waited at the door. When Judith met Dick's mother, she felt quite at east. Mrs. Van Mathas was charming to her son's guests. As for Tex, everybody lionized him immediately and he ate it up.

Judith was glad she found herself sitting next to Dick at dinner. Tex, beaming, was surrounded by gorgeous, gushing Park Avenue debs. Tex was careful about what he drank and Judith watched him with pride. Maybe he was right. He did fit in here. He would be a big executive some day—run great air lines as Michael Dudley did.

After dinner, Judith danced constantly with a lot of young men—handsomely groomed, all pleasant, all talked about the same things: night clubs, shows, the market. Some of them talked about Tex. . . .

"Conversation about my husband seems to be a sort of asset, Dick," she told her host. They had wandered in for some champagne, found Tex surrounded as usual by a lot of admiring women. He was doing all right with the champagne, too. . . .

When midnight came, Tex sought Judith out and that touched her deeply. The champagne bubbled as the New Year bells and horns sounded. He kissed her while the lights were out.

"Happiness, my dear!"

"To you, too, Tex, and good luck for the New Year!"

The tempo of the party speeded up. It must have been two o'clock and Judith was dancing with one of the young men of Manhattan, when she looked over at the door. There were more arrivals. Suddenly she missed a step, apologized.

Sonia Winthrop was standing in the doorway in a crimson frock. She made every other woman in the room seem less glamorous.

"Sonia Winthrop. She's the flier."

"Not bad!."

Dick found her a few minutes later.

"Gee, Judith, I didn't know she was coming! She's with some of dad's friends."

"It doesn't matter, Dick." Judith meant what she said. She didnt worry about Sonia any more. Tex had made his choice. That was over.

The men flocked around Sonia. Judith was determined not to watch. Much later she saw her dancing with Tex. When Judith and her partner danced by, Judith smiled and waved at the other girl, using every bit of poise she could muster. Sonia was not to be outdone. She waved back, called a greeting.

Later Sonia was in the group with whom Judith had supper. So was Dick and Tex. They had a lot of fun. Tex was in top form. He had loved every moment of the gala wine-popping fun.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

It was almost dawn when the party finally broke up. When Judith said her goodbyes to their hostess, Mrs. Van Mathas asked her to come to see her.

"I want to know you better. My son is fond of you. Won't you come to see an old lady?"

"I'll come to see a very charming one," Judith promised.

"You've been good to my boy."

"Then that's settled. You must come to stay with me this summer. It's lovely here. You can swim and sun bathe."

As Judith came downstairs, Tex was in earnest conversation with Sonia. He turned quickly to Judith when she came down the hall. "They insist on taking us as far as Pennsylvania station," he said, motioning toward Sonia.

So with Sonia's friends, they started for Manhattan. The men insisted on stopping off for breakfast. The whole thing was quite a strain on Judith. She wondered how long she could keep going.

Sonia monopolized Tex. Only once did she notice Judith. It was when the men proposed a toast: "To the future!"

Sonia smiled at Judith fixedly.

"To your success!" Judith murmured with—sarcasm?

Sonia kept her voice low. "That's dangerous—a challenge?"

"I like danger." Judith's tongue could be sharp.

"What are you two talking about?" Tex asked.

"The future." Judith was quite reckless. Tex looked a little uneasy. It amused his wife to see him squirm just a little.

Finally goodnights were said. Sonia had a few words with Tex, as he said goodbye to her.

Later in the cab Tex mentioned Sonia. "What a girl!" He squeezed his wife's hand. "You were swell to be such a sport."

"Why not? I'm not afraid of her any more."

"And you needn't be. I wouldn't trade you for anybody in the world."

Yes, it was going to be a happy New Year. When they arrived home, her heart was still full of love for it. Her house! She walked up the steps and felt she would have liked to kiss the door itself!

"Happy New Year, house!" she murmured.

Next morning they slept late and Tex awoke with a terrific head. "Never again will I drink champagne. Never!"

Judith had been up some time. The door bell had awakened her early. It was a cable from Nice—a "Happy New Year" from Michael. She showed the message to Tex when he came downstairs.

"The old boy must be having a time for himself. Imagine New Year's in Nice! Some day when we get some cash, we'll really travel, pet." Then he added, "Sonny's going to Europe very soon. That's why she's east."

"How nice." Judith managed to make her voice sound natural.

All New Year's day people kept dropping in. Some of them stayed on for a pick-up supper. Tex had been drinking since noon. When Judith tried to stop him, he glared at her. No use trying to control him when he was in that mood.

It was long after 10 p.m., when the telephone rang. Judith answered. It was the airport. She called Tex and went back to her guests. Shortly she saw him in the hall with his coat over his arm. She went to him.

"I've got to go over to the airport for a little while. Won't be gone long."

"Flying?" Judith's voice held panic.

That made Tex furious. "Of course not!" he snapped. "It's Royce. Some mechanical trouble. All I have to do to those ships is to speak to 'em and they behave."

He was at the door. "Call a cab, Tex. Don't try to drive."

"OK." He threw her a kiss. "Tell the mob I'll be right back."

She stood there at the door, heard the car start. He was driving himself.

But Tex did not come back. The party broke up early. His desertion spoiled things. After everybody had gone, Judith tidied up the house while she waited for her husband. If he had not been driving, Judith would not have worried. When she could stand it no longer, she telephoned the airport. He had been there and gone, was the report.

By three a.m., Judith was beside herself. She thought of calling the police, for she had visions of Tex crushed and broken in a hospital—or in jail! Even when sober Tex drove a car like a wild man!

The clock ticked loudly in the living room. Finally she determined not to wait up any longer. If he were all right, he would be furious to find her wide-eyed and terrified. Her nerves were in no shape to risk a quarrel. She left one light on downstairs and went on up to the bedroom.

Judith tried to sleep. It was no use. Finally the windows greyed. It was getting daylight. Another car was coming . . . it stopped. Then she heard the garage doors close.

He had come home. Determinedly she lay down, composed herself, closed her eyes. Tex came in after a struggle with the key in the front door lock, turned off the light downstairs, and came tip toeing up the stairs.

She tried to keep her breathing natural. Tex undressed in the dark, fell into his bed. Judith clenched her hands, waiting. Soon he was breathing regularly. She was shaking, so great was the reaction. He was home, safe.

In the morning Judith did not awaken until Tex called her from the kitchen: "I'm hungry. How about breakfast?"

Exhausted, Judith dragged herself out of bed, took a cold shower. Tex had the coffee going when she joined him in the kitchen.

"Good morning, sleepy head. Was it you or I who went off the reservation last night?" he said gaily. "I got mixed up with some of the gang at the airport. I'm sorry."

"That's all right. I was worried about you and the car."

"I should have called you but I intended to leave after every drink. Lord I feel awful. And I've got to go to work tonight."

So ended their New Year's celebration. Tex was honestly sorry. He and Judith went for a long walk around noon. Tex was in great good humor. Judith tried to forget the long hours of waiting.

"That's the way to handle him, not to make a scene." Judith congratulated herself on her restraint. She finally drove him to the airport for his nine o'clock run.

"I should be back by five o'clock tomorrow, unless the weather is bad."

"Shall I meet you?"

"Check with the boys first. If I'm coming in, you might run over if you haven't anything else to do."

Judith left him then. Upon returning home, she glanced at the evening papers. There on the front page was an item about Sonia. "She Missed the Boat," ran the caption over her picture. Sonia was to have sailed at midnight for the Mediterranean. But she'd arrived at the dock just in time to see her ship, with all her baggage aboard, out in mid-river.

Judith put the paper down, thoughtfully. Gradually a doubt began to seep into her mind. . . . Tex had been with Sonia! She was sure of it. Sonia had had somebody call Tex away. . . . In despair she went upstairs, took a hot bath, hoping to get a night's rest.

As always when Tex was flying, Judith telephoned the airport before she tried to sleep, asked about the weather. "Pretty bad, tonight, Mrs. Aimes," Dickinson in the weather bureau told her. But she feared to ask if any flights had been cancelled.

Judith said goodnight and hung up quickly. She brooded for a long time. . . . But she must not jump at conclusions. The trouble was that the boys at operations office knew her voice. She hated this idea of checking up on Tex.

"I've got to know!"

If she called the ticket office, she might disguise her voice. Judith made an attempt.

"Did the ship for Miami leave at nine?" she asked.

"No, madam. It was cancelled."

Judith got up and dressed slowly. She could not stay there in the house. She put on her coat and went out to get the car. It was bitterly cold. For a long time she drove around aimlessly.

It was after two when she got home. She put the car away, came into the house. Tex had not come. She had not expected that he would.

Somehow she got through the night. But another day was ahead of her. She had to pull herself together. Judith tried to look over the huge pile of seed catalogues at her bedside. It was hopeless. She'd go into the city. It would pass the time, perhaps ease her anxiety. . . .

Judith spent an hour in a newsreel theatre. She looked at spring clothes. But she was hardly conscious of what she saw. After lunch she stopped at a drugstore, telephoned to the hotel where Sonia had been staying.

"Madame sailed this afternoon," the clerk told her. So she had gone.

Judith walked down Broadway, the winter wind biting her face. What should she do? Go back home, pretend she did not know?

At four she telephoned Emma, determined to tell her she would not be home for dinner. "Mr. Aimes called, he said to pick him up at the airport, that he got in early. He'll be here by six," reported the maid.

With a strong effort, Judith decided to give Tex another chance. And so she returned home to meet her errant husband with a smile when he finally came. Tex went on blithely, unaware that Judith knew he had seen Sonia.

Thus their life slipped back into the old groove. They were happy again, or so Judith felt. She even did not think of the time when Sonia would come back. . . .

• • •

Early in March, Michael Dudley came home. When he telephoned Judith, she was glad indeed to hear his voice.

"Can you come for dinner some night soon?" she invited.

"I'm afraid not, Judith. I'm not as stoical as all that," he said.

"But we want to see you, hear all about your trip!"

"We'll have dinner together some night soon when Tex is not working," he promised. With that she had to be satisfied.

Judith eventually became restless and unhappy because Tex was staying out late. He made all kinds of excuses, but her life had become timed by the sound of closing garage doors. Only when she heard them shut, in the early hours, was her vigil ended. Tex was home safe.

She began to think again about Sonia . . . to worry. Had she returned from abroad without publicity? One morning when Tex rushed off to the airport with only two hours' sleep, Judith telephoned the hotel where Sonia had stayed on her last visit. Sonia was not in her room.

"Is there any message?"

"No, I'll call again."

Judith hung up the receiver carefully. She sat a long time with her hands in her lap, utterly defeated.

Then began a succession of terrible days and more terrible nights. She came to dread the lamp light. It meant waiting again. Night after night she lay in her bad waiting, frantic, until she heard the garage doors close, knew that Tex had finally come home.

When Tex was with her, he was as amusing and kind as ever. He said he was busy, that they were trying to put some new ships "on the line". Judith accepted his words in silence. There seemed to be nothing else to do

There was nobody to whom she could turn. Not Lanning again. She couldn't. Nor Michael Dudley. There was a new restraint between her and Michael now.

British Communique

London, Sept. 21 (CP)—Casualties during last night's German air raids on London apparently were "rather less than on previous nights," the Government announced today on the basis of preliminary reports.

The text of a communique issued by the Ministries of Air and Home Security said:—

"London was again the objective of last night's air raids and very little activity has been reported from other parts of the country.

"The attacks were mainly concentrated on districts in East and South London in the neighborhood of the River (Thames). Some fires were started but were quickly brought under control. Some damage was caused to dwelling houses and industrial premises.

"Reports so far received show that casualties were rather less than on previous nights."

AFTER TRIALS WILL COME VICTORY—THE KING

Nazi Raiders, Paced by Monster Bomber, Are Beaten Back

293 Lives Lost, 87 Children, as Ship Torpedoed

'We Have Goodwill Of All Those Loving Freedom'

King George Institutes 'George Cross' for Civilian Gallantry and Also 'George Medal'

By SAM ROBERTSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 23 (CP).—"After our present trials will assuredly come victory,' the King said today in broadcasting to the four corners of the world a message reviewing the first year of the war.

"There is much to encourage us," His Majesty reminded his millions of listeners.

Speaking before a microphone in an underground shelter in twice-bombed Buckingham Palace while London was under an air raid alarm, his Majesty announced creation of a "new mark of honor for men and women in all walks of civilian life." To be known as the George Cross, it will rank next to the Victoria Cross, which is the greatest award for valor which can be bestowed on men of the fighting services.

The King also disclosed that he had instituted a George Medal for wider distribution.

A.R.P. Workers Praised.

Expressing a special word of gratitude to the men and women of the air raid precautions services, he said the "devotion of these civilian workers, firemen, salvage men and many others in the face of grave and constant danger has won a new renown for the British name."

Much has happened since September, 1939, His Majesty said. Great nations had fallen. Armies of invasion were massed 20 miles from Britain's shores. Enemy air fleets had launched day and night attacks against British cities.

Text of Broadcast By His Majesty

London, Sept. 23.— (AP)—Following is the text of the King's Broadcast to his people today:

It is just over a year now since the war began. The British peoples entered it with open eyes recognizing how formidable were the forces against them, but confident in the justice of their cause.

Much has happened since September, 1939. Great nations have fallen. The battle, which was at that time so far away that we could only just hear its distant rumblings, is now at our very doors. The armies of invasion are massed across the Channel, only 20 miles from our shores. The air fleets

FLYING IN FORMATION

Other Plane Involved Brought to Forced Landing Without Serious Damage and No Injury to Occupants

Trenton, Sept. 23—Colliding in midair, two Royal Canadian Air Force training planes hurtled to the ground, two miles south of Brighton on Saturday afternoon, causing the death of Aircraftsman A. E. Porter of Morris, Manitoba.

Flying Officer C. C. Moran, who lives near Brighton, pilot of the plane in which A. C. I. Porter was a passenger parachuted to safety after he found his plane was unmanageable. Flying Officer George Hill and Leading Aircraftsman H. N. Sharpe in the second plane escaped without injury.

According to information received from a number of persons in the district, who witnessed the collision, the two planes were flying in formation, with a third plane. In some manner the Moran piloted plane and the Hill plane came together in midair so that the propellor of the Hill plane caught the tail assembly of the other plane.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

The equinox. Yesterday was the autumnal equinox. Day and night were each 12 hours long. The intensity of sunlight at 40 degrees north latitude, about as far north as Philadelphia, was 30 per cent. less than on June 21, when the sun was highest. And at 60 degrees north latitude, or as far north as Cape Farewell, Greenland, the intensity was 50 per cent. less. So the warmth of the present time of the year is due not entirely to the intensity of sunlight but to the warmth in the earth, sea and atmosphere which has accumulated all summer long.

Horror and Indignation Greet Word Children Were Torpedoed

London, Sept. 23—(CP Cable) — Words of horror and indignation greeted the announcement Sunday that 294 lives were lost, 87 of them children, when a German submarine torpedoed a Canada-bound liner at night when it was 600 miles out in a storm-wracked sea.

Geoffrey Shakespeare, chairman of the children's overseas reception board, said: "This deed....is another example of the barbarous methods of warfare associated with Nazi Germany and it is only comparable with their present brutal and indiscriminate bombing of women and children in London."

The Press Association called it "one of the cruellest and most heart-rending tragedies of the war" and "the greatest act of Nazi inhumanity."

The Australian Consolidated Press said "this brutal sinking will shock and horrify the whole civilized world."

The Daily Mail, under the heading "murder at sea," said: "Nothing of all that has happened has given the world a more vivid and awful example of the sort of warfare Hitler wages."

It asked if the government is absolutely satisfied with the arrangements for transportation of the children and if the ships were convoyed far enough to sea. It said it was not a sufficient answer that thousands of children had already been taken across the Atlantic without loss of life but that "still more must be done to prevent a repetition of this intolerable tragedy."

A "Wicked Tragedy"

The News Chronicle called the sinking "a wicked tragedy," and added: "This revolting tragedy must not be allowed to slow up the speed of overseas evacuation."

The Daily Telegraph commented that "while the world will be shocked at this deed without name, it must also be startled into a clearer and fuller realization of what the Nazi code of conduct allows and what domination of the world by the Nazi power would mean for the extinction not only of human freedom but of human decency."

The Daily Herald bluntly headed its editorial "murder". It said "Hitler himself directly, fully and personally bears the guilt. Let us write that in our hearts and never forget it."

The Times said the German way of warfare knows no restraint of conscience and added that "heart rending though this criminal disaster is, it does not reflect upon the policy of sending children to safety overseas."

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 23—(CP)—The Mediterranean War for Africa and the Near East quickened today as the Royal Navy and Air Force raided Italian positions and the Government of Egypt declared martial law.

Martial law was invoked as a defence measure by Premier Hassan Sabry Pasha.

A naval communique said a fleet of warships attacked Italian positions about newly occupied Sidi Barrani, Egypt, "with good results" early Sunday. This was the second naval bombardment of the area, 60 miles inside the Egyptian frontier, in an effort to disorganize Italian preparations for a further advance across the desert.

Sidi Barrani was declared by a Reuters News Agency dispatch to have been the scene of great slaughter among occupying Italian troops when British land mines were exploded, blowing the village to bits.

8 BOMBS MISS BRITISH VESSEL

Freighter Subjected to Machine-Gun Fire From Nazi Bomber

Baltimore, Sept. 23 (AP). — The bullet-spattered British freighter Empire Bison was moored safely at a dock here today, and from stories related by crewmen she might just as easily have finished in Davey Jones' locker.

Eighteen days ago the ship left England, and when about 240 miles west of Ireland on the third day out, a German bomber roared over at dawn, aiming eight bombs at the 410-foot Empire Bison.

When all missed, three of the bombs by less than twenty feet, the twin-engined raider circled and machine gunned the ship, riddling the deck, four lifeboats, wireless and cabins with bullets.

Captain W. H. Harland said that miraculously, no one was injured.

Armed only with a deck gun for submarines, the Empire Bison was helpless against the airplane.

Heroism Shines Through Dark Tragedy as Huns Sink a British Liner

By SAM ROBERTSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 23—(CP Cable) — Heorism shone through dark tragedy when a German U-boat captain without warning shot a torpedo into a British liner in mid-Atlantic darkness and sent 87 children and 207 grown-ups to the bottom of the chilly ocean.

There was 10-year-old Edward Colin Ryder Richardson, a wisp of a Welsh boy who tried to keep a spark of life flickering in the nurse aboard the lifeboat in which he rode the angry seas for some hours. Only 14 of 38 persons in the boat survived.

When the dying nurse asked that someone cradle her head little Edward clasped her in his arms and said over and over again, "I can see the boats, nurse. It won't be long now." His white lies were in vain. The woman succumbed from exposure.

Angus MacDonald, the ship's carpenter who was in charge of a lifeboat, said: "Even when the adults were moaning from the cold and sleet beating into their wounds, even when the dead were being lowered overboat, young Richardson kept trying to cheer us up. He was magnificent."

The little hero, whose parents were evacuating him privately, and Prof. J. P. Day of McGill University were among the survivors of this water-logged boat. The Professor said young Richardson was "the bravest and kindest boy I've ever seen."

Buoyed Spirits in Lifeboats

Thirteen-year-old Eleanor Wright, who was being evacuated from Sunderland under the government scheme, buoyed the spirits of 23 others in her lifeboat by telling them "don't worry, the British navy won't let us down." Only five out of these 23 lived to see her promise come through.

Other passengers told how Ernest Sekulas, London publisher, held the stiffened bodies of two dead children in his arms and sang to them so their dying mother — the wife of a British soldier who is a prisoner of war—wouldn't know they had succumbed to the cold.

"I didn't know women and children could die so easily," Sekulas said. He broke down after saying he couldn't be interviewed further.

Australian Proves Hero

The passengers also placed a hero's wreath of A. E. Dowling, an Australian. He dived from a lifeboat into the chilly, night-shrouded waves a number of times to bring back children who were washed overboard. He never thought of his own safety and never seemed to tire.

He pleaded that excuse—tiredness—to escape an interview.

There were other heroes, too — the children who sang "Roll Out the Barrel" as the liner slipped to the bottom and the Captain who shouted "take care of yourselves now" to the passengers and then went down with his ship.

8 NETHERLANDS ARMY OFFICERS NOW IN CANADA

Group Will Recruit and Form Infantry Battalion Among Netherlands Nationals in Dominion

GO TO OTTAWA

An Eastern Canadian Port, Sept. 23 (CP).—Eight Netherlands army officers arrived here from Great Britain today to recruit an infantry battalion among Netherlands Nationals in Canada.

Headed by Col. G. J. Sas, former Netherlands military attache at Berlin, the group will go to Ottawa where they will first pay their respects to their Crown Princess Juliana. Col. Sas said there was a possibility they might also visit the United States.

Wearing uniforms much like those of Canadian army officers, the group of eight stepped ashore from a liner, which had docked earlier at an-

TWO ARE KILLED IN U.S. ARSENAL

Picatinny Arsenal Scene of Second Explosion in Dover, N.J., Area

Dover, N.J., Sept. 23—(AP)—Two persons were killed and six injured today in an explosion at the United States army's Picatinny arsenal.

It was the second fatal munitions blast in the Dover area within a fortnight, the explosion of a smokeless powder line at the Kenvil plant of the Hercules Powder Company Sept. 12 having taken 50 lives.

Names of the dead and injured at Picatinny were not immediately available.

Taking Apart Fuses

Col. A. S. Buyers, public relations officer at the arsenal, said the explosion occurred as employees were taking apart fuses of old shells, "a dangerous job at best."

They were in a building about 30 by 50 feet in size and set apart for this operation. Each employee was protected by screens, which apparently prevented serious injury to any of the six reported hurt. Buyers said they thought there were only eight persons in the structure. The blast caused "some damage" in one end of the building, Buyers said.

GERMAN ALIEN HELD CONFESSES TO KIDNAPPING

Wilhelm Jakob Muhelbroich Captured With Three-Year-Old Child in the Mountains

CLUBBED BY CAPTORS

Hillsborough, Calif., Sept. 23—(AP)— Unharmed, baby Marc De Tristan, Jr., was safe with his titled parents today while Federal Bureau of Investigation men held his accused abductor, an alien German, Wilhelm Jakob Muhlenbroich, in some secret spot.

Joy reigned in Hillsborough, whose residents last night turned out by the thousands to roar a Hollywood welcome as Count Marc De Tristan proudly bore his son up a long path to the waiting mother, the child's curly head bobbing above the jubilant throng.

Former Confidant Of Hitler Held in Internment Camp

Ottawa, Sept. 23 (CP)—Internment officials today said Ernst (Putzi) Hanfstaengl, former Nazi Foreign Press chief, is confined in a Canadian internment camp.

He is one of the enemy alien civilians who were rounded up in England and sent to Canada for safekeeping.

A former confident of Adolf Hilter, Hanfstaengl once described himself as "a voluntary exile" from Germany. He came to England several years ago after an unexplained break with the Nazi chieftain.

First word of Hanfstaengl's internment in Canada was made public when his son, studying at Harvard University, told of receiving a letter from his father in which Putzi said he was interned in Canada.

ACCEPTS CHAIRMANSHIP

Toronto, Sept. 23 (CP). — Mrs. David A. Dunlop of Toronto has accepted the chairmanship of the War Services Committee of the National Council of the Young Men's Christion Association of Canada, it was announced today. One of the tasks undertaken by the W.S.C. is the solution of problems arising among family visitors to men in military training camps.

Hostess houses now are established in Camp Borden, Trenton, Pembroke, Windsor Mills, Val St. Michel, Que.,

GIGANTIC BOMBER FLEES BEFORE SPITFIRES' FURY

Enemy Planes Fly 'at Terrific Height' in Monday Morning Raids

5 NAZIS DESTROYED

Fighter Patrols Break Up Nazi Squadrons and Pursue Them

London, Sept. 23—(CP)— Nazi raiders, paced by a "monster" bomber, roared over England's coasts again today and some reached London, sending its millions underground twice after dawn and spattering the western part of the capital with bombs.

Vigorous anti-aircraft fire quickly cleared the skies, however, and most of the invaders were believed to have been turned back by Royal Air Force fighter squadrons before they reached the capital.

Authoritative reports said five raiders were shot down in air battles with fighter planes this morning.

Four separate times waves of German planes surged across the coast as Nazi forces again intensified the battle of Britain after a lull in daylight raids.

MENZIES' GOV'T GIVEN MAJORITY

Coalition Minister in Power in Australia Will Again be Governing Body

Melbourne, Sept. 23 (CP). — The coalition ministry headed by Prime Minister R. G. Menzies will have a working majority in both Houses of the Australian Parliament — from three to five in the House of Representatives and one in the senate—it was indicated late today on the basis of incomplete returns.

The probable line-up of the parties as compared with the standing at dissolution follows:

House of Representatives.	New	Old
Government:
United Australia	25	26
Country	14	16
Opposition:
Labor	31	23
Lang Labor	3	9
Independent	1
Total	74	74
Senate.
Government
(3 holdovers)	19	20
Opposition
(14 holdovers)	17	16

As counting proceeds under the Commonwealth's proportional representation electoral system there probably will be changes in the standing. Polling took place Saturday.

Labor made its most substantial gains in New South Wales, where the opposition to the government was led by Herbert Vere Evatt, who resigned as a judge of the High Court of Australia to contest a seat on behalf of the official opposition led by John Curtin.

Mr. Curtin himself was defeated, but a movement was started to open a safe labor seat for him in order that he might carry on as opposition leader. Should this not be done, Mr. Evatt was regarded as a possible new leader.

Second War Loan is Closed Oversubscribed by $42,248,300

Ottawa, Sept. 23—(CP)—Canada's $300,000,000 second war loan went over the top with a bang.

The subscription books were closed on Saturday with the loan oversubscribed by $42,248,300. Though slow to respond in the first few days, it was the small investors who rallied towards the close to push the loan well beyond its objective.

Last January the first war loan of $200,000,000 was oversubscribed by 60 per cent, in addition to conversion subscriptions totalling another $50,000,000. This time conversion subscriptions amounted to $25,642,200.

"Canada's second war loan has been carried over the top in a manner that is a source of pride and gratification," Mr. Ilsley said. "The unity and resolution of the Canadian people in the cause for which we are at war has again been demonstrated by their response to this loan."

To all those who unselfishly gave their aid in making the loan a success, Mr. Ilsley expressed his gratitude.

The oversubscription meant that orders from large institutions and corporations must be reduced in order that subscriptions from private investors be confirmed in full. This is in line with the announced government policy.

Britons Enraged, Press Headlines Call it "Murder"

Undisclosed Ship Sunk 600 Miles off England Late Last Tuesday Night—113 Rescued

By SAM ROBERTSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 23—(CP Cable) — A horrified and angry Britain vowed today to continue with the evacuation of children overseas from these bomb-scarred isles despite German torpedoing of a mercy ship with the loss of 87 youngsters bound for Canadian havens and 206 grown-ups.

It was night and the Atlantic was heaving under the lashing of hail and rainy when a U-boat fired a torpedo into the Canada-Bound liner without warning last Tuesday. The Nazis must have known that the chances of rescue were practically nil for the boat was 600 miles from the Irish coast.

One hundred and thirteen survivors of the 406 passengers and crew tossed in lifeboats and rafts that constantly were awash for as long as 14 hours before a British warship was able to buck across great seas to their rescue.

Children Washed Off Rafts

Waves washed exhausted children and adults from the boats and off the rafts. Scantily clad against the chill water and hail, others died of exposure. The torpedo struck where many boys were asleep and a merciful instant death saved them from worse horrors.

It is stated reliably that the sinking will not be permitted to interfere with government plans to send children to the safety of Canada, the Antipodes and other countries overseas.

The press generally agreed this "revolting tragedy must not be allowed to slow up the speed of overseas evacuation," said The News Chronicle. The Evening News commented that "if the lessons of this disaster are properly and promptly learned there is no reason why the children's overseas reception board should not go on with all the safety that is humanly possible."

Horror Remembered For Long Time

"This is the sea war as it was always intended by Germany," said The Manchester Guardian in an editorial. "The shame and horror of it will be remembered long after Hitler and his tools have been swept from power."

The casualties were the first in the transport to safety of nearly 3,000 youngsters, but it was not the first time that a Nazi undersea craft had imperilled evacuees. However, when The Netherlands Tiner Volendam was torpedoed Aug. 30, 320 little refugees from totalitarian warfare and 300 others en route to Canada were saved. Only two members of the crew perished with the liner.

The government waited until today to announce the tragedy of almost a week ago to give welfare workers opportunity to notify the children's parents in London, Liverpool and Middlesex after exhausted survivors were brought to a northern port of England.

The ship, her name undisclosed, was torpedoed 600 miles west of England and sank in a stormy sea within 20 minutes after she was attacked at 10 p.m. last Tuesday, the

MOTHER RESCUED AS BRITISH SHIP IS TORPEDOED

Mr. Cecil Warren, Belleville, Receives Cable from Brother-in-Law That His Mother Now Safe in England

REUNION WAS PLANNED

Mr. Warren Was to Have Gone to Montreal Today to Meet His Mother from Ipswich, England

One of the shocking tragedies of war, the sinking of an undisclosed British liner carrying British children and other passengers to Canada, was brought home suddenly to the family of Mr. Cecil Warren, 156 Victoria Avenue, early today.

The liner was attacked by a submarine and sunk without warning when 600 miles off the coast of England early in the week. Two hundred and ninety-four persons including 83 children were swept to their deaths.

On the ill-fated ship was a little old lady of seventy years. She was coming to Canada from her home beneath the battle-scarred skies of Britain to live with her son. She is Mrs. Bessie Warren, a native of a small village near Ipswich in Suffolk. According to radio and newspaper reports, Mrs. Warren was one of the survivors of a tragedy of the sea that will forever stain the already darkened escutcheon of the Nazis.

Son Had Given Mother Up For Lost

"I had been notified that my mother had sailed for Canada on a liner, by the office of the shipping company," Mr. Warren told newspapermen this morning. "I have been through a peculiar series of emotions for when I heard the news I had given my mother up for lost. Then a newspaperman told me that she was listed among the survivors and hope was renewed. I only hope the news is true."

It was about an hour later that Mr. Warren received from his brother-in-law, Mr. Robert Howard, a cable saying that Mr. Warren's mother was safe back in England.

Mr. Warren had made preparations to leave for Montreal today to meet his mother.

Mother Planned to Visit in Canada

Mrs. Warren was making her first trip to Canada and had looked forward to a reunion with her son here. She had been living with a daughter in Ipswich, and all arrangements for her reception here had been completed. According to late news despatches the survivors of the tragedy have been returned to England by rescue ships.

Port Hope, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP).—Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Lewis of nearby Welcome were informed today that their son, Flying Officer Wilfred Lewis of the Royal Air Force has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

He has been engaged in flying operations over German-held portions of Europe and took part in the bombing of Sylt a few months ago.

POUNDKEEPER ORDERS DOGS TIED UP

Two dogs, said to be the property of Mrs. Pigden, Ann Street, launched a savage attack on a small stray kitten over the weekend, killing it at the rear of a house at 272 Ann Street. City Poundkeeper Thomas Thorne, who was called to the scene by neighbors, ordered the animals tied up, pending investigation of the affair.

MAN LEAVES BUS WITHOUT PAYING FARE

Front street pedestrians gazed with curiosity at what appeared to be a foot-race near a lower town restaurant shortly after ten o'clock last night. A man of small stature was apparently being chased by a husky bus-driver, who afterwards told police the man had dashed from his vehicle without the formality of paying his fare.

The smaller man sought the safety of an alleyway leading to the river-bank and successfully eluded his pursuer. Another man who boarded the bus with the escapee at Grafton, stated he had no knowledge of the man. They had been hitchhiking from Toronto.

SHORTAGE OF TOMATO PICKERS NOTED

A pronounced shortage of farm laborers for picking tomatoes and picking apples is being experienced by district farmers it was learned at the local employment bureau this morning, where many enquiries are being made for this class of worker. "There seems to be very few people looking for this type of employment however, and farmers for the most part are going away without finding the needed help," stated employment officials.

Machinists and die-makers are also in demand by local industrial firms, but all local workers of this class are now gainfully employed.

TAG DAY FOR BLIND REALIZES $400

The tag day for the blind staged in Belleville on Saturday was a great success according to Institute officials this morning. The actual sum realized has not been completely checked but it is expected the amount will be approximately $440 and much in advance of the receipts of last year's tag day.

The Hastings County Board for the National Institute for the Blind take this means of thanking all taggers who showed their co-operation by assisting with the work, also local theatres for bringing the campaign to the attention of the public through showing the work for the blind on the screen, also the local press, the Quinte Dry Beverage and the Coca Cola Company.

YOUNGSTERS WARNED BY CITY POLICE

Police issued warnings yesterday to groups of small boys, who have been destroying property in Victoria Park. The youngsters "raided" the park last night, knocking over seats and causing a general disturbance. Drastic action will be taken in the future, and measures taken to stop these practices.

CHILD IS INJURED WHEN HIT BY CAR

City police today were seeking the identity of a motorist, whose automobile struck six-year-old Arthur Kellar, of 73 Grier Street, on North Front Street yesterday resulting in severe shock and lacerations. The motorist stopped and picked the lad up, taking him home to his parents, but the driver neglected to leave his name and address.

The first intimation police had of the incident came when Dr. Van Blakslee, who attended the lad and ordered him removed to the Belleville General Hospital, reported the matter. Further investigations by the police revealed the facts in the case. Eye-witnesses stated the driver stopped his car after it had struck the lad and knocked him down. The driver assisted young Kellar into his car and drove him home.

Gagging and Trussing Of Child Probed

Wallaceburg, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP)—Police said Sunday they were investigating the recent gagging and trussing of three-year-old Junior Mission, whose body bears bruises and scratches from a game with an older boy.

The lad, son of Mr. and Mrs. Julian Mission, failed to appear for lunch last Thursday and a search of the district was started. He was found in a vacant lot, bound and lying face down among weeds. He was almost nude, his arms were tied behind his back and his bloomers had been used as a gag.

SECOND BUILDING TO HOUSE PRISONERS IN WAR BLAME TRIALS

Vichy, France, Sept. 23.—(AP)—The French Government today set aside a second building near Riom to house prisoners to be brought before the Supreme Court in the war blame cases now being investigated. The new building is Bourassol Manor in the village of Menetrol. The other building, where former Premiers Paul Reynaud and Edouard Daladier, Gen. Marie-Gustave Gamelin and others are held is the Chateau Chazeron.

ZELLERS TEAM BANQUETED BY THE MANAGEMENT

Members Gather at Queens Hotel to Celebrate Winning of Championship

COACH HONORED

The Zellers ladies softball team, winners of the league, which operated in this city during the past summer were agreeably surprised on Friday night at the Queen's Hotel, when Manager of the team and also Zellers store, Morley Wyman, entertained the members at a delightful banquet and they were afterwards guests of the management at the theatre party held at the Belle Theatre.

Every member of the team was seated about the table with their coach "Chuck" Barnett having an honored place along with invited guests, who had supported the team throughout the season's play. The banquet was most delightful, served in a very efficient manner by Mine Host, Mrs. Zita Ryan. At the conclusion of the repast, Mr. Wyman who acted as chairman for the function expressed his pleasure to the members of the team in winning the championship in their first year of competition. He told the team plans were being laid down for another season of softball and that appropriate uniforms would be furnished by the store. He congratulated the girls on their fine display of sportsmanship during the season and he believed a great deal of benefit had been derived through the competition.

Mr. Wyman expressed his thanks to the coach, stating that through his efforts a winning combination had been effected and announced that Mr. Barnett, if he was in the city next year, had consented to again coach the team. This announcement was greeted by a round of applause by the team. Each member of the team in a short address expressed her pleasure on being a member of the winning combination and was ready to participate again next season. The coach was surprised, when the team presented him with a suitable gift for his efforts during the season and taken entirely by surprise thanked all for their kindness. The party then adjourned to the Belle Theatre, where two delightful pictures were enjoyed.

RED CROSS WORKERS TO MEET AT "Y"

Campaign Chairman, Howard Clarke has announced a meeting for all canvassers offering their services for the Red Cross campaign in Belleville to convene at the Y.M.C.A. at 8.00 this (Monday) evening when instructions pertaining to their duties during the drive will be received. The districts in which individual workers will be expected to canvass will be announced and therefore it is important that all canvassers be on hand for the meeting. The Dominion-wide campaign to raise funds for the Red Cross was launched this morning and a generous response from Belleville citizens is solicited.

Rev. D. T. McClintock to Retire From Active Ministry Next June

At the close of the morning service yesterday in Tabernacle United Church, Rev. D. T. McClintock announced that he would retire from the active work of the ministry at the close of the present church year, June 30, 1941.

He announced that a congregational meeting would be called soon to take the necessary steps to choose a successor. He was making the announcement early in the year, that the congregation might have every opportunity and plenty of time to look about for another minister.

He said that there would be opportunity to express his gratitude to the congregation for their great kindness to his wife and himself during the closing years of their ministry, but today he wished to say how gratified he was that in choosing a successor they would not need to consider his future or seek a satisfactory exchange. They would be at liberty to choose any minister they wished throughout the church.

Business, Industries Show Marked Upward Trend Over Last Year

Business, industrial and conditions generally in Belleville are, for the first time in years in a state of transcendancy. An exhaustive survey conducted recently revealed a definite upward trend in practically all phases of business and manufacture.

Retail merchants in nearly all branches of business report an increase in volume of from five to fifteen per cent over last year. Christmas business in 1939 was the heaviest in a decade. Consistency in public buying has led businessmen to believe that the public is not spending money in fear of higher prices. January and other early year months sales were well over those of other years, and volume charts point to a steadily rising wave of business.

Industry has expanded in proportion to business trends. One new important industry located here this year and working is producing seven days a week. Manufacturers, whose plants are doing war work, state that large expansion projects have become necessary. This is due to war industries, but textile and plants of similar nature are working overtime to maintain commercial production In other words, the business and manufacturing acceleration while indirectly due to war activities, is not wholly attributable to war production.

Skilled Labor Scarce

The rising tempo of industrial operations has resulted in a dearth of available skilled labor. The trades, here have been depleted of their skilled artisans, through sharp upward trends in mechanical production. Government Employment office officials here stated that the registration of employable unemployed has dropped fifty per cent in the last twelve months. Common labor is fairly plentiful but skilled domestics are at a premium.

Relief Costs Down

Commensurate with the depletion in the ranks of the unemployed, relief costs have declined. City officials report a decrease of 27 per cent during the first six months of 1940 as compared to the corresponding period of 1939.

Building activities, generally speaking are well in advance of those of 1939. The new hospital wing erected at a cost of $250,000 heads a generous building program. Industrialists have erected factory additions to allow for production expansion. New houses have sprung up in all parts of the city, while large amounts have been spent by private citizens in converting buildings into apartment houses.

Rents Consistent

Rents have maintained consistent level. Rentals are fairly high, but are in proportion to those of other cities similar population. Houses are very scarce, due to the influx during the past two years, to the personnel of the Royal Canadian Air Force Station a few miles from this city, and skilled labor demanded by industry.

The survey revealed little change in the wage situation. A few firms noted a ten per cent increase at the beginning of the year, but conditions generally are unchanged in this respect.

There appears to be no dearth of spending money. Merchants dealing in the better class of merchandise say the business this year points to a decided public flair for better goods. Fur coats and automobiles are as popular as ever, in spite of increased taxes. Theatres report "boom" business, irrespective of the nature of the attractions offered. Long known as the "half-way" place between Toronto and Montreal for commercial travellers, hotels are experiencing a return to the "good old days" in spite of automobile and plane.

A Good Year

Consensus of business and industrial opinion is to the effect that Belleville is experiencing a "good" year. As one merchant puts it, conditions are on a par with a "normal" year, but normal years have been conspicuous by their absence during the past decade. The upward trend has been marked by consistency, and although slight fluctuations have been noted in the various seasons, the result generally has been of an increasing nature. "Business is Good in Belleville."

POLICE COURT

Limping badly and displaying a slightly discolored optic, Robert Bailey of Point Anne, appeared in city police court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today on two charges of which he was convicted on both counts.

Bailey admitted to a second offence intoxication charge and was sentenced to one month when in default of a $50.00 fine. On a charge of assaulting Gnr. David Cory of the 32-34th Battery and causing him actual bodily harm, Bailey pleaded not guilty and was represented by Robt. Pringle, local barrister.

Gnr. Cory and two other members of his unit appeared in court today to testify against Bailey, following a fistic outbreak and brawl which occurred near the City Hall on Saturday night when Bailey and a number of his civilian friends are alleged to have attacked three members of His Majesty's forces. Two of the soldiers appeared in court today showing outward results of the fight, badly discolored optics. Bailey stated he was alone and had first been struck by a soldier and was only fighting in self-defence.

Gnr. Cory stated in court that an unknown person had jumped on his back while Bailey struck him in the face. The two other soldiers told identical stories and His Worship found Bailey guilty as charged. He was fined $5.00 and costs and in default 21 days in the common jail to run concurrent with the sentence imposed under the L.C.A. count.

A 16-year-old local youth pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication and was assessed the conventional "ten and costs." His Worship asked the youth where he had obtained liquor. "I met a drunken man on the street and he gave me a drink," replied the lad.

Three others, including an Indian lass, appeared on charges of intoxication and paid the customary fines.

FRANKFORD CAR CRASHES POLE, 7 PERSONS HURT

5 CHILDREN HURT

Captain Geo. Emsley Also Injured as Party is Proceeding to Camp Borden —Driver is Unhurt

Toronto, Sept. 23 (CP).—Seven of the eight passengers of an automobile from Frankford, Ont, were injured yesterday when the car got out of control at nearby Richmond Hill and crashed into a pole.

Mrs. Lena Emsley, 44, of Franford was most seriously injured and is in critical condition in hospital.

Those who suffered minor injuries were five of Mrs. Emsley's children; Malcolm, 10; Eunice, 8; Alton, 5; Roger, 4; and Grant, 2; and Capt. George Emsley.

Coolidge Ashley, 16, Mrs. Emsley's son who was driving, was not hurt. The party was on the way from Frankford to Camp Borden when the accident occurred.

LORD WILLINGDON TO HEAD MISSION

Will Visit South America on Diplomatic and Economic Tour

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 23 —(CP—Cable)—The Marquess of Willingdon, former Governor General of Canada, will head a diplomatic and economic mission to South America about the middle of October, it was announced today by Harcourt Johnson, Secretary of the Department of overseas trade.

The mission will visit Brazil, Uruguay, Argentina, Chile, Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador, Colombia and Venezuela. It will have the double object of promoting British trade and explaining to those nations the necessity of imposing the blockade against their trade with Europe.

The trade mission "has been fully explained in Washington and it has their approval and sympathy," it was announced.

Accumulation of Foodstuffs

One of the major topics which may be discussed—but this obviously requires the cooperation of the United States—is the accumulation of foodstuffs which can be distributed throughout Europe at the end of the war.

This undertaking, already announced by Prime Minister Churchill, has not been worked out in detail because it is so vast in scope, requires so much financing and takes in so many products that it requires the active cooperation of the United States.

An approach to it may be made, however, by the Willingdon mission.

Civilian Prisoner Escapes From Camp

Calgary, Sept. 23.—(CP)—Military guards and Royal Canadian Mounted Police joined today in the search for Irwin Hartman, 20-year-old civilian prisoner from Saskatchewan who escaped from a Prairie internment camp last night. No details of his escape were available.

Authorities scoured the territory surrounding the camp for some trace of Hartman, who was wearing the conspicuous camp uniform of white cotton trousers and a navy jacket with a red circle on the back when he made his escape.

They described him as five feet nine and three quarter inches in height, weighing about 168 pounds, fair complexion, red hair, and a small scar on his right wrist. He speaks good English.

Hartman's escape was the third from the same camp. Last December two other prisoners cut through the barbed wire fence surrounding the camp which had not been completed at that time. These men, Henry Hesse, 29, and Heinrich Feldbauer, 43, were arrested in Calgary a few days later and are now in the Federal Penitentiary at Prince Albert serving two-year terms.

Economic Measures Against Japan May Be Instituted by U. S.

Washington, Sept. 23. — (AP)—The possibility of new United States economic measures which would restrict Japan arose today as a result of the entry of Japanese military forces into French Indo-China.

Informed persons said these restrictions might take the form of tightened controls over exports of oil, scrap iron and other materials of which Japan has been a large purchaser.

A complete embargo already is effective against exports of aviation gasoline but other grades of oil and materials helpful to the Japanese war machine are subject only to an export licensing system.

It was considered possible that these also might be subjected to a complete embargo on the grounds they are needed for National Defence. Or the licensing system could be tightened to make it more difficult for Japan to obtain licences for exports.

Despite Japanese assurances that the territorial integrity and French sovereign rights would be respected in the colony, the movement of troops into Indo-China was looked upon in official quarters as a serious threat to American interests and policies in the Far East.

The move was taken in the face of formal representations from both the United States and Great Britain that they would regard with concern any disturbance of the status quo in connection with Indo-China and the Netherlands East Indies.

OBITUARY

LATE BRUCE M. McKINNEY
(Melrose)

The funeral of Bruce Milton McKinney took place from his residence at Melrose on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 22nd, to the United Church in that village where an impressive service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. W. Sterling. During the service a vocal solo in keeping with the occasion was rendered by Miss Marion Blatherwick.

Interment was made in Melrose Cemetery the service at the graveside was conducted by the same minister.

The late Mr. McKinney was a member of Loyal Orange Lodge No 242, Shannonville, and the last rites of the Order were performed at the graveside by officers of the lodge. Many members of the Order were present.

The bearers were Messrs. Fred Jeffrey, Sherry Demille, Lorne Weese, John English, Ernest Pascoe and Murney Whiteman.

The funeral was largely attended and there were many beautiful floral tributes.

DANIEL N. HOWARD
(Holloway)

After a brief illness Daniel Nelson Howard, passed away at Holloway in the 8th concession of Thurlow Township, on Sunday, Sept. 22nd.

The late Mr. Howard was born 87 years ago at Shannonville, being a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Howard. For many years he resided at Latta and for the past two years he made his home at Holloway. In the community he was well respected.

Surviving him are five daughters, Mrs. Miller Armstrong, Belleville; Mrs. Earle Way, Toronto; Mrs. Robert Hogg, Frankford; Mrs. Harold Skelly, Plainfield; Miss Corah Howard, Cannifton; four sons, Mr. Frank Howard, Holloway; Mr. Ben Howard, Trenton; Mr. Nelson Howard, Sulphide, and Mr. Thomas Howard, Holloway.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

JAMES McEVOY
(Formerly of Belleville)

James McEvoy passed away in Vancouver, B.C., on Thursday last, September 19th.

The late Mr. McEvoy, who was in his 87th year, was born in West Huntingdon. For some years he resided in that district and later lived in Belleville for a time before going to Vancouver thirty-one years ago. During his residence here he was a faithful member of St. Michael's Church and well esteemed. Old friends will regret to learn of his death. He never married.

Surviving him is one brother, Mr. Francis McEvoy of Campbellton, N.B. The late Mrs. Charles Doran of this city was a sister of the deceased.

The funeral took place at Vancouver this Monday morning.

"WORLD'S FAIR" AT SHANNONVILLE WELL ATTENDED

Many Attractions Provided by Directors for Entertainment of Visitors

SPLENDID EXHIBITS

With Canadian warplanes flying over the scene in a brilliant stunting display to give the affair the only reminder of the grim struggle being waged overseas, thousands of district fair-goers thronged the Shannonville Fair Grounds on Saturday, where the 1940 edition of the famous little "World's Fair" proved a worthy successor to the autumn exhibitions that in the past have enhanced a reputation earned when pioneers inaugurated the function.

It was a typical Shannonville fair with its color, attractions, entries of every description and entertainment which with the genial camaraderies characteristic of Hastings County fair-goers went to make the whole a highly enjoyable affair.

Variety for which the directors of the "World's Fair" are famous, again was an outstanding feature. The program interspersed a livestock exhibit that compares favorably with the high-class parades of other years, with exhibits of ladies' work, domestic science, grain, seeds, vegetables, fruits, flowers, preserves in the exhibition building, a colorful midway, horse races, a greasy pig scramble, baseball games, nail-driving and log-sawing contests, a tug-of-war and a dozen other attractions. A grotesquely painted clown greeted the crowd as it entered the gates. In the evening jitney dancing on a specially erected dance dais added to the general fun.

Fine Livestock Entry

Indicative of the strides made by breeders of the districts was the fine entry list of livestock. Proud Holsteins, Ayrshires and Jerseys of both sexes made up a display that left no doubt in the minds of judges and spectators that breeders are nearing the peak of production. Swine and sheep entries were good with a fine poultry and horse display rounding out a good exhibition.

Handiwork of the ladies was seen in the fine display in the exhibition building. Finework, quilts, fancy work and other articles dear to the feminine mind exemplified the cleverness of milady. Sheaves of golden grain tastefully arranged brought out the glowing colors of the fall fruits. Apples, scarlet in color gleamed against the gold of the giant pumpkin. Roots, vegetables of all descriptions were mute testimony to a bountiful harvest. Preserved fruits, and vegetables, a colorful floral exhibit and other products of farm and garden drew a large crowd to this particular spot.

The midway was the mecca for youth and age of the district. Colorful entertainment was offered while booths and concessions of all descriptions did a land-office business. Tommy Mason, versatile Belleville master-of-ceremonies was at the "mike" of a public address system, and described and announced various events in his usual masterful manner. Here one could drink sweet cider, have his or her picture taken, throw baseballs or indulge in the one hundred and one pastimes that are a part and parcel of the fair midways.

Tug of War Teams

On the orchestra dais four sprightly young misses entertained the crowd with their graceful dancing ability. Acrobats and singers rounded out a fine performance that was greatly enjoyed by all.

In an enclosed space at the west end of the midway the brawny backs of the Tyendinaga tug-of-war team pulled themselves to victory over their ancient rivals from Thurlow, last year's winners of the annual event. Ladies of the district showed their versatility when upwards of twenty clasped hammers, drove nails in a heavy plank with abandon. Sawyers of the county demonstrated their skill as steel teeth bit through heavy logs at a high rate of speed.

The climax of the afternoon's fun came with the greasy pig scramble. The squealing porker shot out of his crate liberally smeared with grease. It dashed through the large crowd, darted to its new found freedom with a group of youths close on its trail. There was plenty of fun and excitement before R. Dent, young Thurlow farmer succeeded in capturing the animal and putting it back in its box. He received a side of bacon for his victory. The pig later became the property of Mrs. John Blatherwick, the holder of the lucky ticket drawn from those sold in aid of the Red Cross.

Canadian Red Cross Headquarters Used as Emergency First Aid Station

(By Harold Fair)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 21.—(CP Cable)—It can be told now how Canadian Red Cross workers, while raiders zoomed across London, turned their damaged building into a makeshift casualty station and worked by torchlight into the dawn bringing relief to helpless victims of Nazi bombs.

When a bomb fell during a night raid near the Maple Leaf Club which the Red Cross operates for Canada's overseas forces the girls were thrown from their beds.

All the club's windows were blown out. Plaster fell from the walls. The girls hastily pulled on slacks and joined air raid precaution workers in the task of restoring order to the disorganized street.

Under the direction of Miss Pat Tuckett, a Toronto nurse, the small staff treated casualties and provided hot refreshments for firemen, police and A.R.P. workers who toiled in the wreckage of the bombed building.

Working at Miss Tuckett's side were two other Torontonians, June McLaren and Faith Watson.

when a bomb hit,' said Miss Tuckett. "A thick cloud surged up, causing us to think it was gas but it proved to be mortar dust. Luckily everybody in the building escaped without a scratch.

"We just pulled on our slacks over our night dress when the A.R.P. asked if they could bring in an old woman for treatment. They kept bringing them in.'

The blast had knocked out the lights. Torches were lit and through the night there was a steady stream of casualties.

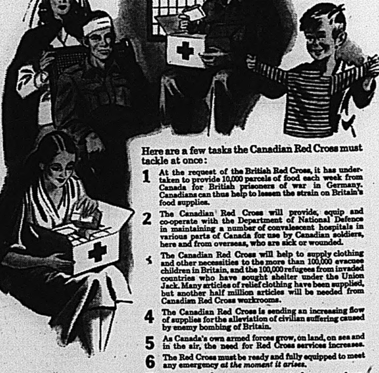
The girls made tea, and when there was a lull in treating the injured, begrimed A.R.P. workers came in for "something hot,' and went out again to dig in the ruins.

A group of Canadian privates who had been sleeping in the Maple Leaf Club aided the girls. Among them were Douglas Campbell and James Williams of Toronto, W. R. Boyle and W. Isavitch, Saskatoon and P. G. McGuire, Prince Albert.

When dawn came the Canadian soldiers helped the club move down the street commodious new quarters.

To Londoners bombed out of their homes the Canadian Red Cross already has sent 15,000 articles of clothing, 10,000 quilts and blankets

"We were shot from our beosand four tons of food.



Why the Red Cross is in urgent need of funds

1 At the request of the British Red Cross, it has undertaken to provide 10,000 parcels of food each week from Canada for British prisoners of war in Germany. Canadians can thus help to lessen the strain on Britain's food supplies.

2 The Canadian Red Cross will provide, equip and co-operate with the Department of National Defence in maintaining a number of convalescent hospitals in various parts of Canada for use by Canadian soldiers, here and from overseas, who are sick or wounded.

3 The Canadian Red Cross will help to supply clothing and other necessities to the more than 100,000 evacuee children in Britain, and the 100,000 refugees from invaded countries who have sought shelter under the Union Jack. Many articles of relief clothing have been supplied, but another half million articles will be needed from Canadian Red Cross workrooms.

5 As Canada's own armed forces grow, on land, on sea and in the air, the need for Red Cross services increases.

These are tasks you must not leave undone. Support the Red Cross with all your heart.

RISING DEMAND BY BRITISH PRESS FOR TOTAL WAR

Wants Britain to Carry Out Retaliatory Raids Against Reich

ASK QUESTION

(By Harold Fair)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 23—(CP Cable)—The third week of Germany's air assaults on London and on civilian centres elsewhere in the United Kingdom opened today amid a rising chorus of demands that Britain carry out retaliatory raids against the Reich.

British officialdom so far has been strongly opposed to reprisal attacks, contending that the end of the war would be hastened by lashing at such Nazi military objectives as oil and gas stores, aircraft factories and fields, and ship concentrations.

Noting increasing demands for the bombing of German civilian life to match the attacks which have flattened British homes, the Sunday dispatch in a front-page editorial said:

"Our civilians and civil defence workers are gallantly bearing a heavy strain. Would they be helped by the knowledge that their attackers were suffering similarly? If they would, then reprisals by Britain becomes a necessity and must be carried out ruthlessly."

Claims Invasion Defeated

The most vigorous demand for total air war against Germany came from John Gordon, the Sunday Express editor. He declared that the invasion is already defeated and the British air forces are only wasting time and precious bombs by continuing to attack it.

"The only place worth while dropping our bombs on at the moment is Germany", he wrote. "Bombs there can win the war. The people we want to shake are the ordinary men and women in Germany. These are the people Hitler is desperately anxious you should not bomb. He's afraid what might happen if a stampede started there.

"Get every bomber we can spare over Germany every hour of every night. Go for the big towns. Smash their electricity and gas works. Smash their railways. Block their roads. Keep their population awake, waiting in terror for your coming. Make their nights a misery, their days a torment of inconvenience. A few weeks of that will soon make changes in their morale".

Quebec Organised In Many Services

By JACK TRACY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Sept. 23 — (CP) — While the battle of Britain rages thousands of volunteer workers under Quebec province's Civilian Protection Committee are guarding homes and industries behind Canada's oldest ramparts.

Ontario also has established a provincial civilian protection committee which will extend its activities to local committees throughout the province. Similar Air Raid Precautions organizations are in operation in the Maritime provinces. The movement is aided by the Dominion authorities.

Although the war is 2,000 miles away from the farmsteads and great industries of Quebec, more than 4,000 forest rangers are watching the skies for enemy airplanes. Auxiliary fire fighters are ready to deal with bomb-lighted fires. An auxiliary mobile police force is all set to aid police in combatting sabotage, disturbances and fifth column activity.

The sea too is watched. Although lighthouse keepers along the shores of the St. Lawrence River are not directly under the C. P. C., their duty of reporting shipping movements is a factor in civilian protection.

No detail is left out of the C. P. C.'s plans. They deal with "arrangements for increased fatalities," hostile parachute attacks, decontamination and the reporting of unexploded projectiles.

Highway engineers and agricultural field workers are carrying the story of civilian preparedness into the humblest habitant home.

Provincial Direction

Local C. P. C. units stretch in an almost unbroken line along both shores of the St. Lawrence from Montreal to Gaspe and Comeau Bay. The nerve centre of the whole organization is the provincial control room in Quebec. Every unit in the province is expected to be standing by for immediate action within eight or 10 minutes after a warning is received.

The control centre would receive warnings of approaching hostile aircraft or of imminent enemy action from points in the Maritimes, from Marconi stations along the coast or from ships at sea. Arrangements are underway to facilitate the warning to military, naval and police headquarters.

Known originally as the "air raid precautions committee," the C. P. C. took its present name after it received corporate status under the laws of Quebec. Its central authority is Gordon Ross of Quebec, provincial officer. Around him is grouped an advisory committee consisting of representatives of the army, navy, police force, government, first aid societies and public utilities.

Mr. Ross is also president of the committee which has a board of directors—consisting of representatives of church, government and mayors of the cities in the province.

Instruction books issued to workers blue-print the six-pronged effort of the C. P. C. The work is divided into categories: medical services, wardens, auxiliary fire fighters, vital services, public relations, and mobile column.

Medical services are to take care of public health, first aid and the prevention of epidemics resulting from enemy action. Wardens serve as "auxiliaries to the police; persons of courage and with personality, to advise and help their neighbors and generally to serve as a link between tthe public and the authorities." Duties of auxiliary fire services include not only those of fighting fires but prevention.

Vital services will protect and repair public service units such as important buildings, gas, power, communications, transportation and sewage facilities. Public relations will carry instructions and information to the public through the press, radio and posted notices.

An Armed Group

The mobile column is designed also to be used against hostile parachute attacks or other landing parties. One of the most formidable groups in the whole set-up, its personnel must be British citizens. They will operate in sections of about 16 men each, carried in three cars. Each man is to be armed, cars must carry emergency supplies and military discipline will prevail while on service. Each member of the force is vested with the powers of a special constable.

Officers say the organization of this civilian army has already had concrete results. One of the most important has been the development among the population of unanimity of feeling towards civilian protection.

During registration of aliens in the United States C. P. C. units in border counties were ready to prevent an influx of evading aliens into Canada.

Local C. P. C. organizations have been set up in the areas in and around Montreal, Quebec, the Eastern Townships, Three Rivers, Brome County, the North Shore, Gaspe and Rimouski. In the Sherbrooke district 3,225 persons were enrolled in the movement in five days. It is expected the organization will eventually cover the whole province.

Madoc and District

Madoc.—On Wednesday afternoon Madoc Bowling Club had a mixed doubles tournament and had as their guests teams from Peterboro, Campbellford and Tweed. During the playing period three twelve end games were played and prizes were awarded as follows: Prize for three wins—Mr. and Mrs. James Watson, Madoc; two wins—Mr. P. Gunn and Mrs. Caverly, Madoc; one win—Mr. Fitzpatrick and Mrs. Barnes, Peterboro.

A supper meeting of the Girls' Branch of St. John's W. A. was held at the home of Mrs. McCarey. Following the supper hour a short business meeting was conducted with the president, Mrs. W. Hart, presiding. The appointment of Miss Vesta Davey as treasurer to fill the vacancy caused by Miss Mary Smith took place. The next meeting will be held at the home of Miss Eleanor Aylesworth.

A group of business men have been having meetings regarding the improvement and upkeep of Lakeview cemetery. An election of officers took place at their last meeting with George West as chairman; Fred Curry treasurer. Messrs. W. R. Kelly, Walter Whytock and E. C. Tufts are on the executive. Arrangements were made to build a wire fence across the front and the paths throughout the cemetery cleaned. At a later date a meeting will be called of all plot owners to discuss ways and means of caring for it.

The September meeting of the Madoc Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Chris. Henderson with a splendid attendance of members and many visitors. With the president, Mrs. Tanner, in charge, the meeting opened with Institute Ode, a short sing song. Correspondence and business was dealt with and arrangements made for the lunch booth at the fair grounds on October 2nd. The roll call, "Ways of Neighboring" was responded to by many of the members. It was decided that the Institute apply to the Red Cross for containers used for canning jam for overseas. It is to be hoped there will be a generous response from members and all householders throughout the village and surrounding country. Little Miss Joan Burris sang a pleasing song. The guest speaker, Mr. Jas. Irwin, principal of Madoc Public School, gave a very instructive talk on his trip via motor to the Western Coast, visiting both the United States and Western Canada. A very hearty vote of appreciation was tendered Mr. Irwin for his splendid address. Miss Aileen Tanner gave a piano solo. The singing of the National Anthem closed the meeting. The hostess assisted by Mrs. E. Smith, Mrs. Geo. Hill, Mrs. T. L. Nickle and Mrs. C. N. Whytock served afternoon tea.

SCIENTIFIC FACTS ABOUT "B.O."

The adult skin has 2 to 3 million sweat glands which act as a cooling system, giving off from 1 to 3 pints of perspiration daily—even when we are sitting still. If perspiration stopped, we would die from hyper-pyrexia (heat stroke).

Because much of the water in perspiration evaporates, we do not see or feel it. Summer heat, nervous excitement, heavy clothes or warm rooms quickly decompose this sweat deposit—turn it stale—cause offensive "B.O." (Body Odor).

BLOCKADE HURTS DICTATORS

The steady pressure of the British blockade continues upon the Axis Powers. It is at work day and night. It is at work whether Hitler raids or does not raid England nights or days. Its grip tightens on the Huns and Fascists.

When the world sees the dictator who tried to crush Britain with his aerial blitzkrieg turning attention to the Mediterranean and possibly to Gibraltar and Egypt, it is taken as a sure sign that the British defences have proven themselves too strong for the enemy who would cross the Channel if he could but has not even essayed to do so except by planes which have always been beaten back. The defence of Britain stands firm. The Mediterranean which has been left to Italy by Hitler to handle has brought no advantage to the two partners of the Axis.

Out there in the northwest of Europe surrounded by the seas and the channel, stands the fortress of liberty, the British Isles, while around about gather now the autumnal storms lashing the coasts, the prelude to the winter which is to come. Before that fortress which is not beleaguered are kept at distance Hitler's flat-bottomed boats and his men who would ravish the temple of liberty. But the waves lash, the Royal Air Force pounds the Hun concentrations, time goes on and Hitler does not dare the step of invasion. With the growing lateness of the season, the chances of invasion become more and more hazardous to the Hun. Now the Nazis say the raids on England may go on for months. That is probably a way of breaking the news to the Germans that invasion is farther and farther away and may not come.

With winter will come the intensification of the British blockade. Winter brings heavy burdens. But these burdens are not increased by winter against the British Isles. Storm and tempest will increase the security of the tight little islands. Britain's ships will ply the ocean lanes, bringing food and war materials to the fortress, while they lash at the Huns who would be navigators.

The storms will croon security for the stout hearts of Britain and will bridge the time between now and when Britain will be so much more powerful than she is today and the enemy so much weaker.

An example of British control is seen in the Mediterranean Sea. The British fleet has travelled 2,500 miles and the Italian fleet never shows itself. Of what use is that Italian fleet hiding wherever it can in the Inland Sea and avoiding combat. It may be lack of oil that is troubling Il Duce's warships but they have not accomplished much bottled up as they are in that Sea.

The new British blacklist against certain ships means the blockade will be more complete and that ship owners will realize that their safety lies in having nothing to do with the attempt at running of the blockade.

The focusing of attention upon Spain and the Mediterranean is taken as another sign that the ways of the Hun have not been so pleasant along the British Channel. Hitler cannot break the British spirit and his airplanes cannot destroy so effectively as British planes are destroying the vital services of Germany's war effort, especially oil refineries. Bombs have delayed concentration of troops and equipment that Hitler may have intended for invasion, and then came the crowning blow when the R.A.F. swooped down on the barges he had likely intended for transport.

The sight that greeted passengers on a ship at Gibralter is one that tells a meaningful story. It was the large number of Italian freighters, liners and other ships which have been seized by the British and brought there. If the Italians could only see the sight they would know what Mussolini does not want or dare to tell them.

So Berlin and Rome stress the Spanish future and the Mediterranean scene. They try to draw attention away from the "slow motion" German "progress" on the south and east side of the British Channel. In this Mediterranean now British transports move steadily without Italian interruption and the British navy moves at will without disturbance from the boastful Mussolini's fleet, which knows what a blockade means. Il Duce ought to have had enough of his talk of 'Mare Nostrum" (Our Sea) as the Romans called it, when he cannot control it. It is under the British blockade.

AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

The Air Training Plan is in advance of its schedule.

It means steady piling up of evidence of the growing strength of the Royal Air Force, the mightiest weapon at this time in the hands of Britain to throw off the Hun air attacks and one of the great facts in victory.

Democracies, which have played fair and thereby run the risk of attack from the German Reich which is without principle, did not arm in peace time while Hitlerism was forging its weapons and the chains he meant to throw about the nations of the world. It has taken time for peace-loving democracy to put itself upon a war-schedule and get production of the essentials running at a required pace.

Now the machinery is in momentum. The planes are increasingly produced, the air schools are turning out larger numbers of pilots and craftsmen.

Canada looks upon the scheme with more than ordinary satisfaction for Canada is the base of the Empire Air Training Plan.

Farewell to An Old Horse

From the Montreal Gazette

"Teddy" a veteran of the last war and last link with the pre-mechanized past of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, went to a soldier's death at St. Johns, Que., one day this week, with full military honors.

Too old to be sold with his 68 stablemates at a public auction last month which marked the end of the Royal Canadian Dragoons as a cavalry unit, the 30-year-old grey was destroyed in humane fashion behind the local barracks, while the entire unit and its officers stood silently at attention and three trumpters sounded the Last Post and the Reveille.

Although retired from service "Teddy" was the pride of the local barracks; doubly so when only he of the entire stable remained with the Dragoons after the auction on August 26, and, perhaps, because the men whom he had served so faithfully for 24 years knew even then that he was destined for a rapid end.

No soldier could have desired a more fitting tribute than that given "Teddy" when his time came.

All men and officers of the unit assembled at the front of the barracks and watched the faithful animal as he was led from the stable to the horses' cemetery in a field at the rear of the buildings.

The old horse bucked and reared, as though he sensed the end was near.

Led to the rampart on the lip of a freshly-dug pit that was to be his grave, "Teddy" went down as Colonel R. J. Duhalt, O.B.E., former district veterinarian and newly-appointed commandant of the Valleyfield camp for trainees, sent a bullet from his service revolver through the horse's brain, killing him instantly.

The shot was the signal for the three trumpeters, one of them being Tpt. Major Arthur Galloway, whose mount "Teddy" had been for years, and who had been the first and last Dragoon to ride the grey. The two others were Tptrs. R. Chriswell and W. Stone.

The men stood silenty, their heads bowed, as the notes echoed through the still barracks. Tears rose in the eyes of some of the men and the lips of the trumpeters trembled, but the notes rang clear.

"It kind of busted me up", Tpt. Major Galloway said today. "He was a grand and faithful horse. It's hard to see them go like that, but it's better than letting them get into the hands of people who might not take good care of them."

COMMAND OF SEA IS SEEN SHARED WITH AGREEMENT

Written for The Canadian Press

By MAJOR-GENERAL SIR CHARLES GWYNN

London, Sept. 23 — (CP) — The old rivalry between British and American naval strength, which most people realized had for a long time become the anachronism, has now officially been terminated.

That is an event of world wide importance. The agreement between the two great English-speaking communities has many implications. It is the first great practical step towards collective security.

Command of the sea in the Atlantic is now shared by agreement. The Royal Navy forms the outer line of American defence but the United States navy and Air Force in their newly-acquired bases not only advance the inner line but better ensure the vital communication between the Atlantic and Pacific through the Panama Canal.

The strategic gain to the whole Western Hemisphere is immense. Britain's most far-reaching gain is the assurance of unity of British and American interests. No one will resent or suspect the footing given to American forces in British territory. Incidentally, marked effect may be produced on local prosperity.

Acquisition of 50 American destroyers has great immediate strategic value. The Navy being a silent service, the general public may hardly realize the unceasing strain on its personnel and material. Anti-U-boat action, the blockade, convoy escorts, and innumerable other duties require continuous vigilance and activity, intensified by danger of air attack.

Loss of French assistance and the appearance of Italy as an enemy has, of course, increased the magnitude of the task.

Relief For Royal Navy

American destroyers and new construction will bring welcome relief, as does also the increasing help given by those portions of the Allied navies which remain free to act with Britain.

It should now be possible to withdraw more ships for overhaul, and more crews for hardly-earned leave, without in any way relaxing naval activities, which on the other hand are likely to greatly increase.

It must never be forgotten that it is on the Royal Navy and the Merchant Service that the Empire's war effort primarily depends. That command of the sea has been uninterruptedly maintained in spite of the dislocation caused by the withdrawal of French assistance with rank as one of the most outstanding achievements of those two great Services.

On the whole, the Empire has good season to be satisfied with the course of events since the French collapse. The contingents of allied forces from the overrun countries are growing in size and importance. They are appearing in the fighting line and rendering distinguished services there.

Neutral friends who in June thought that Britain's cause was lost now believe again in her final victory and redouble their efforts to help bring it about.

Government spokesmen utter warnings that attempts at invasion may yet be made. Such warnings are accepted as justified, but they neither cause fear nor shake confidence.

The Army all the time is steadily training, growing, and equipping itself for the time when it will have an opportunity for offensive action.

Raids Arouse Welsh Village

London, Sept. 23 — (CP) — From the village of Michaelston-le-Pit in South Wales, the ministry for Aircraft Production received a cheque for £5,000 ($22,250). Accompanying the unsolicited amount was a letter from H. H. Merrett which tells its own story.

"On Sunday last we received the tragic news that my son Flying Officer Norman Merrett had lost his life somewhere in Britain. On Monday we woke to find that as a result of a raid five of our store cattle had been killed and others badly maimed.

"The village is one of 1,000 acres and a population of 100. These tragic circumstances have served only to strengthen the determination of the little community to prove to this despicable enemy that we are unconquerable. I cannot provide you with another gallant son. The one who has gone was my only son.

"But I want you to accept £5,000 from the village to purchase a Spitfire so that one of the ever-growing number of lads from Britain and the Dominions so anxious to defend us in the air may be equipped with an instrument which combined with that indomitable spirit, courage and fearlessness, will enable him, as his colleagues are now doing, to take severe toll of these inferior beings attempting with increasing failure to demolish the morale of our people."

'How Long, O Lord Before U.S. Awakes'

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer

It is the disgrace of the United States that when the British people are in mortal combat with Hitler, the modern Genghis Khan, who, like his predecessor, specializes in butchering civilian populations—America continues about its business as usual.

America debates about whether R. or W. should be elected president. America is even concerned about the world series.

We of Cleveland want our team to win the baseball race, but at the same time it may not be out of order to call attention to the fact there is a greater, grislier, grimmer, more poignant world series now going on in Britain.

And we are not there fighting on the English side, as we should be.

The world series being played on British ground today may well determine the history of the human race for 500 years. In fact, it may decide whether we relapse to the medieval jungle law of Genghis Khan and his modern counter-part, Hitler, or go forward to a fairer, greener, freer world.

America's disgrace consists principally of the fact that since we chose the wrong road in 1919, we have played a conspicuously unadmirable role in the councils of the nations.

We ran out on the League of Nations. We tried to collect the money the Allies "hired".

In these actions we justified pretty conclusively the continental view of us as Uncle Shylock. But this was not all.

The nations of Europe, looking at us, while one international outrage was piled upon another and we did nothing, finally came to envisage us a country lout who walked down a rural lane, and, hearing a woman in distress, said to himself, "I ought to go to her assistance but if I did I might get my thumb bruised".

No, this unchivalrous America we have described is not the real America.

Talk to the people in the cities, the village and the peaceful countryside. Talk to them enough and you will discover that the heart of America still beats soundly and that ultimately even the politicians will hear it.

It beats so soundly that when we read of the mad slaughter of British women and children and babes in the womb, we shall cease contenting ourselves with pious speeches and eloquent editorials about the bravery of Shakespeare's England and go to war on their side.

And what a day of reckoning there will come then — when we really draw our broadsword for the principles of liberty, which were given their best expression at Runnymede, where Magna Charta was signed in 1215, on a little island named England, off the coast of Europe, at the same time that Genghis Khan, Hitler's prototype, was piling the slaughtered dead of medieval cities into pyramids as high as Ghizeh.

How long, O Lord, how long, must this go on before our America awakes?

Not long, we fondly believe. The rosy fingered dawn encrimsons the eastern sky. And the day of deliverance, oft prayed for, long delayed, will in the deliberate democratic way, arrive at last.

Oldest Colony Keeps Contact With Its Boys

London, Sept. 23 — (CP) — One of the busiest men in England these days is D. James Davies, Newfoundland Trade Commissioner, who has made more "Welcome to Britain" speeches than any other official in the country.

Almost every two weeks he goes to a British port and, together with the town's Lord Mayor, boards a ship and greets the latest detachment of volunteers — sailors, soldiers, airmen or foresters — from Britain's oldest colony.

The 60-year-old commissioner, who bears a noticeable resemblance to Prime Minister Churchill, always hands a package of Newfoundland cigarettes and a "surprise packet of comforts" to every man arriving.

Mr. Davies has had to take over additional space at his London headquarters to accommodate a welfare department which, as a sideline, handles thousands of letters and parcels a week.

Working with him, amid ceiling-high stacks of knitted pullovers, stockings and helmets, is 22-year-old Margot Davies, the commissioner's daughter, who has postponed her art career and exchanged her studio for a desk in her father's office.

On Land and Sea

Newfoundland has a total of 6,000 or more men in and around Great Britain. Two thousand of these are in the Royal Navy—Newfoundlers are credited with being the best small-boat men in the world—more than 1,200 in the Royal Artillery, 100 in the Royal Air Force and the remainder in the Forestry Corps, working in the United Kingdom woods as did their predecessors of the First Great War.

The Royal Newfoundland Regiment which served with distinction in the Gallipoli campaign, and in France, during the First Great war was not revived for the present struggle. Instead Newfoundland enlisted artillerymen who carry the ancient colony's emblem of the caribou as they man guns in defence of Britain.

The war effort of Newfoundland has also been notable on the financial side. The people raised an internal loan of $1,500,000 to relieve the British Treasury of paying interest on the Newfoundland debt. Private subscriptions have resulted in Spitfire fighting planes and ambulances being donated to Britain.

Cost of Relief Less Than 9 P.C. Of High Mark

Regina, Sept. 23 — (CP) — Relief costs in Saskatchewan this year will amount to approximately $4,975,000, less than nine per cent of the all-time high mark of $58,742,000 set in 1937-38, according to Walter Dawson, director of relief in the province.

Good crops this year and last, eliminating the need for agricultural aid, and improved employment conditions as a result of war industries and enlistments have contributed to the improvement, he said. Agricultural aid this year will cost only about $36,000 compared with $32,000,000 two years ago.

DESERT AND SEA HAVE ALWAYS SAVED EGYPT FROM CONQUEST HISTORY WARNS IL DUCE

By H. G. BAILEY

(In The London Daily Telegraph and Morning Post.)

Geology, it has been said, rules the destiny of nations. Egypt is one of the persuasive examples of this half-truth. The immensely fertile Egyptian soil—"gift of the river", as the father of history wrote—made the country rich from the dawn of civilization and a lure to innumerable invaders since.

Yet it has natural defences. Herodotus noted the difference between the black soil of Egypt and the red sands of Libya. The Libyan Desert may not always have been the arid wilderness of shifting sand which faces the Italians today, but more than 2,000 years ago it was a death-trap to armies.

Times of the Pharaohs.

On the east also there is a desert barrier, but a far less difficult one. From that side, from Asia, came the threats of ancient Egypt. Against Asian empires—Hittite, Assyrian and Babylonian — the Pharoahs fought defensive and offensive campaigns. There was a conquest, a temporary domination of Egypt by the Hyksos, and, whoever they may have been, whether Joseph was a prime minister of theirs or not, they arrived from the east.

Sennacherib the Assyrian, who came down like a wolf on the fold" of Jerusalem, as the Old Testament and Byron record, also struck at Egypt. He had only reached the frontier when "multitudes of field mice" came by night and "ate up the bow-strings, quivers and shield handles" of his soldiers, who were thereupon defeated easily.

Another Assyrian monarch, Assurbani-pal, according to his own account, let his weapons rage and showed his might in Egypt, and, "with my hands full", he concludes, "returned I to Nineveh, my residence city, in good health."

Up the Great River.

"Woe to the bloody city," the prophet Nahum cried. "Nineveh is laid waste, who will bemoan her?" After Babylon triumphed over her, other Pharaohs rose in Egypt who made some progress towards ascendancy in Syria, marching over the kingdom of Judah and Josiah, as Jeremiah lamented; but Nebuchadnezzar was too strong for them.

Throughout this long conflict with the east nothing of comparable importance happened on the western frontier of Egypt. Libyan tribes of whom little is known, except that some of them seemed blonde to the Egyptians, came raiding up to "the great river" when they saw a chance. "They spent their time going about the land fighting to fill their bellies daily," wrote the Pharaoh Merneptah. "They came to the land of Egypt to seek the necessities of their mouths" — very like Fascists and Nazis.

When they did venture to attempt an invasion it was with the help of bands from overseas, Asia Minor, Sicily and Italy. Merneptah beat them with archers and cavalry.

Again and once again the Libyan peoples "took counsel to spend their lives in the confines of Egypt" till Rameses III, proved to them that there was no hope for an invasion from the desert.

The Persians Vanished.

A demonstration of the Libyan Desert's power came in the sixth century, B.C. The Persian king Combyses marched into Egypt by what Herodotus calls "the only open passage," from Gaza across the narrower desert belt, "no small tract but about a three days' journey" Whether Cambyses used a herd of camels carrying water or three pipes "of ox-hides and other skins" the historian's researches have left uncertain. But the Persian army came across in strength enough to defeat the Pharaoh's forces and overrun Egypt.

Cambyses made his bid for conquest by ordering 50,000 men to cross the Libyan Desert. They reached the oasis now called El Khargah, "seven days' march across the sands." Their orders were to go to the oasis of Siwah, where stood the temple of Ammon, which ranked with Delphi and Dodona as one of the greatest oracles of the world. They were to burn it to the ground —so closely frenzied tyrants resemble each other—and make slaves of the people who dwelt there.

But after they left the first oasis they neither reached the temple of Ammon nor returned. All Herodotus could tell of their fate was that, as the Persians sat down to eat, "a great and furious south wind blew upon them, carrying with it heaps of sand, which poured down upon them, and in this manner they vanished."

Alexander the Great.

Two hundred years later another leader entered Egypt from the east—Alexander the Great. He was welcomed by the Egyptians as a liberator and he earned their gratitude by bringing Egypt into accord with Europe and founding on her coast one of the cities which has contributed most to the progress of mankind—spiritual and material—Alexandria.

Alexander possessed what Cambyses had not, sea power. The Phoenician seamen had declined to help the Persian to domination of the west, but Phoenician and Greek navies were at Alexander's orders.

He too made a march into the Libyan Desert, but not with the purpose of conquest and destruction. Only a few men accompanied him to the oracle of Ammon.

Alexander went into the shrine alone. What the oracle told him he would not say, but if, as another story relates, Ammon promised him the dominion of the whole world, he did not see his way to it by leading armies across the Libyan Desert.

The might of Rome, the genius of Caesar also shunned that enterprise. By the first century before Christ Egypt had become a granary invaluable to the Roman State, but its use was dependent on sea power. When Caesar had the task of assuring the corn supplies and bringing the Roman provinces west of the Libyan Desert under his sway, he sailed for Alexandria with no more than some 4,000 men. His affair with Cleopatra, the adventure of a man past 50 with a woman of 22, was not the only reason why he dallied in her Egyption palace. The future of Egypt, of Africa and the East was decided by the amphibious campaign which he conducted on the coast and the waters of the Nile. It is a famous page of romance that he had to swim for his life, but it is also a parable of the fact that he won by command of the sea.

This gave him Egypt, and with Egypt safe he mastered the East and went back to recover the African provinces, not by marching through the Libyan sands, but by a landing in the west.

So long as the Roman Empire could keep a dominant fleet in the Mediterranean the Egyptian granary served it. When the navy weakened, the Arabs swept across the Nile. Centuries later Turkish galleys held the Levantine waters and Egypt became a province of the Sultan.

Napoleon's Lament.

In 1798 Napoleon, not yet 30, decided that "my glory has already disappeared. This little Europe does not supply enough of it for me. I must seek it in the East. All great fame comes from that quarter." He sailed from Toulon and landed with 35,000 men at Alexandria. He was to emulate its founder; to march, a greater Alexander, to India and, after conquering the East, come back by Constantinople and take Europe in the rear.

One thing in Alexander's career he failed to notice—the Macedonian had assured his sea communications before he marched. Napoleon was fortunate to evade Nelson on his voyage, but before he had gone far beyond Alexandria Nelson swept on the French fleet to win a victory of annihilation. Napoleon, after futile victories and a damaging repulse in Syria, marched his shattered army back to Egypt and left it there to be "mopped up" by a British force. In the full splendour of the triumphs which he won later, he would say gloomily: "I was unworthy of my genius in Syria."

Defying the Dictators.

He never learned the lesson, though it is written large across the pages of history. The failure was not in Syria, but in Egypt. No man has ever since then conquered Egypt from Europe without command of the Mediterranean. Alexander and Caesar saw the impossibility. For Napoleon there was, as he boasted, no such word as impossible. The event proved him wrong.

Realities of the form of continents, which defeated him, are not to be overcome by dictators without his genius. The desert and the sea today defy.

TRAFFIC CRASHES ACCOUNT FOR 9 OF TWELVE DEATHS

Buffalo Resident Thrown Overboard When Wave Strikes Motorboat

MAN IS CRUSHED

(By The Canadian Press)

Traffic accidents accounted for nine of 12 violent deaths in Ontario during the weekend. An airplane crash, a drowning and a farm accident accounted for the other fatalities.

Aircraftman A. E. Porter of Morris, Man., was killed when one of two Royal Canadian air force planes crashed after the machines collided in mid-air over Brighton, Ont. F-O. George Hill of Pictou, N.S. made a forced landing without injury to himself or to Lac. H. N. Sharpe of Deseronto, Ont. F-O. C. C. Moran of Trenton parachuted to safety before the other plane crashed.

Dalton Damude, 22, of Canboro Township, died shortly after being knocked from his bicycle by an automobile near Canboro village.

Mrs. Gladys Henderson, 40, St. Marys, died in hospital Sunday after two automobiles collided on a concession road in Lobo township. Four others suffered minor injuries.

Mrs. Edward J. Jordan, 62, Windsor, Ont., was killed Saturday when an automobile driven by her husband crashed into a steel hydro pole.

Thomas B. D. Dunnett, munitions inspector at a Welland plant, was injured fatally when struck by a truck as he walked along a highway near Welland.

Traffic Crashes

Marjorie Manley, 29, Buffalo, drowned in Canadian waters of the Niagara River near Grand Island. She was thrown overboard when a wave struck the motorboat in which she was riding.

Mrs. William Bradley, 45, Clandeboys district, died in hospital, 15 hours after an automobile-truck collision near London, Ont.

Two Detroit negroes were killed when their automobile crashed into two hydro poles at the Cayuga town limits. The dead were Raymond Parker and Arnette Chilholm.

Mrs. Lena Leybourne, 75, Fergus, died of injuries suffered Friday when she collided with a motorcycle allegedly operated by Jack Graham, 20, Fergus.

June Halstead, 14, Welland, suffered fatal injuries when she lost control of an automobile.

William Hitchins died in a Toronto hospital, bringing to four the death toll in a York township home that was filled with carbon monoxide gas fumes Friday night. Mrs. Edith Hitchins, 36, and two sons, Kenneth, four, and Jackie, 18 months were found dead. It was believed water had boiled over, putting out a gas jet. Firemen and gas company experts worked over the bodies for three hours with inhalators.

One War Debt Now Settled

London, Sept. 23 — (CP) — Another war debt has been settled. While serving with the Royal Warwickshire Regiment in Mesopotamia in 1918, H. J. Seager borrowed 30 shillings ($6.68 nowadays) from a comrade, W. C. Timms. After the war the men returned to England and went their different ways, the matter of the 30 shillings unsettled.

Timms forgot about the loan but Seager remembered and the other day he visited Timms' old home town of Leamington where he inquired after his comrade. Timms had gone to Coventry, he was told, so Seager went there, too, and found his old companion on the Post Office Staff. He repaid the 30 shillings and added another 30 shillings as interest.

GERMAN ALIEN

On a grimmer note, Chief of Police C. M. Hirschey said:

"I think that more than one person was involved in this kidnapping, and I expect several sensational revelations to be made when the trial opens."

And he added: "I don't want Muhlenbroich in my jail—there are too many trees close by."

Confesses Kidnapping

The F. B. I. said Muhlenbroich, 40, had confessed kidnapping three-year-old Marc Friday, striking the child's nurse to the street. Yesterday his confused flight ended in mountainous El Dorado County, as two alert hunters braved his revolver to disarm and truss him.

Immigration Inspector E. C. Benson of Oakland said the dark-skinned abductor, a seaman, was arrested for illegal entry in 1925, but his records did not show whether he had been deported. The F. B. I. learned he had entered from Canada under the German quota 10 years later.

Hero Delivers Kidnapper

Yesterday's hero, a hard-fisted, modest 220-pound sawmill owner named Cecil Wetzel, temporarily dropped from view after delivering the boy and his sullen kidnapper to federal men at River Pine, a village of 50 souls.

The child had not a mark or bruise, the De Tristan family physician said, yet it was learned he had been perilously close to death in the wild ride of the stolen kidnap car.

Rounding a sharp curve in the mountain dark, the car plunged over a 40-foot embankment. Man and child were unhurt, and Muhlenbroich climbed up to the road and at gunpoint took the car of the next motorist to pass by.

Transferring the child and his stock of canned goods and ammunition to the new vehicle, Muhlenbroich roared on—until a few hours later he lost his way.

Clad in Sun Suit

Then he met Wetzel, taking a log truck to his own ranch mill.

"How in the hell do I get out of here?" he asked.

Wetzel, The San Francisco Chronicle said in a copyright story, had already noted the fair-haired child, clad only in a sunsuit in the car.

The lumberman, a former Washington State College football player and wrestler, gave directions, then followed Muhlenbroich until he stopped for further instruction. Wetzel stepped to the road, moved in close and asked, "How about that baby?"

The suspected kidnapper drew a revolver and Wetzel dived for him. They rolled briefly in a welter of flying fists, dust and weapons, a fight for life on Wetzel's part.

Ellis Wood, a lumberjack, arrived in time to help Wetzel take a second revolver from Muhlenbroich— who had a holster under each arm — and bind him with stout cord.

A telephone call to the parents turned grief into delight at the home of the De Tristan's. The Count was at prayer in a nearby chapel at the time, but in a few moments armloads of champagne were being carried into the house.

RIDES BICYCLE INTO CAR'S SIDE

Eric Summers, Hoards Station, Sustains Severe Head Injuries and Lacerations

Riding his bicycle directly into the side of a truck, 13-year-old Eric Summers of Hoard's Station, sustained severe head injuries and concussion, when he crashed to the highway near his home late Saturday afternoon. Young Summers was brought to the Belleville General Hospital where he was resting comfortably today.

According to eye-witnesses the Summers lad was riding his bicycle in a westerly direction along the street near his home. He was hauling a small children's play wagon behind his bicycle. Ernest Ferguson, Park Street, Belleville, was the driver of the truck, which was proceeding in the same direction as Summers on his bike. Ferguson sounded his horn and was about to pass the cyclist when the Summers lad made a left-hand turn and rode directly into the side of the truck. His bicycle was damaged and the lad injured. Motorcycle Patrolman J. J. Hatch investigated.

LIKENS BRITISH TO R. E. SQUAD

London, Sept. 21—(CP)—Wickham Steed, British commentator, last night likened the courage of the British people to that shown by the Royal Engineers squad which removed the time-bomb threatening St. Paul's Cathedral in London.

The squad, led by the Canadian-born Lieut. Robert Davies, deserved reward for the courage it showed in the face of possible death, Steed said when speaking on the British Broadcasting Corporation's broadcast feature, "Britain Speaks."

The British people, like that squad, "show a contempt of death and destruction and are standing up to the air raids," he said. During a recent speaking tour of parts of England and South Wales, Steed said he found the people determined to carry on "and see this thing through."

Harvest Festival Services Held In Two Churches

Giving thanks for the bountiful season's crops, harvest festival services were held in two Belleville churches yesterday. Both Christ Church, Anglican, and the Emmanuel Church were tastefully decorated with fruits, vegetables and a beautiful array of flowers to add to the occasion.

Special prayers and hymns of praise and thanks were offered at both churches thanking the Almighty for the reaping of the harvest. The baptismal font and altar at Christ Church presented a kaleidoscopic array of coloring with sheaves of wheat, vegetables and flowers of all descriptions blending their natural color into one picturesque setting.

The festival service anthem at Christ Church was McNutt's "Missa St. Aidan." Rev. G. G. Wright preached both sermons at Christ Church, devoting Sunday evening's theme to the thanking of God for such a bountiful return of the seed.

Rev. Alexander Stein, of Bethel Church, Kingston, was the special preacher at the Emmanuel Church yesterday.

Marketing Problem Of Apple Growers Being Considered

Ottawa, Sept. 23 (CP)—The marketing problem of Ontario apple growers, confronted with the prospect of no export for Canadian apples this year, is being considered by the Dominion Government, Dr. G. S. H. Barton, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, said today.

Assistance for apple growers in Nova Scotia and British Columbia along the lines of last year's arrangements has already been announced. Under normal conditions 80 per cent of Nova Scotia's crop is exported, as is 45 per cent of British Columbia's. Normally not more than 10 per cent of the Ontario crop is exported.

Despite the fact that Canadian apples this year will only be consumed at home, unless some space for shipment to the United Kingdom is found later on, R. L. Wheeler, chief of the fruit and vegetable division, says the situation is not as bad as it might appear.

Total production in Eastern Canada this year, he says, is farther below the production average than last year's exports were below average exports. Total exports last year were about half of normal because of war-time marketing restrictions and lack of shipping space.

Production this year is estimated for all Canada at 75 per cent of normal, which is about 11,000,000 bushels. Production prospects are given in the following percentages of normal: Nova Scotia 60, New Brunswick 60, Quebec 75, Ontario 67, British Columbia 99.

W. A. BISHOP V. C. NOW IN ENGLAND TO VISIT AIRMEN

Air Marshal of R.C.A.F. Arrives From Canada in Flying Boat Clare

INDEFINITE STAY

By Harold Fair Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in Southern England, Sept. 23 (CP Cable)—Air Marshal W. A. (Billy) Bishop, V.C., Canada's ace flier in the last war with a record of 72 German planes, arrived from Canada today in the flying boat Clare on a visit to England at the request of the Air Ministry.

The hero of the air battles of the first Great War is going to visit the new generation of Canada's men with wings stationed in the United Kingdom and also hopes to see the Canadian troops.

"It was a perfect trip over," he said after alighting from the great airliner. "Not a bump. I slept 15 hours."

"You are taking quite a chance coming here in the blitzkrieg," The Canadian Press reporter pointed out.

"What about you?" came the retort from the man whose disdain for danger made him one of the immortals of Canada's fighting airmen in the last war.

He said his stay in Britain will be "quite indefinite."

Almost immediately after landing he entered a car for London.

He brought to this war-blasted island fortress news of the Dominion's mighty war effort.

"Everything at home is fine," he said. "We're working our heads off night and day."

He hailed the Royal Canadian air force cadet plan as an "excellent idea," and predicted that "it will have a great response."

Police Blotter

Belleville police experienced more than the usual amount of law enforcement over the week end, investigations and arrests of many descriptions being necessary. Charges of gambling were probed, three serious fistic disturbances and several inebriates, two of which were women, kept the authorities working overtime Saturday night, while the alertness of Chief Kidd resulted in the apprehension of an alleged hit-and-run driver on the Stirling road to culminate a hectic evening's activity.

Frank Boyle, 16 of this city, complained to city police, shortly after midnight Saturday, that he had been allegedly victimized in a gambling game. Boyle pointed out two Trenton youths to the police, who he said had taken $2.10 away from him in a coin-matching game. Police recovered $1.90 for the lad and warned him against such future practices.

Employees at McKeown's drug store reported the loss of a valuable kodak type camera, equipped with anti-stigmat lens. Shoplifters are blamed for the loss.

Several disturbances were reported in the city on Saturday night and on three occasions fistic outbreaks were quelled by the police, following which intoxication charges were preferred in two cases.

Weekend Trading Quiet On Produce Markets

Toronto, Sept. 23.—On Saturday's session of the Toronto open produce market a steady tone prevailed in butter, while egg quotations were nominal.

Trading tapered down to a quiet pace on the butter market, but fresh receipts were still light and no accumulation occurred. First grade Ontario solids remained at 23 1-2 cents per pound. Holders generally asked 24 cents for the Western product without attracting local interest. Prints moved through retail channels at former levels.

With buyers apparently having adequate supplies on hand to cover week-end requirements, little action appeared on the egg market. Both sections maintained previous prices but these were only nominal.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Sept. 23.—Produce market prices here Saturday, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop is still away on a business trip, and after supper I said to ma, Pop's coming home tomorrow, do you realize that, ma?

I shouldn't be surprised if I had a faint inkling, ma said.

Meaning sure she realized it, and I said, Well what are we going to do to welcome him home, ma, anything special?

Well, I think it would be a nice idea if you had your hands and face spotlessly clean and a flawless part in your hair. I cant think of any greater or more agreeable surprise, ma said, and I said, Aw G, ma, I dont mean anything ordnerry like that. How would it be if we hang the flag out the upstairs window and I make 2 big signs for the downstairs windows saying on them Welcome Home Pop, and I'll have all the fellows sitting on our front steps and just when pop gets out of the taxy with his bags they'll all start yelling three cheers, and I'll be the cheer leader to be sure they do it good and loud, I said.

Dont you think all that might be a little conspicuous? ma said, and I said, Well then lets just have a private family welcome, I mean like ice cream and cake for dizzert. G, ma, that's a swell idea, I said.

It might be if your father was a dizzert eater, but he barely ever touches dizzert, ma said, and I said, I know, ma, but the effect would be there just a same, I mean it would look like a celebration and that's the main thing. So dont you think youll have any kind of a special dizzert at all, ma? I said.

I'll have liver and onions, that's what I'll have, ma said. You've given me a very good idea, that's just the personel touch your father will appriciate, she said, and I said, Aw G, good night, holey smokes.

Proving when people claim they're going to celebrate in honor of something it's genrelly just an excuse to have a good time themselfs.

For Tuesday, September 24

DECIDEDLY mixed influences in astrological terminology are observed to make or mar the events of this day, according to the manner in which the conflicting influences are manipulated. There will be great activity in all directions, with all moving under high tempo. The great danger is in overdoing, working in turbulence and impetuosity when calmness, poise, restraint and well-directed effort would help strike a balance.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of an exceedingly active and progressive year, with much of major importance accruing which might be jeopardized by rash, impetuous, quarrelsome and overzealous conduct. There may be hostility from higher-ups to be compromised with friendships, and practical support substituted.

A child born on this day should be exceedingly versatile and enterprising, with highly stimulated and brilliant forces and faculties which will take it far in any chosen direction. Its setback might be over enthusiasm or idealism. It will have a strong social tendency and find much emotional happiness.

WEDDINGS

JACKSON—ORR

On Saturday morning, September 21st, at Christ Church, Belleville, Nancie Jeanne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Orr, was married to Mr. George Willis Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jackson, of Whitley Bay, England, by the Rev. G. G. Wright, rector of Christ Church.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a close fitting gown of white satin with long train. Her veil of tulle was held in place with a wreath of white flowers. She carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and wore the groom's gift pearl and diamond ear rings, and her mother's pearl necklace.

The maid of honour, Miss Barbara Turvey wore a floor length dress of rose taffeta with blue velvet trimming and a finger tip length veil of blue net. She carried a sheaf of smoky rose gladioli. The two bridesmaids, Miss Margaret Orr, sister of the bride and Miss Doris Atkins, the bride's cousin, were dressed alike in floor length dresses of pale blue taffeta with fitted jackets and ribbon head bands with blue flowers. Their flowers were salmon pink gladioli. The tiny flower girl, Miss June Scriven, wore a ruffled dress of orchid taffeta with a poke bonnet to match and carried a basket of asters and snapdragons.

The service was the complete marriage ritual of the Church of England and was choral which added beauty and dignity to the ceremony. The boys' choir of Christ Church sang the wedding and communion music and Master Jack Shaddock, was the soloist in their beautiful rendering of "O Perfect Love", during the signing of the register. Mr. George Maybee was the organist.

Mr. Raymond Fritz, brother-in-law of the bride, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. George Darvel and Mr. Harry Hauley.

The church was beautifully decorated with gladioli and baskets of garden flowers and clusters of gladioli tied with satin bows adorned the pews.

The bride's gifts to her attendants were to the maid of honour, silver candle holders; to the bridesmaids, fountain pens and to the flower girl, a gold bracelet.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 85 West Bridge Street, Belleville, for about seventy guests. The bride's mother wore a dress of blue printed crepe with black accessories and corsage of tea roses. She was assisted by Mrs. Charles Dowton of Oshawa, sister of the groom, wearing a navy blue ensemble with black accessories and a corsage of white gardenias.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Jackson left for Detroit, Michigan, the bride wearing a redingote dress of beige and copper coloured crepe with matching accessories. On their return they will reside in Belleville.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dowton and son, William of Oshawa, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Fritz, of Kingston, Ont., Mrs. Hilton of Toronto, Mrs. John Latta of Demorestville and Miss Ceacil and Mr. Kenneth Latta; Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Harnden of Castleton; Mr. and Mrs. F. Westover and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Moon of Sidney Crossing and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Atkins of Thurlow Township.

LOCKYER—DUETTA

Picton, Sept. 23. — The United Church was the scene of a lovely wedding this morning at ten-thirty when Dorothy Duetta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Duetta, became the bride of Chris. Lockyer, R.C.A.F., Trenton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Lockyer, Picton. The altar was decorated with baskets of summer flowers. Rev. J. F. Reycraft officiated and F. E. Walden played the wedding music. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long gown of pink net over pink taffeta, finger-tip veil caught with forget-me-nots, and carried a shower bouquet of Briarcliffe roses and Adrantum.

Miss Grace Duetta was her sister's attendant, wearing a gown of blue net over blue taffeta, a halo of blue and pink taffeta in her hair and carried a colonial bouquet of Hollywood roses.

Little Miss Marliyn Whattam, niece of the bride, was flower girl, wearing a long frock of pink and blue organdy with small colonial bouquet of Rapture roses.

Harold Gerow, R.C.A.F., Trenton, was groomsman.

At the reception following, Mrs. Duetta, mother of the bride, was in dusty rose crepe with black hat, and Mrs. Lockyer, the groom's mother, in Queen's blue crepe with white accessories.

As the day was also the birthday of the bride, wedding and birthday cakes centred the table done in pink and white. Mrs. Charles Francis and Mrs. Walter Nicholas poured tea. Assistants were Misses Helen Duetta and Ruby Lockyer. For travelling, the bride donned a gray wool ensemble with blue velvet trim, navy hat and accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Lockyer will later reside in Ottawa, where the groom will continue his work with the R.C.A.F. and as a member of the Airforce band.

Wake Up That Scalp

By HELEN FOLLETT

IF YOUR HAIR looks dull, doesn't seem to be normal or behave in a pleasant manner when you arrange it, you can suspect that the scalp isn't feeling well. Circulation just mosying around instead of being on the gallop. The blood streams keep the hair shafts healthy, bring them food and drink. Women think only of having their top crests beautifully arranged, seldom give a thought to the needs of the silky threads and the scalp.

The scalp will wake up and function if the hair gets a thrashing old brushing once a day. If the permanent wave is first class, daily brushing won't weaken ringlets and rolls, it will make the finger wave more fluid and shadowy. Use a narrow brush, with bristles set in groups so they can be kept clean easily. Brush the hair from the crown toward front, sides and back; that's the way it grows and it likes a change.

Only Ten Minutes

After the grooming spread fingers and thumbs over the scalp, thumbs placed at the nape line. Keep the thumbs stationary, rotate the flesh with the fingers. Keep at it until the skin glows. Then you're getting some place. Ten minutes of hair and scalp care every night will do wonders for the thatch that has gone sad and gloomy.

Animation is what makes the eyes sparkle. Good circulation and good digestion are factors. Nothing can be done about the color; you might as well think it suits you; but the shape of the eyes can be improved by clever arching of the eyebrows and touching the lashes with mascara.

Healthy eyes take pretty good care of themselves, having their own oiling and washing machines. It isn't fair to them to read in a dim light or on a moving train. If they smart and burn bathe them with a boric acid solution that you can purchase from your druggist. Bathing with hot water, then with cold, will soothe eyes that are tired and played out.

Child Discipline Can Be Overdone

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

"Dear Dr. Myers: My daughter is a year and eight months old. My problem with her is that she squeals at the top of her lungs for everything and anything. Ignoring her did no good. It made me lose my temper several times, as she would scream until she got what she wanted, and I'd slap her hands and try to break her of it. This did no good. Now when I try to carry her into the house from out of doors, where she prefers to be, she screams and hits me with her little hand.

"In all else she is a model child, understands everything and is tractable and gentle. My friends would never believe she had a fault. Therefore, I feel that I'm the one who's responsible for any bad trait she might have. Kindly advise me about my behavior toward her in this squealing streak she has and I'll be forever grateful.

"I'm a constant reader of your articles. I clip them for the reference of my friends who also have little children.

My Reply

"How vividly you write. No one would doubt that you are trying to do your very best, and I don't believe your problem is nearly so serious as you suppose it is.

"If when you feel relaxed, you will think over the matter, you will see that in such cases as you have described so clearly you will have no occasion to punish the child or to feel angry at her; that to punish her then would not be effective, as you already have discovered.

"Just work on yourself. Expect her to cry and squeal for what she wants, only do not let her have what she cries and squeals for. Plan just what she must not have, and manage yourself so you won't let her have it. Once you are sure about your plans, her crying and squealing won't make you nervous. We parents don't get nervous over what we know the child will naturally do. Looking at it this way, you will find that your vexation at disappear.

Take an Absence

"To this end you will feel more poised if you get more rest and relaxation. Leave the baby with Dad now and then and get away for some recreation. Better still if you can have some reliable person care for this child so you and Dad can go away from home occasionally for some fun together.

"Sing lullabies, say nursery rhymes and read to her.

"Patiently try to get her to come indoors without resistance. If you must bring her in bodily, begin at once to talk of something very precious to her, or of the story you are going to read when you get into the house. Answer all her questions always. Listen patiently to what she has to say. Show great interest in her crudest play and creations. And good luck."

It is a good time now for us to pray for poise and guidance in the bringing up of our children.

BETHANY W.M.S.

The ladies of the Bethany W.M.S. held an all day meeting and quiting at the home of Mrs. Wm. Yateman on Tuesday, Sept 17th. A delicious lunch was served at noon, proceeds being $8.50. The President, Mrs. Osland, was in charge of the afternoon meeting and opened the program with a hymn followed by the secretary's and treasurer's reports. Business was discussed, Mrs. Walter Sheffield thanked the ladies for the quilt given her after their home was destroyed by fire. The worship service was taken from the Missionary Monthly, the response to the prayers being sung by Mrs. C. Eggleton. Mrs. Wm. Clarke read the Scripture lesson and gave a short explanation. She said, "We know not what lies ahead of us but we must try to live the Christian Life even though there may be great difficulties. We should remember how the Disciples forsook their nets and followed Christ not knowing what was ahead of them". Hymn 358 was sung and Mrs. A. Miller gave a "Peace" reading "History Gives Hope". A solo was given by Miss Stella Bradshaw. Mrs. C. Eggleton gave the last chapter of the Study Book, "Facing The Future Task". She pointed out the fact that we never had so much opposition or such a great opportunity to work for Missions as we have today. Christian Missions should help to lief people out of this terrible rut which they are into".

Another reading "What May I do As a Christian", was given by Mrs. Yateman. Hymn 182 was sung. The National Anthem and the Mizpah Benediction brought the meeting to a close. Twenty-three members and four visitors present. Offering $4.75.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Any Becoming Hat a "Good Luck Hat"

Mrs. Wendell Willkie speaks of the white pique hat with its band of black belting as her "good luck hat". And whether her husband becomes the next president or not, the now-famous hat may still go on record as her "good luck hat", because it's highly becoming to her and shows several of her good points.

Any woman fortunate enough to find a modern hat that is becoming and in style has a good luck hat, whether there's any political plum on the horizon for herself or husband or if she's just trying to be elected president of her favorite club.

For the past three years, women's hats have been fearsome things. There are no available statistics on how many men they may have driven to celibacy. But judging from the cartoons men draw and the cracks made against them in the public print, the gentlemen are not intrigued by these strange formations.

Patience is evidently one of Mrs. Willkie's virtues, to have found an up-to-date hat not in the least freakish. Other women, granting a long and prayerful quest, might be as fortunate as the Republican Presidential nominee's wife in finding something among the mad-hatter eccentricities that is becoming.

Rumor has it that Wendell likes the "good luck hat" and has been known to ask in Othello-like tones, when she wears something else: "Where's that hat?"

Believe it or not, I heard two or three weeks ago, that a delegation of business women had sent a petition to a hat manufacturer saying: "Please let us have some sane hats for business, even if you have to give us 'play hats' that are exotic". And some of the "play hats", if that's really the name of them, would queer the Venus de Milo if she left her pedestal.

The older women—there are really no old women any more—has murmured a prayer of devout thankfulness for the return of the veil. Indications are, in early autumn millinery, that its floating effect will give way to the neatly pinned tailored suggestion, which keeps the hair in perfect order and tempers the mid-day glare on a complexion no longer schoolgirlish.

Brims are kind to everyone. The super-sized brim shading a tiny face gives the effect rather of a bug sitting under a leaf. Some girls like to create these stop-look-and-listen effects.

Speaking of campaign hats, Mrs. Roosevelt's are always in excellent taste, modish but never eccentric. And she is not above wearing a hat two seasons and admitting it, too.

Few pictures of the Dowager Queen Mary's hats have appeared of late in the illustrated news. When she was Queen of England, these hats were famous as being a law unto themselves. Perched high on her beautifully dressed hair, they rather suggested a lighthouse on a promontory. Back of it all was a sentimental reason. The late King George was very proud of his wife's hair, which in the early days of their marriage had been golden as a newly-minted sovereign. And he liked hats that showed to good effect his wife's crowning glory.

The late King and his wife were a real Darby and Joan couple, and Queen Mary chose her hats to please her husband, though they were never modish and never had a large following, even in England.

Ideas for the 25th Wedding Anniversary Celebration

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to give a dinner at a hotel for about 30 members of our immediate families to celebrate our twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

1.—How should we invite our guests? Would a written note be all right?

2.—Are corsages for the ladies and single flowers for the gentlemen necessary? When should they be presented . . . should they be sent to their homes or to the dining-room?

3.—What service am I to expect from the hotel management when I make the engagement for the occasion?

G.

1.—Since your guests are to be members of your immediate families, the most natural and convenient way for you to invite them is by word of mouth or by telephone. If some of them live too far away for this, notes of invitation would be suitable.

2.—It isn't "necessary" to have corsages for the women guests and boutonniers for the men guests, but these will give a delightful and gala touch to your party. The best thing to do is to have them sent or take them, to the hotel, and just before the dinner have them placed at the places. Then they add first to the festive appearance of the table-setting.

To add another festive note to the table and to the occasion, I would have place cards. As symbolic of the twenty-fifth anniversary, you might be able to find some white cards with silver edging, and then write the names of the guests in silver ink.

3.—If you do your party-planning and arrangements carefully and definitely beforehand, you will have a so much more relaxed and happier time during your dinner. When you go to the hotel, ask for whoever is in charge of the dinner arrangements. Tell him the number of guests, discuss with him his menu-suggestions, the number of waiters you want for your table, and (very important) the centrepiece. These attendants are so accustomed to making party arrangements that they will suggest or ask you about any other details that need discussing.

Use of Doctor's Title

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to be married very soon. My fiance received his degree of Doctor of Medicine last year. What title should I use before his name on the wedding invitations. Mr. John Brown or Dr. John Brown?

T.

On your wedding invitations use the title of Doctor before your bridegroom's name. But do not abbreviate this title . . . spell it in full . . . Doctor John Allen Brown.

Formal Dance Etiquette

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been invited to attend a formal dinner dance.

1.—When I am introduced to the chaperon or persons in the receiving line, what should I reply?

2.—Do I leave my escort as soon as I enter the hotel and retire to the ladies lounge to tidy up?

3.—What should I talk about, when in a group, that would be of interest to everybody?

Z.

1.—You aknowledge an introduction to a patroness or chaperon just as you would acknowledge any other introduction—by a gracious "How do you do", adding the name if you are sure you have caught it correctly.

2.—When you and your escort enter the hotel, arrange with him where you and he are to meet after you've gone to remove your wrap and he's gone to check his coat and hat. You meet at the appointed place—probably near the entrance to the dance room, and go together at once to greet the members of the receiving-line.

3.—If you begin to chat about the obvious things first —— the good music, the decorations, perhaps, it will be easy to get the conversational ball rolling. After that, be guided by the conversational topics as they arise.

Guides' Gifts For Lifeboat, Air Ambulances

During the Empire Gift Week when Guides from all over the Empire gave their share to help purchase two air ambulances and a motor lifeboat for His Majesty's Forces, over £48,475 was collected.

As this was considerably more than twice the amount which had been set as the objective, several other gifts have been made possible.

£15,000 has been sent to the Air Ministry for the purchase of the two air ambulances.

The air ambulances were presented to the Royal Air Force by the Imperial President H.R.H. The Princess Royal on Saturday, July 27th. On her arrival the air ambulances were wheeled out on the Royal Air Force field and out tumbled Guides and Brownies. One Guide and one Brownie then came forward and gave The Princess Royal the gift papers for the ambulances which Her Royal Highness then presented to the officers of the Royal Air Force.

The motor lifeboat has been built and has already seen service at Dunkirk where it was slightly damaged, and is now being repaired and completed. Several suggestions were made for the name for the lifeboat and it was decided that she be called "The Guide of Dunkirk" to commemorate her first service.

In response to a request from the War Office the sum of £10,000 has been set aside to equip "Quiet Rooms" for the men at the various camps where they may rest, write letters home and hold their Church services. These huts will be permanent and it is hoped they will be used after the war.

Twenty fully equipped motor ambulances have been donated to the Navy at the cost of £11,000.

The Y.M.C.A. who lost so much in France have been given £5,000 for setting up two very complete units—one for England and one for Scotland—to be known as the Trefoil Huts.

All these gifts and others which will be made with the balance of the money, will be suitably inscribed with a large trefoil and the words, "Presented by the Girl Guides of the Empire. Empire Week 1940".

The amount given as their share by the Brownies, Guides, Rangers, and other members past and present of the movement in Canada was over $11,000.

Belleville Guides, Rangers and Brownies gave $341.81.

The devotional period was conducted by Mrs. Lloyd, Acts 10: 1-4 was read and a Prayer for Peace.

For the first time in the history of this country, the major religious bodies are united to seek drastic restrictions for the sale of alcoholic liquor for beverage purposes. The need for conserving natural resources, and protecting the youth of our land has brought a united front against the insidious fifth column.

The Temperance Federation which includes the churches of Baptist, Anglican, Presbyterian, United, Sons of Temperance, W.C.T.U., Salvation Army and Temperance organizations of the nine provinces and the Roman Catholic communion comprise about four-fifths of the total population of Canada. It is difficult to see how the government can possibly fail to give assent to a petition which represents so large a body of public opinion.

The delegates were received in a sympathetic manner and promised earnest consideration.

Letters were read from the Prime Minister, The Ontario House and the Minister of Justice acknowledging the petition sent.

A Rummage sale to be held soon was planned.

The October meeting will take the form of a parlour meeting at the "Y" when the Field Secretary Miss Duff will be present.

A very delightful description of a day at the "Y" Camp, and the programme of ten days, was given by Miss Bernice Saunders, who acted as swimming instructor at Lake Consecon Camp. There were some fifty girls present. Miss Saunders gave a vivid picture of life at camp, the flag-raising each day, Bible study, alcohol instruction and the camp fire programmes in the evening. All were inspired to hear her summing up of the benefits and help rendered to the girls.

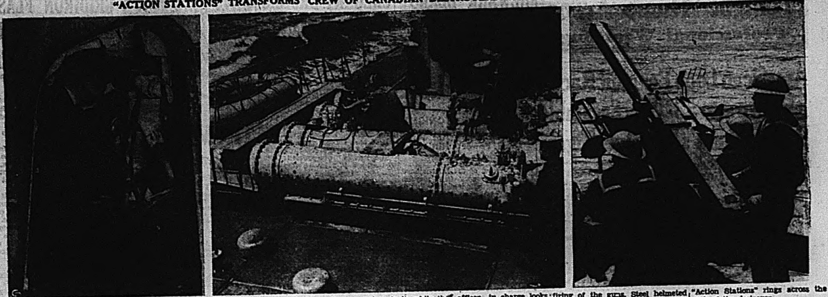
"ACTION STATIONS" TRANSFORMS CREW OF CANADIAN DESTROYERS INTO SMOOTHLY WORKING MACHINE



"Action Stations!" is the electrifying command that instantly transforms the crew of a Canadian destroyer from a group of men into a swift and smoothly working machine that responds to the slightest word or wave of the hand from the bridge. Thoroughly knowing his job, each man springs to it. A torpedo crew mans the tubes aboard a ship of His Majesty's Royal Canadian Navy, CENTRE, while the officer in charge looks on. The gunnery officer is shown, LEFT, in a fire control turret from where he directs the aiming and firing of the guns. AT NEWPORT 'KINDERGARTEN' FOR U.S. NAVY

By Central Press Canadian

While American shipyards are working at full capacity turning out warships of all types to give Uncle Sam a two-ocean navy and the largest fleet in world history, four naval factories are busy schooling men to operate the men o' war. These stations are at Newport, R.I.; Norfolk, Va.; Great Lakes, Ill.; and San Diego, Calif. Oldest of them all is the Newport "naval kindergarten."

The stations are not designed to give recruits complete training in naval work. Their education is completed in naval trade schools and while serving with the fleet. Instead, the aim is to train them in naval customs and the rudimentary fundamentals of naval work. Because of the urgency of training men for the growing fleet, the course has been shortened from twelve to eight weeks.

There are now 2,087 recruits at Newport, with the station graduating an average of 280 men a week, an average which is being raised to 300 weekly. These men will serve six-year hitches in the navy. The quality of recruits, authorities report, is very high, with a large percentage of them high school graduates.

Upon arrival at Newport, a recruit is bathed and barbered, given an exacting physical examination, garbed in naval uniform, and given the hammock in which he must learn to sleep. After receiving a series of inoculations against epidemic diseases, he begins his courses, which provide nearly 400 hours of instruction. The recruit spends an aggregate of 24 hours "on watch" (on guard) and 70 hours at "messing" (feeding) his fellow-students. The rest of his working hours are spent in lecture periods, instruction sessions and drilling.

His lessons include naval routine, the rudiments of the infantry manual, ordnance safety precautions, how to shoot, how to use a gas mask, how to swim, how to row, the use of ropes, rigging and tackle, and the general construction and operation of battleships and other arms of the fleet.

Life at the training station is not all work, however, and the recruits are entertained at free motion picture shows twice a week and at wrestling and boxing matches. They also enjoy the use of reading, writing and game rooms, as well as gymnasiums, bowling alleys, baseball diamonds and the bathing beach.

After leaving the station he can enter one of the navy's trade schools, if he survives the competitive examinations, and learn more about the branch of the service in which he wants to specialize.

Following graduation, he is given a short home leave, then begins his hitch in the navy. He is assigned to the U.S. frigate Constellation, oldest U.S. warship, which is stationed at Newport, pending assignment to the fleet or trade school.

NO CROCODILE TEARS
Mrs. Martin Johnson and Her Native African Gun Bearers Blast a Giant Crocodile Who Ventured Too Near the Johnson Encampment.

With a Lifetime of Thrills Behind Her, the Widow of the Famous Explorer Tells the Real Reason Why She's Going Back to the Jungle

UNTIL Martin Johnson's tragic death in a plane crash Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were America's most colorful big game hunters. Traveling in the world's most savage and remote regions with camera and gun, they recorded nature's phenomena from the jungles of Borneo, the South Seas and Africa. Death dissolved that partnership. Today attractive Osa Johnson carries on in the spirit of her late husband. Today she barnstorms the country, lecturing; tomorrow—the wilds again. And between the two, she still finds time to turn out such superlative motion pictures as Columbia's "I Married Adventure," her most recent production which contains the highlights of her 27 years of adventure. The film is based upon Osa Johnson's Book-of-the-Month Club masterpiece of the same name.

By OSA JOHNSON
(Mrs. Martin Johnson)

FEW people today have sufficient imagination to realise what is wrong with the world. I think I know—at least for myself. For myself I found many of the answers while trekking with my husband across the broad plains of Africa, trailing through the jungles of Borneo and the misty islands of the South Seas. Natives, the children of nature, taught me to see more clearly the values in life.

Twenty-seven years ago Martin and I, just two kids, went off into the jungle to "find" ourselves. Martin was a "Mark Twain" boy. I was a high school girl, 16 years old, from a little Kansas town of three thousand people. Martin had travelled widely, I had been nowhere. But from then on I made a home wherever my husband hung his hat.

We made our first real home at Lake Paradise, 450 miles north of Nairobi. It lay in the crater of an extinct volcano and was so remote that the animals were almost tame. We made ourselves comfortable—we always have. We lived on the fat of the land, even though our menu included elephants' trunk soup and lion chops. Every day brought a new adventure. Martin's job was with his camera, mine beside him with a rifle. There were narrow escapes from elephants, lions and worse than all, snakes. I soon became an expert tree climber. You do when a high limb means life.

We never killed wantonly, but often it was the animal or the Johnsons. I had never shot a cheetah. Somehow they were so beautiful, too beautiful to die. Then one day I saw one coming towards me. He had a tiny black buck in his cruel jaws. For a moment I shut my eyes, then I fired. He fell dead, and the native "boys" with me helped to bandage the poor little mangled body of the buck.

I WAS never homesick until I returned to America. Then, with the talk of wars and the worries of civilization we became so depressed we went back to the jungle to recover our lost happiness.

We always celebrated birthdays and holidays. I remember one Fourth of July we were having a special dinner; incidentally, this dinner nearly cost me my life. I was cooking a young guinea hen. It was cleaned with its feathers on, wrapped in a clean towel and placed in a sand hole with hot ashes. After about two hours I knew it would be done. I told our black cook to open the home-made oven. There was a loud explosion and a huge chunk of red hot stone flew by my head knocking one of our porters on the cheek and burning him severely. Well, we had dinner anyhow, and as the men, Martin and our sound technician, were drinking their coffee, I went into my tent and fired off four rounds with my elephant gun. Yound De Witt Sage, got the spirit of July 4th, and shot his pistol into the air, then Martin, not to be outdone, got a radium flare and set it off in the deep blackness of the Ituri Forest. It was a great celebration, but all the pigmies we were using in our film took fright and ran away. It was three days before they came back, and then only when we made them huge gifts of salt, sugar and cakes of scented pink soap, which they promptly ate.

I was never exactly afraid. Rather was I overcome with the bigness and ruthlessness of the wilds. One night, I must admit I was changing into a pair of satin pyjamas that Martin had given me as a present, when I heard a long drawn out howl. It came from the donkey pens. A blood thirsty leopard had got in among our poor beasts. Soon hyenas had finished the horrible meal and nothing was left but clean picked bones.

We never fired a shot at Paradise Lake. It was an understanding between Martin and me. Once I nearly had to. I was climbing through a dense growth with my bearer, when I glanced up to see a huge elephant a few feet from me. He was as surprised as I was. "Don't move," whispered my boy. Believe me I could not have lifted a finger. Martin was on the other side of the lake and through his field glasses saw all that was happening. He knew that I was just waiting for the chance to climb up the nearest tree.

People have asked me how I keep my looks. Well, I have always taken care of myself.

A woman friend said to me, "Why do you use cosmetics and powder when your husband is the only person to see you accept an occasional rhino?"

I said, "Because I want to keep my husband." We always carried an old patchwork quilt with us that grandmother had made, and a little red rag rug. I wore gay clothes, and whatever happened, we trained our boys to give us a hot bath when we returned to camp at night.

I have been almost everywhere, and I have met many famous people. I have lived a full life, and now suffered so much. I am going back because as Martin taught me, only in the jungle we loved so well can I find the peace and adventure that makes life worthwhile.

American Loop Pennant Race Thrown into a 3-Way Scramble By Cleveland's Win Over Tigers

Not Likely Winners Will be Decided Till Last Game of the Season

FELLER WINS 27TH

Detroit is Still on Top by One Game but Yanks Have a Mathematical Chance to Win

By BILL WHITE

Associated Press Sports Writer

Like the old-time movie serials that used to end just after the heroine had fallen into the crocodile pond, the American League pennant race stops abruptly today.

After almost everybody had given up on the Yankees ever being able to make it five pennants in a row, and then had decided Detroit Tigers were too tough, Cleveland yesterday smashed out a 10-5 victory in the third game of their series at Detroit to make the race a three-way scramble again. And now, with everybody on edge, they all take the day off!

Resuming play Tuesday, the Tigers have a two-game series with Chicago White Sox and the Indians meet the Browns in a pair. All of which means that the pennant chase probably will not be decided until that three-game series starting next Friday between the Tigers and the Indians at Cleveland.

Feller Wins 27th

After losing the first two games of the "crocial" series, the Indian victory yesterday—Bobby Feller's 27th of the year—left the pennant picture looking like this:

Team	W	L	Pct.	G.B.	T.P.
Detroit	87	62	.584	—	5
Cleveland ..	86	63	.577	1	5
New York	82	64	.562	3½	8

The Yanks kept within mathematical shouting distance of the leaders by trompling Boston Red Sox, 6-3, thanks to George Selkirk's two homers.

In the other games Washington scored a pair of victories over the Athletics, 5-4 and 5-2, and the White Sox won a 10-0 victory over St. Louis Browns.

Phil Marchildon, recruit right-hander from Toronto, started for the Athletics, but was removed after three innings. Obviously nervous, Marchildon was nicked for six of the seven Washington hits and all their runs. He walked three men and made two wild pitches to suffer his first major league loss.

National League

In the National League, Turner pitched a two hitter to give the champion Cincinnati Reds a 2-1 victory over the Pirates in the first game but Johnny Vander Meer's wildness cost them the second game 8-1. He walked seven batters and hit one before Milt Shoffner came to his rescue.

Brooklyn Dodgers scored a twin victory over the Phillies 10-2 and 5-2.

Boston Bees and New York Giants split their doubleheader 4-3 and 7-2. St. Louis Cards blasted Chicago Cubs 8-1 and 2-1, knocking Dizzy Dean dizzy in the first game and getting the best of a pitcher's duel in the nightcap between Max Lanier and Larry French.

Ontario All-Stars Now in Vancouver

Vancouver, Sept. 23 (CP)—The Ontario Junior All-Stars—the East's bid for the Canadian Junior Lacrosse championship this year—came to town Sunday to meet the British Columbia All-Stars in a best-of-five series starting tonight for possession of the Minto Cup.

The Ontario boys plan a stiff workout before going into the first game. Coach Frank Bain said the Ontario squad, accustomed to playing on a dirt floor, may experience difficulty on the wooden floor here.

The Easterners who defeated Manitoba All-Stars in the semi-finals are equipped with special cleated shoes for playing on dirt and there was only a few pairs of running shoes to be found in the luggage the boys brought off the train.

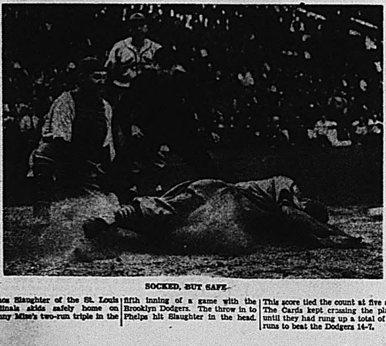
THEY'RE OFF!

Few turf fans have ever been close enough to the starting point to get an eyeful of the gateway as presented here. This was the start of a feature at Aqueduct, which was won by Moscow II, piloted by Jockey Eddie Arcaro. Dusky Fox as pace horse, Jimmy Stout up. Jockey S. Herbert rode Equitable, while Harry Richards was on Strabo. Winner paid $8.



SOCKED, BUT SAFE

Enos Slaughter of the St. Louis Cardinals skids safely home on Johnny Mize's two-run triple in the fifth inning of a game with the Brooklyn Dodgers. The throw in to Phelps hit Slaughter in the head. This score tied the count at five all. The Cards kept crossing the plate until they had rung up a total of 14 runs to beat the Dodgers 14-7.

NEWARK BEARS AND BALTIMORE BATTLE FOR TITLE

Newark Eliminates Jersey City in Four Straight While Orioles Take the League Leaders

SERIES OPENS TONIGHT

Rochester Could Not Withstand Power Hitting of the Orioles

Final round of the International League's Governors' Cup playoffs begins at Newark tonight with the pennant winner on the sidelines. Newark, second in the regular season, and Baltimore, which just managed to come in fourth, meet in the final best-of-seven series to determine the League's representative in the "Little World Series".

Newark's Bears, the circuit's hottest team at the finish of the regular season, eliminated Jersey City's Little Giants in four straight games then Baltimore Orioles came through to conquer the champion Rorhester Red Wings, 4-2, after losing the first two games.

Newark is expected to call upon Rookie Steve Peek, who chalked up his 14th Consecutive victory in the first playoff round, for tonight's mound chores while Roy Bruner is expected to start for Orioles.

Baltimore's power hitting, which proved so effective in the Orioles' home park, broke out in the ninth inning at Rochester yesterday and overwhelmed Mike Ryba to give the Orioles a 3-2 victory in the deciding game of the series.

CALGARY BRONKS AHEAD IN LOOP

Overpowered Regina Rough Riders in Floodlight Game Saturday Night 17 to 3

Calgary, Sept. 23 (CP)—Calgary Bronks, looking more and more like a threat in the Western Canada Interprovincial Football Union, were alone in the league's top spot today while Regina Roughriders slipped back another game into the three-team league's cellar position.

The Bronks overpowered the Roughriders 17-3 in a floodlight Saturday night game here with a two-touchdown barrage early in the game that the Regina club was unable to match.

Calgary's first two touchdowns came before Regina had handled the ball four times. Jimmy Gilkes crossed the line standing up for the first score, after a Bronk attack had brought the ball to Regina's four-yard line. A flat pass from Hughes to Turner in the Bronks' next goalward march brought Calgary's score to 10 points. Rowe missed the convert on the first touch, but his smooth placement was good on the second score.

Final score of the game came in the dying moments when the second string Calgary line paved the way for a touchdown by Alexander after Cosgrove had recovered a Regina fumble on their 17-yard line. Rowe's placement went wide of the mark.

With all three teams having played four games each, Bronks lead the league with six points. The Canadian champion Winnipeg Blue Bombers are in second place with four while Roughriders have two points from their early-season victory over Blue Bombers.

GORDON STOREY STRIKES OUT 18

Aylmer Wins First Game of Intermediate "A" O.B.A. Playdowns From Cobourg

Aylmer, Ont, Sept. 23.—(CP)—Gordon (Red) Storey, Ace pitcher of Aylmer intermediates who struck out 16 Meaford Knights' batters last week, set a new record Saturday when he struck out 18 Cobourg opponents as Aylmer won the first game of the Ontario Baseball Association Intermediate "A" finals 4-3.

Storey sprained his ankle while sliding into second base in the fifth inning but remained in the game to strike out eight batters in the next four innings. Smith of Cobourg held the Aylmer batters hitless for the first four innings and then the home team solved his sidearm delivery and gathered eight hits.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Week's Wash: Georgie Raft, the movie star (who owns a slice of lightweight George Latko), has offered Lew Jenkins $25,000 to defend his tittle against Latka. At last reports, Jenkins wasn't interested . . . . Joe Smoot who built the Hialeah and Santa Anita racing plants, is looking over the Westbury trotting layout, probably with a view to running night races at Gulfstream Park, Miami, this winter.

GRIDIRON FLASH RETURNS TO GAME

Fritz Hanson, Ace Backfielder of Winnipeg Bombers, Has Donned Cleats

Winnipeg, Sept. 23—(CP)—Fritz Hanson, blond flash of the gridiron, will don the cleats again and return to action with Winnipeg Blue Bombers, officials of the club announced last night.

Hanson, who thrilled thousands of sports fans from Calgary to Ottawa with his lightning rushes, decided to come out of retirement because he "just couldn't resist the lure of the game."

Hanson had announced his retirement from the football wars at the start of the season so he could devote all his time to business. His announcement brought regret to his club and to the football crowds who had watched him during his sensational career in the Blue Bomber uniform.

The urge to get back into the game became too strong to resist, and Saturday he told officials of the club he would come out again if they could use him.

Tonight he will be back in his old uniform when Bombers meet the powerful Concordia College team from the United States in an exhibition game here. He'll be in uniform again next weekend in Regina when his team will be after two points needed to put them in a tie for first place with Calgary Bronks.

Shore Must Limit His Hockey Playing To One Club this Winter

New York, Sept. 23. —(CP)—Eddie Shore, hockey's famed "iron man" will have to limit most of his playing activities to one club this winter.

The International - American Hockey League, in the course of a long meeting yesterday, got around to dealing with Shore's status after bickering over a schedule, which will open October 30, and shortening the League's name by dropping the "International" part.

The directors finally decided that the rules applied to Eddie, who as owner of Springfield Indians and playing property of New York Americans, served with both clubs a good part of last season.

The rules state that a player can be sent down from a major league club to the American and recalled again only three times. If he makes a fourth trip he must stay. Likewise when he is sent to the minor league he must remain at least two weeks unless a serious injury to a major league player is the cause for his recall. Application of this rule will put a crimp in Shore's stunt of playing with the Americans one night and Springfield the next as he frequently did last year.

Opening games October 30 will be at Cleveland and Philadelphia but the visiting teams were not named because the club owners never got around to approving an entire schedule. They expect to do that some time this week. Each team will play 28 home games and 28 on the road.

Tennis

At the completion of six matches in the final play-offs for the championship of the Bay of Quinte Tennis League championship in a sudden-death match played at the Canada Cement Club courts in Point Anne on Saturday afternoon the Quinte Tennis Club and the Tweed Club were all even at three wins each and a tie on the day's play.

President Tom Bowler, of the Bay of Quinte Tennis League, immediately ordered a replay of the entire six games to be played at Point Anne on Wednesday afternoon. The Tweed club won the men's singles, one set of men's doubles and one set of mixed doubles, while the local Quinte Club won the ladies' doubles and one set each of the men's and mixed doubles. One set of mixed doubles went to three sets, two of which were of the extra end nature.

The results were as follows:

Men's singles — M. Cotton, (Tweed) defeated H. Kerr (Quinte) 6-3 and 6-2.

Men's doubles— (1) Courneyea and Wagar (Tweed) won over Burnett and Bucher (Quinte) 6-3 and 8-6.

(2) —D. Maclean and E. Wickerson, (Quinte) won over White and Elwood (Tweed) 6-3 and 6-1.

Mixed doubles —(1) Jo Cruji and G. Atyeo (Quinte) won over Miss F. Graham and E. Doyle (Tweed) 3-6, 10-8 and 7-5.

(2)—Mrs. Moffatt and W. Archer (Tweed) won over Miss M. Wardner and Gord. Barclay (Quinte) 6-3 and 7-5.

Ladies' doubles—Madge Howard and Marion Maclean (Quinte) won over Connie Morrison and Mrs. Alton (Tweed) 6-4 and 9-7.

Hunch Dep't.

The other day, Doc Prothro, manager of the Phils, was desperate for a pinch hitter . . . . He called the roll of the Philly Bench, then thumbed his newest Rookie pitcher and told him to go up and hit . . . "Hickory" commanded the Doc. . . Up to bat marched Charlie Frye and hickoried a homer to beat the Cubs . . . The hunch was Fry's home town, Hickory, N.C.

Three secondary schools are definitely entered in the Bay of Quinte senior Interscholastic rugby football group of the C.O.S.S.A., convener Les Shiels announced this morning. Albert College and the Belleville Collegiate squads will resume gridiron hostilities and will be affiliated this year with an entry from the Cobourg Collegiate. It is some years since Cobourg C.I. played in the local group and their re-appearance should stimulate the game considerably in Belleville. Incidentally Mr. Shiels is endeavouring to schedule the Cobourg at B.C.I. game here on Thanksgiving Day, while the Cobourg at Albert tilt will definitely be played as a Saturday afternoon fixture. In the meantime N. A. (Pete) Beach, who is in charge of the six-man Bay of Quinte junior group, has contacted no less than seven High Schools and Collegiates throughout the district and hopes to introduce the streamlined modern football game on a large scale locally.

Monday is wrestling night at the Hume area and three more bouts are on the card this evening, headed by a go between Geo. Pavish, the rough and uncouth Greek villain, who meets Jack Samson, the Chicago wildcat, in the main event. Samson comes to Belleville highly recommended by promoters in the Windsor district as a strong wrestler, who should be able to mix matters well with the villainous Greek. Local wrestling fans are anxious to see Pavish's measure taken in a local ring as he has ruled the grappling roost here just a little too long for the patrons' liking. Another bout that should please is the curtain-raiser, that brings Pedro Veldez, the lithe Mexican matman, against Morris Fagan, an Irishman, who is a pupil of Dan O'Mahoney his compatriot. Incidentally Tom George, who meets Jack Pavies in the semi-final bout informs us he is not a Greek, but was born in Macedonia, of which we can't see much difference, however.

Cliff (Nugger) Bennett, former Belleville outfielder now starring with Hollinger Mines nine in Northern Ontario, was in the city over the week end enroute to Kingston where he was married on Saturday. Incidentally "Nug" married Miss Simpson, a daughter of Oscar Simpson, trainer of the Belleville Hockey Club many years ago. The good wishes of the sporting fraternity of Belleville go to the newly-weds, who will reside in Northern Ontario.

The contesting clubs in the championship series for the top honours in the Bay of Quinte Tennis League battled to a draw in the league attempt at a sudden death series of matches at Point Anne on Saturday. Tweed and the Quinte Tennis Club of this city are finalists this year, each winning three sets on Saturday, forcing a replay of the entire six matches on Wednesday.

"Doc" Empson and his South Hastings "Combines" are awaiting word from Port Hope relative as to when the Ontaries and the Combines will get under way with their intermediate O.B.A. series. The South Hastings nine has been idle for ten days now and are getting anxious to play ball while the current splendid baseball weather is available. Skipper Empson hopes to receive something concrete regarding the Combine-Port Hope series before nightfall, as it has been proposed to play the first game here on Wednesday, but no confirmation was received up until noon.

Mrs. Thelma Haneke, formerly "Tel" Morgan of Belleville, pitched the Kik team into the championship of the Danforth Girls' Senior Softball League last week. Besides hurling a masterful game against Crofton's in the finals, "Tel" wielded a strong buldgeon also. Incidentally Mrs. Haneke got her softball start in Belleville.

In keeping with former presentations, the annual Shannonville (world's) Fair attracted goodly numbers on Saturday. Horse racing and baseball games were enjoyed and as an added sporting attraction a winner-take-all wrestling show was introduced by Chief Lone Wolf, a grappler of parts. Incidentally Jim (Little London) Mitchell from Belleville won twice and lost as many in four entrances into the ring. Chuck Thorne and Roy Doherty were other local wrestlers to give the challenger a go at things.

The Buffalo Hockey Club will be operated independently of the Maple Leafs as a business concern in the newly organized American Hockey League this winter, although the Buffalo club will continue as a Toronto farm team. Incidentally we now have National and American hockey leagues, a la baseball.

Sport Spice — Lex Cook, native of Trenton and who coached the Lake Shore Blue Devils to an Allen Cup title, will be at the helm of the Cornwall Fliers this season....It's no jumping around from one club to the other for Eddie Shore this winter, the dynamic Eddie must either play for Amerks or his personally-owned Springfield Indians.... Which should make considerable difference in Shore's earnings, we'd imagine....The American League race continues to be torrid, the Tigers won two out of three over the Indians in their series over the week end and are leading the parade....The Tigers go to Cleveland for a three game series at the end of the league schedule on Friday and that series will tell the tale....Phil Marchildon, who is with the Philadelphia A's by way of Penetang and Toronto, lost his first start to Washington 5-3 yesterday....Phil was noticeably nervous, however.

Trenton R. C. A. F. Wins First Game Over Wallaceburg

Wallaceburg, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP)—In a hard-fought game, the R.C.A.F. of Trenton defeated the Lambton-Kent Creameries, 14-13, Saturday, in a 10-inning, first game of the Provincial softball intermediate "B" finals. The second game will be played at Trenton next Saturday.

The locals, getting away to an early start, drove the Fliers' southpaw hurler, Noseworthy, out of the box in the second frame. Harry Parr, who took over the mound duties, did well to hold the locals who made a couple of rallies. The Fliers staged a six-run rally in the fifth which drove Shepley, the Creameries' hurler, to the showers, to be replaced by Carl Roe. After the visitors had broken the tie in their turn at bat in the extra inning, primarily as the result of a couple of costly errors, Parr walked two of the Burg batters, but bore down to strike out the remaining three.

Home run hitters were Parr and Casey for the Fliers.

R.C.A.F. PLANES

Crashed Upside Down

P. O. Moran tried to ride his plane but found it unmanageable and after telling his companion, A. C. I. Porter to bail out, he did so himself. Aircraftsman Porter failed to bail out and was instantly killed when the plane crashed upside down in a field on the farm owned by Arthur Clendennan.

The second plane piloted by F. O. Hill managed to make a forced landing in a field on the Talmadge farm south of the Murray Canal. Landing in a small field, F. O. Hill manoeuvred his plane through some small under brush and skidded it to a stop only a few feet from a thick woods.

Mrs. Clendennan, who was working outside her farmhouse, witnessed the planes flying in a tight formation over her farm. Although she did not actually see the crash she did witness the two planes as they fell and was horrified to see one of the planes crash in front of her home only 75 yards from the front door.

Gave General Alarm

After recovering from her fright, Mrs. Clendennan ran in the house and made a general call over the telephone to the neighbors asking for help. In a few minutes, a number of the neighboring farmers had appeared on the scene.

Alex Thompson, Brighton, who happened to be driving by the farm at the time the plane crashed to the ground was the first on the scene and aided F. O. Moran to his feet. They both went to the plane and extricated A. C. I. Porter from the plane but there was no sign of life in the body. R.C.A.F. officials were notified.

Although the engine of the plane seemed to explode as it struck the ground, according to Mrs. Clendennan, the plane did not take fire and the two men were able to extricate the body from the plane.

Flying Officer Moran barely escaped serious injury himself as he took to his parachute, when he was about 500 feet off the ground. The parachute had barely opened, when the officer landed with a thud only a few feet away from the plane as it crashed a second before. Knocked out by the force of the impact, he immediately returned to his senses as Mr. Thompson picked him up.

The Moran plane was completely demolished by the impact but the Hill plane intact with the exception of the propellor which was broken at each tip.

A military court of enquiry will be held immediately to determine the cause of the crash.

Six Injured in Crash

Six persons were injured and rushed to the Belleville General Hospital, on Saturday afternoon following a collision, two miles west of Brighton in which three cars figured.

William Everett Getchell of White Plains, N.Y., was the most seriously injured. He suffered a fractured pelvis, fractured hip and internal injuries. His wife a passenger in the same car suffered shock and lacerations.

Four others passengers in the second car, were admitted to the hospital but their condition is not reported as serious. They are Miss Phyllis Reynolds, Glen Valley View Road, Toronto Mrs. Unice Davies, 79 Orchard Park, Toronto, and her son, Hugh Davies and the driver of the car Hugh Ormand.

The accident occurred when the Getchell car and the Ormand car came into collision with a third car driven by Joseph Grey of Trenton. According to Traffic Officer D. Wilson the Getchell car, being driven west on Highway 2, was in the act of passing the Grey car when the collision occurred with the Davies car, that was eastbound. All three automobiles were badly damaged. Charges are pending, according to the officer.

IN MEMORIAM

CLARKE — In loving memory of our mother, Mrs. E. Clarke, who died September 23rd, 1939:

No one knows how much we miss you,
No one knows the bitter pain
We have suffered. Since we lost you
Life has never been the same.
In our hearts your memory lingers,
Sweetly tender, fond and true.
There is not a day, dear mother,
That we do not think of you.

—Ever remembered by daughter and son, Marion and Jack Clarke.

BRITONS ENRAGED

announcement said.

Of 406 men, women and children aboard, only 113 were brought back alive by a warship which reached the scene at dawn. The stories of heroism and horror they told indicated many perished in the tremendous explosion, which ripped the ship. Scores more were swept from wave-tossed lifeboats, or died of injuries and exposure in the night of cold and sleet.

One boy comforted a dying nurse, long before rescue, with the words: "I can see boats, nurse. It won't be long now—"

The government said the children, from five to 15 years old, were the first lost in child refugee removals that have taken 3,000 others to safety. Another evacuee ship was torpedoed last August, but all 320 children aboard were saved.

Sub Not Identified

The announcement did not identify the submarine in last Tuesday's war episode, but Geoffrey Shakespeare, chairman of the Children's Overseas Reception Board, called the tragedy "another example of the barbarous methods associated with Nazi Germany".

Under an editorial heading of "murder", the Daily Herald declared "Hitler, himself, directly, fully and personally bears the guilt. Let us write that in our hearts and never forget it."

The Daily Telegraph said "while the world will be shocked by this deed without name, it must also be startled into a clearer, fuller realization what the Nazi code of conduct allows and what domination of the world by Nazi power would mean for extinction not only of human freedom, but of human decency".

Called Sinking "Criminal"

The Times, called the sinking "criminal", and added "the German way of warfare knows no restraint of conscience".

The Government announcement said "tragic circumstances"— the violence of explosion, the storm, and the cold—defeated careful precautions taken for the children's safety.

The survivors, 13 children, 18 women and 82 men—the latter including members of the crew that had numbered 251—were exhausted and drenched when taken aboard the British warship, but in good spirits by the time they returned to England last Friday.

They told of stark horror, suffering, shock and heroism, especially on the part of the children whose behaviour was described as "magnificent".

Miss E. M. Day, chief escort of the children told this story:—

"I was in my cabin when I heard an explosion. I dashed to the children's quarters and found them still asleep. Each child had a lifebelt. An officer shouted to the children to hurry on deck, and we started with the children behaving magnificently.

Boat Shipped Water

"We clambered into a lifeboat, but it had shipped much water, and its rudder was gone.... We saw many other small boats The children were singing 'Roll Out the Barrel'. As they came to the part that goes 'We'll Have a Barrel of Fun' the ship sank."

Miss Day told of a night of terror in the darkness after the ship went down of cold and sleet and water "up to our hips" in a lifeboat.

Grey dawn disclosed 12 lifeboats left.

"It was then," she said, "that we could see what had happened. In our boat, there was only one child, two escorts, a stewardess and two sailors left alive."

Another escort told of a 13-year-old girl saying "don't worry, nurse. The British navy won't let us down."

Welsh Boy Assists

All but 10 of the children were being removed aboard by the government. The 10 were being taken to Canada privately by relatives.

Col. James Baldwin-Webb, member of parliament and General Manager of Baldwin's Steel Works at Birmingham, was injured badly by the torpedo blast and went down with the ship after refusing a place in a lifeboat until all women and children were safe. He was going to Canada on a Red Cross mission.

Also aboard the ship were refugees seeking to leave the war behind after being released from German concentration camps. They included Czechs, Hungarians, Hollanders and some Germans. The Germain Baroness Von Inglesleben, who had been in a German concentration camp many months, died of heart disease after she had been lowered into a lifeboat.

Endless Nightmare

London, Sept. 23—(CP)—To nine-year-old Derek Bech, the sinking of a British liner bound for Canada with child refugees among her passengers seemed like an endless nightmare of darkness and awful cold.

Derek was rescued with his mother and two sisters, Sylvia, 11, and Barbara 14, after drifting Tuesday night on a wave-washed raft pelted with rain and hail.

"We were in bed about 10 o'clock —mother and I in one cabin and my sisters in another—"the boy said, "when a crash shook the ship and smoke poured down the corridor outside the cabin.

"We went to the lounge and then to lifeboats. We rushed to one end of the ship, but she was sinking. There was a big explosion, and we had to run back to the other end of the ship.

"There we climbed down a rope ladder, and we got on a raft. Another lady and an officer were on the lifeboat with us.

"Sometimes the water almost turned it upside down. Once Sylvia was knocked into the water, but mother pulled her back onto the raft. It was awfully cold.

"We kept seeing another lifeboat as we tossed around on the waves. We signalled to it, and it kept circling around us. Finally it picked us up. Later it took us to a naval ship.

"We had tinned milk, rum and biscuits on the raft to keep us going—but I was glad to leave it."

Some Skirmishes Reported During Entry Last Night

Entry Effected Through an Agreement Signed in Hanoi On Sunday

Tokyo, Sept. 23—(AP)—Japanese army and navy units, bent on an attack on China's "back door" supply routes, have entered French Indo-China, the Japanese Government announced today, under the terms of an agreement signed in Hanoi.

"Some skirmishes" were reported to have occurred during the entry last night, but a joint naval and military communique said "these were to be expected and will be over shortly." The advance will proceed smoothly."

One clash came in the vicinity of Dongdang, on the Chinese border 120 miles northeast of Hanoi, but Yakichira Suma, Japanese foreign office spokesman, labelled this a "local skirmish" and said it "was entirely due to a misunderstanding on the part of Indo-China" despite the agreement and prolonged negotiations in which Japan "manifested consistent patience and forbearance."

An army spokesman said there was a small number of Japanese dead and wounded. He asserted Indo-Chinese forces fired first when Japanese crossed the border from China during darkness, but laid the action to failure of the Indo-Chinese forces to receive proper instructions.

(Dispatches reaching Shanghai from Haiphong, Indo-China, said the French and the Japanese were settling this "brief but fierce" clash amicably. These dispatches also attributed the skirmish to a misunderstanding and said the fighting ceased upon the arrival of an envoy hurriedly dispatched from Hanoi by Gen. Issaku Nishihara, head of the Japanese mission negotiating the agreement.)

Suma said he believed the Dongdang affair would "be speedily settled locally."

Steps Taken to Settle China Affair

The Foreign Office spokesman said the agreement had been reached because of the "necessity of settling the China affair. It is not based on any territorial design on Indo-China, therefore Japan has no intention of provoking Indo-China."

He declined to say whether the agreement provides for withdrawal of Japanese troops from Indo-China upon the termination of the Japanese conflict with China and said he was unable to make public the terms of the agreement.

In Hanoi, the provisions of the agreement were reported to be:

1. Immediate landing of a "limited" number of Japanese troops at Haiphong.

2. Establishment of three Japanese air bases in Tonkin north of the Red River, including one base near Hanoi.

3. Permission for the Japanese to bring in 6,000 troops to garrison the air bases.

4. The right to maintain a "few effectives at Haiphong.

Suma said the troops were entering by way of Longdang, but was unable to state where the naval entry was being made.

Preliminary agreement on "limited" military facilities for the passage of Japanese troops through the French colony was reached some time ago after conversations in Tokyo and Vichy, with details to be worked out at Hanoi. The conferences in the colonial capital several times were near collapse, and once, foreign sources reported, Japan delivered an ultimatum to France calling for settlement of the matter by midnight Sunday. Both parties denied there was an ultimatum. The agreement was signed yesterday afternoon.

Proclamation Issued

After the signing, Admiral Jean Decoux, the Governor-General of Indio-China, issued a proclamation calling upon the population for "understanding, calmness and discipline."

The proclamation said "certain airports in Tonkin were placed at the disposal of the Japanese army as its operations require." Tonkin is opposite the Chinese provinces of Kwangsi and Yunnan.

British Shoot Down Messerschmitts And Warplanes

Heavy Damage Done to Nazis on Continent By Raids of R. A. F.

London, Sept. 23—(CP)— Four separate waves of German bombers and fighters crossed the British coast today as Nazi forces intensified the battle of Britain in a daylight raid. one alarm sounded in London.

A number of the raiders was reported shot down, and the Press Association said anti-aircraft guns and R.A.F. fighter patrols scattered the formations so that engagements soon were broken off. British said the raiders fled in disorders back across the channel.

Two Messerschmitt 109 fighters were reported shot down in the fighting, in addition to a warplane brought down into the sea at Portsmouth and another near the Isle of Wight.

The Press Association said its reports suggested the four formations attempted to reach London by three routes—over the Kent coast, the Essex coast and the Thames estuary.

Barrage Balloons Higher Up

During the London warning, barrage balloons appeared to have been sent up to a far greater height than ever before.

One of the Messerschmitts was brought down by a Spitfire fighter beside the Folkestone harbor, and the other was shot down in a dog-fight over the mainland. Ground watchers saw the pilot of the latter machine bail out and float toward the earth north of Dover.

Raider Blown to Pieces

Another raider was blown to pieces when Nazi planes attempted a raid in force on a south coast port last night. It crashed with its dead crew near the Sussex coast.

The air fighting increased in tempo during the night—the 16th in succession in which the Germans have bombed London— as Britain launched new counter blows along the "invasion coast" across the channel.

The night-long bomb shower on the capital, starting more fires and spreading new ruin through the mid-city section, underscored increasing demands by the Press and public for an underground honeycomb of shelters with sleeping quarters.

Londoners who viewed the air raid damage revealed by dawn in almost every section of the city heard with satisfaction the reports of the Royal Air Force's own blows at the Nazi coastal bases and into Belgium and Northern France.

'Important Target' in Germany Attacked

In addition, the Air Ministry reported, an "important target in Germany" was attacked.

Other British communiques told of day and night raids since last Saturday in which shipping and barges were reported smashed, oil stores ignited and huge fires touched off at Rotterdam and Flushing, in the Netherlands, in Antwerp and Ostend, Belgium, and the French ports of Dunkerque, Boulogne and Calais.

Watchers who keep a close eye on the weather at the English Channel, important to any move for invasion, reported clearing skies have made visibility fair over the narrow strait of Dover. The sea was calm with only a light southwest wind.

'Number of Casualties'

Raids which kept thousands of families in shelters all last night were reported somewhat more intense over London than the attacks of Friday or Saturday night.

A communique acknowledged there had been "a number of casualties", including some deaths, and that London again was the principal target, although bombs fell in several coast towns as well as inland.

Damage in London was reported as widely scattered. Homes and Industrial buildings were hit.

Raiders Come Singly

The raiders continued their recent tactics of coming singly. Many bombed from so high their motors hardly could be heard. Other planes glided in low, piercing the heavy anti-aircraft barrage and dumping their bombs from only a few hundred feet above their targets.

One German plane was reported to have exploded in mid-air when hit by anti-aircraft fire.

Five bombs fell in a row across a large central city building where scores of persons were working. There were no casualties, but a wing of the building was smashed, and windows in a nearby hotel were shattered. Two bombs hit an apartment house in southwestern London.

In a southeast town bombs smashed a 15th Century church. In another town, 24 houses collapsed from heavy bombing.

"Flying Blind" by VERA BROWN

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

One afternoon, three weeks after Sonia had come back, Michael telephoned: "Want to have dinner with me tonight, you and Tex?"

"Tex is working today."

"Then you come."

"I'd love to see you."

"Good! I'll meet you at the Waldorf at six. Don't dress. We'll go some place where we can talk."

Judith took pains with her costume. She had a new spring suit of grey. When she met Dudley at six, his eyes told her how glad he was to see her.

"It's been six months, Judith."

"I know."

"Happy?"

"Of course."

They walked over across Fifth Avenue to a chop house for dinner. Michael told her about Paris and Nice and London. She listened eagerly. They talked about Roy and Ellen who had been married after Christmas. He scrutinized Judith's face; then observed: "You're looking well, though thinner."

"Every woman likes to hear that."

"Seriously, are you all right?"

"Of course. I adore the house, and I'm planting my garden, Michael. There are tulips there, and iris. It will be lovely."

Hours later they walked over to a favorite night culb. "It's fun finishing up here" Dudley said as from a table they looked about the gay dining room. "I'm going to—"

He stopped in the middle of the sentence. Judith turned her head to follow his glance. In the doorway was Sonia with—Tex! They were laughingly chatting with the cigarette girl.

Michael was the first to speak. "We'll sit here a little. Maybe they won't see us."

Judith did not answer him.

"You knew Tex was not working when you teleponed?" she asked.

"Yes, I knew."

Judith's face was chalk white. Michael Dudley fingered his glass nervously. "I'm sorry; but what could I do when I found out you thought he was working?"

"It does not matter . . . now."

Michael could see Sonia's progress down the long dining room to the most conspicuous table. She and Tex Aimes were seated far away from Dudley and Judith Aimes. Judith hoped desperately that they would not see her.

When those two were seated, Michael called for the check. Judith sat, eyes down, holding on to the edge of the table. When the waiter had left them, Dudley spoke: "Tex is sitting with his back to us. I don't think Sonia saw us. Come! We've got to chance it."

When Judith stood up, she found her knees were wobbly. They moved quickly toward the door. As they reached it, Michael looked back hastily. To his complete discomfiture, Sonia was waving wildly and hallooing him.

"Hurry, I don't think she saw you." He grabbed Judith's arm, headed for a cab before the door. Judith went pale in the taxi when she heard Michael's name called: "Dud! Dud! Sonny wants you to come back!"

It was Tex, beaming. He stood there on the curb, the light falling on his bronzed face. "What's the idea? Trying to avoid us?"

"I'm tired, Tex."

The latter put his hand on the door. "Sonny won't take 'no' for an answer."

"She'll have to."

Then Tex recognized his wife and his smile froze.

"Judith!"

She did not answer him. Anger blazed in Tex's eyes. He swayed as he stood there.

"You did this deliberately, Dudley!"

Michael did not answer, tried to get past Tex into the cab. Tex's arm shot out, but Dudley was too quick for him. The blow glanced off Michael's arm.

"Don't make a fool of yourself, Tex!" Dudley's voice was stern. Judith sat terrified. She could see Tex was unsteady on his feet.

"You're a dirty, double-crossing—"

The cab started, leaving Aimes standing there on the curb. Dudley looked through the rear window and saw the doorman stop him from getting into another cab to pursue them. Dudley then told the driver to go through the Holland Tube.

Dudley was so furious, he did not trust himself to speak. They rode in silence to the tunnel. The shadows in the corridor looked weird and strange.

"I'm sorry, Michael."

He squeezed her hand. "Forget it!"

Dudley did not ask her what she was going to do. She wished he had, for she could not bring herself to face the situation. There seemed to be no help for it. She must leave Tex finally. She had failed.

Judith was not angry. Probably because she had known so long he had been seeing Sonia.

"Suppose somebody saw that scene in front of the club?" she asked anxiously.

"Then they saw. That's all. Let's not think about it any more tonight." Dudley's voice was tired.

When they finally drove up in front of Judith's home, Dudley said good night quickly. "Promise me you'll forget this evening?"

"I'll try."

Then he left.

Judith went into the house with dread. The thought of facing Tex was repugnant. What could she say? Hours passed. She slept fitfully, waiting for the sound of the garage doors. But Tex did not come home.

All morning Judith waited. She sensed impending disaster. She could not shake it off. She went out into her garden, worked there until noon. Still no word. . . .

It was five p.m. when Tex arrived. Judith was in her bedroom, trying to rest. When she heard his car, she got up, tried to fix her face. Coming in the front door with a great clatter, he called out, "Judith, I've got news! Come on down."

How dare he!

She came slowly down the stairs. He met her in the living room, kissed her gaily. "I've been busy as a bee! Had lots to attend to. First I need a drink."

He came back in a moment with a glass in his hand. "Well, here's to my new job."

"New job?"

"Certainly. Do you think I'd work for that heel after what he did to me last night?"

The effrontery of it made Judith gasp.

Tex beamed with satisfaction: "I certainly told him what I thought of him, today!"

"You didn't!"

"And how! He'll remember the dressing-down I gave him. I threw the job in his face. Going to work for Trans-State on Monday! Who does Dudley think he is?"

Tex took a long sip of his drink: "Dud knew I wasn't working. He took you over to Manhattan just on a chance we'd meet. He knows where Sonny goes!"

The ghastly irony of the situation appalled Judith. For an instant she was convinced Tex was not quite sane.

"I saw him this morning," Tex went on. "Oh, you needn't look so scared. I didn't knock him down. I should have. I made him admit he was nuts about you! Now let's forget it all!"

When Tex kissed her tilted nose, Judith had a sudden impulse to hit him, but she controlled herself with effort.

"It's not so easy to forget, Tex."

"I know, honey I don't blame you. After all, he was my boss—WAS, I say. I can't blame you for being nice to him."

He finished his drink.

"Can't we eat early? I'm starved. I got so mad I forgot to eat lunch."

Judith went to the kitchen to see how dinner was coming. She leaned against the kitchen stove, watched the pot roast cooking. The whole incredible situation left her utterly defeated.

"I hate him!" She said it quite calmly to herself. "He can't ever hurt me again."

Dinner appeared to be just as usual. Tex talked about his new job. "They snapped me up! I'm getting more dough, I'm going to work my way into the executive end in no time."

He ate an enormous meal. Judith barely touched any food. It choked her.

"You're upset," he finally said. "Don't be silly. Sonia doesn't mean a thing to me. But Sonny can do me some good with the right people. You know Jameson owns Trans-State. And he likes her."

That was all the explanation he made about Sonia.

Judith cleared the table, and Tex turned on the radio to get a news broadcast. She dreaded going into the living room with him. He sunk into his favorite chair.

"This is something! It's good to be home with nothing to do, no place to go," he observed while fussing with the dials....

The European situation was alarming. "If there's a war, I'll probably go"—he said slowly—"to a nice instruction school. I'm too valuable to lose fighting."

He grinned impishly: "Glad I was born between wars!"

The radio voice went on: "America's No. 1 woman pilot cracked up today."

Judith saw Tex straighten in his chair as he listened.

"Sonia Winthrop is in a Boston hospital tonight in a serious condition. She cracked up near Boston today in a dense fog which cut off Massachusetts from the world. She was bound here to visit friends. When a rescue party found her and her ship, she said: 'This is the way I want to go'."

Then followed a review of Sonia's air exploits and records. The voice droned on. . . . Judith said, "Isn't that too bad; I'm so sorry for her," but in her heart there was a question. Perhaps, it served Sonia right! Tex picked up the paper and made no comment. In a few moments, without having turned a page, he threw it down.

"Aren't there any cigarettes in this house?"

"There are some upstairs."

Tex went to hunt for them. When he came back, he said impatiently: "They're not my brand. I'll get some."

Judith let him go without a word.

"Back in a little while," he called from the front door.

Judith sat on there for a long time. As though she could read her husband's mind, she was sure he was going to Sonia. Just as sure as though he had told her.

"So this is the end." She wanted to cry but she couldn't.

That night, for the first time in weeks, Judith slept soundly, almost a drugged sleep. She did not wait for Tex because she knew he would not come. When she awoke, Emma was knocking on the door: "Here's your breakfast, Miss Judith."

"Did the paper come?"

Emma shook his head. "Guess the boy missed us this morning."

But Emma looked guilty.

Judith did not comment. She got up and dressed. When she came downstairs, she went on out of the house. It was a gorgeous spring day. A tang in the air, but the sun was bright.

At the corner drugstore, she got a newspaper. There on the front page she found what she was sure would be there—Sonia's picture. And the headline: "Air Hero Flies to Sonia."

Judith went home to make a decision. Even as she walked she was sure what it must be.

In the hallway Emma met her as she came in the front door. "I'm going away," Judith told the older woman. "I think I can find you a job."

"Oh, Miss Judith!" Emma was almost in tears. "You mustn't do anything hasty."

"I'm not, Emma." She patted the woman's shoulder. "I've got a lot to do today. I'll want you to help me."

Judith went straight to the telephone. She was fortunate in reaching Hugh Lanning in his office: "Hugh, I seem always to come to you when I need help. I want a job."

"That's a big order, Judith. Don't be a silly girl! You know how things turned out last time."

"I know. You must think I'm a pain but—I really want a job—any job! I know something about office work. I can cook." Then she added, "I'll let you know where I'm staying when I decide."

Hugh said he would keep in touch with her but made no further comment.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 23—(AP)— The direction again was upward in today's stock market.

While many leaders were unable to get far out in front, gains of fractions to 2 points were in the majority near the fourth hour, and an assortment of 10-share preferred issues scored wider advances. Dealings, on the whole, were faster than in recent sessions.

Favored preferred stocks, ahead 1 to 6 points or so, included those of American Locomotive, Pittsburgh Steel, Otis Steel, General Steel Castings, Jones & Laughlin, Certain-Teed, American Woolen and U. S. Distributing. Some of these were at new 1940 peaks.

Common shares receiving support were U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, J. I. Case, Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Dow Chemical, Eastman Kodak, J. C. Penney, American Locomotive, American Telephone, Pullman, Baldwin Locomotive, Great Northern and American Smelting.

In the Canadian section McIntyre and Canadian Pacific advanced fractions while Hiram Walker held unchanged. Canada 4s, among bonds, gained 1-4 point.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 23 (CP)—The Toronto Market picked up in volume today after a slow start and at one o'clock sales of 84,000 shares were 21,000 ahead of Friday's volume at the same hour.

SHE GETS A TICKET

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 23 (AP)—Policeman J. M. Ferguson found this note in a feminine hand pasted on the windshield of an over-parked car beside a parking meter: "Mister Officer—I don't know how long I'm going to be gone, but if I'm gone too long you'll find a nickel under the hood." The motorist got a ticket.

Gordon McClean Seven Up In Match With Knox

Gordon McClean, of the Rosemount Golf Club in Montreal, was seven up in the first round of the Canadian Golf Professional Assistants' championship match being played at the Bay of Quinte Country Club as McClean and his opponent, Clarence Knox, of the Humber Valley Golf Club in Toronto, teed off for the second 18 holes this afternoon. McClean played the Country Club course in par this morning and featured his match with five birdies on the last nine holes to be seven up on Knox in the first 18 holes of a 36 hole medal play championship match. McClean carded a 72, par for the course, while Knox was seven down at 79. The second 18 holes is being played this afternoon.

Lord Beaverbrook Appeals for Increased Production this Week

London, Sept. 23 (CP). — Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production, today appointed Eric V. Bowater, head of large pulp and paper interests in Newfoundland, to take charge of the salvage of all crashed aircraft.

Earlier the Canadian-born minister had sent a message to aircraft workers declaring that "aircraft factories must be prepared to work after the (air raid) siren has sounded."

He adde dthat "it is imperative that there should be a considerable increase in output in the coming week, for the testing time may come upon us very shortly."

WE HAVE GOODWILL

"We stand in the front line," he continued, "to champion those liberties and traditions that are our heritage."

Among the reasons for encouragement the King listed the following:

"We have with us brave contingents from the forces of our Allies.

"We have behind us the good will of all who love freedom. Our friends in the Americas have shown us this in many ways, not least of their gifts for the relief of suffering in this war.

"Nearer home, in the British Commonwealth of Nations itself, the struggle of the mother country has been made the struggle of the whole family. From every part of it, men and material are coming in increasing flow and there is an eagerness to share in the sacrifices which will bring us victory."

In conclusion his Majesty warned of grim times ahead, but expressed ringing confidence that they would be overcome "in the unconquerable spirit of the British peoples."

DR. SAM LEVINE GRANTED BAIL

Professor in University of Toronto Charged Under Defence Regulations

Toronto, Sept. 23—(CP)— Bail of $3,000 was set today for Dr. Samuel Levine, fellow in the geophysics branch of the physics department of the University of Toronto who was arrested Friday on a charge under the defence of Canada regulations. He is scheduled for trial Sept. 27 in Magistrate's Court at the city hall.

Police said the charge, laid after long investigations, reads: "That he did have knowingly in possession in quantity certain pamphlets entitled, 'a political letter on our present tasks,' which pamphlets or letters were intended to cause disaffection."

Trading Hours On Stock Exchange To Be Discussed

Toronto, Sept. 23 (CP)—Course of action to be taken by the Toronto Stock Exchange in regard to trading hours beginning next week is expected to be discussed at the regular weekly meeting of the Exchange's managing committee tomorrow.

On order of the Federal Government, Toronto, Montreal and other cities in Ontario and Quebec which are now on Daylight Saving Time will continue so until further notice not reverting to Standard Time next Sunday as originally planned. The move is being taken to conserve electric power for war production purposes.

New York is expected to revert to Standard Time on schedule and as a result there will be an hour's difference in the operating times of the Montreal and Toronto Markets and Wall Street.

The Toronto Exchange's managing committee will have to decide on one of three probable courses. It might be decided to ignore any time differences and continue on the present hours, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. to coincide with New York's Exchange hours, it might be decided to open here at 11 a.m. and close at 4 p.m. or it might be decided to open as usual at 10 a.m., which would be one hour ahead of New York but to continue trading until 4 p.m., New York's 3 p.m., Standard Time, closing hour.

of the enemy launch their attack, day and night, against our cities. We stand in the front line, to champion those liberties and traditions that are our heritage.

As we brace ourselves for the battle, there is much to encourage us. We have with us brave contingents from the forces of our allies. We have behind us the good will of all who love freedom. Our friends in the Americas have shown us this in many ways, not least by their gifts for the relief of suffering in this war.

'Struggle of Whole Family'

Nearer home, in the British Commonwealth of Nations itself, the struggle of the Mother Country has been made the struggle of the whole family. From every part of it, men and material are coming in increasing flow and there is an eagerness to share in the sacrifices which will bring us victory.

In this battle for Britain, London, the mighty capital of the Empire, occupies the forefront. Others of our cities are being subjected to the barbarous attacks of the enemy. Our sympathy goes out to them all. But it is London that is for the time being bearing the brunt of the enemy's spites.

I am speaking to you now from Buckingham Palace with its honorable scars, to Londoners first of all, though of course my words apply equally to all the British cities, towns and hamlets, who are enduring the same dangers.

Hearts With Suffering People

The Queen and I have seen many of the places here which have been most heavily bombed and many of the people who have suffered and are suffering most. Our hearts are with them tonight. Their courage and cheerfulness, their faith in their country's cause and final victory are an inspiration to the rest of us to persevere.

To the men and women who carry on the work of air raids precautions services I should like to say a special word of gratitude. The devotion of these civilian workers, firemen, salvage men and many others in the face of grave and constant danger has won a new renown for the British name.

Worthy Partners of Armed Forces.

These men and women are worthy partners of our armed forces and our police, of the navy, once more as so often our sure shield, and the merchant navy, of the army and the home guard, alert and eager to repel any invader, and of the air force, whose exploits are the wonder of the world.

Tonight indeed we are a nation on guard and in the line. Each task, each bit of duty done, however simple and domestic it may be, is part of our war work. It takes rank with the sailor's duty, the soldier's and the airman's duty. The men and women in the factories or on the railways who work on regardless of danger, though the sirens have sounded, maintaining all the services and necessities of our common life and keeping the fighting line well supplied with weapons, earn their place among the heroes of this war.

No less honor is due to all those, who night after night uncomplainingly endure discomfort, hardship and peril in their homes and shelters.

Many and Glorious Are Deeds Done.

Many and glorious are the deeds of gallantry done during these perilous and famous days. In order that they should be worthily and promptly recognized I have decided to create at once a new mark of honor for men and women in all walks of civilian life. I propose to give my name to this new distinction, which will consist of the George Cross, ranking next to the Victoria Cross, and the George Medal for wider distribution.

As we look around us we see on every side that in the hour of her trial the Mother City of the British Commonwealth is proving herself to be built as a city that is at unity with itself. It is not the walls that make the city but the people who live within them. The walls of London may be battered but the spirit of the Londoner stands resolute and undismayed.

'There'll Always Be An England'

As in London, so throughout Great Britain, buildings rich in beauty and historic interest may be wantonly attacked. Humbler houses, no less dear and familiar, may be destroyed. But "There'll Always Be An England" to stand before the world as the symbol and citadel of freedom, and to be our dear home.

And here I would like to tell the sorrowing parents how deeply we grieve for them in the loss of their young ones in the ship torpedoed without warning in mid-Atlantic. Surely the world could have no clearer proof of the wickedness against which we fight than this foul deed.

Victory and Release from Evil Things

We live in grim times, and it may be that the future will be grimmer yet. Winter lies before us, cold and dark. But let us be of good cheer. After winter, comes spring, and after our present trials will assuredly come victory and a release from these evil things. Let us then put our trust, as I do, in God, and in the unconquerable spirit of the British peoples.

NOW HE IS REWRITING

Greencastle, Ind., Sept. 23—(AP)—Dr. Harold Zink, Depauw University Political Science Professor, is in a race with current events. He spent eight years writing a book on foreign governments, but now most of the governments are different. He's rewriting the book and hopes to have it ready in revised form by January—provided there aren't any more changes in the meantime.

BERLIN DENIES NAZI SANK SHIP

Official German Circles Claim Story of Sinking Intended to Get U.S. Into War

Berlin, Sept. 23 (AP). — Official German circles today described the story of the sinking of a British refugee ship as a "tear jerker" intended to get the United States into the war on Britain's side.

(The announcement was a variation of the German propaganda method used when the Nazis blamed Britain for the sinking of the Athenia on the first day of war.)

It was claimed officially no passenger vessel identiable as such had been torpedoed by any German U-boat either within or outside the announced blockade zone.

Further, it was said officially, not even a freighter has been torpedoed outside the announced blockade zone unless it was clearly armed.

German official sources asked why the name of the ship was not given. A German source said the whole thing was regarded here as a manoeuvre to furnish a talking point for the radio address of King George this afternoon.

STRIKERS FIRED BY CANNING CO.

Demanded 5 Cents an Hour Increase, Which the Manager Said, "We Could Not Pay"

After threatening to strike unless given a five-cent an hour increase in wages, employees at the Belleville Canners on Albion Street were promptly discharged before they could put their threat into operation yesterday, Manager W. Forbes of the concern revealed today

Packers and cookers at the Belleville Canners staged a minor "stand-up strike" and refused to return to their posts after the noon hour yesterday after two ultimatums for the increase in wages had been denied After punching the time clock following the noon hour rest period, the strikers, numbering about 15 in all, loitered orderly about the front of the premises refusing to return to their work. Mr. Forbes promptly "fired" all of the strikers.

The "strikers" stated they were receiving 25c per hour and were demanding a five cent increase, which was denied by the company as—"we could not afford it," stated Mr. Forbes.

Today the canning factory continued operations as a complete new staff of packers and cookers was employed and the factory continued operations without interruption.

REPORTS UPRISING BEGUN IN MEXICO

Gen. Figuero Says Three Groups Opened Armed Rebellion Against Government

Tampico, Mexico, Sept. 23—(AP)—An armed uprising, at least in part by sympathizers of Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, claimant of the presidency of Mexico, was reported today in Tamaulipas State.

Gen. Pedro Figuero, chief of staff of the eighth military zone headquarters, said three groups opened armed rebellion against the government last week. He said one band was made up of 30 sympathisers of Almazan, who claims he won the recent presidential election which the government declares was won by Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho.

Three rebels were killed and four injured in one clash with federal troops, Figuero reported, and 20 members of another band of 30 surrendered to a cavalry detachment near the village of Jaumave, about 100 miles northwest of Tampico.

But a larger band of undetermined size was admitted to have resisted near the inland village of San Diego and then to have fled to join still another group. Both were closely trailed by federal forces.

GIGANTIC BOMBER

German Squadrons Broken Up

Fighter patrols, waiting for them, broke up the German squadrons and sent them back in disorder across the channel.

One Nazi plane was described as a new, gigantic, four-engined bomber which crossed the Kent coast.

A police officer told Exchange Telegraph News Agency that he spotted the plane through binoculars and "I was astonished by the huge size of its wing span."

"Accompanying Messerschmitts were dots by comparison," he said

Giant Raider Seen

Attention was attracted to the giant raider by "smoke trails from twin engine ports," a correspondent of Exchange Telegraph said.

"The monster raider was followed by three formations each of nine bombers," he reported, all flying "at terrific height."

Coastal anti-aircraft batteries opened fire but their shells did not reach the planes. The formation, however, was scattered by Spitfires and Hurricanes and when last seen the great bomber was speeding toward the the channel with Spitfires in pursuit.

Two of the Nazi planes downed were Messerschmitt 109 fighters. A third was said to have fallen into the sea at Portsmouth and a fourth near the Isle of Wight.

Lone Raider Drops 12 Bombs

A lone raider dropped 12 high explosive bombs in a southeast coast town. They fell in a working class district, damaging small houses and injuring about 20 persons.

An Exchange Telegraph dispatch said that when one British airman bailed out of a fighter plane over the Thames estuary two Spitfires circled him continuously until he made a safe landing.

"This operation was necessary because an enemy machine was seen to dive after the parachuting airman and a burst of machine-gun fire was heard faintly," said the dispatch.

A German bomber was reported brought down in the Thames estuary in the vicinity of the Isle of Grain. Persons on the Essex coast saw it dive, pouring smoke, apparently after being hit by anti-aircraft fire.

other eastern Canadian port. Except for Sam Browne belts and the lapel insignias, they might have been mistaken for their Canadian comrades.

Col. Sas allowed only himself to be photographed by news cameramen. "I am on the (Nazi) blacklist, but the others must not be identified," he said.

The leader of the group was born in Berlin when the Germans attacked the low countries early in May. He was held in the Netherlands legation until a special train took him and other members of the legation to the Swiss border.

Escaped Through France.

He escaped to Great Britain through France. In Britain Col. Sas was in command of Netherlands troops.

He hopes to raise infantry troops among Dutch nationals in Canada. He told reporters he would confer with officials of the Canadian government with whom his group has been working "in close relations".

(Although Netherlands Nationals of the age classes of 1904-1920 inclusive are subject to conscription, it is expected that Col. Sas will seek volunteers outside of these age classes.)

Col. Sas praised the morale of the British people during the bombings by the Nazis. "London is marvellous," he said, "the morale is high, food conditions are excellent despite rumors of a shortage. In fact, sometimes you can't believe there is a war on."

He said he understood that the greater part of the Dutch navy had escaped from the Germans. The army was not so fortunate. "There were 100,000 casualties in the army," he said, "that is one third of the army, and it is a greater casualty list than that suffered by any of the allied armies."

Million Bunks Will Be Built In London Raid Shelters

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 23 —(CP—Cable)—Construction of 1,000,000 bunks in London's air raid shelters and distribution of ear plugs to all people in the metropolitan area was announced by the government today.

William Mabane, Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Home Security, announced acceleration of the air raid shelter construction program and the commandeering of shelters in industrial and commercial establishments for the use of the public.

All-shelters will be kept open 24 hours seven days a week.

In addition to bunks, sanitary appliances will be placed in shelters and first-aid posts established. The bunks will be double or treble banked.

Shelters in factory basements will be made available to the public at night when workers are absent. The government also will take powers to throw open to the public shelters in apartment houses and occupied houses.

Ear Plugs To Be Distributed.

Distribution of the millions of ear plugs will start immediately. They will be free and not only will protect the ear drums from the effect of the blasts but will assist sleep by excluding the noise of the anti-aircraft barrage and falling bombs.

Construction of small communal shelters in streets holding twelve persons but sometimes arranged in units of four and five have been held up by a shortage of cement which is needed by the army. Priority has now been restored to the civil defence departments and the building program will be accelerated.

Lack of Sleeping Accommodation.

One of the big difficulties in the past two weeks has been the lack of sleeping accommodation in street shelters. People used newspapers and blankets on cement floors, but the government now intends to install bunks and vast orders for the materials have been placed.

Plans are also being made to provide lighting in all public shelters and to heat them during the winter months.

Evacuation of women and children from London is being hastened, priority being given to areas where the bomb damage has been worst. Transportation facilities are being arranged by people who cannot shelter in their own area and wish to take refuge in some other section of the city which they consider safer.

Life Of London Shelterees Is Depicted in Pictorial

By HAROLD FAIR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 23—(CP Cable) — The plight of thousands of Londoners who spend their nights deep down in this city's subways and under-ground air raid shelters seeking safety from Nazi bombings has become one of the war's pressing problems.

The Sunday Pictorial printed pictures of mothers, babies and aged men and women sprawling on the concrete floor of a tube station and used the headline: "Shelter scandal; Stop this now!"

The paper said: "It is surely not right that our future generations should be sleeping in such appalling conditions."

Evacuation of Women and Children Urged

The Pictorial demanded the evacuation of women and children from the bombed areas and requisitioning of every country house, castle and mansion for them, and asked that the government maintain such places.

Authorities, urgently seeking to deal with the need of adequate havens, have rejected proposals to construct deep raid shelters mainly because of the shortage of materials but they have arranged for shelters in big stores to be open always instead of just days. The basements of big houses also are being used.

Further moves to improve the shelter situation are forecast.

Mass Invasion of Underground

Londoners stream nightly into the tube stations to herd together on improvised beds amid the dirt of the platforms and passageways. The mass invasion of the underground world begins as early as five o'clock in the afternoon.

Access is gained by buying a penny ticket as if one were intending a subway trip. By six o'clock the most coveted spaces next to the wall are occupied. From then on they pack in the best they can.

Family groups often come with baggage and pets. Infants sleep in suitcases and orange crates.

The air is usually hot and heavy and becomes suffocating as night wears on.

The view along one subway line last night looked as if it were a rags-to-riches tour because it runs from the poor district of London to West End where luxury flats nestle among the mansions.

In the tube train passengers see sleepers in tattered blankets and dirty pillows at the start but when they progress west there are elaborate sleeping bags, steamer rugs and even portable radios. One woman worked a small sewing machine.

Shelterees' Opinions

Here are some opinions taken at random from the shelterees:—

A mother said "One gets kind of comforted when there are lots of people together. Anderson shelters are all right but you feel cut off. My kids look forward to coming here each night and sleep like angels."

A father said that it was not like his bed at home but that it stopped his wife from worrying.

A young girl said: "I never thought I could sleep with a tube train running past me a few yards away but now I get down to it in a few minutes."

Pictures of Scenes

The Sunday Pictorial's double page layout showed families, bedding, a concrete staircase, kiddies, old women and babies in the arms of their mothers.

In a picture captioned "Madonna of the Subway" a mother was shown nursing her child.

Other pictures showed a soldier on leave pillowing his wife's head in his arms; a woman, no longer young, holding up in her hands the nodding head of her white-haired mother; a young woman resting a protective hand across her two infants.

The Pictorial concluded with the remark that "Britain can do better than this for its future generations."

EGYPT DECLARES

ernment's determination to defend the Nile Valley should Italians near that home of nearly all Egyptians. The country has been under a "state of siege" since Sept. 1, 1939.

Ahmed Maher Pasha leader of the Saadist Party, however, was reported to be attempting to bring the question of war or peace to an issue before Parliament next week. Four Saadist members of the Cabinet resigned Saturday over refusal of the Premier to entertain a declaration of war now. To get the issue before Parliament, however, the Saadists must induce the Premier to consent to a special session.

Reasons For Quitting

Saadists who quit the cabinet declared in a letter that the Italians' "penetration of Egyptian territory and attempts to fortify themselves there leaves no doubt of their decision to conquer it, contrary to Mussolini's declaration that he has no intention of aggression against Egypt."

The suffering of war, no matter how great, were preferable to the "shame and cowardice of counting on others for her (Egypt's) defence" said the Saadists

The cabinet—reduced from 14 to 10—still is headed by Premier Hassan Mabry Pasha and has the same members as the last with the exception of four Saadist party members who resigned.

The new ministry announced in favors of intensive defence preparations.

From Alexandria, Reuters reported an eye-witness said he had seen the entire village of Sidi Barrani, filled with Italian troops, blown to bits when the British detonated land mines they had planted.

Fascists Digging In.

Sidi Barrani, on the Mediterranean coast of Egypt about 60 miles inside the Libyan-Egyptian border, had been reported raided by bombers which attacked the airdrome and troop positions. Fascist forces were digging in at Sidi Barrani as a base of operations.

British authorities reported an Italian attempt to bomb the naval base at Alexandria Saturday, but said raiders were driven off by anti-aircraft fire. A Fascist raid on Haifa, an oil port in Palestine, killed 32 persons and injured 68 Saturday. The victims were reported to be Arabs.

The two most powerful parties in Egyptian politics—the Saadists (Nationals who broke away from the Nationalist party several years ago) and the Wfadists (Nationalists) —now are not represented in the cabinet.

The Wfadists withdrew because they wanted British assurance of complete withdrawal from Egypt after the war and the Saadists because they wanted an immediate declaration of war against Italy.

The premier's policy of not declaring war was based on the view that Italian troops now occupy only a strip of desert along the Mediterranean, and this does not yet constitute a threat to Egyptian independence.

GEORGE HENRY CAIRNS, FATHER OF WINNER OF V.C., PASSES AWAY

Saskatoon, Sept. 23—(CP)—Father of Saskatoon's only winner of the Victoria Cross, George Henry Cairns, 76, died in a Saskatoon hospital Sunday. His eldest son, Hugh, won the V.C. at Valenciennes in Nov. 1, 1918. In 1936, the French town where the exploit occurred renamed one of its streets in honor of the Saskatoon soldier.

NINE BELGIAN, FRENCH PORTS HEAVILY BOMBED

Fires Started by R.A.F. Bombers at "Important Aluminum Works at Lauta"

London, Sept. 23.—(CP)—Nine French and Belgian ports where German invasion preparations have been in progress were pounded in a sharp aerial offensive by Royal Air Force bomber units last night and this morning, the Air Ministry announced.

Military targets in Germany and Holland also were attacked, the Ministry's communique said. All British Planes returned safely.

Hits were scored on a supply train near Dresden, fires were started at "the important aluminum works at Lauta", also near Dresden, and railways in the same area were attacked.

JOHNNY COULSON INJURED IN RAID

Former Canadian Singles Sculling Champion Helping to Evacuate Apartment Building When Hit

Toronto, Sept. 23 (CP)—Johnny Coulson, 24, former Canadian singles sculling champion, has been injured in a London air raid, according to a cable received by his wife at nearby Aurora today. Coulson is a member of the Toronto Scottish regiment overseas.

His cable read: "Wounded in an air raid helping evacuate apartment building. Hospital for a week. Rejoining unit soon."

Coulson was a member of Toronto Argonaut Rowing Club and had competed in many international regattas in Canada and the United States.

Apostolic Delegate Kisses Feet Of 7 Young Priests

Ceremony Never Before Performed in Canada Act of Reverence for Missionaries Leaving For China

Toronto, Sept. 23—(CP)— Most Rev. Ildebrando Antoniuti, Apostolic delegate from the Vatican to Canada, performed an unique ceremony here last night when he kissed the feet of seven young Priests soon to leave for the China missions.

The ceremony, believed never before performed in Canada, was an act of reverence and affection for those "going forth to teach all nations" and recalled how Christ kissed the feet of his Apostles.

Bishop R. H. Dignam of Sault Ste. Marie preached the sermon.

Police Officials Investigate Alleged "Protection" Racket

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 23.—(CP) —Police officials said today they are investigating a possible "protection" racket here. Several merchants received letters from "dealers' protective association" offering protection from 'damage" for a monthly fee of $5.

One merchant said the letters may be the work of "some young man who has been reading too many detective stories or seeing gangster movies". Some persons said it might be a hoax.

CONVICTED OF SERIOUS OFFENCE

Barrie, Ont., Sept. 23.—(CP)— Charged with a serious offence involving a 24-year-old domestic, Trooper Emile Lefevre 36, member of the Three Rivers, Que. Regiment (Tank), was sentenced to six months definite and six months indeterminate when he appeared in Court today. Lefevre was stationed at Camp Borden.

"A DASTARDLY ACT" SAYS HULL

Washington, Sept. 23 (AP).—State Secretary Cordell Hull today characterized the torpedoing of a British refugee ship with the loss of many lives as "a most dastardly act".

Commenting on the disaster fatal to 87 children being brought to Canada, Mr. Hull said:

"I am sure there will be no division of opinion in this country that it was a most dastardly act."

FATALLY INJURED

Toronto, Sept. 23 (CP). — C. W. Foxall of Toronto was fatally injured today when he was struck by a Canadian National Railways passenger train as he walked along the tracks here. Engineer R. Trelevan of London, Ont., said he did not see the man. Fireman H. aGil, also of London, said he did see the man but knew the engine "had hit something".

Predicts U. S. Will Supply Great Britain With Flying Fortresses

Toronto, Sept. 23—(CP)— Rabbi Stephen Wise, President of the American Jewish Congress, expressed the opinion in a speech last night that the United States will supply Britain within a few weeks with a number of "flying fortresses."

"I can't suggest the day! but I will say it will be before Thanksgiving Day." (In U.S., the last Thursday in November.)

London Throngs, Homeward Bound Duck into Shelters

London, Sept. 23 (CP)—Homeward bound London throngs ducked into air raid shelters late today as German raiders were reported approaching the capital in the third raid since dawn.

Shortly afterward a large flight of heavy German planes was reported directly over London, but it was not visible to ground watchers because the sky was heavily overcast.

Conveyor System Used to Load Steamer Glen Allen

The long-familiar but tedious task of trucking between four and five thousand cheese aboard the packet freighter "Glen Allen" each week during the navigation season is over for local longshoremen. Because Monday morning saw the old system of hand operated trucks, carrying three cheese at each trip, give way to a new conveyor system which saw the "Glen Allen" loaded in record time and with a minimum of labor.

With the new conveyor system in operation the one hundred pound boxes of cheese are conveyed without the aid of human hands directly from the dock warehouse into the hold of the boat. So fast and efficient is the system that at full capacity it can handle between one thousand and twelve hundred cheese per hour and with a greatly reduced staff.

Built in Port Hope by the Mathews Conveyor Company Ltd., the new equipment consists of a long line of roller-bearing conveyor sections while elevation of the cheese boxes and their descent into the hold is controlled by two individual electrically operated ramp-like elevators. One elevator on the dock raises the cheese to a height from which they travel by gravitation along conveyors into the boat while the second elevator, which remains permanently in the boat, controls their descent into the hold.

Although the entire system is portable, it will remain permanently in the boat to be used for unloading purposes. With the new loading system in operation it is estimated that ten fewer dock hands will be needed, and the actual loading operations will be made "easier and quicker".

Air Raid Victims Visit With King

London, Sept. 23—(CP)— The King and Queen talked to many air raid victims today on a tour of wards in a London hospital.

"I think the people are being wonderful," the King told hospital chairman Sir William Goschen.

The royal visit coincided with the 200th anniversary of the founding of the London hospital.

In a message to the chairman, the King said:

"As your patron, I wished to express my admiration of the way in which the medical staff and the nursing services are carrying on in these difficult days in spite of the bombing to which they have been so ruthlessly subjected."

Two Bombs Fell On British Museum

London, Sept. 23 —(CP)— Two bombs fell recently on the British museum, it was learned today.

There was no immediate disclosure of the extent of damage to the building or its contents.

The museum, sprawled over several city blocks in the mid-London Bloomsbury district, is famed for its treasures, its library and facilities for research.

TWO AUTOMOBILES REPORTED STOLEN

Two automobiles were reported stolen by the city police today. Harold Barnum, Colborne Street, informed police he had parked his 1930 model Buick blue sedan on Bridge Street near the main intersection late last night. The vehicle which was equipped with 1940 Ontario licence plates number 528-J-8, was missing this morning.

R.C.A.F. officials reported the theft of a 1938 model Plymouth sedan bearing licence plates number D-1874. The motor car was stolen during the night, Air Force authorities stated.

DAVID E. HARDIE DIES

Peterborough, Ont. Sept. 23 (CP) —David E. Hardie, 92, a veteran of the old windjammer days at sea, died here today. A sailmaker by trade, he spent 30 years on sailing ships engaged in the busy East Indies commerce and one time, in 1872, was on a ship which made a 60-day "record" voyage from China to England.

RELATIVES FEEL ANGER, SORROW OVER CHILDREN

Homes in Motherland and in Canada Saddened as Children Die in Hun Torpedoing

CANADIANS MOURN

Toronto, Sept. 23.—(CP)—Bitter anger and sorrow were expressed here today by relatives of young victims of the sinking by a Nazi submarine of a mercy ship which was carrying child refugees from Great Britain to Canada. A number of the children—87 of whom perished—were bound for safe homes throughout Ontario.

Albert Jones of Toronto, whose three nephews were among the victims, was too broken up by word of the tragedy to speak of German brutality. He had suggested that the children, John, Charles and Donald Pugh, of Liverpool, be sent here and "their parents were only too thankful to get them out of the danger zone".

Another child Doris is 16, a year over the age limit for government evacuation, or she would also have been aboard the torpedoed ship.

Jones had received a cryptic cable from the children's father Saturday which said: "Hoping for better news. Broken-hearted". At that time word of the tragedy had not been made public, but Jones spent the week-end praying that it did not mean the ship had gone down. His worst fears were confirmed Sunday night.

Mrs. Samuel McMurray of Toronto, had awaited the arrival since June of her grand-nephew, Colen Rodda of Uxbridge. "It's horrible," she said when she found his name in the casualty list.

Also in the death list were Robert Poole of Newport who was on his way to Stratford and Patricia Allen of Liverpool, who would have made her home in Barrie. Patricia was a survivor of a previous torpedoing in which all the children aboard were saved.

Kathleen Barrett, 11, of Southall, who is dead, was coming with a brother and sister to the home of their aunt Mrs. W. H. Barrett of Toronto. No word had been received regarding the others, Mary, 14, and Pat, eight.

Robin Miller of Southall, also reported lost, is feared by Mrs. John Barnett of Toronto, to be her nephew, but she places some hope in the fact, that the family lived in Liverpool, not Southall.

Anxiety is also felt here by relatives of three children named Metcalfe from a small town near Liverpool. Mrs. N. W. Robinson of Toronto, whose mother-in-law, had expected the children said that word was received some time ago that they had passed a medical test. The children were Cliff, Margaret and David Metcalfe.

DELEGATE IS VICTIM

London, Sept. 23.—(CP Cable)— W. Golightly, president of the Northumberland Miners' Association, who was en route to attend the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress meeting at Vancouver, was among the victims of the torpedoed evacuee ship it was learned today.

Mr. Golightly was to have represented the British Trades Union progress.

Mediterranean Fleet Deals Punishing Blow To Italy's Preparations

By LARRY ALEN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Alexandria, Egypt, Sept. 23 — (AP)— Britain's Mediterranean fleet has dealt another punishing blow to Italian preparations for a big-scale drive into Egypt toward the Suez Canal, it was announced today.

Units of the Royal Navy swept close to shore off Sidi Barrani, 240 miles west of Alexandria, early Sunday and fired scores of shells into the Italian camps and supply depots, with "good results," the communique stated.

At Sidi Barrani Marshal Rodolfo Graziani has been organizing his Italian and Libyan divisions for continuation of the offensive which already has thrust 60 miles into Egypt along the coastal road.

(A Reuters dispatch from Alexandria said that an eye-witness had seen the entire village of Sidi Barrani, filled with Italian troops, blown to bits when British troops detonated land mines planted in the area. The village had been raided on several occasions by the R.A.F.)

Last Thursday the navy heavily shelled artillery and supply trains moving along this road.

The Royal Air Force was reported making constant attacks to harass the Italians, and British sources said that Graziani now faces anew the task of reorganizing and consolidating his positions before proceeding with his campaign.

The communique:—

Former Chief Justice of Ontario Against Elimination of Grand Jury

Toronto, Sept. 23 (CP)—Sir William Mulock, 96-year-old former Chief Justice of Ontario today outlined to an Ontario Legislative committee his opposition to any elimination of the grand jury from the judicial system. He agreed, however, it might be reduced in membership from 13 to five and that its duties be confined to passing on criminal cases, with the present inspection of jails and public buildings.

"I prefer leaving the administration of Justice to a jury rather than to some official," Sir William told the committee which is investigating the administration of Justice. Committee hearings resumed after a summer recess.

Attorney-General Gordon Conant pointed out that grand juries have been abolished in England.

"I don't care what they've done in England," Sir William returned. "I prefer to let a man be in the hands of his people rather than in the hands of an Attorney-General or some officials".

He was also against any cutting down in the size of trial juries from 12 to seven men. The fee of $4 for jury trial might be increased "slightly." Appeals should be allowed from findings of boards and commissions.

"The drift of legislation today, vesting judical power in irresponsible bodies unskilled in the law, is destroying justice. It imperils the rights of the people."

As to whether lawyers should sit on committees to deal with rules of procedure, Sir William said: "No —it's all nonsense. You could have a whole sheaf of barristers and you wouldn't get an opinion from them. That should be in the hands of the Judges."

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

British forces were reported today to have blown Italian headquarters in the Egyptian campaign into the air while in the United Kingdom itself there was a comparative lull in fighting.

German planes streaked across Britain by ones and twos last night and today's mass raids were broken up and chased away before they could do major damage. Observers said the balloon barrage was strung higher than ever before. When it was launched the barrage was said to be capable of flying at an altitude of 20,000 feet.

Sidi Barrani Blown Up

Reuters News Agency told Britons that their forces in Egypt had blown Sidi Barrani into the sky, leaving it mined when they retreated a few days ago before an Italian advance with numerically superior forces. British troops previously had salted and blasted the 12 ancient Roman wells in the ancient village.

All Britain was enraged today at news that an evacuee ship had been torpedoed without warning by a German submarine with the loss of 293 lives, including those of 87 children. The vessel, unnamed in the official account of the tragedy, was sunk 600 miles from land while en route to Canada.

Many U-Boat Victims Die of Exposure

Many of the women and children died of exposure in life boats and rafts as they floundered in the wind-tossed sea. The children, keeping up their courage and that of their elders, sang "Roll Out the Barrel" after hearing the skipper of their ship yell: "Look after yourselves" as the vessel went down under him.

In the midst of the national wrath the government coolly prepared for a winter of bombing, laying plans to put 1,000,000 bunks in London's air raid shelters and issue millions of sets of ear plugs to block out the din of bombing and anti-aircraft fire.

Civilian Like Soldier

In this war the civilian occupies just about the same position as the soldier does in most wars. It is for the civilian to produce the food, munitions, machinery and other goods that keep the nation's war effort in motion. And the civilian, no less than the soldier, is doing his work under fire.

Part of the German plan of constant air raiding is to disrupt industrial effort, rob the common people of their sleep, make them so weary they cannot work.

Britain's common man, however, is a stubborn fellow and Britain's ruling brains are resourceful. Every offence can be countered and the war of noise and nerves can be countered by rest.

London Prepares to Let People Sleep

So London, the chief target of Nazi bombers, prepares to let its people sleep. Already Aldwych subway tunnel has been closed for conversion into a giant shelter in which the people can spend their nights in comparative comfort and almost complete safety.

Numerous other deep shelters are being prepared.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Cavalcade"

The Capitol Theatre (with daily matinees) proudly presents two great features, Noel Coward's picture of the generation, "Cavalcade" and the great technicolor triumph, "Wings of the Morning."

"Cavalcade" is the story of the British Empire, from the turn of the 20th Century through to 1937, seen through the eyes of one particular English family, of the upper middle classes, and through the eyes of their servants. You follow the story of this family through the Boer War the relief of Mafeking, the death of Queen Victoria, the sinking of the "Titanic", the first airplane flight across the English Channel, the first World War, the Armistice, and then the social chaos of the 1920s, until as 1933 makes its appearance.

Clive Brook and Diana Wynyard play the leading roles in "Cavalcade" as husband and wife. Herbert Mundin and Una O'Connor carry a great deal of footage as the servants of the stars, while other well-known names include Frank Lawton, Beryl Mercer, Margaret Lindsay and Ursula Jeans.

"Wings of the Morning"

The all-Technicolor picture will be shown on the same program starring Annabella, Henry Fonda and the world famous Irish tenor, John McCormack. You will witness the Changing of the Guard, the famous Epsom Downs Derby, and all the beautiful scenery of England and Ireland wrapped around two lovers who will live in your memory forever.

"Ski Patrol"

White-hot action drama with white-clad ski troops battling parachute machine-gunners and other modern-day war forces is the film fare offered by "Ski Patrol," coming this week for one day only at the Capitol Theatre, with a special matinee.

For the first time on the screen, Universal Studios unfolds the epic story of ski warfare in the Arctic. Mine explosions, machine-gun raids, parachuters' assaults, ski battle manoeuvres and other thrill-a-minute action is provided in the new film.

Talented Newcomer

Luli Deste, famous Viennese actress, has the romantic lead opposite Philip Dorn, a Dutch newcomer to the American screen. No less an authority than Henry Koster, the famous motion picture director, was instrumental in bringing Dorn to Hollywood and has stamped the young romantic-character actor as an important "find" for American films.

Others in the long cast include Samuel S. Hinds, Stanley Fields, Edward Norris, Hardie Albright, Kathryn Adams, John Qualen, John Arledge, John Ellis, Henry Brandon and Christian Rub.

A select group of short subjects and the usual Fotonite with two big offers for someone's photograph.

AT THE BELLE

"I Love You Again"

Ring up another for the combination of William Powell and Myrna Loy. Their newest and funniest exploit is on view at the Belle theatre where "I Love You Again" is now playing.

If you're looking for laughs, here's where to find them. "I Love You Again" is the first Powell-Loy co-starring comedy in some time minus the "Thin Man" tag. The element of mystery is entirely lacking in the newest venture, but hilariously funny situations abound.

The story deals with the plight of a man, portrayed by Powell, who suddenly recovers from an attack of amnesia which has lasted for eight years. During that period of time he has acquired, in addition to a brand new personality, a wife, a sizeable bank account and the manager's duties of a large pottery firm. He is also the model citizen of a little community known as Habersville, and enjoys a spotless if somewhat dull reputation. Since in his pre-amnesia days he was a high-class confidence man, he decides to return to this former occupation and, under the guise of his snow-white reputation, "take" the town for good old American dollars. How he manages to catch up on what has transpired during the eight years which are blank in his mind, makes for continual laughs.

Powell is excellent in this new type of characterization. That he could ever pose as a smug, Babbitt-type sans his sophistication, seems almost beyond the realm of possibility. Powell, in the role of an amateur taxidermist, is enough in itself to provoke gales of laughter.

Miss Loy as his somewhat puzzled wife who is on the verge of divorcing him for a model young man named Herbert, is excellent as always. Those who always expect her to be the perfect wife, however, had better steel themselves for a shock. For Miss Loy, in "I Love You Again," is far from a perfect spouse.

The strong supporting cast turn in top performances in every instance. Frank McHugh, always dependable where laughs are concerned, outdoes himself as Powell's pal, "Doc" Ryan. Edmund Lowe is a convincingly slick oil promoter. Donald Douglas is ideal as Miss Loy's boy friend, Herbert, and Nella Walker is effective as her dictatorial mama. The new film was directed by Hollywood's leading hit maker, W. S. Van Dyke II.

Status Quo Upset By Duress Says Secretary Hull

Washington, Sept. 23 (AP)— State Secretary Cordell Hull declared today that the status quo in Indo-China is being upset through duress and once again he voiced the disapproval of the United States.

He read a formal statement at his press conference on the entrance of Japanese military forces into the French far eastern colony.

"Events are transpiring so rapidly in the Indo-Chinese situation that it is impossible to get a clear picture of the minute to minute developments," Mr. Hull said.

"It seems obvious, however, that the status quo is being upset and that this is being achieved under duress.

"The position of the United States in disapproval and in deprecation of such procedures had repeatedly been stated."

He would not discuss what measures might be taken by the Government as a result of Japan's action.

The possibility of new, United States Economic Measures which would restrict Japan arose.

LARGE MAJORITY "FIT"

Halifax, Sept. 23—(CP)—Lt.-Col. E. W. Mingo, divisional registrar of the National War Service Department, estimated today between 75 and 80 per cent of the 21-year-old class in Nova Scotia would be found physically fit for military training.

MRS. EMILY M. MARTIN DIES

Victoria, Sept. 23 (CP)—Mrs. Emily Mary Martin, 77, Toronto-born wife of Former Chief Justice Archer Martin of the British Columbia Court of Appeal, died here Sunday. She came to Victoria with her husband in 1894.

The picture shows the 4,609-ton Swedish freighter Laponia struggling to keep afloat in the centre of a tropical hurricane. The Laponia was en route from Rio de Janeiro to New York when the storm caught her, disabling her steering gear. The vessel later rode out the storm and both ships proceeded to their destinations.

COBOURG MAN PAYS FINE

Cobourg, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP).— Percy Gibson, charged with failure to produce a registration card, told the magistrate in court today that a constable in Alnwick asked him for his card but that he had left it with his car ownership card in his car at home. Stating that the circumstances did not make it as serious as it might be otherwise, the magistrate fined him $2 and costs.

GIRL'S CONDITION CRITICAL

Peterborough, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP) —Medical authorities reported today that 12-year-old Jane Dutton, who was seriously injured Saturday when a shotgun in the hands of her brother discharged accidentally is still in "extremely critical condition." More than 30 lead pellets and pieces of wood and plaster have been taken from her head and face. The girl also has been given blood transfusions.

Free French Force Continues Military Operation at Dakar

British Ministry Denies Reports From Vichy Any British Landing Attempted

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 24 —(CP—Cable)—Military operations are still in progress at Dakar, French seaport on the west coast of Africa which a Free French force under Gen. Charles de Gaulle is attempting to capture.

Gen. de Gaulle's headquarters issued a statement which claimed that the naval authorities of Dakar yesterday fired on a group of his emissaries who were approaching the harbor in a launch flying the French tricolor and the white flag.

Capt. Foch One of Emissaries

One of the emissaries, who were attempting to arrange for capitulation of the fortress without fighting, was Capt. Becourt Foch, grandson of Marshal Foch and a pilot of the French air force who has flown with the Royal Air Force's Free French squadron.

Gen. de Gaulle in the statement said he withdrew his troops and ships "not wanting to be a party to a fight between Frenchmen" after the Dakar authorities opened fire on two of his naval units.

Later it was stated that "operations are still in progress" but their exact nature could not be determined.

Free French Force Alone

It is understood that the opposition to Gen. de Gaulle's force came almost entirely from French naval authorities in Dakar, which the leader of Free France hopes to capture to prevent it being used as a base by the Germans and the Italians.

At Gen. De Gaulle's headquarters

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Water vapor and breathing! On muggy days we actually do take in less oxygen with each breath than on clear, dry days. The reason is that water vapor dilutes the air. It varies in amount not only in different places but also varies from day to day at the same place. Thus, with the same air pressure, there is less oxygen per breath on humid days than on clear dry days, and less in the wet tropical regions than in the tropical deserts. Also, one breathes in more oxygen in winter than in summer, due to smaller amounts of moisture in the form of vapor mixed with the air in winter.

Price of Liberty Is Citizenship Responsibility

Toronto, Sept. 24 (CP)—Mark A. Smith of Thomaston, Ga., International President of Kiwanis Clubs, said in an address last night that the most vital task of the Kiwanis organization is to teach youth that the price of liberty is citizenship responsibility.

"Mine is the privilege and yours, to preserve this liberty by giving of our time to make better citizens of our youth and also of the alien within our borders who may have been negligent as to his responsibility as a citizen," he said at a banquet address before the 22nd annual convention of the Ontario-Quebec-Maritime district of Kiwanis.

"We must begin in the schools to teach the boys and girls true citizenship and proper respect for the flags of our respective countries. These two countries of ours have confidence in each other. May our youth grow to know that this friendship and confidence built true and strong shall stand for generations, defying the assaults of time and storm."

Earlier yesterday, the convention was told that as part of the war effort of the convention district clubs, three ambulances had been donated to the Canadian Red Cross Society and $875 had been raised towards a fourth. The convention voted $400 to the Red Cross.

11,081-Ton Liner City of Benares Was Ship Lost

London, Sept. 24 —(CP)— The liner which was sunk last Tuesday with the loss of 87 children on their way to Canada was the 11,081-ton Ellerman liner City of Benares, the Press Association said today.

The City of Benares was built in 1936 at Glasgow and was in the England-India trade before the war. The liner had three decks and was 486 feet long with a beam of 62 feet.

Blenheim Bombers Drop First Salvo After Diving From 5,000 Feet

WATER THROWN HIGH

15 Messerschmitts Accompanying Armed Ship Disappear Before Attack Starts

Folkestone, England, Sept. 24—(CP)—A smashing attack was made by the Royal Air Force on four armed German ships off the French coast near Boulogne this afternoon and advices received here said all four ships were believed to have been destroyed.

Five Bombers in Raid

Diving from a height of 5,000 feet, the Blenheims dropped their first salvo of bombs.

A column of water leaped up as high as the cliffs behind them and for a time little could be seen because of the smoke and the spray.

A second attack was made almost at once on the remaining

AIR RAID WARDEN SAVES 14 LIVES

Handed Trapped Persons Through Shaft to Rescuers Above

London, Sept. 24—(CP Cable) — Maurice Vent, young east London air precautions warden, saved the lives of 14 persons trapped in an underground space used as a shelter when it was hit by a bomb during the night.

The bomb ploughed a 10-foot crater alongside the shelter. Ignoring the danger of falling masonry, Vent flung himself down the two-foot square shaft and then handed the 14 trapped persons through the shaft to rescuers above.

A section of a wall was hurled on to families sleeping beneath it. A family of five and several others were killed.

"It was like a nightmare," said Vent, describing how he dug out with his bare hands three persons partly buried in earth and sand in the shelter.

WAR'S BLIGHT COULD NOT TOUCH HIM

Outside his ruined home, this young Londoner plays with his tiny trains and dog dolls, blissfully ignorant of the tragedy that is all about him. The empire may be fighting for its life, London may be battered, and death may be raining from the skies, but he is happy, his toys escaped the bombs.

German Railroads, Shipyards, Airdromes, Plane Works Attacked

London, Sept. 24 (CP)—Lock gates on the Kiel Canal and railroad communications over a wide area of Germany were attacked last night by Royal Air Force bombers in addition to their main raid on Berlin, the Air Ministry announced today.

A statement said shipyards at Hamburg, Cuxhaven, Bremerhaven, Bremen and Wismar, goods yards at Munster and Hanover, an aircraft works at Wismar and several enemy airdromes were also attacked.

13-YEAR-OLD BOY CRAWLS ON LEDGE 60 FEET HIGH

Police Wanting Him on Suspicion of Break-in Wait Inside Window of Adjoining Store

BOY IS NABBED

Toronto, Sept. 24—(CP)—Police apprehended a 13-year-old shopbreaking suspect after the boy held a downtown crowd spellbound last night by crawling along a ledge 60 feet high on a building opposite the city hall. He was locked up in the children's shelter with a 12-year-old accomplice on a charge of shopbreaking.

The boys, police charge, broke into a chain grocery store and, after a liberal helping on the spot, stole soft drinks, biscuits, cheese, fruit and candies. Police were called by a watchman.

A motorcycle officer caught sight of one of the boys on the rear of a roof. Three policemen climbed to the roof. At this point, one of the suspects began shuffling along the ledge at the Queen Street side of the window of an adjoining store. A large crowd watched anxiously. Constable Matthew Henderson hurried to the third floor of the adjoining store.

Fearing his appearance at the window might frighten the boy and cause him to lose balance, Henderson had a store watchman, Basil Parkman, stand at the window and direct the boy. His perilous trip completed, the boy hopped through the window and was arrested.

Meanwhile, back on the roof, the other lad was caught without difficulty.

DEPRIVED OF MENTALITY

Erie, Pa., Sept. 24 (AP).—Deprived of mentality by sleeping sickness, 7-year-old Maxine Yarrington began her sixth year in a hospital today—without any hope of recovery.

Stricken by the disease in Septebber, 1935, she remained in a deep sleep until October, 1939. On her awakening physicians said she was "left without mentality" and that no matter how long she lives, "it is beyond medical science to remedy this condition".

WIDE POLICE HUNT INSTITUTED FOR INSANE KILLER

Police Officials Order Out Every Car After One is Killed and Other Critically Wounded

JUST OUT OF ASYLUM

Toronto, Sept. 24.—(CP)—Orders to "shoot on sight" were issued to Toronto police today as they took part in the city's greatest manhunt for 30-year-old John Kluk in connection with the fatal shooting of one man late yesterday and the wounding of another Saturday.

Kluk was reported here to have escaped from the mental hospital at North Battleford, Sask., late in August. Previously he had been an inmate of the Ontario hospital for the criminally insane at Penetanguishene. He had been taken there from Kingston Penitentiary on March 12, 1938, and released as fully recovered February 1, 1939. A brother in the West had provided funds for his passage west at the time.

Police officials ordered every squad car and every division in Toronto to take part in the search after a gunman they believed to be Kluk shot Arte Borievich, 54, through the neck in the living room of his home in west-central Toronto last night.

Borievich died in hospital less than an hour later.

At the time of the shooting, Kluk was object of an intense search on a charge of attempted murder in connection with the shooting last Saturday of John Plachtek, 41. Plachtek also was shot through the neck in an upstairs room of his home and is in critical condition in the same hospital at which Borievich died.

TRUE BILL RETURNED

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 24—(CP)—The grand jury of the fall criminal Assizes here returned a true bill today against George King, charged with the murder in February 1938 of High County Constable Don J. Sherville. King likely will face a Supreme Court Judge and Jury on the charge next week.

Memorandum on Nazis' War Aims Published by the New York Times

New York, Sept. 24 (CP)—The New York Times published today a memorandum on "Germany's War Aims" which it said reached New York from sources regarded as guaranteeing its authenticity.

Germany's plants for reorganization of Europe were said to have been completed about a month ago by the Ribbentrop Bureau headed by the German Foreign Minister. The Times' summary of the memorandum follows:—

"The plans, which the Germans admit depend for fulfillment on the defeat of Great Britain provide for the annihilation of Switzerland, the Netherlands, Norway, Poland and the Baltic States. Rumania and Yugoslavia also will disappear. Belgium and France are to be partitioned.

"Hungary and Bulgaria are to be ostensibly enriched by neighboring territory, but in reality are themselves to be completely encircled by the Axis powers, whose swollen frontiers are to stretch, in the case of Germany, from the North Sea and the Baltic to the Black Sea, and in the case of Italy from the Gulf of Lion to Corfu by the inclusion of the Dalmatian Coast.

"Before the winter of this year the cantons of Switzerland will go to Germany, Italy and France, according to language. Norway ceases to be a separate entity and is to be joined to Sweden under the present Swedish dynasty.

Belgium to Lose Flemish Areas

"Belgium is to lose the Flemish areas to Germany, and the Walloon areas will become a part of France. France herself must hand over Alsace and a part of Lorraine to Germany, while Italy will.. receive Nice, Corsica and Tunisia. Germany while Italy will receive intends to move into the Balkans and to attack Russia. Confident and armed with immense resources, the Reich counts on being able to dictate that the German-Russian frontier will be that agreed on at Brest-Litvosk. Versailles destroyed and Brest-Litovsk recreated!

"This will mean that the rich Ukraine, Poland and the Baltic States will be absorbed by Germany. Rumania and Yugoslavia will no longer exist. They will be split up among Italy, Hungary and Bulgaria.

"But there is a postscript to these plans. In 1942 Germany intends to compel Italy to make adjustments in Germany's favor in Northern and Eastern Italy, thereby assuring to herself the port of Trieste. Thus Italy and her enlarged frontiers will be under the final domination of the third Reich.

"Nothing stands between these intentions for the Nazi enslavement of Europe and their fulfillment but the conquest of Britain.

UNITED STATES MAY GO BEYOND STRONG PROTEST

Action of Japan in Indo-China Disapproved by Secretary Cordell Hull

STATUS QUO UPSET

U.S. May Assume More Active Role in Stabilizing Pacific Conditions

Washington, Sept. 24 (AP)—Hints came from informed administration sources today that the United States may go beyond a diplomatic protest in showing disapproval of Japan's drive into French Indo-China which State Secretary Cordell Hull said upset the status quo in the Pacific.

There was no indication what decisions were taken at policy-making conferences of State Department officials following the entry Sunday of Japanese troops into the Far Eastern colony.

One usually well informed source predicted, however, that the United States would not "let this challenge go unanswered."

Although the possibility of a diplomatic protest was not ruled out, its effectiveness in checking Japan's southward drive was discounted in informed quarters.

A wide range of possibilities was canvassed in conferences to decide what measures could be taken to reinforce the Government's long-established policy of insisting on maintenance of the Status Quo in the Far East.

The growing confidence of administration officials in Britain's resistance in Europe prompted the belief in some quarters that the United States could assume a more active role in stabilizing Pacific

Toronto Contractor Dies Suddenly At Deseronto

Deseronto, Ont., Sept. 24 (CP).—Howard McNamara, Toronto contractor and member of a famous family of professional hockey players, dropped dead aboard his yacht here last night while on a bass fishing trip with friends.

He was a brother of George and the late Harold McNamara, who were known in hockey circles of 25 years ago as the "Dynamite Twins".

Dr. R .C Blackwell, coroner, and Mayor of Deseronto said there would be no inquest, that death was presumably caused by a heart seizure. Mr. McNamara's yacht was tied up in the Bay of Quinte when he was stricken.

Miss Ethel McNamara and Mrs. Arthur Gendron of Toronto are sisters.

British Fighters Intercept Planes Speeding Inland

Suddenly Increased Aerial Activity Reported Along Southeast Coast of England

London, Sept. 24—(CP)— Large formations of German bombers and battle planes sped over Britain today, twice, interrupting morning business activity in London as the Air Ministry announced the greatest raid of the war on Berlin.

The rattle of machine guns above the clouds, however, indicated the Royal Air Force was on tireless patrol. Thames-side anti-aircraft guns pelted the sky with bursts of hot steel, and both raids on London were of brief duration. No bombs were heard in the central city during the second raid and the formation of 19 planes which raced over the city in the first was scattered after a brief battle.

Soon after the first wave passed two other formations of 17 bombers each, escorted by about 100 battle planes, were reported on the way up the Thames.

The Air Ministry said "extensive damage" was done in last night's raid on Berlin, which was described as on a "much larger scale than any yet carried out."

The Ministry said objectives bombed were the Rahnsdorf railway station, southeast of Berlin, several freight yards, including that at Grunewald, in southwest Berlin, the electric power station in Wilmersdorf, in south Berlin, factories in the western suburbs of Charlottenburg and Spandau, including the Brandenburg motor works, and gas plants at Dantziger Strasse and Neukoln, in southeast Berlin.

Turn Tail For Home

Almost continuous attacks also were carried out by relays of bombers against the Channel ports in German hands.

The Press Association, commenting on the morning attacks on London, said the Germans "twice turned tail for home before a merciless barrage of A.A. fire and the relentless pursuit of British fighters".

In the first raid, the Press Association said, "a number of Nazi machines were seen in difficulties and one was reported to have crashed into the sea at Whitstable".

A strong force of hurricances engaged a second wave of raiders "scurrying for home" in a rear-guard action, the Press Association added, and a "large splash near Calais is thought to indicate that at least one Nazi plane failed to get home".

Travellers on Canadian Liner Say Japanese Bombing Deliberate

A Western Canadian port, Sept. 24—(CP)—Travellers aboard the Canadian Pacific Empress of Asia when the transpacific liner was hit by a Japanese bomb while heading for Yokohama harbor entrance recently, last night described the bombing as deliberate.

(The 16,909-ton vessel was hit by what the Japanese Admiralty described as a "test" bomb by Japanese naval pilots engaged in bombing practice off Oshima Island, at the mouth of Tokyo Bay. The vessel suffered structural damage, the Japanese announced, but said four Chinese crewmen were injured.

(Japanese officials hurried aboard the ship to apologize and naval surgeons were rushed to attend the injured.)

An eye-witness, one of the travellers all of whom asked they not be identified, said there could be no mistake about the deliberateness of the bombing. The sky was clear and the plane at not more than 7,000 feet altitude.

There were four other vessels in the vicinity at the time, all heading for Yokohama and there was no sign of a target ship anywhere as claimed by the Japanese in their explanation of the incident.

Stick of Eight Bombs Dropped

The eye-witness said the Japanese plane dropped a stick of eight bombs, all of which fell near the Empress boat but only one scored a direct hit. It tore a jagged hole through three steel decks and stopped on the concrete floor of the galley where one Chinese was seriously injured and three others suffered minor hurts.

A Scottish-born planter from the Dutch East Indies said "there definitely was no question about it — he was trying to get us."

A veteran of the last war and a civilian pilot himself, the planter said it was the fifth bomb that struck the ship. He estimated the bomb was a small 20-pounder.

"It was 1:10 o'clock as the ship was two hours and a half out of Yokohama that the bombing took place," the planter said. "It was just as good marksmanship as ever I've seen. The furthest bomb landed no more than a few yards from the ship. They seemed to be trying for the wireless room as all the bombs, with the exception of one, landed forward.

Visibility Perfect

"Visibility must have been perfect for the plane, although it was difficult for us to see as the first bomb splashed into the water on the starboard side. Two others fell on each side of the ship. The fourth fell forward showering the forecastle peak with water."

After the fifth bomb had struck

Berlin Communique

Berlin, Sept. 24 —(AP)— A number of persons were reported killed or injured as British bombs hurtled down on Berlin and its outskirts early today in the longest air raid of the war on the German capital. The city was kept under alarm for three hours and 47 minutes.

Despite fierce anti-aircraft fire, a government communique acknowledged that a number of British planes succeeded in passing the outer Berlin defences to drop bombs on northern and eastern suburbs but said there was "no military damage."

Authorized spokesmen claimed only a small group of bombers managed to get as far as the capital outskirts in their sally from the British Isles.

(The British Air Ministry said Berlin was "heavily bombed" by "strong forces" which attacked "important military objectives.")

In central Berlin, the angry swish of bombs streaking downward could be heard at intervals.

Air raid wardens who herded Berlin's 4,000,000 persons into underground shelters for the second successive morning said they extinguished many blazes without having to call the fire department.

Yesterday's attack, which lasted two hours and 22 minutes, broke a lull of a week in the British forays over this part of Germany.

Air Training Plan Months Ahead Of Schedule-Power

Winnipeg, Sept. 24 (CP)—Progress of the British Commonwealth air training plan has placed it months ahead of schedule. Hon. C. G. Power, Minister of Defence for Air, said here last night. He addressed the 18th annual meeting of the junior section of the Winnipeg Board of Trade.

Mr. Power said that more than twice the number of men previously expected will be graduated from air training schools by January.

Referring to the cost of the plan, he intimated that while it was originally set at $600,000,000, later developments showed this figure would be exceeded. The plan called for Canada to supply $350,000,000 of the cost but now she will have to pay more than that, he said.

Mr. Power credited the success of the Royal Air Force to more thorough training, keynote of the training plan. In the last war, fighter pilots took the air with 15 to 25 flying hours behind them. Graduates now have at least 150 hours.

BELLEVILLE-BOUND CHILDREN BELIEVED TO BE SAFE IN WALES

Two British children war guests who will spend the duration in Belleville with the Rev. and Mrs. A. Beauchamp Payne, are not believed to have been passengers on the ill-fated British liner torpedoed last week with a large loss of life, Mr. Payne said this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Payne anxiously scanned the lists of the dead in yesterday's newspapers but found no names resembling those of their little friends. "We have had no word from their parents in South Wales that the children have sailed", Mr. Payne said, "and on that fact we base a belief that they are still in their Welsh home."

SMALL MARKET DUE TO WEATHER

Inclement weather was responsible for an exceptionally small market on Tuesday morning with vendors as well as buyers being scarce. Prices however, remained at previous levels with tomatoes showing practically the only decline selling at 65c per bushel for the first time this season.

Peaches were scarce selling at 45c for specials and 40c and 35c per basket for firsts and seconds. Pears sold at 45c per basket and grapes at the same price for both blue and green varieties. Blue Damsons were 25c per basket with Raine Claude plums at 40c. British prunes sold at 65c per basket.

Corn declined to 20c per dozen ears for the first time in weeks while potatoes held at 25c per peck and 80c per bushel. Apples sold at $1.00 per bushel for cooking varieties and 25c per basket for St. Lawrence and McIntosh. Watermelons and muskmelons sold for 25c each and downward.

PREPARATIONS FOR DRIVE COMPLETED

Final preparations for the forthcoming Red Cross drive of which the local objective is $8,000 were completed last evening at the Y.M.C.A. when the local Committee met to make final plans and to allot canvassing districts to the workers. A good turnout of ladies was present at the meeting during which practically all districts and envelopes were allotted to the various workers. Mr. I. G. Hefkey, president of the Belleville Red Cross gave a short talk on the work being done by the Red Cross while Campaign Chairman Howard Clarke gave instructions to the canvassers as to their duties during the forthcoming drive and also expressed appreciation for the interest being shown by the workers through their good attendance at the meeting.

Appreciation of the efforts of Mr. Morley Duff, who has done wonderful work in organizing for the campaign was expressed and every confidence of the success of the drive is felt.

Police Blotter

A new motorcycle patrolman will patrol Highway No. 2 east of Belleville and arrived in Belleville to take over his detail today. He is Motorcycle Patrolman C. E. Siple, who reported to Sergeant S. Hunter of the motorcycle division of the Provincial Police headquarters here today, coming from Provincial Headquarters in Toronto. Patrolman Siple will take over the detail previously patrolled by Lieut. Sam Irvine, C.A.S.F.

A bicycle reported stolen from its parking position at the upper end of Front Street last night, was recovered abandoned in a clump of bushes on Ridley Street early today, city police revealed. The bike was the property of Harry Derushi, 61 1-2 Pinnacle Street.

After a hectic and busy week-end in and around local police circles, no arrests were necessary in Belleville during the past 24 hours, leaving the cell block available for three transients, who sought shelter in the city last night.

'Pure Speculation' Say London Sources

New York, Sept. 24 —(CP)— The New York Herald Tribune in a dispatch from London today quoted reports "from neutral sources on the French-Spanish border" that the combination of British attacks and severe channel storms which scattered the Nazis' invasion fleet a week ago, "cost the Germans between 50,000 and 60,000 picked troops."

London, Sept. 24 —(CP—Cable)— Authoritative sources here, commenting on reports from the French-Spanish border that 50,000 to 60,000 German troops had been put out of action along the channel last week, said such reports would have to be regarded as "purely speculation."

COFFEE AND CATSUP POPULAR IN U.S. ARMY AND NAVY

Boston, Sept. 24 —(AP)— Food isn't causing any problem in the United States defence program. William S. Knudsen, chairman of the National Defence Advisory Commission, said here that the man in a military camp "does not eat very much more than at home, except in the army he drinks more coffee and in the navy he eats more catsup."

Sees Britain Victor

Shown as he arrived at La Guardia Field, New York, on his return from England is Brig.-Gen. George V. Strong, assistant chief of staff for the war plans division of the U.S. army. Gen. Strong observed the Nazi bombings of London as an official observer for President Roosevelt. In his report he stated that Britain has suffered "no serious military damage," predicted that the war would be a long one, and declared that in his opinion Britain has an excellent chance to win.

Three O.S.D. Students Present $25 Raised by Own Initiative to R.C.

A fine exemplification of the spirit of the pupils of the Ontario School for the Deaf was brought to light Monday, when three students of the institution presented Mr. I. G. Hefkey, president of the Belleville branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society with $25.00 to be used in the war efforts of the organization.

The three students raised the money entirely through their own efforts and initiative without prompting from the school faculty or suggestions from other sources than their own willingness and ability to act.

As a reward for their fine co-operation, President Hefkey has instituted an organization to be known as the "Pupils of O. S. D. Red Cross Unit" with the three students in executive capacities. George Margo is the new president, Jessie E. Auld, vice-president, and Jack L. Hooey, secretary-treasurer. The new officers were brought to the office of Mr. Hefkey by Principal A. E. Morrison of the school, who introduced them to the Red Cross official. A box containing the proceeds of their efforts was formally handed to Mr. Hefkey.

"They are a splendid type," was his comment, "and Red Cross Campaign officials are not only appreciative of their splendid gesture, but proud to be co-operating with such fine citizens."

German E-Boats Turn Around

When the haze of smoke cleared none of the ships could be seen. Then a number of German E-boats (motor speed boats carrying torpedoes) came out of Boulogne, but for some reason they turned around almost at once and went back into the harbor.

The bombers also encountered a large Dornier seaplane and shot it down into the sea. A fierce barrage of anti-aircraft fire was put up, but all the R.A.F. machines returned safely.

A short time before this attack was made, 15 Messerschmitts had been seen flying above the armed ships, but these had disappeared when the bombers came on the scene.

The Germans also had used an observation balloon somewhere in the vicinity of Cape Gris Nez, but this had been pulled down as the ships approached Boulogne.

71 P. C. City Taxes Have Been Paid

New System of Four Instalment Payments Proves Popular

NO DISCOUNTS NOW

Approximately seventy-one per cent of the 1940 taxes of the City of Belleville has been paid in the first three of the four instalments under the new system inaugurated this year, City Treasurer Harry Stock announced today. Ordinarily eight-five per cent was collected in the semi-annual payments of the old system, but this figure is expected to be slightly increased due to the facilities offered the tax-paying public under the new "four-pay" system.

Although there have been some taxpayers who have disagreed with the city in putting the new system in effect, the general consensus of opinion of the average taxpayer, places a stamp of approval on the new scheme of things. It is felt in many quarters that it is much fairer to the small taxpayer, also the residents who formerly paid on the instalment plan.

Under the old system, the wealthier class of taxpayers were able to avail themselves of a liberal discount by paying taxes in full at the beginning of the year. Under the new order, this has been eliminated.

Another advantage of the new system is the fact that due dates which now fall on the third days of May, July, September and November, has resulted in prompter payments on the part of those who ordinarily went on vacation in August when the first semi-annual payment was due. Many taxpayers have adopted a budget system and consequently the annual taxes "hardship" is not proving such a difficult problem.

Total taxes of the city amount to $480,700.00.

Argylls Parade In Full Dress

Belleville streets were lined with hundreds of admiring spectators on Monday evening as the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) N.P.A.M. staged their first full dress parade since their return from military camp at Petawawa where they underwent two weeks' elementary military training.

Headed by their regimental pipe and brass bands and under the command of Lt. Col. A. B. Gribble, the men received many complimentary remarks of interested spectators, as with arms and legs swinging in perfect unison, rifles at slope and eyes front, they distinctly showed the results of their two weeks' training. Leaving the armouries lawn shortly after eight o'clock, the regiment paraded east on Bridge Street to Bleecker Avenue, thence to Station street and returning by way of Station and Front Streets to the armouries where after a short period of drill, they were dismissed.

A feeling of joviality was exhibited by the men as they marched along. While swinging down Bleecker Ave., a lone cornetist in the residential district was heard to strike up "Roll Out the Barrel," and not to be outdone, the members of the regiment broke out in song and the chorus of the popular song was heard over the still night air.

Just before dismissal on the armouries lawn Lt. Col. Gribble announced to the unit that an invitation for all members in uniform had been extended by the arena management to attend the wrestling show and quite a number took advantage of the hospitality offered. Bi-weekly drilling will continue at the armouries until the required thirty days training has been completed, it is understood.

Maintains Extreme Reserve

It also was reported in military circles that Britain herself was considering sending naval reinforcements from European waters to her far eastern stronghold at Singapore.

Whether some form of Anglo-American naval co-operation in the Pacific was developing from diplomatic conversations here was not indicated by officials. Secretary Hull maintained extreme reserve on the subject.

In a brief statement yesterday he said merely that the situation in Indo-China was confused but that it seemed obvious "the status quo is being upset and that this is being achieved under duress". He reiterated the government's position "in disapproval and in deprecation of such procedures".

May Base at Singapore

Among possibilities suggested in unofficial quarters for reinforcing expressions of disapproval were:—

Sending some units of the fleet now based at Hawaii to the far Pacific, attaching them to the Asiatic squadron and possibly basing them at Singapore in agreement with Britain.

Recall of Ambassodar Joseph C. Grew from Toyko for "consultation", a method used more than two years ago to indicate disapproval by German policies.

A complete embargo on oil, scrap iron and other supplies now subject to an export licensing system but still obtained in considerable quantities by Japan.

An increased supply of military supplies and planes to the Netherlands East Indies to strengthen them against a possible Japanese thrust.

Bomb Splinters From Battle of Britain

By Louis V. Hunter Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Curb service up-to-date: A bomb fell in a south London street, fractured a gas main in several places and set each fracture alight. A repair worker took time off after a busy night and fried his breakfast over one of the blazing punctures.

They hobbled into a London first-aid station, a police sergeant and three constables.

"I think, Miss," the sergeant said, "that Hitler must be using a new gas. My legs are stinging cruel—so are my men's."

The blue trouser legs were rolled up. On each calf were half a dozen wasps. Disturbed in their nest, the wasps had sought shelter.

"It would be quicker to get an engine from London," the wise ones told Teddy Martin when he organized the Newbury volunteer fire brigade 25 years ago. But Teddy lived to see the day when his brigade went 60 miles to London to help extinguish a fire. Fifteen other provincial brigades were called out at the same time.

The girls county school at Reigate boasts the deepest shelter in the educational world. It is an old quarry working which descends for 60 feet and goes around and around and in and out for hundreds of yards. The temperature is constant at 40 degrees and the air is fresh.

A bus driver in a Greater London district occupied his time during an air raid warning by making adjustments to his engine. When the all clear sounded, he was under the bus and a passerby called to him:

"It's all clear now, Chum, you can come out,"

There's a story going around of a road that was hurriedly roped off after a raid. It was a time bomb, they said. It wasn't long before the ropes were removed. Firemen had discovered the crater was a rat-hole.

Only one wall of a large business building in a central London district was left standing after a bomb hit. A man climbed to the top of the wall afterwards and planted a Union Jack which still flies bravely.

Shelter Shorts: The elderly spinster who carries her canary with her whenever she takes cover. The partially blind girl who sits up all night knitting comforts for soldiers.

Add notes in shattered shop windows: "Adolf was our last customer. Will you be our next?"

There have been many suggestions for the most suitable tune for London dance bands to play when the all clear signal sounds. Most popular is "All's Well", and another favorite is "Happy Days Are Here Again". They might try "Shake Down the Stars" when the sirens wail their alarm.

A London grocer was blown out of his bed three times in one night by bomb explosions. "The third time I put a carpet beside my bed to soften the next fall and then went back to sleep again," he said. "But 'Blimey, nothing happened."

J. Barrymore Charges Elaine Caused Him Mental, Bodily Injury

Los Angeles, Sept. 24.—(AP) — John Barrymore filed suit yesterday to divorce Elaine Barrie, and to prevent her from "harassing" him or trying to enter his Beverly Hills mansion.

Barrymore, 57, charged his 24-year-old fourth wife had caused him "grievous mental suffering and great bodily injury". He did not say how, when or why he was injured.

Soon after the suit was filed, Barrymore's lawyer obtained a temporary court order to protect the actor from Miss Barrie. It restrains her from "harassing, annoying or interfering with the peace, quiet or personal freedom" of Barrymore. She is warned against "entering or attempting to enter the premises at No. 6 Tower Road", the Barrymore residene.

The order also forbids Miss Barrie, her mother, Mrs. Edna Jacobs, and two banks to sell or encumber any of the couple's private or community property.

Previously Barrymore called the present separation "final and irrevocable".

Reminded others had been similarly described, he replied:—

"This one is unlike the others. Neither of us is to blame. I came to the realization we'd both be happier so I beat it".

They married in November, 1936, in an elopment to Yuma, Ariz., and separated the next New Year's Eve. Elaine won a divorce the following April but they were reconciled before it became final.

Last year she again sued for divorce but they were reconciled.

KINSMEN TO AID RED CROSS DRIVE IN BELLEVILLE

Local Kinsmen Gather Following Summer Vacation Period

Whether it be during war period, at the time of floods or in sickness the Red Cross is the emblem of mercy and a succor to those in distress. The Canadian Red Cross Society has launched a Dominion-wide campaign to raise funds for their humanitarian efforts and the Belleville Kinsmen Club voted their entire efforts towards the advancement of this movement last evening. Following a summer vacation the Kinsmen Club reopened their service club activities at the New Queens Hotel last evening for the autumn and winter semesters, with President Jeff Marvell in charge.

"Our pledge to the Red Cross movement is our share of the wars effort over here, while our boys are doing their share over there," reminded President Marvell as he assured one hundred percent co-operation on the part of the Kinsmen Club of Belleville to Belleville's Red Cross campaign. The captains of the Kinsmen Red Cross team who will assist in the canvassing of the city are Kinsmen Newt. Wilbur, Gardner Duff, Don Roe, Court Miller and Harry Knott. Vice-captains were also named.

Inaugural Meeting

Last night's meeting being the inaugural of the fall term, the club's future activities were outlined. Secretary Tommy Colden reported from the National convention, which was held in Windsor this past summer, while President Marvell outlined the Dominion-wide war effort of the organization in the introduction of the "Lick Hitler" stamp campaign. "This campaign is a hundred percent Kinsmen venture across the Dominion as adopted by our National Executive. One hundred percent of the revenue derived from this venture will go directly to the government for the prosecution of the war," assured President Marvell as he announced Kinsmen Elmer LeBarr was in charge of the local end of the campaign. "Lick Hitler" stamps can be procured from any Kinsmen. A letter was read from Kinsmen Jack Haig, who is serving with His Majesty's forces somewhere in England.

Change Meeting Dates

"A number of our members are serving in the N.P.A.M. units here in Belleville and they find it impossible to attend our Monday night luncheons. Would it not be possible to hold our club meetings on Wednesday for the duration of the war?" asked Kinsmen C. B. Colling. After some discussion the matter was left in the hands of the club executive.

The speaker of the evening was Sergt.-Major Perry, of the Royal Canadian Air Force, who spoke to the club on the organization of Canada's air-fighting forces. His discourse proved interesting and educational as the speaker outlined the advancement of the service since it was inaugurated following the last war. Harold Williamson delighted the club with two splendid solos, while Kin Jerry Hurley collected an abundance of fines as sergeant-at-arms and Kin Gardner Duff acted as song-leader. The annual Kinsmen Club Thanksgiving night dance will be held this year as usual.

There was no alarm, whatever, the planter continued, adding "I must take my hat off to the stewards, crew and entire ship's personnel—they were wonderful."

"The chief officer called for the fire crew and they were on the scene within a minute and a half.

"The wireless men stuck to their job and finally contacted the shore. Shortly afterwards two large bombing planes flew out and escorted us into Yokohama."

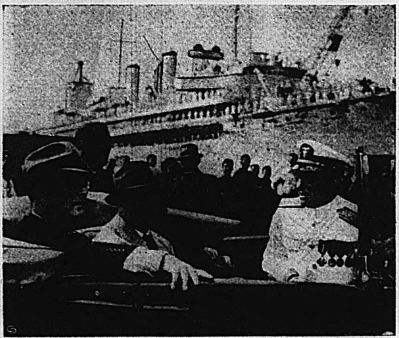
F.D.R. STUDIES NAVAL BUILDING PROGRAM AT FIRST HAND



With an airplane tender as a fitting background, President Roosevelt is shown, LEFT, in his auto as he toured the Philadelphia navy yard to see for himself the progress being made on construction of new fighting ships for the U.S. navy. The President saw the recently-laid keel of the 45,000-ton battleship New Jersey, the almost completed 35,000-ton Washington and was informed that four more mighty battlewagons soon will be laid down. In uniform facing the President is Admiral Adolphus Watson, commandant of the 4th naval district, who conducted the presidential tour.

Intense Bombing Of German Cities Being Demanded

(By J. F. SANDERSON)

London, Sept. 24—(CP Cable) — Sinking of the child evacuee ship in mid-Atlantic has added impetus to the public clamor for intense bombing of German towns and cities in retaliation for the indiscriminate bombing of London and other barbarous acts of the Nazis.

During the last few days there has been an increasing demand among the people of London for reprisals against Berlin, Munich, Coblenz and other German cities, but so far the Government has stood firm against it, because it believed the bomber strength of the Royal Air Force should be used against Hitler's invasion ports and against such military targets within Germany as oil refineries, transportation facilities and aircraft plants.

There are two conflicting points of view on reprisal raids against German cities. One school of thought argues that the only way to stop the Nazis' night raids on London is to bomb Germany until the German people themselves demand a halt. The other viewpoint is that Britain's air defenses have overcome daylight attacks and will soon master night raids, but that in any event mass raids, unless they are directed at military and industrial targets, are costly and futile and will never win the war.

To the man who has lost a home, or the men and women forced to huddle together on the cement floor of a raid shelter every night, the first argument naturally appeals—they are calling for reprisals against Berlin. They suggest that mechanical defenses such as anti-aircraft guns and fighter planes merely soften the intensity of a night raid, but do not stop bombs from being dropped by isolated planes that get through the barrage.

Look For Defense

These people fall back on an old football and hockey maxim: that the best defense is offense. They argue that the only way to defend London is to strike terror into the hearts of Germans in Berlin so that these people will demand a halt to Hitler's indiscriminate tactics in order to avoid the reprisals visited upon themselves.

On the other hand it is argued that it is only a matter of time until the counter weapon to the night raider is found. Until then the people of London will have to sit in their raid shelters and make the best of the situation while the Royal Air Force pounds away at its primary target, the invasion ports, and secondary target, the chinks in Germany's economic armor.

New types of fighters are coming into commission with the Royal Air Force and the best scientific brains of the country are at work on a number of novel schemes to beat the raiders.

Must Travel Further

There are one or two other angles to this problem. One is the fact that every bomb dropped in London, whether it demolishes a house or store, is one bomb that cannot immobilize a factory turning out war materials. Of course that is no solace to the woman who owns the house, or the survivors of those killed, but it is an imnportant factor in any objective survey or any long-range view of the situation.

Another consideration is the long distances British planes must travel to hit Berlin in comparison with the short jump across the Channel German bombers and fighters take from their bases in Northern France, Belgium and Holland.

This consideration of course, is not so strong in the case of cities in the western part of Germany. Considering the numerical inferiority of the Royal Air Force against the Nazi raiders and the necessity, during the last few weeks of concentrating fighter production to protect this country as the Nazi got closer and closer, it cannot be overlooked, however.

Sidney Township School Fair

The Rural School Fair, sponsored by the Teacher's of Sidney Township was held at Wallbridge on Sept. 20th with large numbers of pupils, parents and ratepayers in attendance. The day was ideal, providing "Summers best of weather and Autumn's best of cheer."

Early in the morning the various schools began arriving on the scene of the days activities. Every means of conveyance was pressed into service for the occasion, such as automobiles, trucks, buses, trailers, bicycles and even a fine team of grey horses hitched to a farm wagon.

In the hall on long tables were found the allotted spaces for each school's project a list of which appears later, also spaces for fruit and vegetables, placed under the direction of Mr. Wesley Wallis, and for flowers, placed under the direction of Mrs. Roy Bush.

A very fine showing of poultry, lambs, calves and bacon hogs was placed in the yard, between the hall and sheds.

At ten o'clock a program of about 60 items, including recitations, choral readings and impromptu speeches was given under the capable chairmanship of Mr. Alex Nivison. The school house was packed to capacity for this event and each number was given careful attention and hearty applause.

At eleven o'clock the Junior Farmers of Sidney Township went into action as judges of fruit, vegetables, poultry, lambs and calves. The judging was carried out promptly and accurately by the young men under the supervision of Mr. H. L. Fair, Agricultural Representative. The following Junior Farmers took part: Fruit and vegetables, Wilmott Shortt; Poultry, Jack Ketcheson; Lambs and calves, Ralph Campbell. Grant Longwell acted as secretary to the judges. Miss Wood of the local Department of Agriculture capably acted as judge of flowers and also as general secretary of the Fair. The display of poultry was the finest seen in many years.

At the ringing of the school bell at 1.15 each school took it's alloted place in the yard in front of the school. Mr. J. R. Pickering called upon Miss Margaret Atkinson, who led all the schools in singing. God Save the King and Canadian Boat Song, and Miss Flora MacDonald who led all the schools in singing, O Come with Me and O Canada. Physical exercises under the direction of Kenneth Stapley were demonstrated by groups of eight pupils from each school. Ten pupils from each of ten schools then took part in group games, also directed by Kenneth Stapley. A series of contests, naming of weeds and grasses, naming of plant diseases, judging seed wheat and judging vegetables was carried out in the school house with Ray Hall of the Junior Farmers acting as judge.

Mr. Fair gave a lecture on the judging of bacon hogs and then a class of four bacon hogs was judged by the older boys of the various schools. This provided the first introduction to stock-judging for many of the boys. The hogs were supplied by Mr. L. J. Ketcheson and Sons.

At three o'clock the hall was opened and parents were allowed to inspect the fruit, vegetables and flowers; also the various projects of the schools. Folk-dancing and plays by string and hand puppets really stole the show at this time.

The thanks of the Inspector, Mr. J. R. Pickering and the teachers and pupils of the schools is due to the Sidney Township Council for a generous grant, the various Women's Institutes within the township for grants, the Junior Farmers for their assistance in judging and for the capable help of Mr. H. L. Fair and his secretary, Miss Wood.

Although Departmental support was withdrawn the idea of Rural School Fairs lived on in the minds of Sidney Township teachers and the tremendous response this year is gratifying to all.

Bancroft

Bancroft — "A" Company of the Hastings Prince Edward Regiment N.P.A.M. motored to Coe Hill by convoy Thursday afternoon and joined the remainder of the recruits in that town forming up into platoons on main street and paraded to the agricultural grounds as a feature of the Coe Hill fair. Over a hundred boys participated in the march. Major Babcock who was in charge of the company gave a fitting address over the loud speaker system. After several exercises the boys were dismissed until after lunch and forming again marched back to their convoy preparatory to their journey home.

The girls' softball team of Bancroft motored to Coe Hill Thursday engaging the locals there in a very good game although the score of 21 to 16 for Coe Hill was no reflection on the calibre of the tilt.

Bancroft boys also played the Coe Hill boys in a hard ball game in which Coe Hill boys won by a score of 1 to 0.

The Bancroft Troubadour orchestra were engaged for the dance held in the agricultural hall at Coe Hill Thursday evening under the auspices of the Coe Hill fair officials.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Deyell accompanied by Mrs. H. Strudwick motored to Belleville on Friday.

Mrs. D. L. Kavanagh and Mrs. Jack Kavanagh motored to Belleville on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wiggins, and Mr. and Mrs. R. W Blatherwick were in Belleville on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Hutchinson, of Detlor, left for Lindsay and London Thursday for a two weeks' vacation.

The table was drawn into the room by two of the bride-to-be's small nieces, Frances Taylor and Barbara Thurgood. A buffet luncheon was served, following which entertainment in singing, with Mrs. H. Taylor at the piano, completed an enjoyable evening.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, September 25

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

GENERALLY fortunate and auspicious conditions should prevail on this day, judging by the ruling lunar influences. Things should advance, pleasantly and smoothly in accustomed grooves, with much accomplished and friendly support won from those in power and prestige. The social aspect of business may be accented with such contacts, but be careful as to expenditures and extravangances. Olders also are helpful. There should be lively social domestic and affectional conditions, but in the latter there is need for discretion.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a rather progressive, prosperous, fortunate and happy year, with many things advancing the ambitions and giving stability to future prospects, Elders and those in power assist in this with friendly cooperation. These should be cultivated, but in social affiliations shun extravagances and unjustified outlay of funds. Purely private relations are also lively and very pleasant, but in intimate affairs be circumspect.

A child born on this day may have much stability and talent to back up its ambitions and aspirations, although it will be easy going and fond of the good things of life. It should have a warm, generous and compassionate nature.

YOU WILL SEE many luxuriously furred cloth coats this winter. Beige ribbed woolen is used for a coat made with a deep shawl collar of brown skunk and a wide border of the same fur.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Family Split-ups Often Averted By Judge Lindsey's Conciliation Plan

Judge Ben Lindsey, of Juvenile Court fame, is saving the home life for children with a new kind of justice in Los Angeles. It's to be hoped that courts all over this country, having to do with the fate of children in homes broken by divorce, will study the Children's Court of Conciliation, and adopt Judge Lindsey's plan.

The story of this court, as set forth in a current periodical, is so sane and simple, the wonder is someone didn't think of it sooner.

There are no spectators, reporters or stenographers permitted during the proceedings involved in the 'You-Don't-Want-a-Divorce Court,' as it's popularly known. Nor are the names of plaintiff and respondent available. The only record is a memorandum made by the Judge for his own reference.

Let's suppose there has been a family blitzkrieg. The husband has packed his suitcase and departed. The wife has a passing spasm of believing it's "good riddance." And the helpless children, without knowing what it's all about, feel intuitively that something dreadful has happened.

When husband and wife appear in the domestic relations court petitioning for a divorce, Judge Lindsey inquires: "Have you any minor children?" When the answer is "yes," the judge says: "Then I'll have to send you to the Children's Court of Conciliation."

Two days later the parents with their attorney are seated opposite to wise, kindly Judge Lindsey, who has had such vast experience in human relations.

His Honor explains:

"This Court is concerned with the rights of your children to you, rather than your rights to your children. They have certain rights to live happily under one roof with you. Court records show that your son and daughter have six times as many chances of becoming charges of the state in a broken home as in a normal home. Now let's see if the difficulties between you justify that risk."

Patiently the Judge listens to both stories and asks probing questions. In a fatherly way he discusses the troubles which have broken the home — drinking, philandering, gambling, wasteful extravagance, nagging, and all the other evils and misfortunes which make divorce seem the only solution. Then he tells the husband and wife to "think it over and meet us here a week from today." The lawyers are urged to do what they can to reunite the family.

The results are astonishing. In one-third of the cases he has affected reconciliation. He has cut red tape and settled in twenty-five days cases which normally would have taken 105 days.

Los Angeles is to be congratulated in acquiring the services of Judge Lindsey. As Colorado's first Juvenile Court judge, where he served successfully for twenty-seven years, a Klu Klux Klan crusade defeated him at the polls and brought disbarment. Broken in health he went to see what California's magnificent climate could do for him, and was elected in November 1934 to the Los Angeles County Superior Court by a tremendous majority.

Judge Lindsey says:

"Couples who have a real affection for each other quarrel violently and one or the other starts action. After that, neither will back down, and the thirty-day delay lets them cool off."

Decidedly it is the best solution yet evolved for keeping homes from going on the rocks and children from becoming public charges and later delinquents.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Nothing Gives One Away Like Manners at the Card Table

When you play any card game, the ebb and flow of luck and your personal reaction to it will throw such a searchlight into the inner recesses of your character, that every motive, every little meanness, every shabby little or big dishonesty will stand revealed. And happily, by that same searchlight, all your natural graciousness, all your humor, all your real sportsmanship, will be revealed at their finest and best.

Some of the things that make card-playing an agony to a well-bred person, range from the unforgiveable breach of good manners to annoying little peculiarities, easy enough to overcome if the offending person has the will to do so. But before people can be of a mind to conquer their shortcomings, big or little, they must first be aware of what are the great and what are the little breaches of card-etiquette.

The first and foremost requirement of the card-player is this: you must become a good winner and a good loser. Take your successes quietly and modestly; swallow your losses with a smile. To laugh hilariously when you are winning or have won, to spoof the other side because they have lost, to call attention to a successful play of yours which is only another way of calling attention to your own skill, to say loudly and insincerely "Well now, that's too bad" when you are obviously delighted . . . these things are annoying to opponents. Or when the run of luck is persistently against you, to slump down in your chair as though you were in physical pain, to gloom, to sulk, to criticize your partner sharply, to look bored, to watch the other tables and neglect your own . . . these things too are the height of poor sportsmanship.

You're a poor sport, too, if you show great interest when you are playing for prizes or money, and no interest whatever when there is no stake. Any game worth playing at all should be agreeable enough to be worth playing for itself. You should need no artificial kick of "playing for something."

Another type of disagreeable person at cards is he or she who is charmed to death with you as a partner when you win, but unpleasant and critical when you lose.

In playing bridge or any other game of cards, we should try to conquer nervousness and lack of confidence, as well as boasting and over-confidence. Both are equally trying to your partner, and both show an absence of poise which is an essential element of success. If you belong to the first class, you will fail to give your partner necessary information and help, because you are afraid to bid. If you belong to the second class, your over-confidence will "inform" your partner that you are holding cards that you are really not holding at all.

And if you insist on playing bridge or any other game of cards, consideration for others demands that you learn the game!

Courtesy Tip

When you write a letter or a post-card, write each sentence in full. That is, don't omit the subject . . . "Thought I would write to let you know that", or "Wish you were here to enjoy the". A letter shouldn't be written in telegraphic style!

Fashion Flashes

OUT OF THE KITCHEN come such shades as cocoa brown and all the glorious brown spice shades. A new hat is of cocoa brown, velvet for the crown and felt for the narrow double brim, which works to a point in front. Big veil of matching brown lace.

JUST RIGHT now are days in the country. A grand country suit is in suede, a norfolk type jacket and gored skirt in deep plum. Worn with a sulphur yellow or old-rose sweater.

GEARED for walking is a smart pump of brown suede with a platform of brown calf laced over with strips of green calf. Collar portion of brown calf.

WEDDINGS

BENNETT—SIMPSON

St. James' Anglican Church, Kingston, was the scene of a pretty Autumn wedding at seven o'clock Saturday evening, September 21, when Rev. Dr. J. D. Mackenzie Naughton united in marriage Evelyn Frances Simpson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Simpson, Kingston, and Clifford Jones Bennett of Sudbury, son of Mr. and Mrs. Armoun Bennett, Boswell Street, Belleville.

Mr. J. E. Tunstall, organist of the church, played the wedding music, playing the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin as the party entered the church and Mendelssohn's Wedding March as they left. During the ceremony he played appropriate soft music and during the signing of the register Mr. Robert Ashcroft sang "Because".

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely gown of ivory duchess satin with a short train and an embroidered tulle veil caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of Butterfly roses and baby's breath. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. W. Wardhaugh as matron of honour and by her cousin, Miss Audrey Garlepy of Belleville, as bridesmaid. The matron of honor wore a gown of sheer crepe in dove rose and the bridesmaid's gown was a sheer crepe in queen's blue. Both wore white accessories. Mr. Robert Michaud, Belleville, was best man. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Colborne Street. Mrs. Simpson, mother of the bride received wearing a pretty gown of teal blue crepe with black accessories and Mrs. Bennett, mother of the groom, was in a navy blue ensemble.

Later the bride and groom left for Toronto, Niagara Falls and Hamilton, the bride travelling in a smart dusty rose wool ensemble with black accessories. They will reside in Sudbury. The groom's gift to the bride was a silver fox fur; to the matron of honor and bridesmaid, lockets, and to the best man a tie pin and collar clip.

SUTHERLAND—THOMPSON

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Thompson, Rawdon township, was the scene of a very pretty wedding at noon on Saturday when their daughter, Jerrine, was united in marriage to George W. Sutherland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Sutherland, Stirling. Rev. W. Belch of Stirling, officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a graceful floor length gown of white double net over taffeta with dress length veil which was caught with a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses and bouvardia. Miss Marjorie McKeown was bridesmaid. She was gowned in old dusty rose taffeta and in her hair she wore a wreath of roses. Her bouquet was of Briarcliffe roses and fern.

Mr. William Sutherland assisted the groom, and Miss Freda Rowe of Stanwood, played the wedding music, while during the signing of the register, Bruce Barnum rendered "O Promise Me".

At the reception which followed Mrs. Thompson received wearing a cadet blue crepe frock with black accessories. The groom's mother, who assisted in receiving, chose a navy blue sheer. The living room was appropriately decorated in pink and white with a profusion of Autumn flowers.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland left on a wedding trip to Western Ontario, and on their return will reside near Stirling. For travelling the bride donned a smart navy blue ensemble with small felt hat and matching accessories. Assisting in serving at the reception were a number of intimate friends of the bride, including Misses Josephine Locke, Doris Locke, Leah Stewart, Doris Lain, Ella Sutherland, Verna Sutherland and Pauline Rutherford.

Quaternion Y. P. U. Opens Fall Activities

Quaternion Y.P.U. opened their Fall activities last night with a wiener roast at the Flat Rock, Foxboro, with seventy-five present. The night was ideal and the joy of meeting again after the summer vacation was constantly expressed.

Some of the members had attended Summer School and had come back to the Fall activity to share with the others their enthusiasm, new ideas and convictions of the task facing young people in the church today.

The young people presented a challenge in the glow of the big bon fire as they played games led by Miss Jean Matthews then entered into a lively sing-song under the leadership of Miss Myrtle Reid, closing with an impressive worship service in which several took part.

New members were greeted some members of last year were missed as they have gone into various forms of activity in other centres.

Welcome Extended

Appreciation of the work of Mr. Harry Atkinson of Albert College, song leader of last year, coupled with best wishes for a successful year at Queen's University, was voiced by the President, Miss Helen Thompson.

Refreshments consisting of buns, wieners, coffee and peaches were greatly enjoyed.

Thanks Extended

Thanks were extended to those who worked hard to plan details of the party which all agreed was the best outdoor function the group has ever held.

Special mention was made of the part Mr. Shorey, Miss Myrtle Reid and Rev. D. T. McClintock took in the plans for the occasion.

A friendship circle closed the evening's activity with the Quaternion yell followed by singing of "The more we get together", "Blest be the tie that binds" and "God Save The King", and repeating the Mispah Benediction.

SHORT SLEEVES on fur jackets make long gloves a necessity. A dress glove is of black suede with scroll appliques of black kidskin edged with gilt kidskin piping.

VERY NEW is the use of lace on a new evening model. Black lace is used as a tunic bodice with long tight sleeves and soft rounded triangular points in the center front and on the sides of the black silk jersey skirt. The tunic, short in front, becomes a dripping-to-the-ground overskirt in back.

PRESENTING OUR HANDMADE HATS at $5.00 to $7.95

There's quality in every line of our handmade hats, from the rich fur felt bodies to the feather or bird mount trimmings. If you are used to a fine quality hat, you will appreciate these handmade models.

HEAVY MAKE UP

"You don't want to overload, even with beauty props."

By HELEN FOLLETT

IT'S EASY enough to decide what clothes you'll take when you go traveling, but a survey of the cosmetic cabinet leaves you befuddled and bewildered. Packing is the fly in the gadabout's ointment; you don't want to overload even with beauty props.

If you're a smarty, as of course you are, you won't tuck creams, bottles and boxes in odd corners of the suitcase. You'll have them in one kit or package. That arrangement is especially necessary when traveling on trains where you'll put on your war paint in a crowded dressing room.

Avoid liquid preparations if you can; corks and stoppers do pop out sometimes. See that the powder box is strong. Take your perfume in an atomizer. Articles that must be included are a cleansing cream, powder, pads, cleansing cream, powder pads, cleansing tissues, rouge, lipsticks, eyebrow pencil, tweezers, and mascara if you use it. Add to these a brush and comb, toothbrush, dentifrice, manicuring scissors, orangewood stick, beveling files, a small mirror and you have quite a collection.

Prepared Kits

Nearly all cosmetic chemists put up their wares in small containers for travelers and they are a wonderful convenience. Don't forget your favorite soap and several wash cloths. If you are going sight-seeing you'll need a foot powder, and one can't very well get along without a perspiration deterrent.

Why a chin must take unto itself a mate nobody knows. One suspects it may be getting even with its owner who feeds herself too well. At any rate the slimpsies don't have to bear with chins that have gone tandem.

At the first sign of a suspicious fullness and a little straight across seam, do your neck exercises. Lift up your chest, throw your head back, move the head from side to side, pulling hard on the muscles. There will be a tenseness from chin tip way down to the shoulders. That practice will tone the fibers of the jaw line and throat. On firm muscles fat cells like not to dwell; they'll soon move on. Finish with a creamy up and down massage and a brisk friction with an ice cube.

WALKING

It always seems to be a matter for boasting when a baby begins to walk at an earlier age than the baby next door. That is unfortunate, for it encourages parents to coax a child to walk before it has the inclination to do so itself. Parents who do so act very unwisely.

A child should not be urged to begin to walk. It doesn't matter if little Johnny Jones next door, who is the same age, has been walking for a month, while your baby hasn't begun. Don't urge him, even though you think he is old enough and strong enough to be taking steps. He'll begin trying first steps in his own good time, which is the best time.

Prematurity, severe illnesses — particularly rickets, nearly always postpone a child's ability to walk and to stand. Children of multiple births are often slow about walking and standing. Other factors make walking ages vary.

In the Dionne Quintuplets there was every one of these adverse factors. They were born two months prematurely, they had rickets, and they had digestive disturbances when they were very young. I was surprised that they learned to walk as soon as they did. Yet at the time many persons were critical of our babies because they didn't walk as soon as youngsters normally do.

I always advise mothers, "Don't use any contrivance to try and make your child walk. When his bones and muscles are sufficiently developed, he will be only too eager to step out and try it without any coaxing on your part."

We observed this advice with regard to the Quintuplets. We were exceptionally anxious for them to begin to walk, just so we could show the people who were going around saying: "We always knew the Quins weren't normal".

Stories got out that the Quins were slow about learning to walk, and so well-meaning people all over the country began sending us especially designed walkers, supports contrivances of all kinds with directions how they could be used to hurry the Quins into walking. We refused them, because we felt perfectly sure that when their muscles were ready for the effort, they would walk by themselves.

When a baby stretches and threshes around in his crib, he is developing the muscles he needs for walking. When he is creeping about the floor, he is also developing these muscles. So the more creeping he is allowed to do, the better. Soon he will creep over to the table, or to a chair, and with the aid of his hands, pull himself up to a standing position. He may do this a long time before he takes the first step. Don't get impatient. Strained muscles and deformed bones may result from forcing him.

One thing that may slow him up in his progress from this point is being overweight. A too fat baby is likely to have trouble when he starts walking, for his little bones at that stage of development are not strong enough to carry his bulk of flesh easily. He may suffer from bad falls.

Don't worry if your healthy, vigorous child is "unsteady on his pins" at first. He is unsteady because he lacks co-ordination. You do not realize, perhaps how many muscles must work together in the apparently simple process of walking erectly and gracefully. Abdomen, buttock, shoulder, trunk, leg muscles all play their part. When they don't interact smoothly, then you have an uncertain gait.

When it's "Fine Weather for Ducks!"

"Even the weather can upset a man when he feels as I used to do," says Postman Peel. "My system was so sluggish it dragged on me like a ball and chain!"

Yes indeed . . . yet this "ball and chain" feeling, wretched as it is, is very often due only to an insufficiency of bulk in the diet.

Post's Bran Flakes help to prevent it. They provide enough natural bulk in the form of bran to keep the food wastes moving promptly.

"No 'ball and chain' feeling for me now," says Postman Peel, "Wet or fine—rough or smooth—life's worth living. And how I enjoy those Post's Bran Flakes every morning!"

HELP keep your family free from the effects of faulty elimination by serving Post's Bran Flakes regularly. They are so appetizing—so convenient. If this doesn't readily relieve constipation due to lack of bulk it's time to consult a physician.

Canada Will Soon Be Producing Large Quantities of Explosives

Ottawa, Sept. 24 (CP)—In one year Canada will produce more than twice as much explosives as were produced during the entire First Great War, when the present explosives program gets into full swing next year, Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions, said today.

The present chemicals and explosives program involves capital expenditures of $60,000,000 and includes erection of 30 plants, several of which equal the size of any similar plant in the empire today, Mr. Howe said. As this program develops, the Canadian output of explosives will be increased substantially within the next few weeks.

A "very large" shell filling plant is also being constructed at present which will utilize some of the production from the explosives plants. Plans are underway for the further enlargement of the shell-filling capacity of the country.

Mr. Howe added that construction work on all these plants is proceeding well up to schedule and in several instances is considerably ahead of schedule.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop came back from his business trip, ma having liver and onions for dinner to welcome him home, and after dinner pop leened back in his private chair with a cigar and a satisfied expression, saying, This is the life, this is the place, you cant beat home, be it ever so humble.

What's so humble about it? ma said. Were those hotel rooms so much grander and more comfortable for land sakes? she said, and pop said, If there's anything grander and more comfortable than this, lead me to it, all I ask for is the best. And by gollies now that I'm here all the king's horses and all the king's 5th columnists couldn't pry me loose from this chair. This is solid comfort and all the rest is unsubstantial bunk, he said.

And he crossed his legs and puffed big puffs, ma saying, Well I must admit it's a great satisfaction to see a man deep in the full enjoyment of his own home.

That describes me to a tea, pop said. I'm basking, I'm wallowing. I'm sprawling in a field of clover and rolling in a bed of roses. I'm sitting pritty in the pink of condition on top of the best of all possible worlds, and here's where you'll continue to find me through the long languid hours. As the fellow said in the picture, 3 cheers for me, I'm elected, pop said, and ma said, What picture was that, I dont seem to remember it.

It was probably some movie I saw on the road, pop said, and ma said, Well I like that, your whole trip has been one long unbroken succession of movie after movie and here I've practically not seen a picture since you've been gone, and if you dont get up and take me to a picture immeedjitly I'll be furious, and now Willyum I dont want to hear any argument.

You proberly wouldn't hear it anyway, so I wont start it, pop said. The result being they went to the Narcissus.

FIRE DESTROYS SEASON'S CROP

Drive House on Farm of Jetson Brooks, Salmon Point, Burned to Ground

Picton, Sept. 24—A large drive house containing the season's crop of threshed grain and some machinery, was destroyed by fire at the farm of Jetson Brooks, Salmon Point over the weekend. As all the family was away from home at the time the origin of the blaze is unknown. When the fire was first seen by a neighbor, a call was sent to the canning factories at Cherry Valley and East Lake and help from them made it possible to save the barn and house near by. Some machinery and a car was also pulled from the burning building. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

The county council at its September session voted $50 to the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association. Requests were made by Prince Edward County Dairy Instructor, George Sherriff. One hundred dollars was voted to 'C' and 'D' companies of Hastings and Prince Edward regiment, Second Battalion, N.P.A.M., and $25 to the British War Victims Fund being sponsored by the Evening Telegram, Toronto for the relief of those suffering as a result of Nazi raids.

Council declared Friday, Sept. 27th a county holiday in order that the school children might attend Picton fair and take part in the opening parade.

Deputy Reeve Ralph Warren stated that there had been complaints that purchases for the county gaol were not distributed among the merchants as is done with other county institutions and council ordered that this be done in future.

Miss McNeill superintendent, and the graduating class of Prince Edward county hospital entertained friends at a dance at the yacht club house on Friday evening. Tommy Mason's orchestra supplied music. A social time was spent. Graduation is Tuesday evening, Sept. 24th in Picton United Church with four nurses receiving diplomas.

R.C.A.F. Members Attend Wedding

Four members of the R.C.A.F., Trenton, attended the Lockyer-Duetta wedding in Picton United Church Monday and formed a guard of honor as the bridal party left the church Mr. and Mrs. Ray Lockyer and Mrs. William Lockyer of Belleville and Mr and Mrs. C. Clare, Orillia, were also in attendance.

Plan For Fair

A meeting of Prince Edward Co. Agricultural Society was held Monday night to complete plans for Picton Fair on Friday and Saturday this week. President Sam Dodds was in the chair. A letter was read from the R.C.A.F. band of Trenton station, saying they were glad to come to Picton Friday night to give a concert and to assist with the military review being presented by 'C' and 'D' companies of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. Another letter was from Flying Officer Denton Massey of the R.C.A.F., Trenton accepting an invitation to attend the fair Saturday afternoon and give an address. Jack Welsh reported that there was a large entry of horses for Saturday's races. Secretary Finley MacArthur said entries to date indicated a record number. Brian Dodds stated that the midway had contacted him and assured him it would arrive in plenty of time. Alva Bowerman was appointed to be responsible for ticket selling.

Mr. Harry Trebilcock visited his son, Dr. Karl Trebilcock in Hamilton over the week end.

Mrs. H. D. Huff has returned after three weeks spent in Toronto.

W. S. Blakely, former reeve and well known dairyman, is seriously ill.

Prince Edward County council passed a resolution at their last session drawing attention of the Department of Agriculture to the fact that as Prince Edward is an accredited area, the T.B. re-test was long overdue and some action was requested.

Owing to lack of rain the ground is very hard and fall plowing is difficult. Less than usual has been done. Tomatoes are ripening unusually fast and are a poor crop. Many factories worked Sunday as the fruit poured in.

Rev. J. T. E. Blanchard of Bloomfield exchanged pulpits with F. E. Rice of Cherry Valley on Sunday.

AT THE McCARTHY

"I Married Adventure"

Super-charged with thrills and hair-breath escapes from death, set against jungle vistas never before captured by a motion picture camera, and redolent of all the mysterious atmosphere and grandeur of a continent which has never before surrendered its secrets to civilization, Osa Johnson's "I Married Adventure" is now playing its dramatic engagement at the McCarthy theatre.

One of the most unique films in screen history, this exciting new Columbia production is at once a grand piece of entertainment, an authentic record and a monument to the courage of a woman whose entire life has been devoted to exploring the vast unknown regions of the globe.

Strange native rites, horrific battles between jungle beasts, bizarre animals, savage tribes and a fierce struggle for survival folter before the lovely young woman explorer's camera in a multi-colored kaleidoscope that is life on the Dark Continent.

McCarthy-Fox, latest news events, an all star comedy "Blamed for a Blonde" and a musical cartoon "Dog in a Mansion" completes the program presented in advance of the splendid feature "I Married Adventure."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Ski Patrol"

Derived from newspaper headlines and from natural dramatic possibilities of ski warfare, Universal's "Ski Patrol" opens at the Capitol next for one day only, matinee and evening.

Played by a well-rounded cast, the film exacts moving drama and furious action from the unique and tragic situation of soldiers on skis defending their homeland against an overwhelming force using the most modern war equipment.

Show Ski Marathon

The story begins with a running of an Olympic Games ski marathon. One of the contestants returns to his home, to be called to war and placed in charge of a regiment of his townsmen posted in a dug-out on a strategic mountaintop.

All the rigors and dangers of mountain war in deep snow are unfolded as the small force strives desperately to defend its post against formidable odds. Mine explosions, avalanches which wipe out whole armies, maneuvers by parachue machine-gunners and other action sequences are shown.

Register Effectively

Philip Dorn, Dutch star of European films, is impressive as a young lieutenant with the ski troops. Luli Deste provides both romantic and dramatic interest opposite Dorn and others who register effectively are Samuel S. Hinds, Stanley Fields, Edward Norris, Hardie Albright, John Qualen, John Arledge, Christian Rub, Kathryn Adams, beautiful newcomer, is a distinct hit.

A select group of short subjects completes this single day bill.

AT THE BELLE

"I Love You Again"

Hitting an all time high for the number of laughs per second, "I Love You Again," co-staring William Powell and Myrna Loy is now playing at the Belle.

Taking a new turn, inasmuch as no "This Man" mystery or tactics are involved, the story deals with the plight of a man who suddenly recovers from an eight-year attack of amnesia only to discover that he has acquired a new personality, a wife, a bank account, a spotless reputation in the town of Habersville and the manager's berth in a large pottery works.

The fact that he decides to use all of these facts in returning to his former business of being a high-class crook, makes for the fastest, funniest, laugh-packed entertainment of many a moon.

Powell has never turned in a more amusing performance. His actions, early in the film before he shakes his amnesia, bring him before the public in new type of characterization. He is stuffy, egotistical, a complete teetotaler and a downright bore. Seeing the immaculate Mr. Powell in stiff collars, tight trousers, linen cape and frowsy moustache, is an experience in itself.

As the wife, Myrna Loy will add new fans to her already large congregation. She isn't the to be expected "perfect wife," in this one. Quite to the contrary. Instead of chasing after her husband, he is forced to chase after her. Not only is she getting a divorce, but her next husband is already chosen. The strong supporting cast turns in top performances. Frank McHugh, as Powell's buddy, "Doc" Snyder, outdoes himself. Edmund Lowe is a convincingly slick oil promoter, Donald Douglas a model young man who gives Powell competition for Miss Loy's affections, and Nella Walker a good example of a too understanding mother-in-law. The film was directed by Hollywood's leading hit maker W. S. Van Dyke II.

A bimetallic disk has been invented to be mounted on an automobile generator shaft to interrupt the charging current a few degrees below the danger temperature.

A Salute to Your Newsboy

With the minute or two that we have left, I'd like to say a word on behalf of the nation's smallest business man . . the thousands of little newsboys who get up before daylight each morning in all kinds of weather to deliver their papers to our doorsteps . . . who hurry off to school, and, after lessons are over . . again cover the miles along the routes to deliver their evening papers.

"It isn't so bad in summer, but winter days often find them beating their small ways through storm and sleet hunching their little shoulders deep in their sweaters and windbreakers . . . plodding along through all sorts of weather. They have to be careful to put the paper where rain and snow will not reach it. They must deliver on time, so their customers won't complain of poor service.

And often, as one Mother writes, these lads are compelled to call on subscribers again and again, in order to collect the small sum out of which they reap a still smaller profit.

"It isn't difficult to lay aside the few pennies due our newsboys so we'll have the right change handy when he taps cheerfully at the door . . . but often we forget. It doesn't seem important to us . . . the amount is so small but it is important to these hardworking little merchants . . . young and faithful, who walk many miles each day to serve us. So I know you'll forgive me for reminding you of these fine boys who deserve all the encouragement we can give them.

"I know you won't fail the little business man . . . who never fails you!"

Title for American League Will be Decided by Series Between Top Teams on Fri.

Cleveland and Tigers Have Yet Three Games to Play

YANKS STILL IN

Cincinatti Reds, Champions of National Loop, Overpowered by the Pirates 12-9

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The American League, trying to find the longest way to the right answer, will get down to business again today.

Baseball's hottest pennant scramble in years was interrupted yesterday by an open date in the schedule and will meet a similar fate Thursday. In the meantime Detroit Tigers have two games on tap with Chicago White Sox and Cleveland Indians must meet St. Louis Browns twice.

No matter how any of these games come out, the championship can't be decided before Detroit and Cleveland resume their fight at Cleveland Friday.

And all the time the struggling New York Yankees will be holding on to that slender mathematical life line hoping for a chance to squeeze through with at least a tie. They have eight games left to play with Washington and Philadelphia, and had better win them all, or at least seven out of eight.

In the National League the champion Cincinnati Reds were overpowered by Pittsburgh Pirates 12-9 yesterday and the nine-game winning string of relief pitcher Joe Beggs was broken. The usually light-hitting Reds made 17 hits.

Rookie Gains First Victory

Some of the best baseball came in a doubleheader between Boston Bees and Phillies. Rookie Johnny Podgajny of Philadelphia got his first Major League victory 6-2 with six-hit pitching in the first game. Manuel Salvo allowed only nine, two of them home runs by Catcher Ben Warren of the Phils. In the nightcap Tom Earley of the Bees pitched three-hit shutout ball to best Hugh Mulcahy 8-0.

Claude Passeau allowed only four safeties and hit one of four Chicago home runs to lead the Cubs to a 10-0 whitewashing over St. Louis Cardinals. A ninth-inning home run by Dolph Camilli gave Brooklyn Dodgers a 3-2 decision over New York Giants. Tex Carleton got credit for the victory by pitching two-thirds of an inning and earned it. He stopped a Giant threat in the ninth with an unassisted double play with the bases loaded, catching a pop fly and racing to first.

BRITISH COLUMBIA DEFEATS ONTARIO

Junior All-Stars from East Lose First Game for Lacrosse Title by 16-13 Count

Vancouver, Sept. 24.— (CP) — British Columbia All-Stars defeated Ontario All-Stars 16-13 here Monday in the first game of a best of five series for the Canadian Junior Lacrosse championship and the Minto Cup. Second game will be played at New Westminster Wednesday.

The Western Canada Stars, including 10 players from last year's provincial champions at New Westminster, two from Victoria and a like number from Richmond municipality and Vancouver, grabbed a lead in the first quarter which they never relinquished. They netted four goals in each quarter.

The Ontario juniors, picked from Orillia Baby Terriers, Mimico, St. Catharines and Brampton, displays smartness on the floor but had a hard time getting past Goalie Kingsley Crick in the British Columbia net.

Jimmy Lang, Royal City star and Bill McCaghey, Victoria winger, turned in smart performances, with the former netting six goals and the latter four. Ontario's markers were divided with Mike Cunningham, Bob Goldham, Red Hewitt, Jack Gair and Jim Carswell, each scoring twice.

49,200 Tons Shipping Sunk by Axis Powers In Week Ending Sept. 16

London, Sept. 24 (CP)—Germany and Italy sank 49,200 tons of merchant shipping in the week ending Sept. 16, the Admiralty reported today, compared to an average weekly total loss of 54,223 tons.

Britain lost nine ships, the allied powers four and neutrals three, the Admiralty said. Germany claimed to have sunk 128,350 tons during this period, it added.

German losses up to Sept. 22 were given as approximately 1,043,000 tons and Italian as 291,000 tons.

In addition, "some 33,000 tons of ex-neutral ships" have been sunk, the Admirlaty added.

By "ex-neutral ships" the Admiralty said, it mean vessels belonging to former neutrals.

OSHAWA BOXER EARNS DRAW

New York, Sept. 24 (CP)—Al Delaney, Oshawa, Ont., veteran and Bill Poland, New York, drew in an eight-round slugging match at the St. Nicholas Palace last night. The Canadian weighed 189, Poland 193.

Delaney, a hard-hitting heavyweight who has met them all from champion Joe Louis to Bob Pastor, was down for a count of three in the first round but came back strongly while Poland tired near the finish.

PITCHING EDGE MUST BE GIVEN CINCINNATI REDS

Derringer and Walters Will Have Long Rests Before Entering Series

FELLER IS TIRED

Detroit Would Have Best Staff if They Make the World's Series

By GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press-Sports Writer

New York, Sept. 24—(AP) — Cincinnati Reds, with Paul Derringer and Bucky Walters rested and full of purpose, must be conceded the pitching edge over either Detroit Tigers or Cleveland Indians —whichever they tackle in the world series next week.

Some might like to argue the point, particularly those who regard young Bob Feller of the Indians as the greatest pitcher in the game today. Yet the fact seems fairly obvious, considering all the factors.

For the first time in many a year, the National League race was decided in time to give its champions a breathing spell. Walters and Derringer should be at the peak of their ability.

The Cleveland and Detroit mound staffs are bound to feel the strain of their present tense fight for the flag. With the exception of Feller, they are not youngsters, either. Tommy Bridges of the Tigers, perhaps the club's greatest "money" pitcher, is approaching his 35th birthday.

Cincinnati has won two straight National League pennants on the strength of superb mound work.

If the Reds suddenly were to be deprived of this pitching superiority there wouldn't be much sense in their playing a world series. For the Tiger and Indian sluggers would have an enormous advantage over the Reds in a sheer test of hitting.

The American League winners can count on facing Derringer in the first game, Walters in the second, Junior Thompson in the third, and then back to Derringer. They are three fine righthanders. And the Reds have the National League's best relief man in Joe Beggs.

Against this array Cleveland offers the phenomenal young Feller, who hurled one no-hitter this season and barely missed a couple more, and Al Smith and Al Milnar, a brace of winning southpaws.

Feller is a youngster without world series experience, and the National Leaguers beat him in the all-star game at Tampa last spring. As for Smith and Milnar, they are lefties, and the Reds are a right-hand hitting ball club.

Detroit, ready to work for Tommy Bridges, Lynwood Rowe and Bucky Newsom in blazing succession, comes nearer matching Cincinnati's pitching balance than does Cleveland. Newsom is one of the year's great pitchers. Bridges, a durable veteran, won three world series games while losing only one for Detroit in 1934-'35. Rowe, a right-hander like the other two, has made the year's finest comeback after a spell in the minors.

Fritz Hanson Stars Against Concordia

Winnipeg, Sept. 24.— (CP) — Fritzie Hanson, star halfback with Winnipeg Blue Bombers last season, came out of self-imposed retirement in dazzling fashion last night to help bombers smother Concordia College Cobbers 37-8 in an exhibition football match.

Early in the second quarter of the game, played under American rules, the speedy back raced 50 yards for a touchdown the first time he handled the ball. His score came after the bombers went out in front 10-0 in the first quarter on a touch and field goal by Art Stevenson and a convert by Greg Kabat.

Pugnacious Greek Grappler Maintains Undefeated Record In City by Earning a Draw

George Pavish and Jack Samson Each Secure Fall in the Main Bout

PRELIMS GOOD

Valdez and Allen Put on Good Exhibition but the Mexican Shows a Little More Class

George Pavich, that pugnacious Greek grappler, retained his undefeated record in a Belleville ring at the Hume Arena last night, but it took a lithe little lad from Hamilton by the name of Jack Samson to humiliate the towering villainous Greek when the two main-bouters wrestled to a draw in the main bout of the night's three-bout card, each contestant gaining one fall before the bell sounded for the completion of the full hour wrestling.

However, it was not the main bout that stole the night's performance, but rather the curtain-raiser, that saw Pedro Valdez, the agile Mexican grappler of parts, fight to a draw with Jimmie Allen, the former Canadian amateur welterweight champion who was appearing in his initial professional appearance. This bout was productive of 30 minutes of clean fast unadulterated wrestling with the continuance of orthodox grappling hold being applied by the contestants in a draw fight, that brought the applause of the patrons and the demand for a return engagement.

In the early part of the bout the fans favored the better-known Valdez, but as Allen continued to ply his trade in a true sportsman-like manner, the fans cheered lustily in his favor as the scrap ended in a draw.

Tom George Too Rough

Tom George proved too rough and pugnacious for Jack Pavlos in the semi-final bout and won both falls in succession, George bounced Pavlos off the ropes for a press in the first round and then roughed matters with continued knee and fist attacks to win the second drop in jig time with a press.

From the out-set in the main bout it was evident that Jack Samson who has taken up residence in Hamilton lately and had agreed to meet George Pavish here last night, was in for a real old-fashioned going over as Pavish out-weighed Samson in the main scrap by fully 40 pounds. However, the blondehaired Samson proved more agile and interspersing fights between Referee Cliff Faux and Pavish, Samson gained the initial fall as the lighter Hamilton grappler applied some of Pavish's tricks to lower him with a mid-rib punch and win with a double armlock and press after 31.19 minutes in the first round.

Early in the fight it was hard to ascertain whether or not Pavish had signed to battle Samson or Arbiter Faux, as exchange of fisticuffs was seen among all three, with Pavish attacking Samson and Faux singly and at times in a ganging act. Pavish slugged Samson with kidney punches and a "back-breaker" hold in the second round and won quickly as he literally illegally pounded Samson into submission.

Exchange of Punches

The third round saw nothing except an exchange of punches, the majority being of the illegal nature, between Pavish and Samson and occasionally Pavish and Referee Faux. Several times Pavish seemed to be in agony, but after the show was all over and time had been called indicating a draw fight, Pavish was called upon to battle his way to the dressing room as the patrons took a hand and made matters rather embarrassing for the pugnacious Greek. However, Pavish, being an old campaigner, remained cool, calm and collected inside of the squared circle until the irritated fans had cooled off and allowed him to continue to the dressing room unmolested.

All members of His Majesty's forces were admitted free to last night's wrestling show, while S. R. "Sandy" Burrows, owner of the Hume Arena, personally invited the officers and members of the Argyll Light Infantry and 34th Battery as his guests last night. Professional wrestling will continue at the Hume Arena next week.

Lex Cook

Playing Coach Lex Cook, who led Lakeshore Blue Devils to the Allan Cup last season, will this year act as player-coach of Cornwall Flyers. Cook is expected to play defence for Cornwall as he did for his Lakeshore huskies.

Pace and Salica To Fight for Title

New York, Sept. 24 (CP)—Georgie Pace of Cleveland and Lou Salica of New York meet tonight at the Coliseum to fight for the empty honor of becoming undisputed bantamweight champion.

Each has a claim on the title Sixto Escobar gave up because it couldn't support him. Pace was recognized as champion when Escobar refused to meet him and Salica who won the title from the Puerto Rican in 1935 and lost it back to him, drew the award of the New York State Commission. Both bodies have agreed to recognize tonight's winner as the titleholder.

Comiskey Figures How to Beat Baer

Jersey City, N.J., Sept. 24—(AP)—If Madcap Maxie Baer obliges with his usual gags and patter, Patrick Edward Comiskey, the big kid with the over-hanging jaw, has it all figured out how he's going to give the folks two shows for the price of one in their fight Thursday night.

Pat explained today as he put the finishing touches on his heavy work. "First I'm going to let Max go all through his clowning and his gags and comedy for a couple of rounds. Then, when he's all done, we'll start fighting.

"This may delay my putting him to sleep for awhile, but the ladies and gentlemen won't have too long to wait. Roughly, I guess I'll knock him out in five or six rounds".

This kid, who won't be 20 until next month, has it all planned how he'll have a few more fights over the winter and then knock Joe Louis' ears down some time next summer.

Of course, it's going to take more than conservation to dispose of Baer. Fresh from his knockout win over the over-stuffed Tony Galento, Maxie should have the confidence so vital to his fighting ways, especially since he looks on Pat as a "young punk".

GORDON McCLEAN WINNER OF MATCH BY ONE STROKE

36-HOLE MATCH

McClean's Approaching and Putting Wins — Knox Shows Powerful Driving

Carding a par-72 for the first 18 holes, Gordon McClean of the Rosemount Golf Club in Montreal, won the Canadian Professional Golf Assistants' championship when he defeated Clark Knox, of the Humber Valley Club, Toronto 158 to 159 at the Bay of Quinte Country Club here yesterday.

McClean carded a 2, par for the Country Club course, in the morning session of 18 holes, while Knox trailed seven strokes astern with a 79. In the afternoon, however, Knox weathered some bad luck to gain a stroke in the first nine, but ill-fortune overtook him on the 35th, after McClean had shot out of bounds, and Knox was stymied by a great tree, which he hit twice in a futile effort to blast his way out of a trap. For the afternoon 18 holes Knox carded an 80 to McClean's 86, giving the latter the Canadian Pro. Assistants' gold championship by a scant one stroke. McClean's second nine holes in the morning with a score of 34 was the lowest of the day, two under par.

Knox displayed the most powerful driving seen on a local links in years, but his approach was deplorable at times. Although Knox blasted tee shots for distances upwards to 50 yards in advance to McClean, the latter's approach and putting was deadly once within sinking distance of the cup. Knox, however, ran afoul of lady luck on more than one occasion, but came back strongly to force the new champion into three putts before he sank the final putt in the 36th hole.

The individual scores were:

McClean:
454255364	38
363245452	34
434366544	41
455474475	45

Knox:

Baltimore Orioles Defeat Newark 6-2

Newark, N.J., Sept. 24 (AP) — When Baltimore Orioles are hitting they can put the same kind of pressure on opposing pitchers that the Yankees used to use in their marches to the world championship.

Young Steve Peek, who had won 14 consecutive games for Bears, couldn't stand up under the pressure last night in the first game of the best-of-seven final series. He was blasted for nine hits in 5 1-3 innings and the Bears took a 6-2 drubbing.

Roy Bruner, who had lost five regular season games to the Bears, came through with one of his best performances, a seven-hit, eight-strikeout affair. The only runs off him were homers by Bud Metheny and Leo Nonnenkamp that tied the score in the fourth.

OPEN O. R. F. U. OCT. 5

Toronto, Sept. 24 (CP)—Opening of the Ontario Rugby Football Union's season has been fixed for Oct. 5 and officials here today reminded those entering intermediate and junior clubs that entries must be in by the end of this week. A number of military units have signified their intention of playing this year.

Don Crowe, stocky passing, running and kicking star of Peterborough Orfuns in the Senior Ontario Rugby Football union last season, will this year wear the Double Blue of Toronto Argonauts in the Big Four. Peterborough has no senior team this year and the Argonaut backfield should benefit from Crowe's inclusion.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

"Well, if we can win 'em all like that we'll be provincial champions without a struggle," was the only comment Skipper "Doc" Empson had to make when he was informed that the Port Hope "Ontarios" could not continue in the intermediate O.B.A. playdowns owing to some of their players being employed in factories where war work comes before baseball. A. L. Brown, O.B.A. convener and Secretary of the Lake Shore League, notified the "Combines" that Port Hope had disbanded for the remainder of the season as it was impossible to field a team under the prevailing conditions.

Naturally Skipper Empson and his South Hastings nine were disappointed, despite the fact they are now in the Intermediate O.B.A. semi-finals as the result of the Port Hope decision. "We have not played a game in ten days and no doubt it will be another week before we'll get into action now," lamented Manager Empson as he intimated a series with Port Hope would have been most acceptable.

There are two-age-old axioms for good golf; one is "keep calm" and the other "don't press." Yesterday we saw these two axioms put into practice when Gordon McClean, of the Rosemount Golf Club, defeat Clark Knox, Humber Valley Toronto professional at the Bay of Quinte Country Club. The boys were playing for the Canadian Professional Golfers' Assistant's championship, which McClean won by one stroke, 159 to 158. Knox possessed a powerful drive, actually he got more distance than any golfer to play locally in years, according to Bill Little pro. at the Country Club, but McClean kept cool and was deadly with his approaches and putts. The boys had a fairly good gallery of local golf enthusiasts for their 36 holes of medal play, which saw McClean nine up following the first 18 holes as the score stood 72 to 79, McClean shooting a par for the course in the morning which included five birdies. On the 35th hole, however, McClean went out of bounds for a penalty of two strokes and it looked as though Knox might come through, but he elected to drive through a large maple tree, instead of playing safe for a par and the match was over.

Do you remember when Frank (King) Clancy, who starred on the defence for Ottawa Senators and Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League for more than 10 years, was appointed coach of the Montreal Maroons three years ago today. The colorful Clancy was unable to improve the Maroons and he lasted less than half the season with them.

Eddie Schrieder was prevailed upon to return and coach the Collegiate football squad another season. Coach Schrieder headed the "tricolor" to a Bay of Quinte interscholastic title in his first year at the helm last season and was more out-lucked than out-played when eliminated by Peterboro in a sudden death game at Port Hope in the C.O.S.S.A. playdowns last fall. However, Coach Schrieder will have a much tougher job on his hands this fall as four of his ace backfielders will be among the missing when the season's initial practice is called this afternoon.

When it came down to unadulterated wrestling the opening bout between Pedro Valdez and Jim Allen was so far ahead of the other two alleged scraps that it wasn't even funny. Allen, the former Canadian welterweight amateur champ, gave Valdez a real ring argument in a bout that saw a continuance of legitimate wrestling holds displayed throughout. The fans appreciated this style of wrestling and demanded a return bout. In the main bout it was hard to tell just exactly who George Pavish was billed to fight, his opponent Jack Samson, or referee Cliff Faux. When Pavish wasn't punching Samson about and bringing the wrath of the patrons upon his head with his unorthodox methods, he was slapping arbiter Faux, none of which added to the prestige of the game. However, there is a movement afoot to induce Al Dunlop to come to Belleville and really take care of the pugnacious Pavish, which wouldn't be a bad idea, according to the fans. The gesture of the Hume arena in inviting the Argyll Light Infantry in as their guests last night was just another fine effort on the part of Owner Sandy Burrows.

If last night's two main bouts were the best the heavyweights can produce in the matter of professional grappling, then it might be a good idea to take a leaf out of the smaller men's book and match the lighter grapplers. The Allen-Valdez go last night put the heavies to shame and with men like Tiger Daniels ('member the crowd-baiter from Regina) and other lighter men available from northern New York and Michigan, why not revert to their style of wrestling for a show or two and let the patrons be the judge. When it was announced that Allen and Valdes would be brought back for a semi-final attraction next week, the Hume Arena patrons applauded lustily indicating their approval of such matches.

All of that good football equipment owned by the Sarnia Imperials has been given away gratis and without strings, which might mean the passing of the fall classic from the Tunnel Town. The Imperials outfitted a team in Camp Borden and another military squad stationed at Listowel, which is a splendid patriotic gesture on the past of the old Imperials.

SPORT SPICE—Oshawa must win today's senior ball game versus Toronto to take the Inter-city ball loop title.....The American League clubs had an off days yesterday as the clubs were on the move, however, today they start their respective second to last series with the curtain ringing down on Sunday....The junior loop has had a marvelous season at the turnstiles, actually the best in the league's 40 years of existence....Naturally the torrid race set in the league all season is the answer to an increased gate of over one million in excess to 1939, with Detroit leading the league, the attendance at slightly over the 1,000,000 mark ....It's Aylmer at Cobourg in the Intermediate "A" finals on Wednesday afternoon, in case you're interested, Aylmer winning the first game of the series 4-3.... Claude Passeau of the Chicago Cubs, tallied up his 20th win of the season yesterday, which is something in the matter of hurling in any man's league.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

Berlin Defences Much Stronger Airmen Report

London, Sept. 24 (CP)—Reports by Royal Air Force pilots who have taken part in recent raids on Berlin confirm the general impression that defenders of the German capital have been strengthened greatly.

The Captain of one raiding aircraft reported that Berlin is well defended by heavy guns, working in close co-operation with searchlights.

Despite this, the pilot succeeded in reaching his target, on which he saw several of his bombs burst. A few minutes after his first bomb had fallen there was a fierce explosion followed by a big fire.

Another pilot encountered anti-aircraft fire on his way to Berlin but "the reception was lukewarm compared with that which we received as we approached Berlin.

"Visibility was good, and with the aid of the city's lakes it was quite easy for us to pin-point our position. On reaching our target we went straight in and dropped our bombs in a long stick.

"They were all seen to burst in the target area, and some of them caused a big explosion, followed by a fire, which was visible some miles away. While we were attacking we saw bombs from another aircraft bursting on the target, almost at the same time as ours."

The Captain of another aircraft arrived over his objective at midnight and found that batteries of searchlights and anti-aircraft guns were concentrated on other machines attacking from a much greater height.

"We came down a few thousand feet," he reported, "and decided to attack while the ground defences were preoccupied with the aircraft above us. Several of our bombs hit a large building which burst into flames and later was seen to collapse.

After we had released our bombs the ground defences began to concentrate on us but we put the aircraft into a steep dive and then climbed rapidly. Luck was on our side and we missed, not only the A.A. fire but the searchlights as well."

HEROIC SCOUT PRAISED BY EVACUEE GIRL

Sunderland, England, Sept. 24—(CP Cable)—Eleanor Wright, survivor of the Canada-bound child evacuee ship sunk by the Germans, brought to her mother today a story of the heroism of George Crawford, Sunderland Boy Scout who gave his life to save a small Londoner.

"Mummy, George Crawford was a hero," Eleanor said. "When the boats were lowered in the rough sea a little boy from London named Walder fell into the water. George leaned over the side and caught hold of him. After he dragged him to safety George lost his balance and fell into the sea. I saw him no more."

Battle Creek, Mich. (CP)—White-haired 72-year-old John W. Westervelt, a private at Camp Custer, believes he is the United States Army's oldest soldier still in active service.

IN MEMORIAM

BENN — In loving memory of our dear husband and father, William Benn, who passed away one year ago, September 24, 1939.

Softly the stars are gleaming upon a quiet grave,
Where one we loved is sleeping,
One we loved but could not save.
More and more each day we miss him.
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But little they know the sorrow
That lies within our hearts concealed.
He is gone but is not forgotten,
Never will his memory fade;
Loving thoughts will always linger
Round the grave where he is laid.

—Sadly missed by Wife, Sons and Daughters. S24-1t

BALLOON CREWS COMPLIMENTED

London, Sept. 24 —(CP)— The men who operate London's "fat friends"—the barrage balloons—were commended today by Air Chief Marshal Sir Cyril Newall for "invaluable" services upon whose success he said "the safety of the entire country depends." He expressed "admiration for the splendid way the crews have performed their duties."

U.S. AID TO BRITAIN SHOULD BE SPEEDED

New York, Sept. 24 —(CP)— The New York Times, in a lengthy editorial captioned "Aid for Britain Now," said today that United States aid to Britain should be speeded, "not next spring, nor after the election, but now."

R.C.A.F. PLANE TURNS OVER

Parry Sound, Ont., Sept. 24 (CP).—A Royal Canadian Air Force plane overturned ten miles north of here today when it made a forced landing in a field due to a shortage of fuel. The occupants, Sqdn. Ldr. W. J. McFarlane of Ottawa, and Sgt. C. Cunningham, escaped with bruises. The plane was enroute from Ottawa to Vancouver.

Cleveland Indians' manager, Oscar Vitt, can well smile as he talks over the American League pennant chase with Bobby Feller, for flag or over the hot American league pennant chase with Bobby Feller, for flag or no flag, Feller is the Tribe's payoff pitcher. The fire-baller has held the Indians up throughout the season and in the stretch drive it was still Feller's fire-ball that carried most of Cleveland's hopes.

Jack Dempsey, their dad, and former world's heavyweight champion, is the favorite "steed" of Joan, 6, and Barbara Dempsey, 4, when they want to go for a canter. The old Manassa Mauler of the ring may be found romping in Central Park, New York, most any nice day and the kids love it.

CINCINNATI

Johnny Vander Meer, RIGHT, and Lew Riggs, LEFT, only single men on the lineup of Cincinnati Reds who might be eligible for army draft under the new U.S. conscription law, took time out after a game in Philadelphia to interview Lieut. Here Johnny and Lew are getting the army's viewpoint after the Reds had clinched the National League pennant.

"Flying Blind" by VERA BROWN

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

Judith, once she had made up her mind, set to work. Emma helped Judith pack. Silver her mother and father had given her, linens, a few personal belongings, books, the lamp on her dressing table, a tea set Tex had brought her from Mexico City.

"You shouldn't do this. Suppose Mr. Aimes comes home. You'll just have to unpack."

"No, Emma. I'm not being dramatic. I've thought the whole thing out."

"Why don't you go home to your mother for a while?" Emma suggested soothingly.

"I can't burden them with my troubles. They have enough of their own." When night came, the two women had supper in the kitchen.

Next morning Judith went over to Manhattan to look at rooms. It was a dreary business. But that afternoon, she found a place off Central Park. It was a bedroom in a six-room apartment. The building was not prepossessing. The apartment was built along a long narrow hallway, but the bedroom had two windows and was airy.

Her new landlady hesitated when Judith told her she did not have a job, but smiled when told: "Don't worry. I'll pay a month in advance." It was $20. Judith had about that amount of cash left.

Judith arranged to come the following morning. Then she went on back to Newark. There was still no word from Tex. Emma cried when she saw the face of Mrs. Aimes. Judith slept little that last night in her home.

When she said goodbye to Emma, Judith choked up, especially when the maid said: "If you don't mind, I think I'll stay until Mr. Tex comes home. I really think he will."

"Of course, if you wish. He may need you. He may want to stay on here. Goodbye, Emma."

The taxi was at the door. Judith walked out of the home she had loved without a backward look. In about an hour, via railroad and cab, she reached the rooming house. Now for a new life!

First, Judith telephoned Hugh Lanning. He was not in, but she left her 'phone number and name. Then she settled her clothes and her possessions. Later, she took a stroll in the park. When she returned to the plain room, her gloom grew. . . .

Some time later the telephone rang. Mrs. Wilks called her. It was Hugh whose dinner invitation she gladly accepted. When she met him in a restaurant near his newspaper office, he brought good news.

"I think I've got a job lined up," Hugh announced.

"Marvelous! I need one so badly."

"It won't pay much, not more than $18 a week."

"I can live on that."

"Can you run a switchboard, a small one?"

"I'll learn."

"A lawyer pal of mine needs a telephonist. His reception room girl is leaving on a two months' vacation. You can learn the switchboard in an hour or so. It's a start, anyway. You're to begin next Monday."

He scrutinized Judith's face. "Sure you don't need any money?"

"No thanks, Hugh."

* * *

Judith awaited Monday impatiently. She tried hard to keep busy. From the newspapers she learned Sonia was better. There was no word from husband Tex. Nor from Michael Dudley.

Just to keep busy, Judith cleaned the Wilks apartment thoroughly, from front to back. Wrapped in her landlady's biggest apron, she swept and scrubbed. She was in the midst of her vigorous volunteer work when the doorbell rang. She pushed the buzzer, waited impatiently, trying to wipe a smudge off her nose as she stood in the dark hallway. When she opened the door she gasped.

It was Tex. He did not recognize his wife in the gloom.

"I'm looking for Mrs. Aimes."

"I am Mrs. Aimes." Her voice held laughter which was almost a sob. "Won't you come in?"

"Good Lord! Are you a maid here?"

"Just for the time being."

Tex Aimes followed Judith down the long narrow hall to the living room. She asked, "How did you find me?"

He grinned his old smile: "Lanning told me."

"Not much of a place," he added, looking around.

"No, but it is cheap and clean."

"You can't stay here."

"Why not?"

"People will talk."

"That would be nothing new."

Tex's eyes blazed. Then he slumped into a chair. "I've got a lot of things to say to you."

"I think they should have been said before," Judith countered.

Tex fumbled for words. Plainly he did not know where to start. He found it hard going, and he could not meet her eyes. Finally, he blurted: "Are you going to marry that Dudley guy?"

Judith leaned forward in her chair. Her hands were thrust into the pockets of the big apron. She did not answer that question but she did declare: "Tex, for the first time in our lives, let's be completely honest."

"You always loved making scenes, Judith!" he interjected.

"That won't do this time, Tex. We're going to speak the truth. Why do you think I left you?"

Tex was silent.

"I left you once because you asked for a divorce to marry Sonia. Then I came back. That was the big mistake. I left you now, Tex, because I know it's Sonia you want. I've known for weeks you were seeing her every night. I didn't take this step without doing a lot of thinking. I left because you were no longer happy with me."

His wife watched him almost in unbelief before she said: "I did not give up my husband and my home lightly. You know that."

Judith tried to keep her voice steady and she succeeded. Tex covered his face with his hands. He was having a bad time of it. "Judith! Help me! Will you please help me once more?"

It was his old plea. She could not ignore it even now. "I'll help, Tex, I always have."

"Judith, I want my freedom."

"I know."

"Will you get a divorce?"

Judith shuddered. "I can't, Tex. If you want to get one, I'll make no fuss; I promise to do nothing to stop you. Your life is your own now."

The famous flier did not dare trust his voice to speak, so he motioned for her to come over and sit beside him. Tex clung to both her hands, pleading: "I didn't know I loved her, Judith!" His cry was an appeal for her understanding. "I didn't mean to do this!"

"I know you didn't."

"I thought it was fun at first, Judith. Sonny's fun. We both love flying and she is truly a great flier. She's different, Judith."

His wife did not answer.

"When I thought I liked Sonny too much, I stopped seeing her. Then out west it began all over again. But I came back to you. I thought I should."

His words hurt bitterly, but Judith forced herself to listen quietly.

"Then I couldn't stand it. I had to be free. After that crack-up, I thought you were dead—"

Then he started again. "The night it happened, I waited at the airport and heard Roy reporting in. I thought I couldn't live without you. I wanted you back; honestly I did. I called Sonny and hold her so that night before I even saw you."

His words were almost more than Judith could bear.

"I tried, Judith, but it didn't work. I wanted to make you happy." Tex's voice was husky as he continued: "Then I saw Sonny again. I didn't realise how I'd missed her until I saw her standing there in the door at the Van Mathas party, and I thought I would go mad! I said goodbye to her forever when she went to Europe. But it was no go. I didn't mean to love her! Do you understand?"

"Yes, I understand."

"I'm sorry—." He began to pace the floor. "I'll see you have some money."

"I'm on my own from now on, Tex. I don't want your money."

"My wife can't live in a place like this!" The old Tex blazed up for a moment.

"But I'll not be your wife for long. Remember?"

That seemed to mollify him.

"Sure you'll be OK?"

"Sure!"

Then Aimes left, a load off his shoulders. He went swiftly down the dark stairway like a schoolboy, two steps at a time—going to Sonia, leaving Judith near the open door listening to his retreating footsteps.

* * *

Judith Aimes came out of her office into the spring twilight and Times Square. She had her third week's pay in her pocket. Eighteen dollars. She felt like a millionaire! She liked her job, was proud that she could handle the switchboard and help the regular stenographer with typewriting.

"I'm fine!" she thought as she swung along. Her husband, Tex, was in California. From the newspapers she learned he had fixed up a hospital ship for Sonia, had flown her to the coast. There were photographs of Sonia, the "Flying Beauty"; and of Tex, the "Winged Romeo", beaming his pride.

Hard to take? Of course; Judith admitted it to herself. Nobody in the office knew that she was the famous Tex Aimes' wife. That helped. And she found, as the days went by, she grew less sensitive to the dull pain which had harassed her at first.

Judith loved Times Square at dusk. It never failed to thrill her. She walked slowly for the rush of [illegible] Home once meant Tex to Judith.

There was an ache in her heart as she remembered Tex's gay smile, her laughter. She hoped he would be happy. But she wondered. . . . Somehow she feared for him.

"He's bound for tragedy," she mused, "and I feel responsible".

It seemed to her incredible that only four years ago she had married Tex with such high hopes. It would take time to forget.

But just for tonight Judith was determined to be carefree. She walked on up to 48th street, turned toward a small chop house where the steaks were exceptionally good. She's been there with Hugh Lanning, the newspaperman. At the corner she bought a newspaper. She could read as she ate and feel less self-conscious.

Seated in the chop house, Judith ordered; then buried herself behind the newspaper. . . . The news from Europe seemed worse. Air raids threatened. Nations mobilizing fliers . . . that brought thoughts of Tex. She glanced down the page. Her eyes caught a headline below the fold of the paper:

ACE GOES TO RENO.

So that was where he was. In forty-two days, the paper said, he would be free. And pretty Sonia Winthrop, "Flying Beauty", flew over every day from Glandale to visit him.

She put the paper down hastily. It was too late to countermand her order. Besides, what did it matter? She had known this would happen. Maybe it was better to get things settled. When her food came, she found to her amazement that she could eat.

"Judith, what are you doing here?"

She started at the sound of her name. It was Hugh. He grinned down at her: "You look in the pink. You don't seem to be pining. For a woman whose husband is divorcing her, you seem to be able to meet a steak with gallant gusto!"

Judith laughed. "Disgraceful, isn't it? I just learned the news, as a matter of fact." She pointed to the folded paper.

"May I eat with you?"

"Please do, Hugh."

"How's the job? I meant to call you last week."

"It's fun, Hugh. Really. I'm terribly grateful. I hope they like me."

"They will."

The newspaper columnist was in a gay mood and kept Judith laughing with his cheerful small-talk.

"I'm going to move right in, now that Tex is on his way." Below his banter there was a note of seriousness which Judith tried not to recognise. "I warn you, Judith!"

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 24 (CP)—Base metals, golds and western oils continued on a firm basis during the early afternoon session on the Toronto market today and most of the morning gains were held while some were improved upon. Industrials continued in dull trade and although there was a slackening of trading pace shortly after the noon hour, volume at one o'clock totalled 163,000 shares, 79,000 ahead of yesterday's turnover at the same hour.

Best gain in the noon indices was shown by the base metals group. Pend Oreille was holding an earlier 20-cent gain in mid-afternoon and Waite Amulet was ahead 15 cents. Nickel was unchanged after having eased fractionally at the opening and Aldermac, Smelters and Noranda held fractional advances.

Home Oil was a feature of the Westerns and moved in wide range. After hitting a morning high of 2.09, up 14 cents, it backed to 2.01 and in the early afternoon rebounded to 2.07. Calgary and Edmonton, Okalta and Anglo-Canadian, continued on the firm side. Golds mostly held their morning advances but a few continued improving. Malartic gold fields, down at noon, reversed its trend and got up to 1.14, up 2 cents on the day.

Preston, Pickle Crow, East Malartic and Aunor all continued into higher ground.

Industrials were in dull trade with not much change in the index. Senior oils were about the firmest group.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 24. — (AP) — Profit selling interrupted the rallying swing of the stock market today although Wall Street still leaned toward the bullish side.

Prices, up moderately at a fast opening, soon began to give ground and dealings slowed. While plus signs were plentiful, losers of fractions to a point or so were a shade in the majority near the fourth hour.

Canadian Pacific, among Canadian issues, dipped 1-4 point while Dome Mines and Hiram Walker held unchanged. Canada 4s, in the Bond Market, advanced 1-4 cent.

Stocks inclined to back away occasionally included Bethlehem Steel, Douglas Aircraft, Chrysler, N.Y. Central, American Locomotive preferred, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak, Western Union and N.Y. Central.

Resistan were Phelps Dodge, General Motors, American Can., Pennsylvania and some preferred issues of Pittsburgh Steel and Otis Steel.

Trading Quiet In Produce Lines

Toronto, Sept. 24—Quiet trading prevailed for all lines on the Toronto open produce market and an easier tone in eggs was reported.

Slow buying, the appearance of some storage stocks for sale and a lower Montreal market, combined to impart an easier undertone to the egg market. The only price change, however, was the one cent per dozen reduction in the two top grades in the graded section.

Although dealings were dull, continued light receipts kept the butter market steady. No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids sold at the previous level of 23 1-2 cents per pound.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Sept. 24 (CP).—Produce market prices here, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 24 1-2c to 25c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 24c to 24 1-2c.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, Sept. 24. —(CP)—All classes of livestock were steady on Montreal markets today, the Dominion Agriculture Department reported.

Receipts: Cattle 106, calves 343, sheep and lambs 391 hogs 1,037.

A few good cows made $5.50 with medium kinds at $4.50 to $5.25 and common butchers down to $3.75. Canners and cutters brought $2 to $3.50 and common bulls mostly $3.50 to $4.

Veal calves ranged from $7 to $10.50 with a few tops at $11. Medium veals sold from $9 up. Drinkers made $5.50 to $7 and grassers from $4 to $5 majority around $4.75 to $5.

Good ewes and wethers went for $8.50 buck lambs $7.50 and culls $6.50. Sheep ranged from $3.50 to $5 with a few yearlings up to $6.

Bacon hogs, fed and watered made $9.15 and up to $9.35 off trucks. Hogs sold on rail grade brought $12.20 hot weight. Selects drew 1 premium with the regular cuts on off grades. Sows were from $5.50 to $6.30.

Toronto, Sept. 24 (CP)—Cattle trade was very dull up to mid-session on the Livestock Market with prices 25 cents lower on weighty steers and about steady on other grades. The veal calf market was easier. Lambs and sheep were steady. No price was established for hogs. Leftover from Monday was 3,000 head of cattle.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 1,030, calves 570, hogs 1,210, sheep and lambs 860. A few weighty steers brought $7-$8.10. Butcher steers and heifers sold at $6-$8 with some boners at $5-$5.50. Butcher cows were sold at $4-$5.25. A few bologna bulls sold at $4-$4.50. Fed calves traded at $8.50-$10.50, stockers were slow at $5.30-$7-10.

Veal calves sold at a general top of $11 for choice with a few at $11.50 and common selling downward to $8.50.

Lambs sold at $8.75-$9.25 for good ewes and wethers with bucks at $8-$8.50.

Sheep sold at $3-$6.

Hogs closed previously at $9-$9.10 off-trucks for bacons and $12-$12.25 dressedweight.

BRITISH FIGHTERS

The R.A.F. attack on Berlin was so planned that the planes went out and returned at regular intervals "like well organised trains", the commanding officer of one large airdrome said.

Large Fires Started

The Air Ministry indicated in a special news bulletin that the first strong raiding force left Berlin's main power station and gas works flaming beacons to guide the latter arrivals.

"One aircraft alone started large fires which were visible 80 miles away", the bulletin said.

"We must have hit the gas works fair and square", a pilot remarked as he landed. "Our bombs started another line of fires and then a fire in the middle of the target caused a gigantic explosion".

After striking at the power works, the fliers swerved to the east to bomb a railway junction, said the bulletin. Pilots also reported that a large fire was burning steadily in the area of the B.M.W. airplane engine factory after incendiaries were dropped. The Siemens cable works also was set on fire, they said.

Correspondents along the coast reported seeing German and British planes throughout the night and in the early daylight hours in ceaseless patrols over the invasion "danger zone".

During the hours of darkness relays of German planes streaked across for the 17th consecutive dusk-to-dawn attack on London and raids in the southeast-northwest, the Midlands and Wales.

Dunkerque to Boulogne Bombed

Waves of British planes swept the other way, returning to the aerial pounding of German-held coast bases with bombings which jarred the watchers on the Kent cliffs and lit the distant horizon like heat lightning.

Striking through intense German anti-aircraft fire, the Royal Air Force hammered the French coast from Dunkerque to Boulogne. It was the second successive overnight bombing of the bases where massed ships and barges have been seen and German troops have been reported.

The Air Ministry announced, too, that British bombers in strong force "attacked important military objectives" in Berlin before dawn. The Ministry said "Berlin was heavily bombed."

Night Raiders Held Off

London's own anti-aircraft guns, firing up one of the heaviest barrages of the Battle of Britain, held off most of the overnight raiders from the central part of the city but some big bombs fell in mid-London shortly before dawn.

During most of the night the suburbs were bombed more intensely than central London. The raids on the capital and elsewhere were regarded as somewhat lighter than other recent attacks.

A high explosive bomb struck an office building, smashing through the top two stories. No one was injured. A dozen other heavy explosives and fire bombs fell within a short time in the central city section.

Incendiary Fires Extinguished

Earlier the southwestern edge of the city, a business district in the northwest, and suburbs north of London were bombed. In the business district two banks, a postoffice and an apartment house were damaged. Fires apparently started by a "Molotoff breadbasket" of incendiary bombs were extinguished in a northern suburb.

At Dover, just after dawn, observers reported a smooth sea, rippled only by a gentle southwest breeze. Visibility was good although there was haze along the French side of the strait.

Tonight the channel will be dark from about 8 p.m. until 11:30, when the moon rises.

Today's first raid "alert" in London was brief. It sounded soon after large, heavily escorted formations of German bombers were seen over the southeast coast, flying at 10,000 feet and heading for London.

The Nazi formations ran a gauntlet of heavy anti-aircraft fire, then were beset by defence planes.

Meet Stiff Resistance

The Press Association reported most of them were seen headed back for France, half an hour later, after meeting stiff opposition. One Messerschmitt was trailing smoke and seemed to be losing altitude.

German planes also were reported near a northwest coastal town.

Observers at one southeast coast town estimated that 150 Nazi bombers and fighter planes crossed there in the morning attack.

They returned soon, apparently having encountered terrific anti-aircraft barrages and counter-attacks by British planes.

The Press Association said at least two Nazi bombers were seen diving to the ground with smoke streaming from their tails during a 15 minute free-for-all fight over the Thames estuary. Thirty to 40 high explosive bombs were dropped in that area, causing some damage.

WIDE POLICE HUNT

Walter Kazloski, 63, a roomer at the Borievich home, told police that he answered a knock on the door and admitted a man to the living room where Borievich was sitting. He said he then went to his room and heard Borievich say to the stranger, "Get out of here—I no drink no more."

Severed Jugular Vein

"The man take out a gun and shoot it at Arte", Shazloski said in broken English. "He fire one shot and Arte fall back into the living room".

The bullet severed Borievich's jugular vein. The gunman ran to the street and disappeared across a vacant lot.

Mrs. Emma Irvin told police Borievich, a member of the Canadian Army during the First Great War and who had been receiving treatment recently for war disabilities, collected a $50 pension cheque yesterday and that she accompanied him to a beverage room where they met a man she believed to have been Kluk.

They had a couple of drinks with him, she said, and Borievich invited him to his home, where the two men drank some wine. Later they left the house to purchase more wine but were unable to obtain it and Borievich returned home alone, Mrs. Irvin said. Later, the second man returned to the house and the shooting followed.

Heard a Shot

After the Saturday shooting, Piachtek's wife told police she heard a shot after she heard Kluk express anger. She was in the downstairs part of the house at the time and said she saw Kluk crash through a window and vault over a back fence. She said he came to the house Friday night to renew acquaintance and returned again the following morning.

Many vacant buildings and houses were entered by police with drawn guns during the night in a search for the slayer. Tips of citizens were followed up but without success.

Among buildings searched was one at Spadina Avenue and Front Street. Several officers fell through rotted floors of the long-abandoned building but none was hurt. It was in this building that Frank McCullough, slayer of an acting detective several years ago, hid out after his escape from Don Jail where he was awaiting execution.

Newspapermen See Mock Air Battle Staged by R. C. A. F.

Camp Borden, Sept. 24.—(CP)—A party of American and Canadian newspapermen touring Canadian military establishments left here Monday after being annihilated—theoretically, of course—under the withering fire of the Perth Regiment.

The newspapermen were crossing the rough terrain in a long line of army transports when they were ambushed by the regiment whose Bren guns kept up a sustained fire for several minutes. The visitors were impressed by the fact that their khaki-clad "attackers" had completely concealed themselves in the bushes and trees.

Later they underwent bombardment by the Royal Canadian Air Force which staged a mock air battle that carried with it such realism that live bombs actually were dropped by a section of the raiding force.

The Air Force display marked the largest concentration of planes seen here since the outbreak of the war. Plans of the air battle were simple. Waves of eight medium bombers attacked the airdrome and from a direction not known to the defenders who were for the most part young pilots who expect their wings within a few days

When a scout reported they were coming 29 fighter planes headed for the clouds. Anti-aircraft fire and bursting "shells" made the display realistic. Bombers reached the airport but officers said it is doubtful that they would have in real battle.

Christmas Poultry To be Short in U. K., But Prices Won't Rocket

London, Sept. 24—(CP Cable) — It's still 71 shopping days till Christmas, but Britons learned from the Ministry of Food today that supplies of chickens and turkeys will be short owing to the prohibition of all imports except from Eire.

They drew consolation, however, from an assurance that the government does not intend to allow prices to rocket. Imports are prohibited because shipping space is required for more essential purposes.

PADEREWSKI STARTS ON JOURNEY TO U.S.

Lausanne, Switzerland, Sept. 24 (AP)—Ignace Jan Paderewski, 80-year-old pianist and former Premier of Poland, left by automobile today on the first leg of a journey which will take him to the United States where he hopes to spend the rest of his life. He planned to motor across France and Spain enroute to Lisbon, Portugal, there to sail for New York. He expects to go to his ranch in California. He was accompanied by his sister, a secretary and his chauffeur.

$90,000 DAMAGE TO LAUNDRY SUPPLIES

New York, Sept. 24 (AP)—Here's the net result following a blaze in a Laundry Supply Company building: Damage to the building from the fire: $4,000. Damage to laundry supplies from the water: $90,000.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Berlin today smarted under the lash of the worst air raid it has ever experienced as Britain's Royal Air Force intensified its offensive and defensive operations.

For almost four hours Berliners crouched in their shelters while British bombs crashed into factories, railway facilities and public utility plants in the German capital. The British bombers shuttled back and forth, guided by the light of fires set by the leaders.

The German Air Force sought quickly to retaliate, but the ferocity of the Spitfire and Hurricane defence over England apparently had it on the run almost from the start. Formations of German bombers, escorted by large numbers of fighters were quickly broken up. Some of the machines were seen to fall in smoke and flames while others raced back toward the French coast with the British defenders in hot pursuit.

Situation at Dakar

From the West African Coast at Dakar came confusing reports of hostilities involving free French forces of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, French Colonial defenders of Dakar and units of the British and French navies. The latest word from London said the operations "are still in progress" but did not specify their nature.

The Ministry of Information circulated a bulletin from Gen. De Gaulle saying officers attached to his forces were fired upon when they sought to go ashore at Dakar carrying a flag of truce in an effort to parley with the defenders. Some of them were killed, Gen. De Gaulle's message said, and he withdrew the rest rather than become involved in a fight between Frenchmen.

Stories arose in Vichy, seat of the Petain Government, of British naval units shelling French vessels for hours in Dakar harbor and of British troops seeking to land there, but the British Ministry of Information said no landings were attempted. The stories appeared to be inspired by misinformation spread by the Germans.

Axis Officials Busy.

Considerable scurrying of axis officials seemed to indicate Rome and Berlin are getting ready to spring a diplomatic offensive in an effort to offset their conspicuous lack of recent success in the military field.

Hitler's assault on Britain which he fondly hoped would be irresistible has not come close to having the effect he hoped, while Italy's efforts in the Mediterranean have left much to be desired by their originators.

Italian Push Breaks Down.

Marshal Graziani's attempt to push into Egypt apparently has broken down for the time being at Sidi Barrani where British forces a couple of days ago exploded land mines under Italian troops, polishing off the job they started previously by aerial bombing and gunfire from the sea.

It may be some time before the Italians can reorganize sufficiently to try to resume their eastward push. There is every likelihood, also, that they are beginning to find themselves short of supplies, as they try to ship even water through the British Mediterranean blockade.

Channel Waters Calm.

Cliff watchers in South England reported ideal "invasion" weather over the channel with calm seas, light haze, no wind and a dark night promised between 8 p.m. and 11:30 p.m. when the moon rises.

However, the same watchers last night beheld the satisfactory spectacle of great fires sweeping up along the French coast and felt the force of explosions which jarred them more than twenty miles away as the R.A.F. pounded Nazi "invasion ports".

FREE FRENCH

here it was emphasized that the expedition to the West African port is entirely a free French movement.

It is believed that Dakar will prove to be only the first stage of a carefully planned African campaign which may have an important bearing on the middle east campaign.

No British Landings Attempted

The British Ministry of Information issued a statement saying "there is no truth in reports emanating from Vichy that any British landing at or near Dakar has been attempted."

Among Gen. De Gaulle's ships is the sloop Savorgnan De Brazza, designed for tropical service and capable of carrying mines and a seaplane.

Gen. De Gaulle received information that a number of German officers who flew to Dakar two months ago were accompanied by Nazi fifth column agents.

Believe Nazi Plan Frustrated

Arrival of the free French troops is believed to have frustrated an intended German attempt to control this vital base.

The Press Association said Gen. De Gaulle's troops "must be regarded as of important strength." It described them as "all trained men," reorganized and prepared in England under his own supervision.

"Dakar", said the Press Association, "is a vital strategic centre as well as a terminus for both German and American planes on north and south Atlantic routes. It would play an important part should the axis powers begin any movement in North Africa."

The Ministry of Information said this communique had been received from General De Gaulle's headquarters:—

"Called to Dakar by numerous Frenchmen anxious to continue the fight at his side, General De Gaulle appeared with French soldiers and sailors before the fortress.

(Vichy reports yesterday said De Gaulle was aboard the flagship of the British Naval Force which shelled the French West African port.)

De Gaulle Says Emissaries Are Fired On

"The naval authorities at Dakar ordered fire to be opened on General De Gaulle's emissaries who had come without weapons in a motor launch flying the tri-color and the white flag of Parliamentaries.

"The emissaries were Capt. De Frezate Dargenlieu, Capt. Gotscho, Capt. Beccourt Foch and Capt. Perrin.

"Captains Dargenlieu and Perrin were seriously wounded. Later, Gen. land his troops peacefully, fire was opened by the Dakar authorities on De Gaulle having attempted to the French sloops Savorgnan De Brazza, Commandant Duboc and Commandant Domine.

"Several men were killed and many wounded.

"General De Gaulle then withdrew his troops and ships, not wanting to be a party to a fight between Frenchmen."

Vichy Minister Claims Reprisals

Vichy, France, Sept. 24 (AP) — Admiral Jean Darlan, navy minister in the Petain-Laval government, late today said France had made "reprisals" for an attack on Dakar, Senegal.

"The land, sea and air forces of Africa already have repulsed the landing attempts, inflicting losses on the aggressor warships and launched reprisals," said Darlan in an order of the day.

Although he did not state the nature of the reprisals, it was reported that French planes had bombed Gibraltar.

(Observers of La Linea, Spain, said at least 30 French planes based apparently in French Morocco, had raided the Rock.)

Darlan claimed Dakar was not menaced by any power. (Gen. De Gaulle, leader of the French free forces has stated Germany intends to seize it).

"In trying to occupy this key to the south Atlantic the English are only following their own personal interest," Darlan said. "Our firmness will stop them."

Details Meagre

Details of the Free French action against Dakar were meagre, but it was thought here that the battle was continuing. Whether any landing parties had succeeded in getting a foothold on the mainland was not learned.

Darlan, in his order to the naval forces, said the Petain-Laval government is counting on the "ardent patriotism of the fleet for the defence of the Empire".

The cabinet, meanwhile, was in session under Petain.

A Havas News Agency dispatch said the "Dakar incident" began late Monday morning with the landing of two British planes at Dakar airport.

The pilots were taken prisoner. Then, shortly before 2 p.m., Monday, two launches put out from a British squadron off Dakar, bearing emissaries of Gen. De Gaulle and an ultimatum, the agency claimed. The ultimatum demanded surrender of the capital of French West Africa. Otherwise troops would be landed.

The Dakar high commissioner, Pierre Boisson, returned a negative reply, Havas said, adding that "British warships" opened fire on the town.

Britain Issues Denial.

(In London, Britain officially denied any attempt to force a landing at Dakar and General Charles De Gaulle, leader of "Free French" forces in the expedition, declared his men and ships had withdrawn after his emissaries under a flag of truce had been fired on and several killed.)

Advices from Dakar, capital and chief port of the African colony which the French accuse Britain of trying to seize, said that one French submarine had been hit by a British shell and that a British cruiser had been hit by a French coastal battery.

This report, reaching here at noon, did not tell whether either of the war vessels was heavily damaged.

The first casualty reports put the French dead at "more than 100".

No Confirmation

There was no immediate official confirmation of the report that French planes had raided Britain's rock fortress at Gibraltar, western gate of the Mediterranean.

Besides the land defences at Dakar, French defences include three cruisers and three destroyers which recently arrived from Toulon, France, and have been prevented by the Royal Navy from leaving. They are the Cruisers Montcalm, Georges. Leygues and Gloire and the Destroyers L'Audacieux, Le Malin and Le Fantastique.

French Colonial forces were claimed to have thrown back the British with heavy losses in repelling the main landing attempt at Rufisque Beach, just northeast of Dakar, at about one a.m.

(There were no reports in London of progress of the assault.)

Dispatches from Dakar said the battle, which began yesterday when British naval vessels shelled the city for eight hours, had raged all night in a heavy fog.

No Estimate of Casualties

The dispatches did not estimate the number of casualties.

Government sources said, however, the French were replying to the British "cannon shot for cannon shot" and said all landing attempts would meet fierce resistance.

It was indicated the British operations were aimed at trying to surround the city by land and cut it off from the interior. This move was viewed here as a prelude to an attempt to wrest the entire colony from the Petain regime.

The heavy fog which frequently shrouds the coast at this time of year was said to be hampering movements of the British troopships.

Aboard the transports was a mixed force of British and French troops led by Gen. Charles de Gaulle, who has been condemned to death as a traitor by the Vichy Government for continuing the war against Germany as the self-styled leader of "all free Frenchmen."

Government advices, however, said the British squadron consisted of two battleships, four cruisers, "several" destroyers and six transports.

The bombardment began at 2.15 p.m. yesterday, after Pierre Boisson, Governor General of French West Africa, had refused Gen. de Gaulle's order to surrender.

Among the buildings struck during the firing was the Dakar wireless station but it was reported still functioning.

Answer "Force With Force"

The Vichy government indicated it would resist to the utmost De Gaulle's attempt to line West Africa up with other French colonies continuing the war against Germany and declared it would answer force with force.

It was the second time that Dakar had figured in friction between France and Britain. On July 8 British air and naval forces attacked the new French battleship Richelieu at Dakar to keep her from falling into German hands and the Admiralty later announced she had been put out of action.

Only five days before the British fleet had attacked a French naval squadron off Oran, in the Mediterranean, sinking several war vessels and damaging a number of others.

In addition to providing a base controlling the ocean route between Europe and Brazil, Dakar is important as a railhead communicating with the African interior. It is linked by cable with France.

The city has a population of about 34,000, of whom some 3,000 are whites.

One Transport Landed.

Vichy accounts of today's action said that under cover of heavy gunfire from warships, one transport approached Refisque Bay and anchored shortly before 1:00 a.m.

A landing party of not more than 200 men immediately set out for the shore.

They were met by machine-gun fire and Dakar dispatches said they were forced back to their ship.

Several other less serious attempts to land were warded off by the Dakar forces, said to total four regiments, or 6,000 men.

In a telegram to Governor-General Pierre Boisson of French West Africa, Marshal Philippe Petain said:

"France is following with emotion and confidence your resistance to mercenary treason and British aggression.

"Under your high authority Dakar is showing an example of courage and fidelity. All metropolitan France is proud of your attitude and resolution and of the forces you command. I congratulate you and express my entire confidence."

Spain Reports Attack on Gibraltar

La Linea, Spain, Sept. 24—(CP)—Some 30 French planes, believed to be from French Morocco, were seen to be attacking Gibraltar today.

They appeared to return at 10-minute intervals, the attack lasting for an hour and a half. Smoke was seen rising from where some of the bombs fell.

From 12:40 p.m. to 2:05 p.m. British anti-aircraft guns on the fortress fired almost without cessation. The raiders were reported to have dropped about 20 bombs on the docks at Punta Europa.

Observers who have witnessed several Italian air attacks on the fortress expressed belief this was the heaviest raid yet made on Gibraltar.

Interest in Gen. de Gaulle

Madrid, Sept. 24—(AP)— Gen. de Gaulle's presence off Dakar heightened Spain's interest today in the war in Africa.

Spanish observers expressed belief that if the move to divorce Senegal from the Petain-Laval government at Vichy succeeds, it might be followed by strong agitation to separate French Morocco from the Vichy control also.

LAST TRIBUTES PAID TO LATE GEO. ROSEBUSH

Veteran Railroader, Who Died Suddenly at Salmon Lake on Sunday, Was Popular Figure

WAS ROADMASTER

Trenton, Sept. 24 — Canadian National Railway veterans joined with a large circle of sorrowing friends and relatives today to pay a last tribute to the late Mr. George Rosebush, well-known and highly esteemed resident of this town for the past 25 years, who died suddenly on Sunday, Sept. 22nd., at his summer camp at Salmon Lake. The late Mr. Rosebush was in his 73rd year.

Born in Sidney, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Tobias Rosebush, he received his early education in the schoolhouses of his native township. Later he moved to Springbrook, Rawdon Township, where he lived until he moved to this town a quarter of a century ago.

At an early age the lure of the railroad attracted him, and he became associated with this phase of transportation when he was sixteen years of age. His initiative, and application to his work soon gained him promotion and at the time of his retirement seven years ago he was the Roadmaster of the Canadian National Railway with headquarters in Trenton.

His name was a household one in railway circles of not only his own division but of the far-flung sections of the road across the country. His personality was such that loyalty of colleagues and subordinates came to him rather than was exacted. His superiors held him in the respect due a worthy and loyal servant.

His popularity extended beyond the realms of his vocation. He was well-known in fraternal and religious circles and was held in high esteem by those of all walks of life with whom his many activities brought him in contact.

He was a member of Trent Lodge No. 38 A. F. and A. M., and also of King Street United Church. After his retirement from active life seven years ago, he spent his summers among the delights of Salmon Lake at his summer cottage. It was there that he was reclining in the latter days of a life well and truly lived when he was suddenly called.

Left to mourn the passing of a loving husband and father are his widow the former Alma Baragar; two daughters, Mrs. W. H. Mawson, and Mrs. Robert Gamble, Trenton; two grand-children, Gordie and Donald Mawson; one great-grandchild, Donna Gaile Mawson and two sisters, Mrs. Thomas Boulter and Mrs. Harry Mouck, both of Toronto.

Had the late Mr. Rosebush lived he and Mrs. Rosebush would have celebrated the 53rd anniversary of their wedding on October 6th.

The funeral took place this afternoon with private services being held at the home, 98 Henry Street for relatives and immediate friends and church service at 3 p.m. at King Street United Church. The Rev. P. J. McClennan, minister of the church officiated at both services.

Honorary pallbearers were Messrs. Walter Vandevoort, Charles Dracup, George Sprentall, Joseph Berry, Arthur Swayne and John Rowe. Active bearers included Messrs. Fraser Fairman, Nostrand Sprague, O. M. Newton, Clarence Saylor, Marx Tripp and E. A. Blakely.

Interment was made in Mount Evergreen cemetery.

FIGHTING HALTS IN FR. INDO-CHINA HANOI REPORTS

French Troops Ordered to Withhold Fire and Authorities Give Japanese Opportunity to Halt Threatened Onslaught

'EXTREME GRAVITY'

By C. Yates McDaniel Associated Press Staff Writer.

Hanoi, French Indo-China, Sept. 24 (AP)—Fighting between French and Japanese forces along the northern boundary of French Indo-China was reported to have stopped overnight and official French sources said today their troops had been ordered to withhold their fire unless attacked.

Thus it was said, the French colonial authorities gave the Tokyo representative, Gen. Issaku Nishihara, every opportunity to halt the Japanese south China command's threatened land, sea and air onslaught against northern Indo-China without further bloodshed.

Informed French sources said Gen. Nishihara had hastened from Haiphong aboard a Japanese minelayer to confer with leaders of the Japanese troopship armada in Tonkin Gulf.

Tokyo Reports All Quiet

Nishihara was said to have persuaded the armada commander to halt his advance toward Haiphong until Nishihara could go on commanding the Japanese south China army.

(A Domei dispatch from Tokyo also reported all quiet along the Indo-China border today. The dispatch estimated the Japanese had suffered about 100 casualties in previous fighting.)

Residents of Hanoi and all northern Tonkin were awakened early today when 12 Japanese planes circled over the city. The French said their anti-aircraft batteries withheld fire and the planes left without incident.

The French authorities described the situation as one of "extreme gravity," despite Gen. Nishihara's efforts to avert further fighting.

It was emphasized that the present fate of northern Indo-China hinges largely on the Tokyo representative's ability to restrain the south China forces, which the French said apparently are operating independently.

Preparations For Resistance

Preparations for resistance continued. Full-scale mobilization has put every able-bodied Frenchman in Indo-China into uniform. Private motor trucks have been requisitioned and during the night many of these rumbled to the north, carrying troops to bolster the frontier and coastal defence system.

Extra train facilities have been arranged and natives who have no essential reason for remaining in cities in northern Tonkin have been advised to move elsewhere until the danger has passed.

Tokyo, Sept. 24—(AP)— Blazing guns of Japanese forces pushing into French Indo-China under an agreement advancing their domination of southeastern Asia were asserted today to have claimed the lives of 131 Indo-Chinese troops who resisted the entry at an undisclosed point.

The Japanese claimed to have captured 240 prisoners, including several French officers, as well as a quantity of arms and ammunition. This story was carried by Domei, Japanese news agency.

(A Domei broadcast heard in New York said all was quiet on the Indo-China front today. It pictured Japanese forces as "fraternizing" with the natives and "courteously" burying the French force's dead "as victims of an unfortunate accident instead of as an enemy."

(Among more than 100 French and Indo-Chinese troops killed, it said, was a Lt.-Col. Loubert, commander of the Dongdang garrison. All resistance there, made apparently as a result of delay in transmitting orders, Domei said, has ceased and troops in the vicinity have been disarmed by the Japanese.)

A French broadcast from Saigon, Indo-China, heard in Shanghai, said fighting between French and Japanese forces in northern Indo-China still was in progress at 10 a.m. today—11 p.m. EDT Monday—and that two Japanese planes had been shot down.

From Hanoi, capital of Indo-China, came reports of two battles between Japanese and French forces Sunday night and Monday afternoon. The first was at Dongdang, 90 miles north of Hanoi, the second at Langson, 12 miles inside the Indo-China northern frontier.

(French Foreign Minister Paul Bauddouin said in V[illegible]y that the F[illegible]nese agreement called for passage of an unspecified number of Japanese troops across Indo-China, use of three air bases in Tonkin and landing facilities at the port of Haiphong.)

Jap Press Predicts Benefits

While the Japanese press predicted the government would reject and protest of "third parties" against the military move in Indo-China, naval and military spokesmen claimed threefold benefits would result:

1. The new bases would abet a "death blow" at the Chinese Nationalist government of Chiang Kai-Shek to end the long war.

2. The air bases would enable Japan to dominate the Burma Road—backdoor of aid to China—in the event the British reopen it at the expiration Oct. 18 of an agreement with Japan.

3. Assurance of Indo-China's participation in a new eastern Asia "prosperity sphere."

Government officials were silent regarding the statement of Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, that the French concessions were made under duress.

U.S. Army Place Japan on Black List

(In Washington, informed sources hinted the United States might go beyond a diplomatic protest. Unofficial quarters suggested the possibility of a complete embargo on supplies to Japan and sending of some naval units to the far Pacific, possibly basing them at Singapore by agreement with Britain.)

The Japanese press continued to urge the government to disregard the opinion of third parties in carrying out what it called the "holy mission" on the Asiatic continent.

The newspaper Nichi Nichi, suggesting that "if foreign powers dare to interfere, Japan should exterminate them," predicted the future would find Japan and Indo-China staging a joint campaign against China.

Chungking, China, Sept. 24—(AP)—Chinese military observers declare the Japanese drive into French Indo-China can have no decisive effect on the Japanese-Chinese war.

There was no indication today China would carry out a recent threat to march into the French colony as a counter-move.

The belief prevailed here the Japanese would not attempt to invade China across her southern Yunnan Province border but instead would use new air bases in Indo-China to launch bombing raids on Kunming, capital of Yunnan Province, and other Yunnan centres.

PEACE AND WAR MAKE STRANGE CONTRAST IN AN ENGLISH MEADOW

A strange contrast indeed is this, and one that only war could produce, as harmless sheep wander past one of the Nazi engines of death that failed to reach its objective. The wrecked plane was brought down "somewhere in England."

County Judge O'Connell Against Abolishment Of the Grand Jury

Toronto, Sept. 24.—(CP) — It would be dangerous to have judges assume the work of grand juries as "everyone knows there are inefficient judges", County Judge Daniel O'Connell of Toronto today told a Legislative committee inquiring into administration of justice.

F. H. Barlow, Master of Supreme Court, last year recommended abolition of grand juries in Ontario. The committee is sifting this and other proposals.

Judge O'Connell said the grand jury "seems to me to be the very spirit and genius of the Anglo-Saxon race and an essential democratic institution" which should not be abolished "under present conditions in Europe and a threat at hand to sweep democracy from the face of the earth".

Sheriff W. H. S. Cane of York County urged on behalf of the Sheriffs' Association that Ontario and the four western provinces engage one executioner with two "understudies". Earlier the committee heard a proposal for a Central execution place rather than have hangings in County jail yards throughout the province.

R. B. Whitehead, chairman of the Securities Commission, agreed to appeals from rulings of Boards and Commissioners, but Hon. St. Clair Gordon, chairman of the Liquor Control Board, and Chairman John Harald of the Workmen's Compensation Board were opposed.

Dr. Samuel Levine Dropped From Staff Roll of University

Toronto, Sept. 24—(CP)— Dr. Samuel Levine, on $5,000 bail on a charge laid under defence of Canada regulations has been dropped from the staff roll of the University of Toronto, it was revealed today by the President, Dr. H. J. Cody. Dr. Levine was a fellow in geophysics in the University's Physics Department.

"This action was taken soon after the facts revealed by the authorities," said Dr. Cody. "We had no idea whatever that Dr. Levine had the slightest contact with Communists. He was a mathematical genius and did not seem to be interested in world politics. Our information is that he seems to have picked it up when he was in England."

Appointment of R. G. Elson of the Physics Department of the University of Western Ontario to the staff of the U. of T. is not by way of replacing Dr. Levine, the President said.

Paper Hears Hitler Lost Between 50,000 & 60,000 Troops in Channel

'Purely Speculation' Say British Sources Concerning Report in New York Herald Tribune From European Correspondent Quoting Reports 'From Neutral Sources on French-Spanish Border'

New York, Sept. 24 —(CP)— The New York Herald Tribune in a dispatch from London today quoted reports "from neutral sources on the French-Spanish border" that the combination of British attacks and severe channel storms which scattered the Nazis' invasion fleet a week ago, "cost the Germans between 50,000 and 60,000 picked troops."

London, Sept. 24 —(CP—Cable)— Authoritative sources here, commenting on reports from the French-Spanish border that 50,000 to 60,000 German troops had been put out of action along the channel last week, said such reports would have to be regarded as "purely speculation."

The dispatch, dated Monday, Sept. 23, and written by Harold Cardozo, special correspondent on the French-Spanish border, follows:

The Dispatch

"Hitler lost between 50,000 and 60,000 picked troops in the disaster which scattered his invasion fleet a week ago today, it is learned here.

"They were victims of channel storms and merciless Royal Air Force bombardment.

"Because the German troops had already suffered heavy losses from British bombing, the Nazi high command decided to make new dispositions.

"The invasion fleet, consisting of thousands of barges and small vessels, was taken out of the ports and moored along the lonely Flanders coasts.

"Most of the vessels carried their full complement of troops, since the keynote of the Nazi plan has been readiness for instant action.

"Sunday (Sept 15) saw the fleet ready for a cross-channel dash but the terrific beating meted out to Nazi planes (185 were shot down that day in battles over Britain) held up orders to sail.

"Then on Monday, southwest gales swept the channel. The Flanders coast is notoriously dangerous at this season. It became a death trap.

"German tugs tried desperately to get the barges to safety but scores of them were overturned, drowning thousands of soldiers.

"Convoys of barges and tugs were moved to safe waters—to meet renewed bombing raids and more gales. They are still reorganising."

SIR ALAN BROOKE VISITS CANADIANS

Commander in Chief of Home Forces Inspects Second Division

By SAM ROBERTSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in Southern England, Sept. 24 (CP Cable)—Gen. Sir Alan Brooke visited the vast encampment of the Canadian 2nd Division today and watched them snap through every phase of their training for battle.

The Commander in Chief of the Home Forces, accompanied by Maj.-Gen. Victor Odlum, General Officer commanding the Division, and several of his staff officers spent the entire day on a tour that took in all units of the Division.

Before starting out on the tour, Gen. Brooke conferred for half an hour with Gen. Odlum.

During the visit, which took in every corner of the camp, the C.-in-C. inspected artillery and infantry at target practice, signals employing facsimile for transmission of maps, the Medical Corps combatting a make-believe gas attack and the Service Corps transporting a great sweep of equipment associated with mechanized warfare.

Men of a French-Canadian Battalion of Montreal were punctuating a bayonet attack with wild war whoops when Gen. Brooke came along. When they stopped for a breakout he addressed them briefly in French.

"You soldiers of French Canada," he said, "one day will stand shoulder to shoulder with the soldiers of Free France in the fight to restore freedom in the world" and old France to her former glory."

Messrs. Bruce, Douglas and Jim Christie, 2nd. Sidney, called on the Goodman boys, Sunday afternoon.

Mr. T. Sullivan and Miss Frances Sullivan of Belleville called at Mr. Percy Lancaster's recently.

Hear Ribbentrop Discussed New Disposition of French Territory

New York, Sept. 24.—(PP)—The New York Times said today in a dispatch from its Rome Correspondent that a report is becoming persistent in Rome that Ribbentrop, Hitler's Foreign Minister, and Mussolini "discussed here (Rome) a new disposition of French territory that would involve the disappearance of the Petain Government".

The dispatch, reporting that Count Ciano may go to Berlin to continue the dicussions held last week in Rome, added in connection with the question of France and Petain:—

"Certainly, Marshal Petain is persona non grata as far as Italy is concerned. However, this, as all other details of Ribbentrop's visit, cannot be confirmed".

TRAINED FIREMEN ENLISTED

Ottawa, Sept. 24 (CP)—Two trained firemen will be taken on strength of the Royal Canadian Air Force for fire-fighting duty at each air station, it was learned at the Air Ministry today.

Up to the present every air station has been supplied with fire-fighting equipment and in case of fire it has been operated by the regular airmen at the station.

Now, with stations growing in size and number, it has been decided men skilled in fire-fighting work should be employed and fire-fighting equipment is being increased.

HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY OFFICIAL DIES AGED 73

Victoria, Sept. 23.—(CP)—Funeral services will be held here Wednesday for Charles H. French, 73, who rose in the service of the Hudson's Bay Company to chief factor and fur trade commissioner, with jurisdiction over the entire Dominion. He died last night after an illness of nearly a year. He was born in Markham, now a suburb of Toronto, and joined the company in 1886 at Fort Garry, now Winnipeg, as a dog driver.

FORCED TO TURN BACK

Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 24 — (AP)— The Swiss-chartered 6,696-ton Greek freighter Mount Taurus, bound for New York with a $4,500,000 cargo of Swiss merchandise, was forced by two Italian destroyers to turn back to Genoa, it was reported here today.

The freighter, which sailed from Genoa Sept. 20, is one of several vessels chartered by the Swiss Government.

RELIEF COSTS ARE DECREASED

In Hamilton Relief Has Been Reduced 47.9 Per Cent in First Eight Months of Year

Toronto, Sept. 24—(CP)— Ontario's six largest municipalities have reduced relief costs by approximately $2,700,000 during the first eight months of this year, Welfare Minister Eric Cross announced today. These six municipalities, with a combined population of 1,200,536, have expended $6,254,612 for relief up to the end of August of this year, as against $8,935,515, for the same period in 1939, $8,807,475 in 1938 and $9,387,334 in 1937.

All told the 1940 figure represents an average saving of 30 per cent over last year for this group of municipalities.

The greatest progress has been made in Hamilton, where expenditures are 47.9 per cent below last year's costs. London follows with a reduction of 35.1 per cent; York Township with 33.5 per cent; Windsor 32.6 per cent; Ottawa 26.5 per cent and Toronto 25.0 per cent.

C.A.S.F. SOLDIERS HELP WITH CROP

Many Released from Military Training to Help Garner Heavy Fruit Crop

St. Catharines, Ont., Sept. 24 (CP)—Canada's Active Service soldiers became "soldiers of the soil" today as they aided in the harvesting of the fruit crop, threatened by rot because of the continued damp weather.

Col. R. E. Smythe, D.S.O. MC. Commandant of Niagara Camp, said that the request of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and by permission of the Minister of National Defence, "a number of soldiers were released from military parades to assist the fruit growers over the harvesting emergency."

It is understood that approximately 100 men left Niagara Camp today for neighboring farms. Col. Smythe said the men volunteered after notices were posted in the camp. Those taking part do not receive their daily military pay of $1.30 but get the prevailing wage for the particular job they are undertaking from the fruit growers.

While officials of the Department of National Defence are anxious to co-operate in the present emergency it is understood they do not intend to make a regular practice of releasing men from duty for fruit-picking purposes because it would interfere with the daily training schdule at the camp.

50 Flying Fortresses If Given England Could Pulverize Interior Germany

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—(CP)—There is a growing feeling in the United States that "obsolete" flying fortresses, will be delivered to the United Kingdom shortly, Gage Mace, assistant operations manager of American Air Lines Inc., said today.

"These ships", he said, "are not exactly 'obsolete' and 40 or 50 of them could pulverize interior Germany".

Mace said Americans were "hoping and praying that Britain will stand off the Germans until next Spring by which time plants in the United States will be delivering all the war planes England requires".

Mace said he was in Ottawa to iron out a traffic problem in connection with American Air Lines short-cut across Western Ontario in its Buffalo-Detroit run. "Briefly the problem is to arrange a traffic lane above or below those used by the Royal Canadian Air Force men training in Western Ontario", he said.

BULLETINS

Ottawa, Sept. 24 (CP)—Dr. Joseph Sirois, Quebec lawyer, and former Chairman of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations, has been appointed Chairman of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced today. Military Objects In Heart of Berlin Heavily Attacked

Source of Berlin's Industrial Electrical Power Particular Objective of R. A. F. Bombers

By J. F. SANDERSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 25—(CP Cable)—Heavy bombers of the Royal Air force attacked military objects in the heart of Berlin last night for the second night in succession while the German air force was making its severest attack on the war on central London.

The raids started shortly after 10:30 p.m. when the R.A.F. vanguard, "evading the intense barrage of the city's ground defences, located and bombed the great Siemens and Halske factories which produce a large proportion of the electrical equipment used by the German armed force," said an Air Ministry's communique.

The R.A.F. rounded out its 2 1-2-hour foray with a 1 a.m. attack on the electrical power transformer and switching station at Friedrichsefelde, described as the source of much of Berlin's industrial electrical power.

Air mass invasion! It is a beneficent invasion that is carried on by air masses. An air mass is defined as an extensive body of air which is homogeneous horizontally; that is, it has on any one level much the same temperature, humidity, and other qualities. These air masses originate in the far north and south, over land and over sea. They assume the physical characteristics of those source regions. Very soon now this country and southern Canada will be invaded by polar air masses coming from either the interior of northern Canada or from the northern oceans. Those from the continent will be cold, dry and clear; those from the oceans will not be so cold nor so dry

Public Services Continue Despite Repeated Bombings

New York, Sept. 25—(CP)—John Bowman, President of the Institution of Water Engineers of Britain and City Water Engineer of Edinburgh, told the New England Waterworks Association today that public services have functioned successfully throughout Nazi bombings. Bowman's message was read to the annual meeting of the New England Engineers who thereupon approved a resolution expressing sympathy with Britain coupled with hope for her speedy victory and a return to peace.

BUILDING SHAKEN BY EXPLOSION

Windows in several homes of the community, on the Monongahela River about 13 miles from Pittsburgh, were shattered by the explosion. Police reported they believed some workmen had been hurt. Six men were reported working in the vicinity of the brick and steel building.

A. Mussora, who said he lived two miles from the plant reported:

"I thought my house blew up. The town is practically black with smoke."

Tobruk Rendered Useless for Italians

London, Sept. 25—(CP)—Persistent battering by units of the Royal Air Force and Fleet Air Arm have made the important Italian sea base at Tobruk in Libya "utterly useless" according to British air authorities.

Tobruk was ideally situated to enable the Italians to bring war supplies to their troops operating inside the Egyptian base and also as a base for submarines and warships.

Highest Award Given English Scoutmaster

London, Sept. 25—(CP)— The bronze cross, the Scout Movement's highest award for gallantry, has been awarded to Scoutmaster G. Keen, a railwayman who saved 45 of 51 trucks of an ammunition train bombed during an air raid.

Keen, on duty in southern England when bombs struck the train, called for volunteers and started to uncouple and push the trucks away from several which were burning, working frantically among flying shells and lyddite. His only injuries were from a shell splinter which nicked one of his ears.

American Newspapermen Meet U. S. Pilots at Trenton Airbase

Trenton, Ont., Sept. 25—(CP) — American newspapermen touring Eastern Canada as guests of a group of Canadian publishers, visited the Royal Canadian Air Force station at Trenton Tuesday and met a contingent of United States pilots who had just arrived from the Toronto Manning Pool. All the pilots are experienced airmen and hold the rank of Flying Officer in the R. C. A. F.

The visiting publishers were shown all about the station but the most popular place was the building housing the Link trainers

The air-minded newspapermen clambered into the machines and experienced all the senations of flying a plane except those that go with landing and taking off.

Ogden Reid, President and editor of The New York Herald-Tribune, alighted to discover that theoretically he had crashed at 160 miles an hour and had driven his machine 800 feet into the ground.

Hanson Baldwin, military expert for The New York Times, met his theoretical fate in a tailspin.

Later the party moved on to Kingston where they visited Royal Military College and then were guests of W. Rupert Davies, publisher of the Kingston Whig-Standard and President of The Canadian Press.

Japanese South Command Announces Decision to Send More Troops to Haiphong by Sea

By C. YATES McDANIEL

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Hanoi, Indo-China, Sept. 25 (AP)—The military situation along a 50-mile frontier section 80 miles northeast of Hanoi was obscured today after Japanese advance forces cut communications between the Indo-Chinese capital and Langson, centre of the northern border defence line.

Informed sources said the Tokyo Government had ordered Gen. Teizo and Ando, commanding Japan's South China army, to halt the attack started the night of Sept. 22nd.

The Indo-China Government issued a statement reaffirming its

Says 'Untrained School Children' In Nazi Plane Crews

Yarmouth, N.S., Sept. 25—(CP)—Sergeant Major Jack Breen, of Yarmouth, overseas with the Canadian forces, in a letter home said "the highly praised German air force and its superior pilots has turned out to be just so much propaganda, because a great number of plane crews taken prisoners from the planes brought down have been untrained school children, ranging in age from 15 to 18."

He added "this is not just talk, as I have seen quite a number of them and they all seemed pleased to be prisoners."

CONTINENTAL EVACUEE CHILDREN MAY ENTER UNITED STATES

New York, Sept. 25 —(AP)— The way has been cleared for entrance into the United States of continental European children, who earlier in the war found haven in Britain and now are forced to flee a second time.

Marshall Field, president of the United States committee for the care of European children, said that the United States will extend visitors' visas, valid for the duration of the war, to unaccompanied non-British evacuees under 16 years old who are in Britain. Four shiploads of children are expected here within a few weeks.

U.K. EXPENDITURES ALMOST 6 TIMES REVENUE LAST WEEK

London, Sept. 25—(CP)— British government expenditures last week were almost six times larger than revenue, treasury returns show. Expenditures thus far in "the current financial year, from April, now stand at the equivalent of $6,101,204,226.64. Last week's expenditures were $248,660,321.48 as compared with revenue of $47,626,350.12.

Air Marshal Bishop Tells Britons Empire Air Scheme is 'Months And Months Ahead of Schedule'

By HAROLD FAIR

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 25 (CP). — While London nursed its wounds after an all-night pounding by German bombers, Air Marshal W. A. Bishop, V.C., of the Royal Canadian Air Force brought cheering news today that the Empire Air Scheme is "months and months ahead of schedule in every department".

Meeting London reporters in Canada House during an air raid alarm, he predicted the scheme would be a winning factor in the air war and said it was one of the things he came here to discuss on his visit, made at the request of the Air Ministry.

The man who knew death in the skies in the last war admitted that what annoyed him most in last night's raid was the rhythmic beat of the Nazi planes over. That, he said, was "worse than the bangs". However, although he has been through two night raids, he has not been in a shelter—"not that I might not be in one yet," he commented.

Air Marshal Bishop conversed easily with the newsmen, causing some of the Englishmen among them to comment on the "complete absence of anything resembling brass-

MOVE AT DAKAR INDICATES CHANGE IN WAR STRATEGY

Writer Believes Britain Has Shifted From Defence to Offensive

BLOCKADE HOLDS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, Sept. 25—(AP) — The roar of naval guns at Dakar sounded an ironic afternote to the German-Italian axis conferences in Rome, conferences reported to have been called to discuss the division of spoils in a war not yet won.

Whatever other significance can be attached to the move of the British-free French Allies to preempt that French African naval base, it primarily indicates a change in British war strategy. Shifting from a purely defensive policy designed to guard her own shores and her Mediterranean life line, Britain definitely is seeking to seize the initiative.

HINTS SPAIN WILL AID AXIS POWERS

Il Popolo di Roma Says 'Italy Welcomes Truly Historic Decisions of Spain'

Rome, Sept. 25—(AP)—The newspaper Il Popolo di Roma, whose editor is considered a close friend of Foreign Minister Ciano, hinted today that Spain had decided to aid Italy and Germany in their war against Britain.

"Italy welcomes with happiness the truly historic decisions of Spain and El Caudillo (Gen. Franco)and her solidarity in the war against her historic enemy," the newspaper said in a front page editorial which termed Britain the enemy of Spain.

Spain desires Gibraltar and the greater part of Morocco, the newspaper indicated, adding:

"Nobody can be surprised if Franco's Spain, born within the orbit and by the spiritual and armed solidarity of Italy and Germany, is inserting herself in the axis system. She is closing the circle isolating England from Europe and is regaining her active Mediterranean and African function to which geography as much as history calls her.

'She succeeds in making her voice heard at a more than ever opportune time when England, profiting from the general armistice conceded to her former ally (France), is attempting to gain control of the French colonial empire."

Month for Reckless Driving

Pembroke, Ont., Sept. 25—(CP)—Found guilty of a charge of reckless driving, Benedict Tracy, 21-year-old Pembroke taxi driver, was sentenced to a month in jail by Magistrate T. M. G. Galligan.

The charge was laid against Tracy after an automobile accident in which two soldiers were killed instantly and four others injured. The soldiers were returning to Petawawa Military Camp Sept. 7 in Tracy's car when it crashed into a parked truck.

Alleged Kidnapper Will be Turned Over To State Officials

San Francisco, Sept. 25 (AP)—Federal officers announced intentions today of giving Willelm Jakob Muhlenbroich to state authorities for prosecution as the kidnapper of baby Marc De Tristan, Jr., and acknowledged that newspaper publicity had wrecked his plans to commit the "perfect kidnapping."

Meanwhile, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which kept the German alien incommunicado, continued its check to see if he might have been the man who kidnapped Charles Mattson in Tacoma, Wash., the night of Dec. 27, 1936, and left his mutilated body in a snow patch near Everett, Wash., 15 days later.

The fact that his custody transfer to state authorities impended was taken to indicate the link had not been established.

A biography of Muhlenbroich released by the F.B.I. disclosed that he was a deserter from the German army and the French Foreign Legion.

JOHN CALLS 'LOVE GORGEOUS BET'

Barrymore Says 'It Makes Roulette Look Like Tick-Tack-Toe'

Hollywood, Sept. 25—(AP)—Enough is plenty for actor John Barrymore, he says regarding his marriage to Elaine Barrie, but he is certainly not through with love and might even marry again.

He and his 24-year-old fourth wife, whom he sued for divorce Monday, have had many fallings-out and reconciliations, "but this time, gentlemen," he told interviewers, "positively—definitely—absolutely!"

As for swearing off romance, "don't you dare say any such thing."

"Why, gentlemen," Barrymore observed, "love is such a gorgeous gamble! It makes roulette look like tick-tack-toe."

At his long vacant walled-in hilltop home where he sought sanctuary after leaving actress Barrie, he received interviewers.

The 57-year-old actor is now in the process of having his debts adjusted under the new bankruptcy law.

"Sure I'm broke," he said. "Flat on my back. But I've been stony before. So now I'll work like a — to get clear. It'll take about a year."

A guard is stationed at the huge locked gate 300 feet down the hill from the house. The guard wears a plainly visible .38 calibre pistol on one hip and handcuffs on the other.

His prime function is to distinguish between friends and process servers.

DETAILS WORKED OUT IN ADVANCE

Berlin, Sept. 25 (AP)—German sources claimed today that the Finnish-German treaty for the transit and transport of German troops through Finland to Norway is of a sort customary in international law.

"According to these sources "all details are laid down in advance before the transport train moves. The soldiers, whose exact number is stipulated, enter the cars unarmed and the arms are shipped separately. The train is sealed during transit."

HEAVY CALIBRE BOMBS ARE USED FOR FIRST TIME

Famous Church Hit by Incendiary Bomb but Only Slightly Damaged

Take 1 Heavy Calibre 1-gA

(By Pat Ussher)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 25—(CP Cable)—The Central Area of London bore the brunt of a night-long raid by the German Air Force in the course of which hundreds of incendiary and a number of high explosive bombs were rained on the capital.

The civil defence services toiled magnificently through a night of fire and horror, saving the lives of endangered people and quenching many blazes before they could become landmarks for Goering's sky-riders.

A famous church in Central London, designed by Sir Christopher Wren was hit by an incendiary bomb but was only slightly damaged. Valuable stained glass windows were blown in at another church by high explosive which fell beside the north wall.

A London hospital was hit but the large number of patients it houses were unhurt.

Glass and Debris Strewn About

Most casualties were in another building which suffered from the blast. Glass and debris were strewn over a large area. A pub was demolished and the front of another building blown out.

The bomb carved a great crater in the roadway. There were 400 men in the hostel at the time. Some were killed and others injured.

A hostel officer said the "basement was turned into a casualty centre and many doctors and ambulance workers were quickly in action".

In one underground restaurant, as the bomb thud was felt, the orchestra was playing "There'll Always be an England".

Stores Open For Business

In central London some of the fires were still burning at noon today. For block after block one could not get away from the penetrating smell of smoke.

Amid bomb craters and fires, other stores remained open for bus-

Churchill's Son, Randolph, Elected By Acclamation

Preston, England, Sept. 25 —(CP—Cable)— Randolph Churchill, 29-year-old son of the Prime Minister, was returned unopposed to the House of Commons from this constituency today to fill a seat left vacant by the death of the former Conservative member.

Like his father, young Churchill is a Conservative. He commented that he hoped that at Preston he had found a political home for all time. In recent years he stood for election unsuccessfully in several constituencies.

3 SEAMEN REACH COLOMBIA

Barranquilla, Colombia, Sept. 25 —(AP)—Three British merchant seamen who reached here Monday aboard a tanker were part of the crew of an unidentified freighter shelled and sunk by a German sea raider, it was learned today. Earlier reports said they had belonged to the crew of a British warship.

Spanish Report Says Planes From Morocco Attack Gibraltar

La Linea, Spain, Sept. 25 (AP)—Planes from Morocco, in waves of four, resumed the bombing of Gibraltar this afternoon. It was believed here the planes were French.

The raids were resumed at 2:35 p.m. (10:35 a.m. EDT). They were started yesterday.

The planes attacked the arsenal and other points on the Rock, apparently setting fire to several buildings.

Anti-aircraft guns on land and the "poms poms" on warships in the bay sent up a terrific barrage.

Reports from Ceuta, Morocco, said a total of 40 planes had headed for Gibraltar. One, however, was seen to fall in the sea.

Reports of Dakar Surrender Are Unconfirmed

London Office of Gen. DeGaulle Views Stories 'With Caution'

London, Sept. 25—(CP)— Headquarters of Gen. Charles De Gaulle's free French forces said this afternoon that "operations at Dakar are continuing."

Spokesmen for Gen. de Gaulle here asserted a number of the General's supporters in Dakar had been arrested recently by the authorities there, who they said were "completely under the control of the Germans and Italians."

They expressed the belief that the French warships which recently passed Gibraltar bound for Senegal probably carried trained forces of the Vichy government to replace those in Senegal known to favor Gen. de Gaulle.

Vichy, Sept. 25 (AP)—Unconfirmed and conflicting reports that Dakar, capital of French West Africa, had surrendered to the "Free French" and British Expedition circulated here today.

(At the London headquarters of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the French expedition against Dakar, it was said there was no confirmation of reports of the city's surrender that such reports should be treated with caution.)

It could not be learned with certainty whether the city still was holding out or whether the Expeditionary troops had gained a foothold on the African coastline, taking the "key to the South Atlantic."

No official news from Dakar had been announced since yesterday at 1 p.m. (8 a.m. E.D.T.), when the British were reported starting a violent raid.

It was noted that reports of French planes bombing Gibraltar were circulated here yesterday afternoon but it was impossible to obtain official confirmation or denial. Today the Government announced officially that an unspecified number of French planes bombed Gibraltar for two hours yesterday in reprisal for British action against Dakar with Gen. Charles De Gaulle's Free French Forces.

BABY EVACUEE'S PARENTS LOST

Father Listed Among Dead of Torpedoed Ship and Mother Feared Dead

Toronto, Sept. 25 (CP)—Two-year-old Mary Olden, war guest under ward of Prof. Gilbert E. Jackson, Toronto economist, will never see her parents again.

She came to Canada accompanied by a suitcase twice her size two months ago. Her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Olden, of Oxford University, kissed her goodbye and said they would see her again when life in England was again safe for little boys and girls.

In the long list of those who died when a Nazi submarine torpedoed the City of Benares is the name of Rudolph Olden, and Prof. Jackson said he had received further word that Mrs. Olden was feared dead, too.

Olden at one time was head of the Berlinger Tageblatt, one of Germany's most influential newspapers. He opposed Hitler and fled to England.

One of Britain's Largest Submarines Is Long Overdue

London, Sept. 25 (CP)—The Admiralty announced last night that the submarine Thames is missing and must be considered lost.

The submarine, under Lieut.-Cmdr. W. D. Dunkerley, is one of the largest British submarines, with a surface displacement of 1,805 tons and a normal complement of sixty officers and men.

She was completed in 1932 and was the first Diesel-driven submarine with a surface speed exceeding twenty-one knots.

The Thames cost just over £500,000 ($2,225,000). In the winter of 1938-39 she made a three-month cruise around Africa.

C.F. Needlands Opposes Central Place for Execution in Ontario

Toronto, Sept. 25 —(CP)— On the grounds that hanging in county jail yards throughout the province brings home the fact of capital punishment to a greater number of people, C. F. Neelands, Deputy Provincial Secretary, today told a legislative committee he was strongly opposed to establishment of a central place for execution in Ontario.

In addition, central hangings would force relatives of the condemned person to travel long distances to be with their kin during his last days. Nor had Neelands ever heard of a "bungled" hanging in Ontario so that central executions would not increase efficiency.

There would be little financial saving. At present average cost of a hanging is $250 of which the executioner gets $100 with $50 for expenses and $100 for equipment. Cost of scaffolds range from $30 to $50. In case of a reprieve, the hangman gets $50. Between 1936 and this year Ontario has had 15 hangings.

Employment of a permanent executioner in a prison, Neelands contended, had a bad effect on the prisoners. One had ben employed in Toronto, but authorities were forced to place him on outside work as a night guard because the prisoners didn't like him. This man died a year ago.

SUGAR RATIONED

Oslo, Norway, (via Berlin) Sept. 25.—(AP)—Sugar rations for Norwegians are to be reduced from 250 to 200 grams (8.8 to 7 ounces) a week, and bread and flour from 300 to 250 (10.6 to 8.8 ounces). The order, also rationing soap, becomes effective September 30.

CEMENT WORK BEING DAMAGED BY SMALL BOYS

Mischievous boys and possibly grown-ups have been damaging new cement catch basins and curbings on sidewalks in the vicinity of Bridge and Charles Street according to the police and if the culprits are apprehended severe penalties will be meted out, it was stated today. The Public Works Department are constructing some catch basins and curbings in that area and during the night, some persons have been kicking holes in the newly made cement and when workmen come on the job in the morning they find their work completely ruined. This damage is causing the ratepayers considerable money as new curbings and basins have to be put in. The police are determined to stamp out this wanton destruction and severe penalties will follow if the perpetrators are apprehended.

MRS. A. E. MacCOLL SHOCKED, BRUISED WHEN HIT BY CAR

Mrs. A. E. MacColl, 335 Church St., sustained painful foot injuries as the result of being knocked down by a motor car at the intersection of Front and Bridge Sts., early last evening. Mrs. MacColl was crossing Front St., and stepped alongside of a motor car, driven by John Boyle, 271 Foster Ave. Just as the driver was moving his machine into motion as the traffic light changed. Neither the motorist nor Mrs. MacColl observed the other, P. C. William T. Evans, stated after a thorough investigation looking into the accident.

Mr. Boyle immediately stopped his automobile and assisted Mrs. MacColl in her difficulty. Later the injured woman was taken to the surgery of Dr. R. W. Tennent, where it was disclosed she was suffering from a badly bruised foot and general shock.

CAMERON TROPHY PRESENTED TO "B" COMPANY AT BANQUET

Softball champions of the battalion, "B" Company of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) were signally honored in a lecture room of the Armouries Tuesday night, when the Cameron Trophy, emblematic of the championship of the unit, was formally presented to the squad by Captain C. A. Cameron, donor of the trophy, to officials of the team.

The title was won during an inter-company tournament held when the battalion was in training at Petawawa for its regular two weeks training period. Later, the team, augmented by players of other companies, won the camp title from the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders.

The entire company turned out to enjoy the banquet at which they were the guests of the company officers. The presentation, made by Captain Cameron, was received on behalf of the team by Alex. Simpson, captain of the squad.

Lieut. Colonel A. B. Gribble, officer commanding of the battalion and company officers gave brief addresses of congratulation. Members of the team include Privates Mansfield, Bell, Simpson, Harris, Philp, Harden, Connors, Robson and Smith. The entire company turned out to honor the team.

HOLDS DYNAMITE IN HIS HANDS TO PREVENT EXPLOSION

The quick thinking of Joseph Brethour of Campbellford possibly prevented an explosion in that town on Monday morning, that might have caused considerable damage to the business section. Brethour, who is employed on an excavation job in Campbellford, had in his car 25 sticks of dynamite and caps when the car he was driving came into collision with a truck driven by Graydon Bell, also of Campbellford. When he saw that a collision was inevitable, Brethour took the package of dynamite from the seat beside him and held it in his hands letting go of the steering wheel. This broke the shock and possibly prevented an explosion.

Petition Circulated To Observe Mid-Week Holiday for 10 Months

Efforts to have Wednesday half-holidays for ten of the twelve months of the year observed by Belleville merchants are being attempted. A petition is being circulated throughout the downtown area for ratification of the various individual groups of local business men seeking to observe the mid-week half holiday for all months, except November and December, it was learned by the Ontario Intelligencer today.

Speaking on the subject this afternoon, Mr. William Doyle, secretary of the Belleville Retail Merchants' Association said: "There has been nothing official or authentic coming out of our association regarding this matter. However, I have been informed that a petition seeking the mid-week half holiday has been circulated among Front Street merchants, but before such a matter could be accepted among the merchants, a meeting of the Association executive would necessarily discuss the matter. I can state, however, that a meeting of our executive has been called for Thursday and no doubt this question will be brought up and discussed," stated Mr. Doyle as he refrained from making further comment, except to say that providing individual groups of merchants, such as butchers, grocerymen, etc., might band together and observe the Wednesday half holiday on Wednesdays among themselves, as is the case in Peterborough and Kingston.

One local furrier pointed out that it would be impossible for their particular line of business to observe the mid-week holiday during the fall and winter months. "These months are our busiest periods," explained the furrier.

The local banks and barbers observe the mid-week holiday practically the whole year. Providing the Retail Merchants' Association adopt such a measure the question would have to be taken before the city council for final ratification before it became law.

Dr. H. Welsh Will Return Home This Week From Hospital

Dr. Harold Welsh, member of the Ontario Legislative Assembly for Hastings East, who has been recuperating from a severe illness in Kingston General Hospital for the past six weeks, will arrive home later this week, according to information received from the popular Roslin physician today. Although well on the road to recovery, Dr. Welsh will rest at his home for some time before resuming his extensive practice.

Writing from his bedside, Dr. Welsh, said that he maintained a consistent interest in his "ball team" taken over since his illness by Dr. John Empson. He wishes to be remembered to all those who have called upon him and by other actions have been considerate of his welfare.

Nurses of B. G. H. Enjoy Wiener Roast At Belleville Beaches

Belleville Beaches was the scene of a jolly affair on Monday night when student nurses of the Belleville General Hospital entertained a large number of their friends at a wiener roast.

In the rosy glow of a roaring bonfire provided by the Beaches Association, the nurses and friends enjoyed the succulent "feed". Music and community singing, and various games formed the entertainment for the forty guests present. Graduate nurses of the hospital were special guests.

Wiener roasts are proving popular with residents of the city, and Beaches Association officials stated today that all facilities are available for this kind of function. The general public is invited to form parties and enjoy this form of autumn entertainment at the Beach.

BOMB WRECKS CHURCH

London (CP Cable)—The Vicar of a southeast coast town Tuesday saw his church vanish in one of the day's three raids by German bombers. The church, a comparatively modern structure, received a direct hit. "The centre of the church seemed to shoot up in the air and there was nothing left but debris and dust everywhere. In a second the church disappeared."

SAY CIANO WILL VISIT BERLIN

Berlin Sources Believe He Will Participate in Some Solemn Ceremony of Signature

Berlin, Sept. 25—(AP)—Italian Foreign Minister Count Galleazo Ciano will be on his way to Berlin by tomorrow for further conferences on the axis war program, a usually well-informed source declared today.

Authorized persons would neither confirm nor deny that Ciano was coming so soon, but said: "When we telephoned Rome a few minutes ago he was still there."

Political sources here are generally of the opinion that Ciano will participate in some solemn ceremony of signature.

Whether the Spanish Minister Ramon Serrano Suner, who was reported to have visited Adolf Hitler today, also will participate in the ceremony could not be learned.

It is known, however, that the protocol office of the Willelmstrasse is preparing for some sort of ceremony.

Expect Conversations Continued

(The Berlin radio said the assumption "is crystallizing in political quarters" that the conversations between Ribbentrop and Italian leaders in Rome would be continued in Berlin Friday with Serrano Suner and Ciano taking part.

(The radio mentioned an "even more far reaching rumor" that this Berlin conference would be followed next week "by a concluding meeting of the leading men of Germany, Italy and Spain in South Germany.")

WILLKIE MAKES PLEDGE TO WEST

Republican Nominee Says He Will Appoint Western Secretary of State if Elected

Aboard Willkie train en route to Fargo, N.D., Sept 25—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie, contending that a 1937 price statement by President Roosevelt had created a "disastrous" effect on world economics, gave the west a campaign pledge to appoint a westerner as secretary of the interior if he is elected.

The Republican Presidential nominee, speaking on the "richest hill in the world" in Butte, Mont., said last night: "In April 1937 when the (business) pickup was coming, the President made a public announcement that the price of commodities was too high.

"The effect was very disastrous throughout the world, in my judgment. It was a factor in the economic decline of the democracies of Europe and thus contributed to the rise of Hitler."

A cut in copper prices resulted, Willkie said, bringing a wage cut for "every man who worked in the copper mines of this area."

"The very fact that the President had enough power in his hands that his mere statement could have caused such a rapid decline in the price of copper, I say to you, is very deleterious to our domestic economy.

"For instance, if Grover Cleveland had made some such remark, it would not have affected the price of copper, because he did not have enough power to do anything about it. But in the last seven years we have concentrated much power in Washington."

BATHTUB CASUALTY

Minneapolis, Sept. 25 (AP)—Edward Murphy became a casualty just lying in a bathtub soaping his leg. He ran the soap down his leg and felt a sharp pain. He had failed to notice a razor blade stuck to the soap. The result was a severe laceration.

The War Today

(By Guy Rheades)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The Battle of Dakar neared its crisis today and British forces appeared virtually to have stalled Marshal Graziani's advance in Libya by blockading his supply line across the Mediterranean.

While Britain and Germany swapped aerial blows and vast explosions were seen along the Nazi-held French coast, new signs of scurrying came from Berlin where it was said Count Ciano, Italian Foreign Secretary, would arrive soon for further conferences with the German hierarchy, perhaps regarding possible Spanish activity on the Axis side in the war.

The actual situation at Dakar was momentarily obscure, although unofficial reports circulated at Vichy, seat of the Petain-Laval government that colony had surrendered to the Free French forces of Gen. Charles de Gaulle. At London, where Gen. de Gaulle's headquarters said the assault on the West African port had been made to prevent the Axis Powers from seizing it, officials said the rumors of the Port's surrender should be treated with caution.

Dakar is of prime strategic importance, for it commands the South Atlantic just as Gibraltar commands the western Mediterranean. It is nothing like the fortress Gibraltar is, but it would be invaluable in maintaining the Atlantic blockade of Italy should Gibraltar suffer a serious assault.

Observers at Alexandria, Egypt, said it was believed there the British blockade of Libya and Southern Italy was so tight Italian troops in North Africa were, or soon would be, in difficulties for lack of supplies.

German planes, turned back once in their 18th nightly raids on London, returned to inflict considerable damage and numerous casualties. Exact extent of the damage was not disclosed nor were the damaged buildings identified specifically. It was believed, however, that they included the office building in Tudor Street housing The Canadian Press and The Associated Press. Cable services said no staff member of either organization was hurt.

Britons wore smiles this morning, however, when it became known that the Royal Air Force had made its second devastating raid on Berlin in two nights, bombing utilities, military manufacturies and transportation facilities. It was a tonic, particularly to Londoners, to know their enemies in the German capital were not getting off scot free.

Meanwhile raids continued on the Nazi-controlled French, Netherlands, Belgian and German coasts which have been pounded all the way from Cherbourg to Hamburg. Cliff watchers this morning reported a sudden daylight renewal of R.A.F. raids on "invasion ports" brought a series of the most terrific explosions they heard. So heavy were the detonations, they said the whole South English coast, more than 20 miles distant, quivered.

Origin of the blasts could not be seen, but it was surmised ammunition dumps must have been hit.

"Invasion" weather which had prevailed the last few days in the Channel gave place to cold northern winds that raised a choppy swell along the Nazi-held shoreline opposite.

AIR MARSHAL

hatism."

The air marshal said that the thing that had impressed him most since coming to the British front line was the way the "Old Country people are standing up to the pounding".

On his way to the conference from his hotel, he strolled down a famous shopping street which has lost hundreds of panes of plate glass. He stopped to talk to people across one shattered window.

"They were cheerily doing business as usual," he said. "If only the rest of the world could see the quiet way they are carrying on they would realize that the Nazis will never get them down."

Compared With University.

He compared creation of the Empire scheme with the starting of a university. It involved the training of professors and specialists in a dozen different lines.

The tragic events of last spring when France collapsed merely resulted in a speeding up, he said, "and we still hope for further speed."

Air Marshal Bishop reported that a "great number of Americans want to join up" but explained that "the preference must be given to our own boys." Americans, he said, make "beautiful pilots".

He declined to discuss recent reports about the possibility of Canadian and other British pilots moving to the southern United States for training this winter. He explained, however, that snow was rolled on Canadian airfields last winter until they were as "smooth as a polo field".

The main object of the Empire scheme is to provide air crews for the Royal Air Force but squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force will continue to cross the Atlantic, he went on.

The air marshal expressed doubt that the scheme's vast machinery will be scrapped after the war.

"I don't see how we can sit back and be complacent," he said. "The aircraft of the present day has brought the world so much closer together that our whole empire might be considered vulnerable."

The man who is a past master in the dogfights of the last war confessed that he is "looking forward to learning a great deal about present fighter tactics."

ESCAPED MENTAL PATIENT ARRESTED ON MURDER COUNT

Greatest Manhunt in Toronto's History Ends With Capture After Location

HIDES IN HAYLOFT

Toronto, Sept. 25—(CP)—John Kluk, 30-year-old escaped mental patient who brought about one of the greatest manhunts in the history of the Toronto police department, will appear in police court today for preliminary hearing on a charge of murder. He also is charged with attempted murder.

Kluk was captured by two police officers in a rain-swept lane in the west-central section of the city last night, less than 24 hours after 54-year-old Arte Borievich was wounded fatally in his home by a man who drew a revolver and shot him through the neck. Police said Kluk admitted the shooting.

At the time of the Borievich slaying, Kluk was sought in connection with the wounding of John Plachtek, 41, and is in hospital in critical condition. Kluk, who escaped from the Battleford, Sask., mental hospital last Aug. 23, had gone to Plachtek's home to renew acquaintances.

Revolver Confiscated

Police said that when they took Kluk into custody a half-cocked and loaded revolver was found tied around his waist and held in place by a piece of cord. Police quoted him as saying that while hundreds of officers on foot and in squad cars pressed a search for him throughout the metropolitan area, he was hiding in a hay loft near the Borievich home.

Kluk was quoted by officers as saying that after he shot Borievich he ran across a vacant lot to a nearby avenue and entered the loft on the property of Charles Priolo. He left only to buy some food and was captured after he went to the backyard of the Priolo home and asked for a drink of liquor.

Priolo told him to "get out of here" and as the man left the premises, Priolo's daughter, Ida, 16, telephoned police who communicated with a nearby radio car.

Five minutes later Kluk was in custody. He was sighted by Cadet Barry Lorimer, car driver, and Patrol Sgt. Irving Smith leaped from the car and, from behind, threw his arms about Kluk's waist. He admitted he was Kluk and surrendered meekly. Besides the gun, 32 bullets were found in his trousers' pocket. Police said he told them he shot Borievich because the man had called him a "stool pigeon."

When first sighted, Kluk was holding a brown sweater over his head as protection against the rain. Pale, haggard and half-starved, the prisoner ate a hearty meal later in his jail cell. Police had offered a $200 reward for information leading to his capture.

TREATY INDIAN UP FOR MURDER

Edwin Jackson Charged With Shooting Solomon Medicinechild and His 19-Year-Old Daughter

Battleford, Sask., Sept. 25—(CP)—Edwin Jackson, young treaty Indian of Little Pine Reserve near here, appeared before Mr. Justice P. M. Anderson in King's Bench Court Tuesday and pleaded not guilty to a double shooting last June that brought death to Solomon Medicinechild and his 19-year-old daughter Elizabeth.

Crown theory in the murder trial is that Jackson shot Solomon and the girl at close range on the reserve last June 13. Elizabeth died in hospital two days later from bullet wounds.

For the defence J. N. Conroy, K.C., sought through interrogation of witnesses to establish that the girl's parents tried to separate the young couple when a marriage contracted last December between Edwin and Elizabeth according to Indian custom, was no longer acceptable to them.

From Mrs. Alice Medicinechild, the girl's mother, the court heard of a previous Indian marriage of her daughter. It appeared that an Indian marriage involved consent of the parties, and the girl's parents, but without benefit of the church.

German Pocket-Guide Given Canadian Troops

Ottawa, Sept. 25—(CP)—A handy 93-page pocket guide to the German language—"German for Servicemen"—has been provided for Canadian soldiers.

The little book is published by Canadian Legion War Services and the Canadian Association for Adult education primarily for men taking the German course in the legion's educational program.

"In the belief that some knowledge of the German language would furnish a distinct advantage to our soldiers in dealing with the enemy, an attempt has been made here to familiarize the student with the constructions and vocabulary most essential for his purposes," an introductory note says.

The book lists countless words and phrases in common use, as well as many military phrases. Questions and answers in German and English deal with such essential matters as food, lodging and so on.

86th Birthday Of Joseph Braddon Honored by Knights

The regular meeting of the Knights of Columbus was held last evening with a good attendance. A presentation was made to Bro. Joseph Braddon, who will be 86 on October 7th. Grand Knight George Lee presented Bro. Braddon with a box of cigars, also Rev. J. J. Collins presented him with a statute of Christ, which was a gift from Rev. Monsignor J. P. Nicholson, who was unable to be present.

Bro. Braddon thanked Grand Knight Geo. Lee and also Rev. Mgr. Nicholson for their gifts and kindness shown to him.

Grand Knight Geo. Lee spoke very highly of Bro. Braddon, stating that he was the axiom of very regular attendance, and no matter what the weather may be, he still is a very active member. All the members then sang "Happy Birthday Joe", after which Rev. Father Collins, on behalf of Rev. Mgr. Nicholson wished Bro. Braddon a happy birthday.

The general business of the meeting was then resumed. The bingo committee decided that they would give 25 percent of the proceeds of all bingo games to the Red Cross, the Salvation Army, the Canadian Legion and to the Y.M.C.A. for war purposes. It was proposed that the Knights of Columbus hold their annual Columbus banquet on October 14 Bro. Ted Royan and Bro. George O'Brien were appointed to this committee. The meeting then closed with prayer.

RENTAL RATES IN 'WAR AREAS' FIXED BY GOV'T

Announcement Made Rents to Remain Same as at January 2nd Last

BOARD APPOINTED

Ottawa, Sept. 25 (CP)—There are to be no excessive increases in house rentals because of the war, the Government rules emphatically.

In 30-odd municipalities across the country where population has been especially concentrated because of war activity, pushing rents away up, rents are to be pegged at the levels prevailing on Jan. 2 last.

Elsewhere unreasonable charges for housing accommodation may bring prosecution for profiteering under the general regulations of the wartime prices and trade board.

These controls were announced last night in an order by the Board and are effective Oct. 1. The action was taken in response to recent widespread complaints against the degree to which rents were being raised in many municipalities.

In addition to the "standstill" order on rents, which covers apartments, flats and rooms, furnished or unfurnished, as well as houses, wide powers of control are given the new rentals administrator, Mr. Justice W. M. Martin of the Saskatchewan Appeal Court.

May Vary Maximum

The rentals administrator may vary the maximum rentals in special cases. He may require any person to furnish him any information he desires regarding housing accommodation. His determination or variation of maximum rentals is to be final and conclusive. He is to prescribe his own procedure of exercising his powers.

Where no lease was in effect last Jan. 2, but where a lease was in effect sometime in 1939, the rent charged is not to exceed that charged in 1939. The administrator will determine the rental value of any other housing accommodation.

Under the standstill order all leases are automatically amended and any rent paid in advance for the period following Oct. 1 which is above the maximum, is recoverable by the tenant.

The new order by the Board follows up an order-in-council of Sept. 11 last giving the Board power to regulate rents. Now the Board will not only determine maximum rentals but may appoint local committees in specified areas to judge local complaints and applications regarding housing conditions.

Areas Affected

Areas affected by the standstill order are:—

Nova Scotia—Dartmouth, including Woodside; Halifax, including Armdale, Buckingham Station, Dutch Settlement Fairview Station, Falkland, Jollimore, Melville; New Glasgow, including Trenton, Stellarton, Westville; Sydney.

Quebec—Brownsburg and Thetford Mines.

Ontario—Allandale, Barrie; Kingston and Portsmouth; Ottawa, including Eastview, New Edinburgh, Overbrook, Rockliffe, Westboro, and Woodroffe; Parry Sound, Nobel; Trenton; Windsor.

Manitoba—Brandon.

British Columbia — Vancouver, Victoria and Esquimalt.

Berlin Communique

Berlin, Sept. 25 (AP)—British planes dropped high explosive and incendiary bombs in and around Berlin early this morning in their third successive night raid on the German capital, keeping the city's 4,000,000 residents in underground shelters for two hours and 48 minutes.

Authorities said there were "several" civilian casualties and again claimed, as they have after previous British air attacks, that damage was slight and confined largely to homes. They did not mention the extent of industrial or military damage.

They claimed a number of incendiary bombs fell on a hospital "but because of the energetic action of security services, there was no damage."

Most of the British bombs fell in the outskirts of Berlin, these authorities claimed.

Neutral observers, who said the raid lacked the intensity of other bombardments of Berlin, reported they could see no fires in any part of the city. They said fewer planes apparently crossed the centre of the capital than in other attacks and defence fire seemed less intense but the whistle of bombs clearly was audible above the roar of anti-aircraft guns.

As British raids appeared to become part of the city's routine Berlin stores reported a strong demand for deck chairs to bring some comfort to shelters.

On the diplomatic front, attention centred on a conference between the German Foreign Minister, Ribbentrop, newly returned from an axis parley in Rome, and Roman Serrano Suner, Spain's Minister of Government, who came back to Berlin after visiting the western battlegrounds.

Their meeting strengthened the impression current here that Spain played an important part in the discussions at Rome but there still was no hint of the specific character of these talks.

The German press continued general references to "community interests between Europe and Africa" and promised a "diplomatic and political as well as military offensive" by the axis in the near future.

TWO PRISONERS ARE CAPTURED

Alberta Forest Rangers Take Escapees Heading for United States Border

Calgary, Sept. 25—(CP)—Irwin Hartman and Alfred Shoenberg, two German prisoners who escaped from the Kananaskis internment camp Sunday night were captured late yesterday by three Alberta forest rangers, about 25 miles south of the camp.

The prisoners, captured on a forest trail in the foothills, were heading for the United States border. They will be brought to Calgary today by Constables H. Elvin and W. Cobbie of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Word of the capture was received by R.C.M.P. officials here from Joe Kovach, district ranger for Kananaskis area, who said he and two assistant rangers, Bruce Broderick and Joe Brysh, spotted the men. After the men were bound Kovach was said to have placed them under guard in a forest ranger's cabin while he communicated with police.

Kovach was understood to have received instructions from police to take the prisoners back to the internment camp.

One Brought From Windsor

Hartman, 20 years of age, was brought to the internment camp from Windsor, Ont., where he had joined the Essex Scottish regiment in September, 1939. He had described himself as a native of Calgary, "an honest to goodness cowboy" and a participant in 1937 and 1938 in the Calgary and Lethbridge stampedes.

Eleven men have escaped from Canadian internment camps since outbreak of war last September, but with finding of Hartman and the 34-year-old Schoenberg, all have been captured. Seven escaped from Ontario internment camps and two, Henry Hesse, 29, and Henry Feldbauer, 43, from prairie internment camps. The latter two are serving penitentiary terms for their escape.

Manual Fischer, 29, who fled a northwestern Ontario camp and succeeded in getting into the United States before capture, is being held at International Falls, Minn., pending a ruling by immigration authorities.

Frank Albertson, Brian Donlevy and Broderick Crawford in "When the Daltons Rode," starting next at the Capitol.

CANADA'S NAVY GROWS

The times are making the Canadian navy a mighty power for defence. The story of what has been achieved by the Canadian warships and other craft in patrolling the sea, in escort, and on guard, has been made familiar by the official news films but the full importance must await the victorious close of the war.

The navy is not only serving Canada, helping to build the defences strong against aggression but it is also relieving British ships to play their part of the world defence of Britain. Canada has had the greatest model of a navy in history, the Royal Navy which has proved itself for centuries as a bulwark and as the link which knits the Empire into a unit.

Six destroyers, once part of the United States navy, have been or will be commissioned in the Canadian navy and will bear the names of rivers which flow through both Canada and the United States—in tribute to the spirit of goodwill which has bound the two North American nations.

The growth of Canada's navy is phenomenal and that it will continue to grow may be taken for granted.

The influence of the navy is apparent from the length of the waiting list of many thousands of young men who would serve on the seas. The navy has thrilled the young life of Canada so that there never will be any lack of men to man the boats which protect the commerce and the defences of Canada and play their role in the Empire defence.

In this past year the Western World has come to understand how the Royal Navy of Britain has been the first defence of the Americas and in fact of world freedom.

The world can now understand whom to thank all through the years for the times of peace which did exist for there is no doubt that without a powerful Britain the Hun would have pounced long years before upon the weaker states.

So Canada in the western world realizes the part she has to play in defence. In the United States the importance of the fleet arm in protecting the two continents of the Americas is clearly appreciated for it has been publicly stated that the Royal Navy has been the safeguard all through the generations on the Atlantic. Navies on this side of the Atlantic will be greater than they have ever been before.

HUMANITY WILL NOT FORGET DEED OF DARKNESS

Babes and little children whom Hitler's monsters in a submarine sent to their death in the Atlantic a week ago in the darkness of night mutely plead before the bar of humanity and in the courts of Heaven "like angels trumpet-tongued against the deep damnation of their taking off." These tender little children will be the ghosts that will disturb the rest of the cruel German submarine commander who, in totalitarian fiendishness destroyed them and bring his condemnation and that of the whole cruel, murderous Nazi group dealing death for no advantage but in lust for blood and in the love of seeing innocent babes and children suffer.

As men and women and children read the story of little bodies washing about in the waves, there was an instinctive feeling of horror across the world, there was a shudder as the thought crossed the minds of millions of parents that even so would the Huns do to the millions of other children anywhere if it served their lust for slaughter and they had the power to strike.

But the lust of the Nazi aggressor for blood brings its revenge. Friends of the dead little ones rise to strike a blow against the enemy that approves and allows such deeds of horror. The father of five of the victims on receipt of the news of their deaths, immediately enlisted. His eleven-year-old daughter who is lost had written home, "We have had lift practices. In case our ship was to be sunck we would put our lifebelts on and jump into our lifeboat." And here are the simple words of her ten-year-old sister, also lost, in a letter home from the ship so soon to be doomed, the letter being covered with crosses for kisses. "Gussie and I feed the sea gulls with bissets. Wen we was having milk a bell went for evry baby to go put on life belts."

These little victims need no counsel to plead for them in the eternal court of justice. Their child words sound the deathknell of Nazism.

CANADIANS PROUD OF SECOND WAR LOAN

Success of Canada's great second war loan which was oversubscribed by more than forty-two million dollars was something of which the people are proud for it indicates clearly the willingness of the Canadians to lend their money to their country in its war effort. It is furthermore a proof of the wealth of this young nation, Canada, which is coming to play so great a part in world affairs, for Canada is rich in resources and in the manhood and womanhood which have developed and will continue to develop these resources in the interests of the democratic way of life and for the preservation of British and Anglo-Saxon ideals.

All walks of Canadian life hold pride in the raising of over a third of a billion dollars for the second loan since the beginning of the war. Individual subscriptions came in freely and the citizens of moderate means placed at the service of the country a portion of his and her wealth.

Every dollar of this loan is a bullet which strikes a blow for freedom, not only for its maintenance in the British Empire and in the neutral world but also for freedom which has been crushed under the heel of the Nazis in central and northwest Europe.

Every dollar in this loan means a hole in the armor of Hitler and his fellow thunderer Mussolini and helps to end their violent ways.

No More Hitler Miracles

By EUGENE LENNHOFF
(United Correspondents)
(C-25)

Before the war, conversation with Germans about the National Socialist regime revealed a curious attitude of mind in some who were understood to be anti-Nazi. For, although declaring themselves opposed to Nazi principles and not concealing their dislike of the Nazi leaders, they always made an exception of Hitler. For them the Fuehrer was an almost superhuman phenomenon, a mystic being, who seemed a cut above the murderers and political thugs who form the bulk of his friends and associates.

We need no reminding to-day of the unscrupulous methods employed by Nazi propaganda to raise Hitler to the pedestal he now occupies. Goebbels, Rosenberg, Streicher and company resorted to every kind of blasphemy in order to stamp Hitler as a saint and divinity, at the very least, a worker of miracles. Everything this man did—whether it was the reoccupation of the Rhineland, German remilitarization, the occupation of Austria or the rape of Czechoslovakia—everything was interpreted as the act of a superior being, of a man of more than mortal stature.

This mentality became a serious danger when it spread to a large part of Europe during the first year of war. The quick overrunning of Poland, the successful invasion of Norway and Denmark, the "victories" over Holland and Belgium and, lastly, the utter collapse of France after scarcely a month of blitzkrieg convinced not only governments, but whole nations that to Hitler nothing was impossible and Hitler himself did everything to confirm the belief. His speeches, in which he boasted of his triumphs and foretold further moves, were no longer the expressions of a wise statesman and commander conscious of his strength; more and more, they became the ravings of an exalte. Few people knew that these outbursts were mere histrionics, performances by an extremely clever actor who calculated the exact effects his unscrupulous methods would produce.

This international attitude of mind reached its zenith after the capitulation of the Bordeaux government. Statesmen and their peoples were held in the spell of Berlin, convinced that nothing could any longer avert the downfall of Europe and the end of democracy everywhere or check the triumphant course of the great magician. Some countries were even tempted to submit voluntarily to Hitler and to throw away their own liberties, in the hope of obtaining "more favourable terms". Rumania, for example, reversed her whole policy to please him. She renounced the British guarantee, oblivious of the favours shown her by Great Britain, and entrusted the government of the country to a pronounced pro-Nazi, who included in his cabinet several leaders of the ill-famed Iron Guard, the murderers of two former Prime Ministers.

British engineers in the oil industry were forced to abandon their businesses and leave the country at forty-eight hours' notice, and Rumanian oil was placed at Hitler's disposal by a gross violation of British interests. The net result of this self-immolation was that the Fuehrer, having graciously accepted these sacrifices and promised Rumania his protection, immediately pointed a pistol at the head of his new vassel and forced her to submit tamely to her own dismemberment.

At one time, when international belief in the miracles had grown to such extraordinary dimensions, many well-disposed people throughout the world lost hope in Britain's cause. Influential opinion in America held that Great Britain would be "knocked out" within thirty days. If the steel and concrete of the Maginot Line could not withstand Hitler's assaults, what hope was there for a wall of mere men? From all quarters came professions of sympathy for British courage, of admiration for a heroic resistance. But all of them conveyed an unmistakable feeling that such valour was wasted — the battle was lost before it had even begun.

When Hitler addressed his "last appeal" to Britain in his Reichstag speech on July 19th, many people outside England hoped that the British government would grasp at this straw and thus at the eleventh hour avert the dreadful fate, the "destruction without precedent", so often threatened by Hitler, Goering and Goebbels.

But Britain had other views. The magic spell had never worked upon Englishmen. Neither the people nor their leaders ever believed in the Hitler miracle or embraced the inglorious gospel which preached that resistance to Nazi forces was hopeless. On the contrary, they had seen how the miracle working failed against England at the very moment when his successes on the continent reached their highest pinnacle. Indeed, if there had been any "miracle", the British themselves had performed it — at Dunkirk, by the withdrawal of the British Expeditionary Force after it had been cut off by Hitler in Flanders.

Besides boasting loudly and repeatedly that he would bring England to her knees by August 15th at latest, Hitler inspired such faith in his miraculous powers that the organisers of the German "Strength through Joy" movement actually sold to their members tickets for Brighton and other English seaside resorts for that date. However, this new Hitler miracle, proclaimed so loudly all over the world, is still awaited. England has not been "knocked out", either in thirty days or by August 15th. On the contrary, her defences have been so far strengthened and her preparations to deal with an attack brought to such perfection that now at the end of September, more than two months after the vaunted crossing of the Channel by amphibian tanks, Hitler has still not dared to launch his invasion of the British Isles. True, the German air arm has for weeks been hurling itself into the "Battle of Britain" at enormous cost in men and material. Day after day fresh waves of bombers and fighters cross the English coast. But their attacks (and Hitler's magic powers) break against the strong defence of the R. A. F. and the fighting spirit of Britain's splendid pilots.

In whatever way events may shape themselves in the days to come, and whether Hitler does or does not risk an invasion this year, one thing is certain. The British defences exclude the possibility of further "miracles", no matter what forces Hitler throws into the fray. Should he decide upon an invasion, he must reckon with a resistance that will shatter every shred of belief in his magic powers.

SIX HOURS SLEEP

Health League of Canada.

Dr. J. P. S. Cathcart, writing in the National Health Review, gives it as his opinion that most adults spent too much time in sleeping. He is evidently of the opinions that six hours a day rather than 10, form an adequate amount of sleep for the adult.

"Most patients", he says, "and not a few physicians, are still impressed by the admonitions of childhood that sleep, and lots of it, is extremely essential."

While this applies to children, Dr. Cathcart asserts that there is good reason to think that in adults the importance of sleep is overrated, and that most of our patients are troubled not by lack of sleep but by over-concern regarding little delay in getting to sleep, or of frequent waking, or of a tired feeling in the following morning. One's personal opinion is that most persons, unless kept awake because of pain, sleep more than they think they do."

Belgian Congo Carries On the Fight

By ARTHUR WAUTERS,
Famous Belgian Statesman and Writer.

M. Wauters has had a remarkable career. He volunteered in the last war and won great military distinction in the Belgian Army. Since that time he has gained many academic honours and become a prominent figure in Belgian politics. He is a Professor of Brussels University and a member of the Belgian Colonial Institute. He has travelled extensively in Belgian Congo and written a number of books on Colonial questions.

He is a member of the Belgian Chamber of Deputies and has held a number of ministerial posts. He was for a long time political editor of the great Belgian newspaper "Le Peuple".

Czechoslovakia lost its independence in one night. Poland resisted heroically for about a month. Belgium was vanquished in 17 days, Holland in 5. The French army surrendered after less than a month of war of movement.

These lightning successes may have elated the man in the street in Germany. But they have not yet brought Hitler the final victory. They have not broken the will of resistance of the conquered countries. The Poles fought at Narvik at the side of the French and the Norwegians who took the town. The Dutch fleet was at Dunkirk. Czech airmen, and those of free France, are ploughing the sky of Germany.

The case of the Belgian Congo illustrated clearly the fragile nature of some of Hitler's metropolitan military triumphs. The capitulation of the King of the Belgians has not handed over to Germany all the live forces of the Belgian nation. The permanent interests of Belgium across the seas are intact. The enormous wealth of the Congo is outside Hitler's grasp. The occupation of Belgium in Europe has not given his possession of the key to Belgium in Africa.

The military capitulation of May 27, was no more than a sad incident, in the gigantic struggle between two opposing world concepts. There is no armistice between Belgium and Germany. There is no peace treaty. There has been no recognition of the Belgian defeat, either legally or morally. It has a purely local character. There never was a more futile victory.

The Belgian Congo and the free men who are outside of Belgium and France continue the struggle at the side of Britain, their ally. They had appealed for the military assistance of the guarantor Power and Britain responded promptly and loyally. They mean to play the game by her side, remain faithful in good or ill fortune. Their faith in Britain's victory is complete. Those who live in Great Britain can watch day by day evidences of her might, her foresight and her resolve.

When hostilities began between Germany and Belgium, the resources of the Congo were placed at the disposal of the Allies. After the collapse of France, the Pierlot Government had the wisdom to invest its Minister of Colonies with the trusteeship of the Congo. M. De Vleeschauwer is now on his second visit to Britain for the purpose of carrying out his mandate.

There is no need to insist on the strategic importance of the Belgian Congo. A glance at the central position which this Colony occupies in Africa will show that it controls the great axial communications of the Black Continent. It is a stronghold of first rank, an ideal vantage point for the most daring defensive and offensive operations. It forms a shield for important areas of the British Empire.

We have little doubt that in their conversations with the Belgian Minister of Colonies, the British statesmen will have called his attention to the danger of possible traitors in an equatorial possession where one third of the white population is not Belgian.

A colonial empire 80 times the size of Belgium thus continues the struggle, with all its resources, by the side of Britain. It brings to its great Ally its 10 million inhabitants working in the mines and plantations. It brings, above all, its co-operation in the economic blockade, the geographic conditions of which are liable to constant change. It brings its administrative personnel, the technical experts of its colonial enterprise who have escaped the German trap. It brings 400,000 tons of shipping, a first class system of land communications, its airways with machines, personnel and equipment complete. It also brings one of the greatest rivers of the world.

Finally, it brings, year after year, 200,000 tons of copper, 50,000 tons of cotton, 20,000 tons of coffee, 15,000 tons of sugar, 160,000 tons of oil, gold, tin, cobalt, and immensely rich iron deposits.

It is easy to visualise the part which the Congo may play in the economic war. For, it is Germany that is besieged, not Britain. Hitler holds many Europeans in subjection. He finds himself in a position not unlike that of Napoleon after his great victory at Tilsit which marked the climax of his military successes and was soon followed by defeat and disaster.

As against the 3,500 kilometres of coastline held by Hitler, there is the undisputed British mastery of the seas controlling the international trade routes. And there is the growing support of the greatest of neutral Powers, the United States.

There are the immense reserves of raw material held by the Belgian Congo, and the determination of this Colony to stand to the full by its pledges. There is the loyalty of its populations who, while quick to detect any weakening of the colonial Powers, seem to have realized at once that the military defeat at home by no means struck Belgium off the map of the world. Belgium has, in fact, maintained intact its prestige in Africa, even as her colonial assets have remained unimpaired.

Beyond its metropolitan frontiers, Belgium is determined to fight, by the side of her friends and Allies, to save the African population from the experience of imposed racialism exactly as hundreds of millions of Europeans are ready to shed their blood in order to avert from themselves that same calamity and to safeguard those permanent values which are the foundation of all human dignity.—British Ministry of Information.

INTRIGUE THAT MIGHT HAVE BETRAYED B. E. F.

British Officer Foils Deep Plotting

A remarkable story of a mysterious French Major, a secret consultation between German and Belgian officers, and the astuteness of a British officer who averted disaster to the B. E. F., was revealed by the War Office recently.

But for the officer's quick realization of the treachery which was going on the B. E. F. might have been taken in the rear and their evacuation prevented. His speedy decision and the rearguard action of the 12th Royal Lancers in the Nieuport-Dixmude sector on May 27-28 saved the day.

Reconnaissance having shown that the Belgian Army's retreat would expose the left flank of the 50th Division guarding Ypres, the 12th Royal Lancers were detailed to protect the left flank of the 3rd Division to the north of the 50th Division.

The sapper officer was sent off to demolish the bridges over the Yser Canal, which the 12th Royal Lancers had been ordered to deny to the enemy.

First contact with the Nazis was at Dixmude, an officer of "C" Squadron reporting that a black Mercedes-Benz car carrying a white flag and four fully-armed German officers had passed him travelling at high speed.

Later, at Nieuport, the occupants were talking with Belgian staff officers and what appeared to be French officers.

The only car seen again managed to recross at Dixmude, but three officers in the back seat were killed.

It seems certain that the Germans reported that there were no troops in the area of Nieuport-Dixmude, and that the bridges were unblown.

The Mystery Major

The Belgian officer in charge of the demolition chambers at Dixmude was told that the bridges must be blown and pressed the switch, but there was no result, and it was obvious that the charges had been tampered with.

Then a French Major said that he would take command.

The British officer retorted, "Where are your troops for the defence of this bridge? I cannot see any," and was told, "They are just the other side of the canal and will be here immediately."

He went to look for himself, found there were none, and returned hot-foot in search of the "French Major," of whom no trace could be found.

The Belgian officer was persuaded to show an R. E. officer who had now reached Dixmude where and how the charges were laid. With the assistance of some new fuses and an exploder the bridge was blown.

Germans Surprised

About ten minutes later, with "C" squadron cars barely in position, the first party of German motor cyclists arrived "full tilt" at the bridge, followed closely by infantry in lorries.

It was obvious from the way they arrived and their look of surprise when they found the bridge blown that they had been told that there was no adequate defence on one side, and that the bridge was intact.

Well-directed machine-gun fire soon accounted for the motor cyclists and for many of the men in the leading lorries. Half an hour later German ambulances arrived, and, contrary to Nazi practice, were allowed to remove their wounded unmolested.—The Sunday Post, London.

GETTING IT CLEAR

Calgary-Albertan.

A precocious five-year-old son of a professor asked his father what the exact meaning was of the verse beginning: "Jack Spratt could eat no fat".

"In simple terms", said the professor, "it means that Jack Spratt could assimilate no adipose tissue. His wife, on the contrary, possessed an aversion for the more muscular portions of the epithelium. And so, between them both, you see, they removed all the foreign substance from the surface of the utilitarian utensil, commonly called a platter. Does that make it clear, my son?"

"Perfectly clear", ejaculated the son. "The lack of lucidity in these alleged Mother Goose rhymes is amazingly apparent to one with an intellect above the moronic grade."

Injection of Varicose Veins Now Used in Most Cases

During the last war recruits with varicose veins of the legs were rejected. Those very anxious to enlist were sent into hospital and the varicose veins were removed by surgery. This meant about three weeks in hospital and three or more months of "light duty" before they were able to go on full duty. In a number of cases they went on full duty too soon and other veins became varicosed. At that time the injection of veins, although known, was not used, in fact, was held in ill repute.

Today, due to the use of improved solutions and methods, the injection method is used in nearly all cases. Thus in Medical Clinics of North America, from the clinic of Dr. Samuel Silbert, Mt. Sinai Hospital, New York, we read:

The treatment of varicose veins by the injection method is one of the most notable advances in treatment in the past ten years. The tedious stripping operations which were formerly employed have now been almost universally discarded. The success of the injection method in thousands of cases abroad and in this country has resulted in its acceptance by the profession as the method of choice in the treatment of varicose veins.

The cause of varicose veins is not know but the fact that it runs in some families shows a hereditary tendency. It is also believed to be due to gland conditions in some cases. The fact that it occurs so often in motormen, policemen, clerks or others who stand for long periods, and in those wearing circular garters is considered an aggravating factor but not the real cause.

Before the veins are injected, an elastic bandage is applied from the ankle to the knee. If the patient is able to walk around for a few hours without pain, it shows that the outer varicosed veins can be safely injected, as the deeper veins are able to return the blood to the heart.

The injection method is "simple, painless, and safe". The fluid injected causes the walls of the veins to grow together and become hard like twine. It means a few visits to the surgeon's office, no loss of time, no anaesthetic, no stay in hospital. In some cases the large vein high up in the thigh must be first tied off, but this can also be done in the surgeon's office.

19-Year-Old Gunner Tells Of Gunnery Duel

London, Sept. 23 — (CP) — Bombing planes of the Royal Air Force, as well as Spitfires and Hurricanes, get their share of engagements with the enemy, as this story, told by a 19-year-old gunner in a heavy bomber squadron, will attest.

"We were on our way back from a raid in the Ruhr. Tracer bullets started flying past the turret and I saw three fighters coming at us from the rear. The one on the starboard quarter seemed to be pretty close so I shot at him.

"The first burst seemed to hit. If you can get your first burst all right you can usually guarantee to get your following ones in too, unless things are particularly awkward.

"So I just kept pumping quick bursts into him. An explosive shell from his cannon hit the armor plating of my turret. I didn't realize at the time that the shell had actually hit us. I know the bang deafened me for 36 hours afterwards.

"I got in a few more bursts. I saw him turn over and then I swung the turret on to the second fighter who had been closing in, firing his four guns. Out of the corner of my eye I noticed the first go down in flames.

"This second aircraft I missed with the first three bursts. But the fourth hit him all right and after that I just kept repeating the performance. He was pretty deadly too and did further damage to our plane.

"Then the fighter curled away. That was the last I saw of him, but the second pilot said he saw him go down out of control.

"The third enemy fighter closed in to about 300 yards but wouldn't come any closer. I got a bit fed up so I fired a good long burst in his direction and he sheered off. We didn't see him again.

"Altogether I've done just over 20 raids over Germany but that was the most exciting one of the lot."

They Forgot In the Flurry

When the sirens wailed, waitresses calmly shepherded the crowds of diners to a shelter in another part of the premises.

No one seemed worried — there was no need — the "All Clear" went almost immediately.

Manager and waitresses trooped back into the restaurant. But many of the customers had vanished — without paying their bills.

Some called within the next few days to explain they had overlooked payment in the excitement.

Others are still suffering from "loss of memory"!

FINNISH SWAMPS BEING CLEARED

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Helsinki, Sept. 25—(AP)—Large Finnish swamps and forests are being cleared to give new homes and farms to 12 per cent of the population—evacuees of war-lost Karelia.

These 420,000 Karelians, along with 15,000 from the areas of Salla, Kuusamo and Hango came away from the ceded territories with the fewest of personal possessions, and with no land or jobs to which they could easily go.

The government, recognizing the Karelians' problem as the most pressing of those it is making strenuous efforts to solve, has set about with outright grants of cash for emergency relief, by allotment of dwellings, lands and tools for work.

This is the situation at the moment:

Vast areas of swampland are being cleared, to provide new soil.

The state has purchased sections of large western farms, and allotted these sections to Karelians, who need pay nothing for five years; eventual payment will be to the State, on an instalment plan.

Forest areas are being converted in the central sections.

State-owned land will be given outright to those in extreme need.

Two-thousand fabricated homes, gifts from the Swedish government, are being erected in sections outside Helsinki; private gifts provided 150 of these homes for eastern Karelians. Finnish sawmills are turning out some thousands of houses, ready to be assembled, chiefly two-room structures.

British Must Succeed At Dakar States Herald Tribune

New York, Sept. 25 (CP)—The New York Times said editorially today that the attack by Gen. Charles De Gaulle's Free Frenchmen on Dakar, backed by British Forces, may rank with the Battle of Oran "as one of the decisive engagements of the war."

Editorializing upon possible reasons for the move on the West African port, The Times concluded:

"The Germans have succeeded in setting Frenchmen against Frenchmen and breaking the only true alliance in Europe, but the war is only in its first round and the spiritual dissension sown by the Nazis—their cruelest victory to date—may in the end prove their undoing. It has not deprived Britain of friends or the power of offensive. And Hitler cannot build a continental empire on a foundation civil war."

The Herald Tribune termed the incident a "tragedy" and said the vote by which the French Cabinet "decided to strike hands with Hitler have led inevitably and inexorably to this end." It added that Gen. De Gaulle and the British "cannot now afford to fail at Dakar" for it is an operation "which must succeed, and in its success will stand as a first brilliantly offensive stroke, comparable to those of the Nazis."

Delegation May Go To Great Britain

By R. K. CARNEGIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Sept. 25—(CP)—Inquiries from the United Kingdom as to Canada's ability to supply foodstuffs on a much larger scale than heretofore has brought before the cabinet the proposal that a party of government officials headed by a minister go almost immediately to Great Britain to ascertain just what the needs are and how best they can be met, The Canadian Press learned today.

The question has been before the cabinet each recent meeting and indications are a decision will be reached this week. As the inquiries have been chiefly for farm products, officials familiar with Canada's ability to grow the foods required would be selected if the government decides to send a party to London.

"If an official party goes over," said a government spokesman, "it will not be with the object of seeking a market for Canadian products but rather to see what the needs are and make provision to supply them without haggling over prices.

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw — Services in St. Mark's Church, Bonarlaw on Sunday last at 7.30 p.m. and in St. Thomas Church, 8th line of Rawdon at 2.30 p.m. were conducted by Rev. T. S. Gault of Campbellford. Rev. Canon Swayne conducted Harvest Thanksgiving services the same day at Campbellford and Warkworth.

The many friends of Mr. George Rosebush of Trenton were shocked to hear of his sudden death at his summer home at Salmon Lake on Sunday morning last. He resided for many years at Springbrook and was employed by the Canadian National Railways. At the time of his retirement from business seven years ago he occupied the position of roadmaster. He was a prominent member of the community at Springbrook and later at Trenton and will be greatly missed by a host of friends The funeral service was held at Trenton Tuesday afternoon at 3 p.m. at King Street United Church of which he was a faithful member.

Miss Evelyn Watt and Miss Marjorie McKeown of the teaching staff of Pembroke public schools, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Barlow on Friday last. They were attending the Sutherland-Thompson wedding which took place Saturday.

Group No. 3 of the Springbrook Women's Institute sponsored a very successful dance in the Orange Hall at Springbrook on Friday evening last. There was a splendid attendance. The proceeds will be for war work. Excellent music for both square and round dancing was furnished by the popular Austin's Orchestra of Wooler. Mr. Ritchie Mason was floor manager.

Wedding anniversaries seem to be frequent in this vicinity during the last few days. Mr. and Mrs. John E. Brown celebrated Sept. 21st, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Baker Sept. 22nd, and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Barlow Sept. 23rd.

Messrs. Bell and Barlow unloaded a car load of hard coal at this station this week and Mr. Mel Fitzgerald one car load at Springbrook last week.

Prize for Practical Work in First Year, given by Dr. O. A. Brownson, won by Miss Geraldine Loyst, presented by Rev. Father Meehan.

Word was received by friends here of the death in Penticton, B.C., of a former resident, Eugene Gibson. News of his death came as a shock as it was not known that he had been ill. He was born in Picton, a son of the late Sheriff James Gibson and Mrs. Gibson. His wife died five months ago and two brothers, Merton F. and Harry J. Gibson predeceased him.

A good rain on Tuesday will be of real benefit to the farmers. The ground has been too hard for plowing with horses and now that the ground is softer this work can be proceeded with. Pastures and seeding will also benefit. As a result of the prolonged dry spell, the pastures have burned up and there has been a great drop in the flow of milk.

Representatives of a Toronto amusement company arrived in town Tuesday afternoon to make preparations for a midway at the fair Friday and Saturday. It will be one of the biggest ever seen in Picton.

The funeral of Miss Emma Jane Ferguson was held at Prince Edward County Home Tuesday afternoon with Rev. J. P. Reycraft officiating. Interment was in Glenwood cemetery. Miss Ferguson was for many years a resident of Hallowell township and was in her 67th year.

Mrs. G. M. Ricks entertained friends at an afternoon tea on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Walmsley were in Kingston a few days this week.

Friends are pleased to know that Major James Inrig of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, C.A.S.F., who was injured in an automobile accident near Barrie, is progressing favorable in the military hospital in Toronto. He suffered a broken back and will be in a cast for some time.

Miss Dorothy Carter left this week to resume teaching at Western University, London, Ont.

Mrs. W. H. Williamson and Mrs. Beatrice Hamilton returned to Toronto this week after a stay with Mrs. Jones Colliver.

Mrs. Cal Spencer and mother, Mrs. Harvie have returned from a visit to Toronto.

Rev. R. E. Newman & Mrs. Newman Honored at Holloway St. Church

Tribute is Paid to Services of Minister and His Wife on Eve of Departure for Waterford

GIFTS PRESENTED

Rev. Royal E. Newman, minister of Holloway Street United Church for the past six years, who has been chosen minister of the United Church at Waterford, Ontario, and Mrs. Newman were honored last evening at a congregational gathering held in the parlors of Holloway Street Church. Mr. and Mrs. Newman are leaving shortly for their new field.

Mr. Arthur Sills was chairman of the meeting and called on the Rev. J. D. P. Knox and Mr. George T. Woodley for prayer. After an hour spent in community singing led by Mr. William Colclough, Mr. William Connor contributed a piano solo, Mr. Colclough a vocal solo and Mr. Sam Anglin a vocal solo which were splendidly rendered.

Mr. Sills thereupon invited Rev. Mr. Knox to the platform who in turn invited Mr. and Mrs. Newman to come forward.

Address is Read

After a few well chosen remarks on Mr. and Mrs. Newman's splendid services to the church for the past six years, the chairman requested Mrs. Sweetnam, president of the Woman's Association to read the following address:

The Address

Rev. R. E. Newman:
Dear Pastor and Friend.—

You see before you this evening the congregation to whom you have ministered and among whom you have lived and labored for several years.

We have come that we may unite in bidding you a kind though a somewhat sad farewell, and to wish you God speed as you leave us to unite with another congregation whom your Lord and Master is calling you to serve.

Six years ago you came amongst us a stranger among strangers. We gave you and your wife a hearty welcome to our church and to our homes for we had been assured by those who had been appointed to select a worthy man to minister to us in Holy Things, that you were without doubt the one whom God had chosen for us and without doubt you were a Spirit filled man whose labors your Lord would surely bless.

You have labored amongst and for the people prayerfully and sympathetically but now our ways must part. But this serves to remind us that all earthly relationships are but for a time and must be severed. "The best of friends must part." Engagements must cease. The athlete enters upon the strife. He fights well. He runs well, but the end must come, whether he is the victor or the vanquished, the fight is over the race is ended.

The minister begins his pastorate, he preaches well, he works well, he prays well, but there comes a day when his last sermon is preached. The last hymn is sung. The faithful choir's last anthem has passed into silence. The Benediction is pronounced. He shakes hands, silently at the door. The people move quietly and it may be tearfully away. The janitor turns the key, darkness prevails. The man of God goes home in silence, his work is done, all his efforts may not have borne fruit, but certainly all have not failed. He planted, he watered, and the fruit is still maturing. Some may not mature well but all have not failed. In after years he rejoices as he thinks of the days and the labors of the past. Every life may be carefully recorded, written upon the tables of memory and lived over again to one's great pleasure and satisfaction. We are told that memory is the faculty of the mind that retains a knowledge of past events.

A great writer said that "memory is the faculty of bringing back into consciousness that which has passed out of consciousness." The power to people the present with the population of the past. A recent writer said that into every life is built a chamber over the door of which is written the word memory, and it is a poor life that has no treasures in the past as well as hopes for the future.

Every great life hangs the walls of its home with pictures as the time goes by and gladly now and then shuts itself in with the spent years while memory looks upon old faces, listens to silent voices and revives experiences of other days. And we trust that when you enter into those silent halls you may see again, with some measure of pleasure some faces and deeds of kindness done, and now in token of our appreciation of your services and in token of the esteem in which you are held by us, we present you each with a wrist watch. And may you as you look at them be reminded of the congregation of the Holloway St. United Church in the City of Belleville.

Presentations

Mrs. Coulter presented the watch to Mrs. Newman and Mr. Fulton the watch to Mr. Newman.

Rev. Mr. Newman and Mrs. Newman expressed to the congregation their deep appreciation and gratitude and added that they had done their best, which was verified by the splendid representation of all the organizations of the church present at the gathering. Mr. and Mrs. Newman will be greatly missed. Mr. Newman particularly among the sick and those in trouble, his kindly sympathy and his prayers having been a source of great comfort to all with whom he came in contact and Mrs. Newman in her ready response to do her part towards the uplifting and bringing in of the Gospel.

The meeting closed with the hymn, "Blest be the tie that binds" and the National Anthem was sung. Refreshments followed, a very fine social time being spent together.

South Bay

South Bay, Sept. 25—Mr. Austin Smith, native of Alberta, arrived at the Main Duck island over the week end to begin his new duties as radio beacon operator. Mr. Smith arrived at New York from England last week and has been at sea four months, being radio operator on a Greek steamer. Mr. Smith told the Intelligencer correspondent that he is confident that England will come out victorious.

Mr. Bruce Branner, operator at the Duck for a season and a half has been transferred elsewhere.

Fair Catches

Catches of whitefish and trout coming into the Duck island colony have been fair, according to the fishermen there. Lifts of deep water ciscoes are somewhat better, and Point Traverse fishermen report fair catches of these fish. Indian Point fishermen, it is understood, have suffered damage by high winds which filled their fishing gear with black moss.

Dr. and Mrs. G. N. Browne, Toronto, are visitors at the "White House" this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Brooker, Main Duck, spent the week end at their home at Milford.

6th Sidney

6th Sidney — The anniversary service of Scott's church, was held on Sunday morning with Rev. Davis of Cannifton as guest preacher.

Sunday guests and callers of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Scott were Mrs. W. D. Ketcheson of Toronto, Mr. D. Ketcheson of Frankford, Mr. and Mrs. R. Read and Ronnie Yateman of Frankford, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Moon also Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Copeland and children.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Burkitt, 4th Sidney, Mr. S. Sine, Mrs. Marian Sine and children of Rawdon were Sunday guests of Mr. M. Sine and Mrs. Vera Sine.

Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Sharpe of Belleville, were dinner guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lott.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Dafoe were callers of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Gray of the 4th Sidney, on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Richards of Murray and Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Rose spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Alton Sine.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Jepson of Brooklin were overnight guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lott.

Mr. and Mrs. Alton Sine and son, attended a birthday party of Mrs. B. Morton's of Belleville, on Sept. 16th.

Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Chapman were Miss Hazel and Winnie Chapman of Hines' Creek, Alberta, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Roraback of Milford and Mrs. C. Acker and Walter, 4th Sidney.

Rev. L. Scott has been making pastoral calls in this neighborhood the past week.

HOUSEWIFE SMOTHERS BOMBS

London, Sept. 25 (CP).—Mrs. Jane Kennedy, London housewife was her own fireman today when two incendiary bombs fell on her front doorstep and beside the garage. She smothered one bomb with a bucket of sand and covered the other with a helmet. "To my amazement," she said, "it smothered it."

AT THE McCARTHY

"I Married Adventure"

Amazing thrills that came to Osa Johnson during the twenty-five years of exploring with her husband, Martin Johnson, in the wilds of Africa, have been made into one of the most thrilling motion pictures to come to the screen, "I Married Adventure" which is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre: "I Married Adventure" is the kind of entertainment everyone enjoys and perhaps never again will there be such a fine or great, true-life story of the calibre of "I Married Adventure," we urge you to see it. The program also includes on the stage (in person) Morgan Thomas and his band, featuring Eddie Darby. Selected short subjects including Fox News events, an all-star comedy "Blamed For A Blonde" and an amusing cartoon "A Dog in a Mansion."

"Mutiny on The Blackhawk"

(Hi-Ya Buck) Andy Devine, Richard Arlen, Noah Beery, Constance Moore and an excellent supporting cast in "Mutiny on The Blackhawk" also George O'Brien in "Trouble in Sundown" will both be shown on the same program, next, at the McCarthy Theatre, in addition to "Terry and the Pirates" Columbia Studios, greatest serial production.

"The Boys From Syracuse"

The booking of "The Boys From Syracuse" featuring Allan Jones, Rosemary Lane, Joe Penner and Martha Raye, is proudly announced by Vince Freeman, manager of the McCarthy Theatre and it will be presented at an early date, following "Mutiny on the Blackhawk."

AT THE BELLE

"Gold Rush Maisie"

Maisie, the stranded showgirl character whom Ann Sothern created so successfully in the original film of that name returns again in "Gold Rush Maisie," third of the series, which comes next to the Belle Theatre. Maisie is still stranded, still looking for a permanent place to alight, but she's breezier and funnier than ever despite the fact that her latest adventures place her adrift in the midst of the Arizona desert.

Teamed with her for the first time is Lee Bowman, the young Archduke of "Florian" now appearing as Bill Anders, owner of a desert ranch who gives Maisie shelter for the night when her old jallopy breaks down almost at his doorstep. Much to his disgust she returns with a family of itinerant crop followers who are on the trail of a gold strike and who want to camp on his property. Slim Summerville enacts the frozen-faced Anders' hired hand, Fred Gubbins; Virginia Weidler is seen as Jubie Davis, young daughter of the crop-followers, who insists on "adopting" Maisie. Also prominently cast is Wallace Reid, Jr.

It is when Maisie arrives too late in Tucson, Arizona, to take a job as cafe singer, that she heads for the gold town where she feels sure there must be night spots. The Davises give her a lift because she has had to abandon her own car. After many trials and tribulations they find gold, celebrate with a barn dance at which all the prospectors joint in, then learn from the assayer that their gold is scarcely worth digging for. Then it's up to Maisie to solve their problem all over again by drawing Bill Anders out of his crab-like shell.

"We Who Are Young"

Introducing the screen's newest romantic team, Lana Turner and John Shelton, "We Who Are Young" is announced as the companion feature attraction.

An original by Dalton Trumbo, the picture unfolds the story of a young couple who marry and attempt to fight for existence in the midst of a big city. Tragedy strikes when the girl is dismissed from employment because of her marriage. The struggle to get along on the boy's salary hits a snag when the couple realize that they are to become parents. The boy borrows to cover doctor bills, and when his payments lapse his salary is attached. This violates a company rule and he too is dismissed. Forced to go on relief until he can find employment, the two face near-starvation until a lucky break solves the situation.

The film marks the first straight dramatic role for Lana Turner, as the young wife, and is a distinct departure from her collegiate and glamour girl roles of the past. John Shelton gets his most important assignment to date as the youthful newcomer to the screen, will be remembered for his work as the juvenile lead in "The Ghost Comes Home."

The supporting cast is headed by Gene Lockhart as the employer who takes such pride in his position that he forgets to temper judgment with the human element, Grant Mitchell and Henry Armetta.

AT THE CAPITOL

"When The Daltons Rode"

Randolph Scott and Kay Francis top a stellar cast in "When the Dalton Rode" Universal's new frontier action epic, which comes next to the Capitol Theatre.

Heading the supporting roster in the roles of the celebrated Dalton boys themselves are Briant Donlevy, Broderick Crawford, Stuart Erwin and Frank Albertson, while other important members include George Bancroft, Andy Devine, Mary Gordon, Harvey Stephens and Quen Ramsey.

The film marks the first "outdoor" role of Miss Francis' career. She is seen as the telegraph operator of Coffeyville, Kan., center of the Dalton gang's operations in the early Nineties. Scott appears as a frontier lawyer who befriends the embattled Daltons when they are persecuted by land company agents.

"When the Daltons Rode" was directed by George Marshall, who recently directed the highly successful "Destry Rides Again."

A number of select short subjects completes the bill including the 11th chapter of the serial "Buck Rogers."

For Thursday, Sept. 26

VERY INTERESTING developments may be looked for on this day, according to the lunar transits. There are subtle undercurrents of a favorable nature in which there may be intriguing situations with the need of much strategy in putting over rather peculiar or perplexing problems. This in connection with large corporations, secret, political or fraternal organizations.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate an interesting and intriguing year in which the definitely obvious and expected may not materialize. There are hints of subtlety, craft, entangling alliances of a legal or other dubious association, calling for alertness, finesse and some rearrangement of plans.

A child born on this day should be enterprising, constructive, original, with a diversity of talents and capabilities probably due to fine inventive genius, imaginative and intuitive leads or impressions.

WEDDINGS

RAMSEY—HAYWARD

Christ Church, Belleville, was the scene of a quiet but lovely Autumn wedding on Monday evening, September 23, when Laura Grace, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Hayward, became the bride of Clarence Frederick Ramsey, only son of Mrs. F. Ramsey of Belleville.

Rev. G. G. Wright performed the ceremony.

The bride was charmingly attired in royal blue chiffon velvet with matching turban and corsage of Johanna Hill roses.

Miss Louise Newson acted as bridesmaid and wore a becoming frock of burnt clay crepe with corsage of Talisman roses.

Mr. Ernest Summers assisted the groom.

The wedding music was played by Mr. George N. Maybee. The choral part of the service was sung by the boys' choir of Christ Church and Master Bruce Wood was the soloist in the beautiful rendering of "O Perfect Love", during the signing of the register.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 90 Victoria Ave.

After a short honeymoon the groom will leave for Kingston to enter in service with R.C.N.V.R.

Every School Child Should Have Ample Equipment

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

In a great many cities school books are free, and so are such supplies as writing paper, pens and pencils. In most school systems, however, the home must supply these accessories.

The child who does not have these simple, necessary tools is handicapped. A few just don't have the money for them. For such, wise teachers and school boards often find a means. Sometimes the school child's parents will neglect purchase of these supplies; or the child receiving the money may not buy them promptly. The same applies to books which must be bought. Very important it is that the child begin school with all the necessary equipment on hand.

Taking Care

Whether books and supplies be free or not, we parents owe it to our children to train them to handle such property with care and economy; and the more so if they are public property. What an opportunity the home and school have in cultivating good citizenship in this direction! We should have the child cover each of his school books with paper or cloth the very first day of school. Also let him have a bag in which to carry his books and supplies. See that he handles all these school materials at home with great care. When he writes or draws for work or play see that he is not extravagant with materials. Teachers need to stress care and economy of private and public property. Let them often examine the waste-basket and train the children to write on both sides of the sheet of paper.

Home Work

We hope the child, especially the young child, is allowed to take a book home. In some school districts whole provinces indeed, elementary children are forbidden the privilege of carrying a book home. Yet how eager the primary child is to show his reader to his parents and playmates and to read to them from it, especially to his baby brother or sister. In some underprivileged homes there is no other book in sight. A school book carried home by a young child often is a precious bond between him and his parents.

For the child above the fifth grade a fountain pen may be very desirable; also a good dictionary. Wise is the family with growing children which goes without some luxuries in order to have an unabridged dictionary. Wise too the family who has saved in order to have one of the standard encyclopedias, very necessary in these days for the child above the fifth grade, to keep up with his school work. An encyclopedia is valuable, moreover, to help the parent answer the questions of the pre-school child; and to settle family doubts and arguments arising in their conversation.

Machine Age

Also a typewriter may be good investment in the home of the school child, particularly if he be in high school; and a typewriter should be considered standard student equipment for college.

Metal treads about one-fourth as wide as stair treads and one-half as high as risers have been invented by a resident of Whitinsville, Mass., to make stair-climbing easier for invalids or elderly persons.

To increase the domestic consumption of raw silk from 400,000 to 500,000 bales annually the Japanese government will require weavers of rayon, staple fibre, woolen and cotton textiles to use 20 to 30 per cent. silk mixtures.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Primer For the Girl Entering College

The campus will be a strange new world equally divided between joyous anticipation and terror to the thousands of girls who are going to break into college life this autumn.

Some of the questions agitating them have been submitted to this column. Among them, which is better to have—beauty or brains? "Is it better to study hard, achieve something in the way of a career with the possibility of a big salary in the future, and become what the world calls a SUCCESS, or just be pretty, popular and attractive and have plenty of dates?"

If you have brains, real brains, you're bound to have a certain amount of beauty, at least attractiveness. These days beauty is one part good looks and three parts perfect grooming, good taste and knowing what's becoming. Besides, if you want to be an all round siren and have too many dates, why go to college?

"How about clothes? With one or two new things will it be possible to get along with some of the this I had last winter, if they're freshened up and refurbished?"

Some things are necessary in college: Sweaters, a good warm winter coat, sports shoes, berets, skirts to wear with sweaters, a simple evening gown. For the rest, cleaning and refurnishing of what you have is advisable. Don't try to be among the "ten best-dressed" girls in college. That's apt to start jealousy.

"How can I be popular?"

Everyone wants to be popular on and off the campus. Don't gossip, don't be sneaky, don't try to outshine everyone else. Be neighborly. Many a lifelong friendship has been based on lending a hand now and then to a fellow-student who may be a bit slow with her studies. As said above, avoid being among the "ten best-dressed".

"Is it better to chuck high school romances out the window before one goes to college? Is one hampered by those understandings or half-engagements contracted during high school, when the moon was shining or during vacations? What's to be done about so-called puppy-love?"

All said and done, it's better to go to college as heart-whole and fancy free as possible. Real love has sometimes begun in high school, but if, as you say, it's borne of moonshine or vacation idleness, better leave it behind when you pack your suitcase.

"Shall we try to get acquainted with boys at nearby colleges, get invited to college dances and proms? Shall we go motoring with boys if they ask us?"

By all means become acquainted with boys at nearby colleges and go to their class dances and proms, if you're so fortunate as to be invited. Better to go motoring in a foursome rather than a twosome, and don't go motoring unless you happen to know something about the boy. If he's properly introduced, comes from a decent family, it will be all right to go occasionally.

"Shall we go in for sports, play basketball, hockey, improve our tennis and golf? Shall we swim? Shall we use makeup, in classes or in chapel? Lipstick, rouge, mascara? Or is that bad form in college?"

Yes, go in for some sort of sport; it's not only good for your health but it will improve your figure and make life more enjoyable. It is certainly bad form to go to class or chapel heavily rouged, lashes sticky with mascara, and mouth looking like something in the butcher shop. A little makeup for evening or parties is generally regarded as permissible. Some colleges, however, but an absolute taboo on makeup of any sort. If you go to one of these, you must abide by the rules.

Role of Godparent Carries Important Responsibility

The conventions of some faiths specify the number of godparents. Sometimes there is one godmother and one godfather for a child; but sometimes a boy is supposed to have two godfathers and one godmother, a girl two godmothers and one godfather.

It is a time-honored and beautiful custom, this custom of choosing godparents as "parents by adoption" for a child. And it is fitting that godparents should, with special thought and reverence, assume this great responsibility toward a child of friends whom they love. The duty of godparents is to interest themselves in all the important phases in the life of the child: in his religious training; in his education; in a goddaughter's social career; in a godson's business or professional career.

Being a godparent does not mean that a financial obligation is involved but, naturally, because of the idea of the moral responsibility assumed, advice and a "helping hand" would be willingly given if it were needed and if one's circumstances permitted.

Since, therefore, this responsibility is one not to be taken lightly, a casual acquaintance of the parents should not be asked to be a godparent. A child's godparent should be an intimate friend of the parents. Occasionally, however, if the child has many relatives, a distant relative may be given this honor.

The invitation to act as godparent is usually given verbally, or by note if the godparent lives at a distance.

A godparent usually gives a christening gift to the child. It may be one of the more usual gifts, or it may be money, a small or a considerable sum, or a check or a bond with which to start a "nest egg" or a bank account in the child's name. This may be added to, according to one's circumstances, as presents for birthdays, graduation, and other important events in the child's life.

Sometimes a godparent gives a silver cup or porridge bowl engraved with the name of the baby and with the godparent's own name. Sometimes a silver set (spoon, fork, knife or pusher) is given, with the baby's name or initials engraved on the front of the silverpiece, and the godparent's name or initials engraved on the back.

Courtesy Tip

Even though you are anxious to have a reply to a personal note . . . . say a note of invitation . . . you must not write R.s.v.p. on the note. These letters are never used except on invitations written in the third person, such as engraved invitations or visiting-card invitations.

And, by the way, when you write R.s.v.p., write it like that, capitalizing only the first letter. These letters stand for the French phrase "Repondez s'il vous plait", which translated means "Reply, please". And, just as you capitalize only the first word of the English translation, so you capitalize only the first word of the English translation, so you capitalize only the first word of the French phrase.

Never Snub The Youngster

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

Dad is reading from the evening paper. Comes along his lad of four. "May I have your pipe?" No answer. A few minutes pass. "Daddy, may I have your pipe?" the boy asks again. Dad seems not to hear. The child continues: "Daddy, Dad-dy, Dad-dy." "Answer the poor child, Dad," calls the mother from the kitchen; whereupon the father rather gruffly says, "Yes, take it."

The lad proceeds to make soap suds and blow bubbles from his father's pipe. Soon he gives it up for, says he, "I don't like that old pipe. I don't like its smell, I don't like its ugly taste."

By and by Dad drops his paper, stretches, yawns and wanders to the kitchen. There he sees his boy with the precious pipe. For weeks and months Dad had worked to season it.

"What in the world are you doing with my pipe? You have ruined it!" and the father was about to turn the lad across his knees when the mother interceded for the boy. "He asked you for the pipe; you told him he could have it."

"D-i-d I?" Then there vaguely came into the father's memory the boy's repeated, "May I have your pipe?" and his own reply, "Yes, I guess I did grant him permission, but I did not suppose that he was going to use it to blow bubbles."

Not First-Served

The child of three may have some "magic" toy which he has created to show us as soon as we come home, or some exploits of an imaginery hero to relate, or he may merely expect a human welcome. The child of 16 may eagerly await our coming home to pour out his troubles to us, or to express a wish to tell about the day's experience. But ten chances to one we almost entirely ignore the child until after we have asked about the dinner, or enquired about the telegrams, or mail, or if the package had arrived from KuKoo Company.

When you and I reflect upon the way we sometimes treat our children we certainly feel ashamed. We don't consciously behave toward them as if they were stones or posts. We just do it unawares. We become absorbed in other things, and our ears grow deaf to their appealing personalities.

Font of Love

We may go on acting like automatons toward them, unless we discipline ourselves to be considerate of them, learning to respond to them like loving human beings. To this end it is a good thing for us frequently to sit down all alone and look back over several days of our behavior toward our children. Once we become aware of our inhuman conduct we are likely to attempt to make ourselves more sympathetic, courteous and lovable.

The United States Forest Service has been experimenting with combatting forest fires in California by dropping cans from airplanes to release a chemical preparation that fireproofs leaves and twigs.

BABY'S CONSTIPATION
SERIOUS IF NEGLECTED

BABY'S daily movements are something of which absolutely accurate track must be kept. When he misses something must be done at once. Constipation is serious for baby.

Mrs. John T. Reid of Hespeler, Ont., has this to say: "Having had seven children and having used Baby's Own Tablets for all seven, can say they are the best and gentlest regulator for children — safe and effective for the tiniest infant. I give them up to 10 years of age. During teething Baby's Own Tablets were a boon to me as they cleared up at once any digestive disturbance or fretfulness."

Equally effective for simple fever, diarrhoea, upset stomach, colic, simple croup and other minor ailments of babyhood.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

SORE FEET

A few weeks ago in this column I discussed foot troubles that sometimes follow people through life as a result of ill-fitting first shoes. A baby's first walking shoes certainly must be carefully selected, and, of course, the care mustn't stop there—every pair of shoes a child wears should be a proper fit. Shoes must be discarded as fast as the child's foot grows. I find the thrifty instinct of so many mothers who try to make little Johnny's old shoes do just a little longer, is the cause of a great deal of foot trouble.

Having a pair of shoes sent to the home is never a satisfactory way of buying a child's shoes. He may say that they "feel all right" when they are tried on, even though the fit is imperfect. The proper procedure is to take the child to a store where an experienced fitter will take care of him. Even if the first pair "feel all right", the chances are that when a slightly different size is tried, they will feel better.

One of the earliest and most common foot ailments that a doctor finds in children is congenital flat foot—that is, inherited from the parents. When we examine one of these cases we find the child has a long narrow foot without the usual deep in-curve of the arch. Of course, the young infant quite normally is without this curve for the space is filled with fat. But by the time the child begins to toddle the foot should have the characteristic curve.

Usually cases of congenital flat foot come to the doctor's attention when the child complains of pain in the feet and legs after playing. If the condition is really congenital it will appear in the pre-school stage.

To treat this condition we try to develop the muscles of the legs and feet. Often all that is necessary is specially made shoes which change the line of weight-bearing. Then every step the child takes will be exercising weak muscles, and in a large number of cases this is all the treatment necessary. While wearing these shoes the child may walk pigeon-toed, that is, he may toe in. There is no reason to worry about this, however.

If the child can be made to co-operate, the condition can be more quickly corrected by special exercises, but in very young children it is often hard to get the child to do these exercises.

More and more cases of flat foot are appearing these days. Congenital flat foot has become so serious a problem in one community that the doctors there believe a minor operation is not too radical a treatment. If the number of cases really is increasing as much as it appears to be, then I think there must be some other reason besides heredity. Such noticeable changes in a race can only come with the passing of several generations, if they are due to heredity. I think, of course, that a good deal of flat foot is simply caused by the fact that people are using their feet less these days—the feet aren't being exercised enough to be strong. But this does not account for the condition appearing in very young children.

The Tub Route to Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

ONE WAY to gain beauty is to go tubbing for it, tub well and thoroughly. The girl who is always in a hurry, leaps into the bath and hops out in two minutes doesn't have a nice freshness of skin that she would have if she scrubbed and scoured.

The epidermal coat is ever shedding dead skin scales and producing new ones. You didn't know that your hide is always moulting, did you, Genevieve? Well, it is, and that is one reason why the daily bath is a great help in the functioning of the skin which is an organ of elimination.

An excellent investment is a high grade bath brush. Lather it well and go at it. Have the water fairly warm and plenty of it. After the soaping, relax, close your eyes; the tiredness will get out of your bones, nerves will get drowsy. Turn on the warm shower, then the cold and repeat.

Friction Rub

The most satisfactory towels are unbleached turkish ones of linen. Cost more than cotton ones, but last forever, and they take hold like the pangs of a guilty conscience. Follow the rub down with a tonic friction. Spray arms and neck with your favorite perfume. You'll feel fit and zippy, will appear fresh and blooming.

Many girls who howl about the baneful B. O would be rid of it if they used a bath brush with vigor and briskness. Casual bathing will not remove the horrid chemicals deposited by sweat glands.

"The daily bath is a great help in the functioning of the skin."

Red headed girls have to use their brains when selecting makeup. No batik must be put on lips or cheeks that will detract from the flaming topknot, which is a beauty blessing that is seldom appreciated.

As there are many variations of red hair we can't give definite rules about the right tones of rouge or lipstick. One has to try them out. Neither should be vivid nor applied lavishly. Nearly always the complexion is of delicate texture, inclined to be pale, so it shows up artifice in a big way.

FASHION FLASHES

Still tops is the black dinner ensemble. A new model is a long-sleeved gown of black silk crepe with the top embroidered in black soutache braid and sequins. With it is worn a long loose coat of flame colored woollen, collarless, with bands of black fox down the front.

The soft suit continues to be the choice of smart women. Of this season's vintage is a suit in soft woollen in a dull, deep amethyst hue. It closes near the neckline with a carved amethyst button and is worn with a rose-purple silk jersey blouse.

It scores at college does the shirtwaist frock in soft woollen or silk done in oatmeal color with brown or dark red buttons and belt. The pleated skirt is stitched to the hips.

Just made for wear with a suit is a neat model of stitched velveteen in soft gray or blue. Its prim lines set off by a fall of black coq feather and a misty veil.

Ready for sleep or for lounge wear is a grand pyjama suit of brushed rayon done in a bright red with white pipings.

THE OFFICE BOY DID NOT SLEEP 'THRU THE SHOW'

Canadian Press Correspondent in London Graphically Describes Raid

OFFICE DAMAGED

By LOUIS HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 25 (CP Cable)—A gaping black hole and two tottering brick walls were all that was left today of a three-storey building across a narrow street from The Canadian Press office after an early morning visit from the German Air Force.

The German raiders dropped three bombs, all falling less than 20 yards away. One wiped out the building across the street—a store with two floors of flats above—the second smashed a building next door and the third wrecked another building in the opposite direction.

There was no damage to the third floor offices of The Canadian Press other than three cracked windows and much fallen plaster, but the basement of the building was flooded and the gas cut off. Lower floor windows were shattered and the side of the building scorched.

Feels Like Ship Rolling at Sea

I had been flattening myself against a wall in a corner of the office before those three came. The bombs seemed to have been falling all around and the building was jarred so badly that it felt almost like a ship rolling at sea.

The smell of smoke had drawn me from the office and twice on the way back from a fire several blocks away I had thrown myself in doorways until the danger of falling bombs had passed.

The blackout curtains had been blown out and bits of plaster had fallen about my typewriter at least three times before the real show started.

When the three with our number on them whistled to earth I was on my way to the ground floor for a cup of coffee. It was an eternity between the end of the eerie screech and the explosions. I grabbed the railings on the stairs and pushed my face against the wall.

Plaster Rattles Off Tin Hat

Plaster rattled off my tin hat and dust choked me. I could feel the wall shaking and it was as if the building was tumbling on us. There seemed to be no end to the noise of falling debris outside. The door at the foot of the stairs was blown in and one of the sandbags holding it shut burst.

Finally everything was deathly quiet and I had to feel myself to make sure that I was all there. The only damage was a bruise on the inside of each knee—where they were knocking together.

Picks Up Files

When I saw the bombs had dug a crater outside the window and set fire to buildings across the street—and it is one of those narrow London streets—I went back to pick up files and whatever other material I could save.

By then flames were licking the side of the building. I could hardly see through the smoke and the odor of the gas was suffocating.

Returns With Files, Papers

From the office I went to an air raid shelter nearby where, when my knees stopped their tattoo, I dozed off for half an hour. When the fire was under control and the danger of our building had passed I returned to the office with files, typewriters and papers.

Things did not seem so bad with the arrival of daylight and the extinction of the fire but it was hell while it lasted.

Frank Backhouse, Canadian Press night office boy who has slept through a bombing almost as close as this, was in a shelter under a table supported by four barrels when our three came.

"I could see those barrels dancing around," said Frank, who did not sleep through this show.

Students Position Clarified by Order

Ottawa, Sept. 25 (CP)—The position of Canadian universities and students with respect to compulsory military training is clarified in an Order-in-Council published today in the Canada Gazette.

The order amends the National War Services Regulations to provide that the Defence Minister shall advise the Boards in each administrative district of universities in their districts which have authorized contingents of the Canadian officers' training corps or which require their students to do 110 hours of military training during the school year and two weeks in camp.

The order provides that the boards shall order postponement of the calling of students in the C.O.T.C. or who are taking compulsory military training at the universities until the end of the school year.

At the end of the year students who have taken the university training will be liable to be taken on the strength of an appropriate unit of the non-permanent active militia, just as though they had attended a compulsory military training centre.

Sending by the United States of expert naval observers to Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and India has emphasized the increasing collaboration of British and American authorities in the Far East. At the same time, Japanese and U.S. relations are becoming more strained as Japan invades French Indo-China to attack the Chinese on a new front. The invasion comes in the face of Secretary of State Cordell Hull's repeated warnings to Japan against disturbing the "status quo" in the Orient. Australia is concerned with the extent of the aid of the U.S. navy would give her if attacked by Japan, and there is talk of the American navy's obtaining use of the British base at Singapore, which is the strongest in the Far East.

Newsmen Inspect Canadian Military Centre

Army and air force operations at Camp Borden were critically inspected by 65 prominent American and Canadian newspaper publishers and writers who paid the camp a visit as part of a tour being made of Canadian military establishments. J. D. Bowersock, aviation editor of the Kansas City Star, is shown with Group Captain A. T. Cowley and Col. S. H. Lee, O.C., at Camp Borden, during the inspection of the camp.

Proceedings, Regulations Of Compulsory Training Given by Order-in-Council

Ottawa, Sept. 25.—(CP)—Proceedings and regulations relating to and governing the calling of men for military training under the National Resources Mobilization Act are set forth in detail in an Order-in-Council published in an extra edition of the Canada Gazette today.

It gives the Minister of National Defence Power to establish training centres, staff them and determine the number of men to be trained and the length of period of training. Staffs will be paid on the basis of the Canadian Active Force rates.

The order requires the Minister of National Defence to call upon the Minister of National War Services for the necessary number of men and to indicate what numbers of French-speaking and English-speaking men shall be called so that they may be accommodated in either French, English or Bi-lingual camps.

The order provides for medical examination of men upon their reporting to training centres and attachment of the fit to some unit of the Non-Permanent Active Militia.

Men who complete training will be given certificates as proof of their service.

The period of training is set at 30 days "or such other period as the Minister may from time to time prescribe".

Can Be Transferred

The order provides for food and clothing during periods of training pay on the basis of non-permanent active militia rate and transportation home. In the event of too many men being called for the accommodation at any training centre the order instructs that the surplus men shall not be medically examined but forthwith returned to their homes.

A man who has taken training, the order provides, may be transferred without his consent to any corps of the militia other than that to which he was originally posted or to the naval or air forces but only for home defence.

Any man called up who commits an offense against military law while undergoing training may be punished according to military law after the period of his training has elapsed.

Physicians Issue Call for Blood Donors

Detroit, Sept. 25 (CP)—Physicians today issued a call for blood donors in a fight for the life of Mrs. Gertrude Wilson of Detroit, in hospital and believed dying from streptococcus viridans, an infection usually fatal.

Albert A. Rickerd offered and his blood is being tested. He was one of five persons known to have recovered from the infection and for whom relatives and friends of Mrs. Wilson have been searching since yesterday.

A Windsor, Ont., youth, Robert Shafer, 21, recovered in 1937, but it was understood he was not permitted by his doctor to donate blood because of his indifferent health. Names of five donors who are reported to have helped in Shafer's recovery were said here to include Miss Irene Hogan, Peterborough, Ont., Lawrey Barnes of Simcoe, Ont., and Ernest Vansickle, Brantford, Ont.

DEATH FOR PROFITEERING

Sofia, Sept. 25.— (AP) — The Bulgarian Cabinet today decreed the death penalty for "repeated offences" on profiteering or hoarding as the nation prepared for an expected shortage of certain commodities chiefly flour and fats. Bulgaria is having meatless days because of heavy exports to Germany.

BRITAIN WILL WIN STATES PASTOR

Rev. Marshall Laverty Addresses Kiwanis Club on "Issue in Present Conflict"

Discussing the "Issue in the Present Conflict" before the members of the Kiwanis Club at their regular luncheon at the Bay of Quinte Country Club on Tuesday, Rev. Marshall Laverty, pastor of Stirling United Church, stated "it was a battle for the soul of men." Rev. Mr. Laverty gave a seasoned, concise and highly informative address on the war now raging and expressed the opinion that Great Britain would emerge a better country, the Empire a stronger force in world affairs and the people would have a finer conception of democracy and all that it stands for. He was introduced to the gathering by Jim Barclay, chairman of program, and Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by Ernie Finkle.

"Dick" Flynn presided at the luncheon with Charlie Richardson as the collector of fines and Harold Carruthers as song leader. Leo B. Riggs presided at the piano for the community singing. The club held its last luncheon at the Country Club for this season and next week will meet at its regular place in the Queens Hotel. The thanks of the club were extended to the directors and steward of the Country Club for the fine hospitality that has been shown the club during the summer months. Howard Clarke, chairman of the Red Cross committee for the collection of funds spoke to the members asking the co-operation of all in putting over the objective for this city and district. The workers have all been appointed by the Club and will soon be out canvassing. A chicken bingo will be held in October to dispose of the chickens obtained by the club through the poultry project under the chairmanship of Charlie Tripp. It is understood the project has been an entire success.

Loathing for War

The speaker, Mr. Laverty, stated that England and her Empire had a perfect loathing for war and that the loathing still persists but that Great Britain was determined once and for all to put an end to the hideous system that has reared its head under the guise of Nazilism. "It is a false and diabolical creed" said the speaker in comparing the system under which Great Britain operates and that of Adolf Hitler and his bald-headed henchmen. He stated that Britain had become the champion of democracy and although some were inclined to sell Britain "short" at the evacuation of Dunkirk, those people have not realized that Britain will remain. Mr. Laverty believed that Hitler had met his match for Britain is prepared to lose everything except her soul. "We are persuaded that our cause is just and our conscience is clear," said the speaker and "These that know Thee, best are least afraid."

JAPAN MAY SIGN ALLIANCE WITH THE AXIS POWERS

Special Mission Sent by Adolf Hitler Warmly Received by Tokyo

DISCUSSIONS HELD

(Glenn Babb, day cable editor of The Associated Press in New York who has wide contacts in the Orient due to many years spent there, especially as chief of The Associated Press bureau in Tokyo, received word today of impending far-reaching politico-military developments which would vitally affect the United States interests in the far Pacific. What they are, and what they may mean, he describes in the following story).

By Glen Babb

New York, Sept. 25 (AP)—Japan is on the verge of announcing whether she will enter into an alliance with Germany and Italy, trustworthy advices received by The Associated Press said today.

A special mission sent by Adolf Hitler has received a warm welcome in Tokyo, these advices said, and formal announcement of a new pact that may change drastically the map of the Orient is expected shortly.

Whether such a pact would plunge Japan immediately into war with Britain is not clear but it is believed she is moving to make sure she will have a full share in the redistribution of territory and power which Hitler and Mussolini have disclosed will come if and when they defeat Britain.

Drafted New Map

In Rome last week the Axis powers drafted their new map for Africa and Europe and Berlin dispatches indicated they will seal this part of the bargain ceremoniously this week in Berlin, with Spain a participant.

The projected Japanese alliance undoubtedly would provide for a similar redrafting of the map of Asia, the largest of the continents, and the rich islands fringing it.

Japan wants France's Indo-China and Holland's East Indies and seems in a fair way to fastening her control on them. If Britain falls, she wants much of what Britain loses in the Orient, perhaps even in India and Australia.

Such a new map of Asia would pose ominous decisions before United States.

Rigid Censorship

Rigid Japanese censorship has prevented correspondents from telegraphing accounts of recent diplomatic developments there, but this is the situation as pictured in The Associated Press advices:—

A special German Envoy, Max Sthamer, recently arrived in the Japanese capital. In Berlin this man is described as a member of Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop's personal staff and an expert on Oriental affairs. He is said to be a relative of the late Dr. Friedrich Sthamer, who was ambassador to Britain from 1920 to 1939.

In Tokyo he reinforced the efforts German Ambassador Major General Eugen Ott has been making for two years to bring the mightiest Asiatic power into closer co-operation with the Reich.

Army in Favor of Pact

They found a strong Japanese army faction ready to insist anew on an alliance with the Axis, a project which the militarists almost forced on an unwilling civilian government last year, before the European war began. The alliance scheme failed then and its chief backers, notably Toshio Shiratori, Ambassodar to Rome, fell into eclipse.

But Sthamer found Shiratori once more a power as special adviser to Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka in a government committed to Totalitarian policies and to all efforts to make the most of the unparalleled opportunity for expansion offered Japan by the collapse of European powers with Oriental Empires.

Already Japanese troops are driving into French Indo-China and Japanese economic mission with broad powers is negotiating at Batavia on the future relations between Japan and the Netherlands East Indies, whose oil and rubber would go far toward making Japan self-sufficient.

Would Form Counterweight

In Berlin today informed although unofficial circles indicated that Japan, the far eastern partner in the Anti-Comintern Pact of 1936-37, was being prevailed upon to form a counterweight to any possible closer co-operation between Britain and the United States.

If Japan goes to war with Britain this will raise grave problems for the United States. Japan's navy, the world's third strongest and powerfully based in the Western Pacific, and her army, veterans of three years of war in China, probably would move at once against Hong Kong, Singapore and the Straits Settlements, and perhaps even Australia, Burma and India.

An alliance with the Axis would mean that, like Italy, Japan has switched sides since the First Great War. In 1914 she was an ally of Britain and joined in sweeping Germany from the Pacific and the China coast.

But Japan, like Italy, has been dissatisfied with her spoils in the last war and more and more has found her interests with the powers which emerged from that conflict as "have nots."

LONDON'S WATER SUPPLY MAINTAINED UNDER DIFFICULTIES

One of the difficult problems facing London authorities these trying days is that of maintaining a steady water supply. Bombs landing in streets and crashing through buildings have wrecked many mains, cutting off the supply in the hit areas until repairs can be made. The ABOVE photo was taken in a south London suburb which was particularly hard hit. The main, near a hospital, had been tapped and an emergency water station set up where buckets, pans and other utensils may be filled. Residents of the adjoining area line up for their supply.

Italy's Supposed Line of Submarines from Sicily to Tripoli Shattered

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 25—(AP) — British authorities said today their seapower in the Mediterranean is making it increasingly difficult for Marshal Graziani, leader of the Italian arms of invasion, to push ahead at this time toward Alexandria and the Suez Canal.

They described the blockade as an unbreakable steel net stretched along the Libyan coast.

Italy's supposed line of submarines from Sicily to Tripoli has been shattered and 20 of the undersea craft have been sunk since June 11, authorities said.

Three Officers Of Graf Spee Now in Germany

Buenos Aires, Sept. 25—(AP)—A German source said today three officers of the pocket battleship Graf Spee who escaped with a group of 15 a month ago from the Martin Garcia Island internment base already are in Germany.

Four others, this source said, are in Brazil awaiting a Spanish ship, from which they plan to transfer to a German flying boat at sea. Three more were reported to be on a Japanese ship bound for Japan.

TORONTO HYDRO TO SAVE $30,000 PER MONTH

Toronto, Sept. 25 (CP)—Toronto Board of Control today decided to continue indefinitely Daylight Saving Time in the city. A Dominion order-in-council, directing Ontario and Quebec municipalities to continue on "fast" time was issued last Friday.

Controller Fred Hamilton said that the Toronto Hydro would save $30,000 a month by extension of Daylight Saving Time.

ARTHUR COTE SENT TO TRIAL

Sherbrooke, Que., Sept. 25 (CP)—Arthur Cote, 26, Montreal, was committed today to trial in Court of King's Bench for the murder of Jeffrey Munn, retired Hamilton, Ont., farmer, whose battered body was found on a lonely road near Magoon's Point, Aug. 12th.

The committal followed his refusal to make a voluntary statement in Magistrate's Court. Police have expressed belief that robbery was the motive of the slaying.

Georges to Contribute Plane

Cornwall, Ont., Sept. 25 —(CP)— Brain child of George Arthur Phillips, Cornwall lawyer, a fund to purchase a Hurricane fighting plane by persons in Canada named George has been started. The plan has the blessing of British authorities and Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley, Phillips said.

The fund's slogan is "Let George Do It."

Slaght Records Disapproval

Toronto, Sept. 25 —(CP)— A. G. Slaght, a leading Ontario lawyer and member of parliament for Parry Sound, today recorded his disapproval before a legislative committee of a proposal to appoint one judge in Ontario to handle nothing but matrimonial cases.

"He'd have to have an awfully strong stomach or he'd break down," Slaght commented.

HAPPY END TO THREE TERRIFYING DAYS

The Countess de Tristan eagerly kisses her three-year-old son, Marc, as he was returned to her arms after three terrifying days in the hands of a kidnapper. The lad's father, Count Marc de Tristan, looks on happily. It was only by chance that a party of lumberjacks stumbled across the kidnapper, an alien German by name of Wilhelm Jakob Muhlenbroich, in a lonely part of the Sierras with the boy in a stolen car. Despite his pistol, they disarmed him and turned him over to the authorities.

HORSE RACING RESUMES

New York, Sept. 25.—(AP)—The German Army of Occupation has approved the resumption of horse racing in Paris, the Berlin radio said today.

There will be 25 days of racing between October 30 and December 1. The decision was said to be due to the fact that some 400,000 persons in France are directly or indirectly dependent on horse racing for their living.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Cornwall, Ont., Sept. 25.—(CP) Pte. Jack Walsh, of the 48th Highlanders, today was committed for trial on a motor manslaughter charge arising from an accident near Moulinette, August 31 in which Sidney Swaffield, Toronto, was killed. Walsh is the alleged driver of a Canadian army truck, said to have been stolen from Camp Borden, which crashed into the ditch after failing to negotiate a sharp curve.

CABLE RIPPED ITALY CLAIMS

New York, Sept. 25.—(AP)—The Italian Radio claimed today that about 10 miles of Mediterranean Telegraphic cable linking Malta and Gibraltar had been ripped from the sea floor by a "special Italian vessel".

(There was no immediate comment on the claim from British sources.)

KILLED IN ACTION

Montreal, Sept. 25.— (CP)—PO. John Bryson, 27, of the Royal Air Force was killed "as a result of air operations" while on active service in Great Britain yesterday, according to a cable received by relatives here today. The cable gave no further details.

PO. Bryson was a son of John T. Bryson of Montreal. After completing his education at St. Alban's School, Brockville, Ont., he joined the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and served three years in Western Canada before resigning two years ago to join the R.A.F.

PAPER DISAVOWS ARTICLE

Moscow, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Red Star, Soviet Army organ, disavowed today an article it published Sept. 21 declaring Russia is keeping hands off the "Imperialistic War" for the Balkan countries.

The publication of the article was a "mistake", the newspaper said, adding it was printed in reply to inquiries of readers. Specific objections to the story were not made public.

Ever since July 4th the experts have been counting over the four-times world champions. Some days they count them out and some days they count them in.

This is one of the days for counting them in, because they have won six successive contests and the American League struggle is so tight that it would be possible by sundown tonight for Detroit and Cleveland to be tied again and the Yankees be in third place only one game behind.

They stand now:

	W	L	Pct.	G.B.	T.P.
Detroit ..	87	62	.584	—	5
Cleveland	86	64	.573	1½	4
New York	84	64	.568	2½	6

The Yankees whipped Washington Senators twice yesterday, 6-5 and 9-4, while the Indians dropped a 7-2 decision to St. Louis Browns and Detroit was kept idle because of rain.

The Tigers must play a double-header with Chicago White Sox today while their rivals play single games, making all sorts of situations possible. Chicago has downed Detroit in 13 out of 20 games previously this year.

The Yankees' chances for another championship still are remote because they would have to win all their remaining games and Detroit lose two in order to get even a tie.

Dutch Leonard and the Senators had the Yankees staggering in the first game yesterday, two runs behind in the ninth inning, but they tied the score with two singles, a double and a walk, and in the 10th inning they bunched over the deciding run on a walk, Joe Cronin's double and Red Rolfe's single.

They scored five runs in the third inning of the nightcap, three of them on a homer by Babe Dahlgren, and won with ease.

Cleveland was curbed by the six-hit hurling of Elden Auker and would have been shut out except for a couple of errors by shortstop Johnny Berardino of the Browns. St. Louis raked three Cleveland hurlers for 14 hits.

The day's big hitting show was at Philadelphia in the first game of a doubleheader in which Boston Red Sox beat the A's 16-8. Boston made 23 hits, including six home runs, and the A's 15. Ted Williams and Manager Joe Cronin each hit two homers and Jimmie Foxx one, the 500th of his major league career. In the sixth inning Williams, Foxx and Cronin hit for the circuit in succession to tie the big league record.

In the second game Boston's Jack Wilson bested Bill Beckman 4-3 in a hurling duel with six-hit ball and the help of a three-run rally in the eighth.

The only game in the National League that escaped the rain was at Brooklyn, where the Dodgers nosed out New York Giants 5-4 to clinch second place in the National League.

New York, Sept. 25 (AP)—Out of the Question Box: Is it news that Gene Tunney offered $15,000 for a piece of Pat Comiskey a couple of months back?...... And Bill Daly wouldn't sell...... Are you surprised to hear your Yankees, who were laid to rest with full ceremonies only two days ago, are now only 4 to 1 to win from both the Tigers and the Cry Babies?

Cauliflower Market Report—
Odds on the Pat Comiskey, Max Baer party tomorrow have been scrambled like an egg...... The Irishman now is 5 to 7 favorite.... Which is making Maxie giggle plenty...... And Ancil Hoffman, who is as careless with his cocoanuts as he is with his right arm, has just bet 10 G's on his Max to put the crusher on Pat.

Hither and-yon dis a and dat-a: Tony Galento, who hasn't called anyone a bum since he looked in the mirror after Baer belted him out, hit town today screaming for a return match with Max......he's leaving for a refereeing job in Johnson City, Tenn., and will go into comeback training when he returns........ S'pose you noticed where Henry Armstrong was 146 pounds when he flattened Phil Furr in Washington t' other night ....Guess he's finally growing up........ The middleweights'll be hearing shortly from a kid around here named Johnny Colan........ Who's not 19 yet and is sporting a 17-fight win streak.

NEWARK BEARS TAKE BALTIMORE

Even Series for League Title by Winning in the Tenth 4 to 3

Newark, N.J., Sept. 25 (AP)—Newark Bears evened their final International League playoff series with Baltimore Orioles Tuesday by winning a dramatic 10-inning decision 4-3. The deciding run was scored on a single by Bud Metheny who also hit a homer and a double.

Alex Kampouris started the winning rally with a fluke double off the leg of Skeeter Newsome and went to third as the shortstop muffed Ed Levy's grounder. Then Metheny smacked the deciding hit to rightfield.

Geo. Washburn, annexing victory No. 20, including two play-off triumphs, checked the Orioles with six hits, all singles. He struck out seven and walked two.

Jack Redmond was his chief problem, the catcher belting singles in the fifth and seventh which were turned into runs.

Stolen bases: Case, Washington, 22.
Pitching: Rowe, Detroit, 16-3.

TIGER INFIELD PROVES BULWARK IN STRETCH DRIVE

Oldest in the Big Leagues With Charlie Gehringer as the Pivot Player

YORK IS HITTER

Cleveland Has Fine Pair in Boudreau, Mack at the Keystone Sack

By GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Sept. 25—(AP)— Detroit Tigers infield is the oldest in the big leagues, a patchwork outfit that had the experts shaking their heads sadly last spring.

Yet this strangely assorted quartet has proved the bulwark of the Tigers in their sensational drive for the American League flag, and it must be regarded as a better world series infield than that boasted either by Cleveland or by Cincinnati Reds of the National League.

On first is Rudy York, slightly awkward afield but a powerhouse at bat; next to Hank Greenberg and Joe Dimaggio probably the most dangerous hitter in the game with men on base.

At second is Charlie Gehringer, who for a long string of years was baseball's greatest keystoner. At 37 he still is hitting the ball better than .300, and though he has slowed down a little he fields beautifully yet and teams with Dick Bartell, the Tigers' 33-year-old chatterbox shortstop, in an effective double play combination.

Legs Bother Him

Thirty-one-year old Pinky Higgins isn't quite the third-baseman he used to be, either. His legs bother him and he has dropped out of the .300 class. Yet, like Baretell and Gehringer, he has solid years of experience behind him and should prove steady in any world series crisis.

York's savage batting power is, of course, what swings the pendulum toward the Tiger infield, for both Cleveland and Cincinnati have far better than average combinations. And Cincinnati even has a better all-round first baseman than York in big Frank McCormick. Cleveland, for its part, has baseball's finest shortstop-second base duo in Tou Boudreau and Ray Mack.

Bill Werber Classy

Outside of McCormick, who, incidentally, batted .400 against the Yankees in the '39 series, Cincinnati's best infielder is Bill Werber at third base. He's a slick fielder and a useful .275 hitter.

Billy Myers at short and Lonnie Frey at second are average fielders and make their double plays to support the club's gilt-edge pitching. Frey went to bat 17 times in the last world series without getting a hit, while Myers has had a miserable season at the plate.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Joe Gordon and Babe Dahlgren, Yanks: Gordon made five hits in first game, setting up winning score with double in 10th, and he and Dahlgren each hit homers in nightcap against Senators.

Elden Auker, Browns: Limited Indians to six scattered hits.

Jim Foxx, Ed. Williams, Joe Cronin and Bob Doerr, Red Sox: Foxx, Williams and Cronin tied major league record with successive home runs in first game and Doerr doubled run across against Athletics in second game.

Witlow Wyatt, Dodgers: Singled with bases loaded to spark five-run flurry that beat Giants.

War Club Conveyance

Outraged Dignity

Detroit baseball fans who put a baby buggy on the playing field before the first game of the crucial Cleveland-Detroit series probably thought they would make the Indians angry by symbolizing the reputation the Tribesmen have acquired as cry babies. If they did, they were very, very wrong, because the Indians had great fun—at Umpire Bill Summer's expense. When Ben Chapman led off in the first inning, he trundled his bat to the plate in the carriage, LEFT. Outraged at this desecration of the national game, Umpire Summers, RIGHT, takes the buggy away. He looks terribly embarrassed while Chapman enjoys a hearty laugh, BACKGROUND.

LOU SALICA DEFEATS PACE IN TITLE BOUT

Fast 15-Round Bout Held at Coliseum in New York With Salica Always on Top

NO KNOCKDOWNS

Stretch Drive in Last Seven Rounds Had Pace Groggy

New York, Sept. 25 (CP)—Little Lou Salica once again is the world bantamweight champion. Whether the title will prove an empty honor remains to be seen.

Sixto Escobar of Puerto Rico, gave the title up last year because of illness and the lack of profitable opposition.

Thus for the first time this year the division had one titleholder when Salica outpointed Georgie Pace, Cleveland negro who was recognized by the National Boxing Association as champion, in a fast 15-round title bout at the Bronx coliseum last night.

Weighing 117 1-2 pounds, Salica put on a stretch drive in the last seven rounds that had Pace groggy at the bell. Pace, a much heavier hitter, had the best of it in the first eight.

In the semi-final six-rounder Doug Marsh, a promising Montreal welterweight, won an easy victory over Sean Hynes of Eire. The Canadian weighed 146 1-4; Hynes 147 1-2.

Salica, one of the few fighters who always is in condition and who seems to get stronger as the fight progresses, took plenty of punishment in the early rounds. Pace, who weighed 118, pounded away at the Italian-American's midsection until he was a red welt. But Lou finally got Pace's number.

Maxie Baer Still Talks Good Fight

Jersey City, N.J., Sept. 25 —(AP) —Take it easy, folks—Max Baer still talks a good fight.

It's not the same king of the night clubs who dazzled cafe society and associated sororities and fraternities back in the mid '30s, but Madcap Maxie still thinks he's good enough to take care of a "young punk" like Patrick Edward Comiskey.

Madcap Maxie has been undergoing conditioning of sorts at nearby Newark for this heavyweight contest, but he's a far cry from the fellow of five or six years ago. Yet, he thinks he'll do that thing to Patrick Edward of Paterson tomorrow night with no more trouble than it takes him to say "Hello, Honey."

"Don't worry, Pally," he said. "How can a guy like this kid expect to step in there and box an old guy who knows all the tricks like me?"

"He's only 20, or so, and it stands to reason he's going to make a few mistakes. Right? And everyone he makes your Old Poppa Max'll be right there to tell him what he did wrong—with a left or right. So, we'll give him a lesson for a couple of rounds. Then we'll belt him out in the fourth or fifth."

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

Just imagine—coaches and players in the American League were introduced to "lay off the Indians" and call a halt to so much ribbing and baseball "jockeying" is the term used when one player or club verbally rides their opponents. You know, just the same as the Cleveland Indians have been subjected to all season when the opposition hurled "cry babies, half-Vitts" and other verbal abuses in their general direction. Yes sir, the Cleveland front office claimed that such practice wasn't cricket (although no tea has been served during the seventh inning stretch as yet) and the said practices were affecting their pitchers. My, my, don't you feel sorry for over-grown boys like Feller, Harder et al, who can't take a bit of kitbitzing or good old fashioned baseball "jockeying."

We wonder what the Cleveland players would have done had they been in the old C. O. B. L. fifteen or 20 years ago? Those were the days when the opposition really had to absorb it if they hoped to survive in the league. Perhaps one of the worst offenders, if such a "jockey" can be called an offender, was Harry (Little Peenie) Mills. Harry would stand around first base verbally blasting the batter in a line of personal chatter that would make the oppositions' ears burn. In those days once the opposition picked up some little personal matter against the opposition players—well, it was just too bad for that player. Remember how they used to ride Harry Batstone calling him "Alice"? Manager Joe Daly and Mickey Compeau were a couple of pastmasters at the art while the late "Shiner" Johnson could cut the opposition to the quick with his verbal blasts. There were no squawks in those days, the players took their pannings and awaited the time they could obtain reprisals. Yea man, them was the happy days, so agrees Peterboro Fred Craig.

We witnessed a sports paradox on Monday that bears some little publicity. On Monday afternoon we witnessed the Canadian Golf Professional Assistants' championship match at the Country Club when Gordon McClean, Montreal, beat Clark Knox of Toronto. Both golfers are tops in their business and as far as Knox is concerned he ran into more tough luck than a single sportsman would experience in several events, regardless as to the game. There weren't any squawks nor did McClean even show emotion, when he was declared "out of bounds" on the 35th hole, a penalty of two shots. Their match was a trial of skill and ability that tested the nerves. At night we attended the wrestling bouts at the arena, where in the main bout anything but sportsmanship was seen. At the golf course the gallery was silent even during the most tense moment, but at the arena the contestants and patrons ran riot and bedlam. The strange part of it all was —little Freddie Hebert, captain of the caddies at the Country Club who caddied for McClean, received more remuneration for his work and knowledge of the course than did any of the professional wrestlers.

A rather dangerous practice was seen at the Hume arena on Monday night when pop bottles were hurled from the gallery in the general direction of the ring. In some American cities it is unlawful to sell drinks in bottles to customers in attendance at sporting events, just as a precautionary measure. However, we are not living in the U.S.A. but rather in Canada, where a better sense of sportsmanship is believed to prevail. Persons guilty of tossing bottles, or other such missiles, are leaving themselves open to criminal charges, as one miscue and some innocent bystander might be seriously or even fatally injured if struck. It just isn't worth the chances taken, as we saw one bottle hurtle through the air, narrowly missing a lady's head in the reserve seats Monday. Think it over youse guys and gals.

Do you remember when Bobby Jones of Atlanta, Georgia, won the United States amateur golf title at Philadelphia 10 years ago today to climax his "Grand slam" of golf. He had previously captured the British amateur and open and the U.S. open.

Just what team the South Hastings "Combines" meet in the intermediate O.B.A. semi-finals has not been announced as yet, but in all probability it will be the winner of the Halton County T.A.B.A. series, which would mean either Oakville or Toronto, that is if they're shipped up around Lake Simcoe. With the equinoctial storms now prevailing throughout the province, perhaps another few days delay would not do any harm and assure better baseball weather a little later in the season.

To date this season Bob Feller has struck out 257 American League batters, bettering his previous 1939 count of 246. His pitching record for the year is 27 wins as against seven losses.

See where "Soup" Campbell and his Oshawa "mushballers" have joined the ranks of the Cleveland "cry-babies" . . . Yes, they were defeated and eliminated, but they're crying.

The sympathy of the sporting fraternity of the community is being extended to Ted E. Schwab, popular girls' softball executive, whose father died in Toronto yesterday.

Howard McNamara, one half of the famous McNamara hockey "Dynamite Twins" of a quarter of a century ago, died in Deseronto yesterday. The late Howard and George McNamara made headlines as star pucksters in the old Nickel Belt and N.H.A. years ago.

Sport Spice — A letter from Dr. Harold E. Welsh to this office assures all he is on the mend and still keenly interested in the pursuits of the "Combines," a team he was instrumental in organizing ....The St. Louis Browns, who spoiled the hopes of the Yankees two weeks ago duplicated this dose as they downed the Indians yesterday....At the same time the Yankees were beating the Senators twice so today the Indians are trailing the Tigers by a game and one-half while the Yanks are a full game behind the second place Indians, so it looks as though most anything can yet happen in the junior ball circuit although the Tigers have the edge ....Did you know that the Cincinnati infield individually and collectively, boast of better fielding averages than either the Tigers or the Naps?

LOUISVILLE WINS IN 10TH

Kansas City, Sept. 25 (AP)—Louisville won a fitful 9-8 struggle from Kansas City Blues in 10 innings last night as the American Association playoff finals got under way. After Kansas City had come from behind to tie in the ninth Woody Williams started his mates to victory in the 10th with a triple and later Vince Sherlock singles to drive home two runs.

The Blues came back in their half against Fred Schaeffer but Tot Pressnell rushed in to stop the charges after the blues had scored one run.

CANADA RETURNS CUP

Margy Morgan, queen of this year's President's Cup regatta, holds the coveted power boat race trophy, which was taken to Canada by Harold Wilson, last year's winner, and which Canadian authorities have returned. The cup is of gold—plenty of it—and is valued at approximately $10,000.

SARNIA ENTRY IS ACCEPTED IN THE O.R.F.U.

2-26th Field Battery Will Make Fourth Team in the Loop

SCHEDULE DRAWN

Toronto, Sept. 25—(CP)—R. H. Bailey, Secretary-Treasurer of the Ontario Rugby Football Union, today released the revised senior O. R. F. U. schedule for the 1940 season and announced the inclusion of a Sarnia team from the 2-26 Field Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery.

Bailey said the Sarnia entry had been pending for a week and was accepted by the O.R.F.U. executive and the other senior clubs after conversations by telephone last night the executive and player makeup of the new team were not discussed he said. Owen Lockhart of Sarnia is handling details of the R.C.A. team.

Sarnia has had no entry in the O.R.F.U. since the mighty Imperials withdrew from the league about three months ago because of the war. Hugh (Bummer) Stirling, veteran booting halfback of Imperials, is an officer in the 2-26 Battery and may turn out with the new squad.

The revised O.R.F.U. senior schedule follows:

Oct. 4 (Friday night)— Balmy Beach at Hamilton.
Oct. 5—Camp Borden at Sarnia.
Oct. 12—Sarnia at Hamilton.
Oct. 14 (Thanksgiving Day) — Camp Borden at Balmy Beach.
Oct. 19—Hamilton at Balmy Beach; Sarnia at Camp Borden (to be played at London).
Oct. 26—Camp Borden at Hamilton; Balmy Beach at Sarnia.
Nov. 2—Balmy Beach at Camp Borden (to be played at Toronto); Hamilton at Sarnia.
Nov. 9—Hamilton at Camp Borden (to be played at London); Sarnia at Balmy Beach.
Nov. 16 and Nov. 23—First and second teams will play off, points to count on the round.

WINDY ON CHANNEL

Dover, England, Sept. 25—(CP)—Wind sprang up today in the northeast—a bad direction for any crossing of the English Channel— and the sea became choppy shortly after dawn today.

HEMSLEY INJURED

Pinky Higgins, Detroit Tigers' infielder, is pictured charging into home plate, in an effort to stretch a triple into a homer. He collided with Catcher Rollie Hemsley, of the Indians, who was bowled over and sustained severe injuries which required him to be taken to a hospital. Hemsley is seen making the out, despite the collision.

CONFESSION ADVISED

Tulsa, Okla., Sept. 24—(AP) — An attorney was presented this problem today.

"I'm 53 years old," a woman told him, "but I'm married to a man who thinks I'm only 39. I've got a son 36 years old, but to make my story stick, we dropped some years off his age.

"Now, my son has to register for the draft unless he tells his correct age. If he does that I'll have to claim he was born when I was three years old. What shall I do?"

The attorney suggested a family truth session.

APPEALS FOR AID

New York (CP)—Mayor A. B. C. Kempe of Ramsgate, England, where 1,200 homes were destroyed in a German air raid in August, appealed in a letter to the New York Times Tuesday for contributions by the citizens of New York to a war relief fund to aid his stricken citizens. He offered to send "an autographed photograph of himself in robes" to each donor of $1 or more.

SHAKE—Lou Boudreau of Indians shakes hands with Roy Weatherly, RIGHT, after latter hits winning home run in Cleveland game.

MEET IN BANTA M TITLE BOUT

Lou Salica Georgie Pace

At long last the disputed bantamweight title may be settled in New York, when Georgie Pace, Cleveland NBA champ, and Lou Salica, the New York commission ruler, meet. Sixto Escobar will be given a shot at the winner and a real champion will be crowned.

Getting ready to fight Maxie Baer in what is billed as a match for the white heavyweight championship of the world, Irish Pat Comiskey demonstrates his ability to bunch a muscle. The bout is scheduled for late September in New Jersey and marks the first important heavyweight fight staged without the supervision of Mike Jacobs in many months. Jacobs still has the ropes on Joe Louis, however.

Rudy York, Detroit's huge, hard-hitting first baseman, is shown scoring during the eighth inning rally, in which the Tigers mauled the Cleveland Indians and moved into the league lead. York got on base by singling and driving in Gehringer and Greenberg. Higgins' single sent in York. The score was 6-5.

"Flying Blind" by VERA BROWN

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

Hugh had to go back to his office to finish his column. He tried to persuade Judith to go to a movie until he had finished. "Then we can do the town."

"No, Hugh. Not tonight." So he let her go. He walked with her to the subway in Times Square before he said goodbye.

On the ride uptown, Judith slumped in her seat. Somehow her festive mood had gone. She felt desperately alone. Why hadn't she waited for Hugh? She dreaded going up to her stuffy room.

When Judith reached the apartment door, somebody called her. A man stepped out of a car parked by the curb.

"I've been waiting for you." It was Michael Dudley. Until she heard his voice, she did not realise how she had missed him.

"Come. We'll drive for a little while."

She got into the car beside him, and Michael took the wheel, starting toward the Drive. It was a beautiful spring night.

"I'm sorry, Judith."

"Don't be. It's for the best. It had to come."

"You're all right?"

"Oh, yes."

Michael turned onto the Washington Bridge. "The view will be fine tonight."

Now that they were together, they seemed to have lost all desire to talk. Finally Michael got Judith to tell him about her job. And then—suddenly:

"I had to see you tonight. You know how I feel."

"Please, Michael."

He caught her hand. "I won't see you again until it's all over out there. Then, Judith, may I try? Every man has a right to fight for his happiness."

She shook her head: "I'm afraid I can't give it to you, Michael" She sighed. "You see it's hard to make you understand how I feel about Tex. I'm not in love with him any more. It isn't that. But I'll always feel I belong to him. He'll need me some day. I've got to wait."

With that Dudley turned the car around, and drove back home. As they approached Judith's rooming house, Michael spoke again: "There are some people standing about, Judith. Probably newspaper men."

Dudley drove on past, into the park, explaining, "You can't go back there now."

"I couldn't face them!" Judith agreed. "I wonder how they found out where I lived?"

"From Reno, probably."

"Sit here, while I telephone," Michael suggested and went in to a drugstore. When he came out, he said: "Everything's set. I called Van Mathas. His mother's in town. I'm going to take you there."

"Oh, no!"

"Where else?" Michael asked. "They might find you in a hotel. Does your landlady know where you work?"

"No, but Hugh does."

"He's in a nice spot if his editor finds out."

"I know. But they mustn't find my office. They can't!"

"All right, then. Dick's mother lives up the avenue. Lucky she hasn't gone over to Long Island for the summer."

Michael went to the Van Mathas apartment with Judith. Nobody was home, but the maid had been told that Judith was coming. Michael said, "I'll stay awhile." He lit a cigarette.

But conversation was too painful for them. He found a game of Chinese checkers on the table, undertook to teach Judith. It was thus Dick found them when he came in an hour later.

"Hello, Judith. How are you, Dudley?" He tossed the latter the morning papers.

"I was afraid of this," Dudley remarked. There staring at them was her own photograph beside recent ones of Sonia and Tex. Her New York address appeared, too.

"What am I going to do? None at the office knows about my troubles. Hugh didn't tell, I'm sure."

"I'm sure he didn't," Dudley said crisply. "Be sure to let me know how things go tomorrow. You've got to move from that room."

At the office things were as usual. Judith was four minutes early; the place was deserted when she came into the reception room. Hartman's partner was the first to arrive. She felt he eyed her with curiosity; but she might have been mistaken. When Miss Simpson arrived, she nodded coldly, went on to her office.

Hugh Lanning telephoned her at 10 a.m. "The office would be wild if they thought I knew where you are. But what can I do."

"They'll hear fast enough, Hugh," Judith replied. "Don't worry."

Mr. Hartman did not come in that morning. Miss Simpson, leaving for lunch, said he was in court. Before she returned, three men entered.

"Mrs. Aimes?" one of them asked. There was no out. They must be reporters!

"Yes."

The newspapermen clustered about her, asking her what she thought about Tex's divorce. "We just agreed to disagree," was her only comment.

"And Miss Winthrop?"

"They've been friends for a long time."

Some photographers came in the door then. "No pictures, please! I can't jeopardize my job here," she protested.

Into the midst of this confusion stepped Miss Simpson. She looked severely at Judith. There were clients waiting.

"Will you please go to my office?" she said to Judith and then managed smartly to get rid of the reporters and photographers. Judith waited anxiously. An hour went by. Miss Simpson was in conference with the junior partner. Then she confronted Judith.

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Aimes, but we can't have all this confusion. We think it is better if you resign."

"As you wish."

So Judith was out of a job. She tried to telephone Dudley from the drugstore downstairs but he was out. Now that the reporters had found her, she might just as well go to her room. It no longer mattered. Yet Judith wandered about the streets uncertain what to do. It was too late in the day to job-hunt.

At last, when Judith put her key in the door, she heard footsteps. It was Mrs. Wilkes. She had her head tied up. "I've got the most awful headache. I couldn't work. It was terrible all last night. Reporters all over the place here! This is a respectable house. I knew I shouldn't have rented a room to a woman."

"You want me to leave?" Judith asked in a quiet voice.

"If you will."

Judith packed her few belongings, locked up her trunk. She had no idea where to go when she called a taxi. She asked its driver to suggest a decent, inexpensive hotel. He made some suggestions, drove her downtown.

"Here we are. This is OK."

It was a rather old place, small and run-down. But when Judith got inside, it was clean and the rates were fair.

"I'd rather the people where I lived didn't know my address," she suggested to the helpful cabby in dismissing him with a fair tip.

"We'll fix that," he promised.

Judith in her hotel room, broke down and wept. No use to unpack. She'd be moving on in a few days.

Then she tried to reach Michael Dudley again. But it was no use. She telephoned to the Van Mathas apartment, told the maid she would not be there that night. She also left a message for Dick, and her telephone number. He 'phoned within an hour.

"I waited for you at the office," Dick said. "They didn't tell me what happened. I'll be right down."

Judith met him in the lobby half an hour later. Van Mathas soon insisted: "Don't you worry. Mother will fix things. She'll find work for you—with a coutourier, perhaps. You should be able to sell clothes. You wear them so well."

"They'll find out who I was."

"That won't matter now. The heat's off!" He looked at Judith's tired dispirited face. "You need sleep. Call you early tomorrow."

Judith waited for hours hoping that Michael Dudley might call. But he didn't.

Next morning Dick 'phoned at ten o'clock. "Everything's set. Mother's got you a job at De Franc's."

"Where's that?" The shop was so small and so exclusive that Judith had never heard of it.

"It's tops. Over on Madison. It's new and they're going to town. You go over there at five. De Franc will see you then."

Judith arrived at De Franc's shop three minutes ahead of the appointed time. The place was small, but the windows were things of beauty in chrome and white. So was the salon inside. The salesgirl who met Judith at the door was sveldt and pretty.

"I have an appointment with Mr. De Franc."

'Does madam wish to see some frocks?"

"No, thank you."

"The name, please?"

"Miss Van Dyke." Judith used her maiden name. The sales expert was puzzled. She felt she should know this girl. Her face was familiar. But she went off into the inner office, frowning.

Judith waited until almost six. She was sick with uncertainty. Maybe De Franc wouldn't take her. At last she was admitted into the great presence. She stood in the doorway in surprise.

"What is it you want, please?" he demanded irritably without even opening his eyes.

"Mrs. Van Mathas sent me." Judith's knees were shaking.

"I am very ill. I have a terrific headache . . ."

"I'd be glad to come back tomorrow." Judith's lovely voice was arresting. He opened one eye. "Let me see you."

Judith came over nearer to the couch. He opened both eyes, squinted at her.

"You're not bad," milady's maestro observed. She stood there uncertainly.

"Do you know anything about clothes?"

"Only what I like to wear."

"That suit is all right. Where did you get it?"

She named a Fifth Avenue shop

"Terrible!"

He closed his eyes again. "I prefer blonds."

"I'm sorry." She turned to leave.

"I didn't tell you to go." He opened his eyes languidly. "Why do you society girls want to work?"

"I'm not a society girl."

"Oh, I thought you were."

"No, I know Mrs. Van Mathas, that's all."

"That might be enough."

The man's voice was impatient. "Can't you bring me a lot of good customers?"

"I'm afraid not."

"Then why are you here?"

"Because I think I can sell."

De Franc suddenly laughed. "Well, I am overwhelmed! That's the first time any girl walked in here with such an idea! Usually they say they know everybody in the Social Register, and that they have a beautiful figure."

"I thought you wanted a sales girl. I'm sorry."

"My dear, what did you say your name was—oh, yes, Judith Van Dyck—my dear Judith, I do want able sales people. But you modern girls seem to think I hire you to wear my best frocks out dancing every night."

There was a difficult silence. Then: "Well, I hire you." He slumped back and groaned. "Will you get me some more ice in this thing?" He threw the bag at her. Judith caught it and went out somewhat confused. The salesgirl who had met her at the door was there.

"Where can I find ice for this?" Judith asked.

The woman's eyebrows went up. "In the back room."

The only ice Judith could find was around the bottle of drinking water. She put some of it into the bag and returned to De Franc. She did not speak as she put the bag on his over-groomed head.

"Good girl! Come tomorrow at nine. Wear something black." He groaned again. "Now leave me. You work on commission. I guarantee $12 a week. If you're real smart, you'll make money."

Little Benny's Note Book

I was late for supper again, making more than my usual allowance of late times for this week, and I hurry up went back in the dining room half out of breath and trying to look all a ways out, and ma said, Well well, look who's here of all people, it's Benny, we had just given you up.

Yes indeed, this is a surprise, pop said. I cant go so far as to say it's a pleasure, but it's surely a surprise. Scarcely 10 minutes late, imagine. The thought occurs to me, however, that you needn't of been late at all if you had taken advantage of the science of chronology and the state of perfection to wich man has brought the various timepieces such as clocks and watches. Why the double dooce didn't you ask somebody for the time? he said.

I did, pop, G wimickers I did, I said. That was the first thing I did, and he looked at his watch and told me it was 10 minutes after 6, I said, and pop said, That doesn't sound like a bad time, you weren't more than 20 minutes away from home, were you?

No sir, G, but it didn't seem naturel for it to be so late, so I asked another man, and he looked and said it was 20 passed 6, and that seemed even worse, so I asked another man and he didn't even have a watch and he said it was about 5 thirty, and that seemed more like it because anyways he had the most honest looking face of any of the 3, so I thought I had plenty of time, I said, and pop said, Your trusting thoughts are very touching. What's your thought about being able to sit down and catch up to your mother and me before the dizzert is brought on? he said.

Sure, G, easy, I said, and pop said, Well you're not going to get the chance, although your mother and I both have very honest faces. You're going to start when we finish, he said.

Wich I did.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 25 (CP)—The market was weak and comparatively inactive from opening and at noon all indices pointed downward, many of yesterday's good gains having been erased or cut. Volume at one o'clock was 87,000 shares as compared with 163,000 yesterday at this time.

Medium-priced and junior golds claimed the bulk of the trade and some sizeable dips were noted. East Malartic, Aunor and McLeod-Cockshutt dropped 10 cents each and Kerr Addison last 11. Preston dropped 4.

Home was softest of a weak western oil list and dropped about half of its gain of yesterday, losing 6 to 2.02. It was down to 2.00 at one time. Base metals were somewhat irregular. Pend Oreille was weakest of the lower-priced issues. Nickel eased a fraction, but Smelters improved slightly.

Industrials were neglected and pointed irregularly lower but most price changes were fractional.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 25.—(AP) The stock market wavered today as traders experimented with the price levels attained in the eight-day rise terminated Tuesday. Early closses of around a point were considerably pared toward the fourth hour. The rate of trading declined as the day progressed.

Among common shares on the offside were U.S. Steel, American Telephone, Phelps Dodge, Dupont, Union Carbide, Chesapeake & Ohio and Harvester. On the other hand, gains of more than a point were made for such preferred issues as General Steel Castings, Alleghany, Certain-Teed, Otis Steel and Pittsburgh Steel.

Dome Mines and Canadian Pacific, in the Canadian Group, advanced to better levels while Hiram Walker dipped a fraction. Canada 4s, in the Bond Market, held unchanged.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Sept. 25—(CP)—Dressedweight were up 15 cents at Brantford and prices were unchanged at Hull and Stratford in bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Liveweight: Brantford $8.50.

Dressedweight: Brantford $11.50 plus transportation; Hull $11.40, Stratford $11.50 plus transportation.

Chatham later reported prices unchanged there at $8.25 liveweight and $11.25 dressedweight.

POLICE PROBING THEFT OF TOOLS FROM WORK SHED

Automobile Owned by an Employee of Company Badly Damaged

NEWSMEN WELCOMED

Trenton, Sept. 25.—Police are investigating a mysterious robbery from the Canadian Creosote Company, last night, during which a large number of tools were stolen from the property.

The theft took place while there were a number of men working around the plant on a night shift and it is peculiar that the thieves were not noticed by these men. The culprits obtained entrance to the tool shed by breaking a pane of glass and unlatching the rear door, David Terry, superintendent, reported the theft this morning to the police.

Two lockers had been broken into and a quantity of personal belongings of the workmen taken. An automobile owned by Cecil Mountenay, who was working inside of the building was badly damaged by the destructive thieves. The spark plugs were smashed, distributor cap broken and hose connections were cut on the car as it stood in the yard.

The tools stolen were one machine hammer, one hack saw, two packages of saw blades, one 8" Wescott wrench, two screw drivers, one 12" file, two small round files, one pair of goggles, two dozen sheets of emery cloth, one pair of 8" pliers and one 3-foot rule.

Police Start Drive

Police will make a drive on the owners of dogs who have failed to obtain the necessary dog tax. Chief William Bain stated today that there were a large number of dog owners who have failed to pay the tax this year and they will be hailed into court should they fail to obtain their licence in the next few days.

Members of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce welcomed the American and Canadian newsmen to Trenton yesterday morning. President G. H. Cobley, Secretary James Holmes, I. Gaina and A. Blakely were on hand at the air station to officially welcome the men to the Town of Trenton.

Miss Henrietta Stapleton

Following a short illness, Miss Henrietta Stapleton, of Ameliasburg Township, died at her home last night. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Stapleton of Hillier. Born in Murray Township, she moved to Ameliasburg Township thirty years ago and has resided in that district ever since.

The funeral will be held from the residence of the deceased on Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Margaret Westlake

One of Trenton's well-known citizens died yesterday afternoon, following a short illness. She was the wife of James R. Westlake of 273 Front Street.

Born in Scotland, Mrs. Westlake came to Canada when she was a child with her parents. She was in her 71st year. Surviving her are her husband.

The funeral will take place from the family residence tomorrow afternoon.

Irregular Trend In Produce Prices

Toronto, Sept. 25.—An irregular trend developed in eggs on the Toronto open produce market when demand centred on lower grades and trading lagged in top grades. Butter was quiet and steady.

Although demand on the egg market was only fair, there was no real surplus as current receipts were not heavy. Buyers concentrated on lower grades and prices firmed slightly on B's and C's in the graded section, while the two top grades in the retail division were shaded down.

The butter market remained unchanged in spite of spotty demand for odd lots. Receipts did not arrive in sufficient volume to force down prices. Ontario No. 1 creamery solids sold at 23½ cents per pound. Most holders asked 24 cents for the western produce.

Very little interest appeared for offerings on the wholesale cheese market, but prices were maintained as supplies continued light. Exports for last week were reported at 49,866 boxes, bringing total shipments for the season to date, May 1 to Sept. 21, to 737,744 boxes, compared with 540,938 boxes in the like period of 1939.

Montreal Produce.

Butter — First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 24½c to 25c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 24c to 24½c.

Eggs—Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 33c; A-medium, 31c to 31½c; A-pullets, 27c to 27½c; B, 26½c to 27c; C, 17c to 17½c. Receipts: 1,723 cases.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Sept. 25 —(CP)— Cattle sales were very slow at the Livestock Market up to mid-session today. Weighty steers were 25 to 50 cents lower for the week. Veal calves were steady. The lamb market was weak. Hogs were steady. Sheep were steady. The cattle holdover from Tuesday was 2,300 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 370, calves 310, hogs 1,020, sheep and lambs 530.

Weighty steers sold at $7-$8.15. Common to medium butcher steers and heifers brought $6-$7.50. Butcher cows sold at $4-$9.25. A few bulls ranged from $4.25-$5.35 Fed calves sold at $9-$10.25. Stockers were slow at $5-$7.40.

Veal calves sold at $11-$11.50 for choice with common selling downward to $6.50. Grass calves brought $5.25-$5.50.

Common to medium sheep sold at $3-$5.50.

Hogs sold at $9 off-trucks for bacons and $12-$12.15 dressed-weight.

Montreal, Sept. 25 (CP)—Prices on all classes of livestock ruled steady on Montreal markets today, the Dominion Agriculture Department reported.

Receipts: Cattle 24; calves 8; sheep and lambs 165; and hogs 135. and calves offered to make a market.

Good ewes and wethers brought $8.50, buck lambs and culls were cut $1 and $2 per hundredweight respectively. Sheep ranged fro $3-$5.

The bulk of hogs offered sold on rail grade basis at $12.20 hot weight. A few small lots went for $9.35 for bacons fed off trucks. Sows sold from $5.50-$6.50.

ARMY 'IN MY BLOOD'

Syracuse, N.J., Sept. 25—(AP) — John Dineen, 46, believed to be the first man in Syracuse to enlist in the United States army when the United States declared war on Germany April 6, 1917, reenlisted yesterday after four years as a civilian. "I just can't get along without the army, "it's in my blood."

MILITARY OBJECTS

—were "seen to burst across the plant," the communique said.

Also reported hit were a blast furnace in southern, suburban Berlin where a "large fire" broke out and a canal bridge, caught by two "sticks" two miles southwest of the Templehof airdrome.

Londoners Satisfied

News that the capital of the Reich had been under the rain of bombs for 2 1-2 hours brought a smile of satisfaction to the faces of Londoners when they went to work this morning through streets in the central part of the city strewn with broken glass and past buildings pock-marked by high explosive shells and charred by incendiary bombs.

"That's the stuff, give it to them," the Londoner exclaimed when the newsboy triumphantly chalked the news on his slate.

There can be no doubt that news of the Berlin raids has put more heart into the people of London than anything since the deep-throated roar of the ack-ack guns 10 days ago put a protecting screen of flying metal above London and, in effect, announced to the men and women huddled in the shelters that a toll is being exacted from the German air force for all the suffering it is causing.

For a week or more there has been growing public demand here for intense bombing of Berlin and other big German cities. Many people believed this the only way of stopping raids on London, working on the stamina of the residents of Berlin until both sides agree tacitly to call off night bombing attacks.

The Berlin raid was another indication that the British government believes the imminence of Hitler's invasion attempt on this country is less acute than it was.

HEAVY CALIBRE

iness and fruit and vegetable sellers were back on the damaged streets, picking their way through the tangle of fire hoses.

One woman vendor set up her stall on the edge of a 40-foot bomb crater, erected screens to protect herself and her wares from the hose spray and did a big business.

A bomb, apparently aimed at a railway station, had landed outside a famous newspaper office. The ground floor offices were wrecked, but the paper come out as usual this morning. The front of the railway station was merely scarred.

Despite the havoc, there are still many streets in the main sections of London where not a wall is cracked, not a window broken.

Scarcely anyone took notice of the air raid sirens when they sounded this morning. A young woman milk seller wheeled her bicycle through the broken glass of one street and didn't even look up.

Nazi Plane Downed

The plane which dropped the bomb was greeted by an intense ack-ack barrage. It dropped a bright yellow flare for releasing its death-dealing cargo and then fled from the barrage.

Terrific explosions heard along the south coast from across the Channel indicated that Royal Air Force bombers were striking anew at the Nazi "invasion bases".

An Exchange Telegraph correspondent reported from England's southeast coast that explosions heard across the Strait of Dover seemed to be the heaviest of any of the British bombings on German coastal bases in France.

In an air fight over a southwest England coastal area today about 20 German bombers, apparently flying westward, were attacked by R.A.F. fighters and ground batteries. A German plane fell in flames at Branksome. The pilot bailed out but was killed.

A Brighton correspondent reported that the Spitfire fighter chased a German bomber out to sea at noon today and a little later returned, doing a "victory roll".

Church Ornaments Saved

An oil bomb destroyed the roof of a southeast London church during the night while the Vicar and 50 people who had been bombed from their houses were sheltering in the crypt. The church ornaments were saved.

Three explosive bombs falling in a southwest residential district are believed to have killed 12 persons—three in an Anderson shelter and nine in two houses.

Shortly before noon today nearly 100 invading planes appeared over the southwest English coast, splitting into three groups for their assaults. Alarms were sounded at several coastal towns.

In spite of terrific anti-aircraft fire the raiders pressed on inland, where it was believed they were intercepted by R.A.F. fighters.

Two German bombers were shot down and crashed on land while two others were believed downed at sea when about a dozen raiders and defending Spitfires clashed this afternoon over the south coast town of Bournemouth.

About the same time a raider dived from clouds over a southeast coast town and dropped 10 bombs on a shopping and residential centre. One bomb destroyed an empty movie theatre.

CHARGED WITH MURDER

Toronto, Sept. 25 (AP)—John Kluk 30-year old gun-toting escaped mental patient, appeared in police court today for preliminary hearing on a charge of murder. He was remanded until Oct. 2.

REPORTS OF DAKAR

Heavy Casualties

The Naval Ministry claimed that heavy casualties had been caused by raiding warplanes and the big guns of the attacking fleet, which were said to have bombarded the port again yesterday after six attempts to land troops had been repulsed.

Yesterday morning's bombardment alone, a communique said, killed 185 persons and wounded 363 others. Sixty-five civilians were included among the dead and 225 among the injured.

Additional military and civilian casualties were caused by a half-hour air raid yesterday afternoon, Naval Ministry officials said, but they did not estimate the number.

Little Official News

Government sources reported little official news had been received from Dakar since this raid, which put the port's radio station out of commission. Radios aboard French warships in the harbor are now the only means of communication with the city, it was said.

The 35,000-ton French battleship Richelieu, which has been laid up at Dakar, was reported hit by aerial bombs.

(The Richelieu, pride of the French Navy, was bombed and put out of commission by British planes which attacked her at Dakar last July 8 to prevent the vessel falling into German hands.)

The French said, however, that one of their planes had scored a direct hit on a British cruiser. They acknowledged the loss of one plane.

Admirals Landreau and Lacroix, commanders of the defending squadron at Dakar, cabled Vichy they were prepared to "fight to the end."

Rejects Ultimatum

The British fleet renewed its bombardment of the port yesterday, the Petain government said, after Governor-General Pierre Boisson had rejected a second ultimatum demanding that he surrender Dakar.

"France has confided Dakar to me," Boisson was quoted as saying. "I will defend it to the end."

The ultimatum, government sources said, was backed by a threat to destroy Dakar's fortifications and occupy the city by force and was signed by "the admiral commanding the British fleet."

(Headquarters of Gen. de Gaulle in London last night issued a long communique which said Gen. de Gaulle had sailed to Dakar "in French ships under the French ensign, travelling with his troops and escorted by battleships of the free French navy." It added he had decided on the expedition "to free the economic life of French West Africa from slavery and to prevent this colony from falling into the hands of the Germans.

Fighting All Day

Fighting was reported to have continued all day yesterday, with British planes joining in the attack and attempting to bomb the Dakar reservoir. Aerial activity was said to have been hampered by heavy fogs.

The government acknowledged that the 1,384-ton French submarine Persee had been sunk while attacking a British cruiser, the cruiser was said to have been damaged by a torpedo, however, and three British planes were reported shot down.

Except for the reported bombing of Gibraltar yesterday by a squadron of more than 100 French planes, there was no indication of the nature of the reprisals which Admiral Jean Darlan, French Naval Minister, has promised would be taken against Britain.

(Dispatches from Gibraltar said planes "of French type" had bombed that British base for four hours and five minutes yesterday, killing at least four persons and injuring 12 as well as damaging buildings and roads and starting three small fires. Laborers returning to the Spanish town of La Linea from Gibraltar asserted he raiders sank a British destroyer and damaged a submarine.

(A British naval squadron steamed out of Gibraltar into the Atlantic after the raid, dispatches from La Linea said, apparently headed toward French Morocco or French West Africa.)

PROTESTS NAZI RULE

Grand Duchess Charlotte

Charging Germany broke its promises to "respect the integrity and neutrality of the grand duchy," Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxembourg, now in Portugal, has filed protests with the state department and all diplomatic missions in Washington—except the German—against "arbitrary measures taken in violation of international law."

MOVE AT DAKAR

It is important to note that Britain released powerful units of the Royal Navy from home duty to support Gen. Charles de Gaulle's first move to realign colonial France with Britain. This testifies anew to British confidence that the first phase of the battle of Britain has been won. It indicates clearly that Britain's war leadership believes the immediate invasion crisis is virtually ended.

Otherwise neither British capital ships nor Gen. de Gaulle's free French legions could be spared from defence of Britain for the Dakar enterprise. There can no longer be any doubt that, in Prime Minister Churchill's estimation, the fight with German air power has reached a point where his promises to take the initiative and strike back can be fulfilled.

Navy Still Holds Blockade

British sea power still holds a deadly blockade veto on axis "new order" planning. Established at the French south Atlantic base at Dakar, it would bulwark Britain's blockade of her foes even if Gibraltar failed to cork completely that entrance to the Mediterranean.

A steadily intensifying British counter bombing attack on German cities and Nazis bases across the channel couples up with the Dakar incident to indicate that Britain is set on carrying the war to her foes this winter on all fronts.

Perhaps the British leaders calculated that the axis conferences in Rome and German-Italian flirting with Spain foreshadow a possible German-Italian-French assault on Gibraltar to crack the blockade at that point and reach South American food supplies. With Dakar in friendly French hands, that axis move would be checkmated before it started.

There is another aspect to the Dakar incident. That is American reaction. If that base were controlled by the British Navy it could not be used by the axis powers as a bridgehead for attempted penetration into the western hemisphere.

JAPANESE ORDERED

willingness to carry out the Vichy-Tokyo Pact and the more detailed agreement reached Sept. 22nd with Japanese representatives.

The statement also reaffirmed Indo-China's determination to oppose with force all efforts of the Japanese South China army to push across the northern frontier of Indo-China in what the Government said was "absolute violation" of the accord granting Japan limited military rights. The French insist they agreed to permit Japanese to enter only by the port of Haiphong.

The Government said the agreements contained formal Japanese guarantees to respect Indo-China's territorial integrity and French sovereignty over the territory and that the pact "precisely limited" the military facilities granted Japan.

Jap Leaders Confer

Gen. Issaku Nuishahara, who negotiated an agreement Sunday with French officials for Japanese military privileges in Indo-China, sped by Minesweeper from Haiphong to Hainan Island to see Gen. Ando.

French officials contended the Japanese were to garrison new air bases from Haiphong and that entry from the north was not envisioned in the agreement.

(Reuters News Agency reported from Haiphong that French authorities had abrogated the agreement with Japan on the ground that Japanese had violated it by sending troops into Northern Indo-China.

(The Japanese Foreign Office at Tokyo expressed surprise at the Haiphong report that the agreement had been abrogated, and said its latest information indicated the terms were being carried out).

(At the same time Domei, Japanese News Agency, reported from Tokyo that the Japanese South China command had announced its decision to send more troops to Haiphong by sea).

Nishahara was reported prepared to urge Ando to halt his soldiers, who have clashed at least three times with French colonial and native troops near the northern frontier.

Situation Outwardly Calm

(A French broadcast from Saigon, heard at Shanghai at 11 a.m. today—11 p.m. EDT Tuesday—said the situation in Indo-China was "outwardly calm following a minor exchange of rifle and machine-gun fire Tuesday afternoon near the northern border." The broadcaster said the colony would "resist by all means possible any Japanese attempt to take action outside the agreement.")

French official sources, who declared the Japanese south China army appeared to be acting independently, said the Japanese troops resumed their drive late yesterday at Langson, 12 miles within the northern border.

In a clash at this same point Monday, it was announced there were 20 French and native casualties while several Japanese were taken prisoners.

Berlin Attacked For Third Night In Succession

Central London Suffers Heaviest Air Attack Since Outbreak of War

London, Sept. 25—(CP)—German planes roared over central London today while terrific explosions heard across the English Channel indicated the Royal Air Force was striking anew at Nazi bases in daylight renewal of night raids.

Londoners went to shelters in mid-morning when the German bombers came back after a night attack that was central London's worst bombing of the war.

Anti-aircraft guns went into action against planes seen high over the city.

An Exchange Telegraph correspondent reported from England's southeast coast that explosions heard across the Strait of Dover seemed the heaviest of any of the British bombings along the German-held French coast.

Massed waves of German bombers showered the heart of London with fire bombs and huge explosives last night.

The fury of the concentrated attack came as a pre-dawn finale to one of the fiercest raids the entire city had endured in 18 consecutive nights of death and damage.

The thunderous anti-aircraft barrage which guarded the central city from the full force of the earlier overnight assault failed to stem the sudden succeeding tide of bombers.

British bombers bent grimly to their own task, widening the swath of ruin along the repeatedly bombed coast of France and Belgium.

Observers on the Kent cliffs reported countless flashes which told of the R.A.F.'s continued bombing long after the attack began late last night against what the Air Ministry called "the invasion ports."

Casualties Reported

(Dispatches from Germany said the R.A.F. attacked Berlin again for the third consecutive night. Some of the raiders penetrated over the central city. Several casualties were reported.)

A communique by the British Ministries of Air and Home Security said four hospitals were among the "many buildings" damaged in the night bombardment of London.

An undetermined number of casualties was reported and others were killed and injured in other parts of England, Scotland and Wales.

Besides the heavy explosives dumped on central London numerous big "Molotoff Breadbaskets" of incendiary bombs were dropped.

One bomb struck the corner of the mid-town London offices of an American firm, starting a fire in one wing which was soon extinguished.

(Censorship did not permit specific identification of the building but it was believed to be the office of the Associated Press, just off Fleet Street. Offices of the Canadian Press are in the same building. Staff members were uninjured but were forced to leave the building after messaging that they were operating temporarily "under extreme difficulty." Communication was cut off for 47 minutes.

Burst Like Fireworks

White calcium flares, the blue light of incendiaries, and the orange flash of explosives combined with eerie effect in the bombed sections. Overhead anti-aircraft shells burst like fireworks.

Several casualties were caused when a bomb hit a building in central London. A theatre in the West End was demolished. The west and southwest sections of the city shook with repeated explosions.

"Elsewhere, in southeast England," a communique of the Ministries of Air and Home Security said, "the casualties have been few and material damage not great."

Some loss of life was reported caused in one southeast town where fires were started by bombs.

Some People Killed

Houses were damaged and "a small number of people killed and injured" in North Wales, the communique said. Other parts of Wales also were bombed.

Bombs also fell in northwestern England and in eastern Scotland but no casualties were reported.

In one northwest coast town big bombs early today started three fires in commercial property. A large restaurant, stores and other buildings were damaged.

In London some fires from the night bombings still burned after dawn, but hard working crews of firemen seemed to have them under control. A pall of smoke hung over parts of the city. A big hole had been torn in the side of a warehouse. New holes gaped in pavements and fresh heaps of rubble clogged some streets.

One rooftop observer told of watching fires spring up in Central London after incendiary bombs were showered down.

The crackle of flames mingles with the clang of fire bells as engines raced to the scene with still more bombs dropping about them. High explosives followed the shower of incendiaries.

The heart of the city was illuminated at first by an unearthly blue light which gradually turned to pink and then to deeper red as the fires spread.

Some Fires Started

One bomb smashed through the roof of a bank, heavily damaging the interior.

One of the bombs that fell in Central London exploded within a few feet of a historic church, smashing windows and damaging pews.

Buildings of a college in London were hit. Much of the library building was swept by flames and thousands of books were destroyed. Part of the library had little more than its walls left standing.

Two hundred and fifty persons in a shelter beneath the college were shepherded out safely and taken to cover elsewhere.

A hotel also was damaged. In it alone six persons were killed and many others were cut and bruised.

47-Minute Break In Communication With America

Toronto, Sept. 25.—(CP)—A 47-minute break in communication between the London and New York offices of The Canadian Press indicated the building house the London Bureau had been struck by a bomb last night, but today Sam Robertson, acting superintendent of the Bureau cabled: "All okay" in response to a query whether any of the staff of eight was hurt.

The break occurred at a time when the London Bureau normally is lightly manned and was first indicated when the operator on the leased wire which serves both the Canadian and Associated Press said: "Operating under extreme difficulties'. Thereafter the circuit went dead.

What happened was indicated in a subsequent dispatch, guarded because censorship does not permit specific identification of buildings hit until some time after the event. The dispatch said one United States London office of an "American firm" had been hit and damaged and that a fire had been extinguished there.

On Fourth Floor

The Canadian Press offices are located on the fourth storey of a five-storey building in Tudor street, a block south of Fleet street and two blocks north of the Thames.

The building also houses The Associated Press of America and The Associated Press of Great Britain.

Even before the outbreak of war steps were taken to reinforce the walls with sandbags and provide an air raid shelter in the basement with communications facilities. Subsequently screens of heavy wire netting were provided to protect workers from flying glass in the event of sudden raids catching them above ground.

At that time also arrangements were made to move the staff to an alternative building on the outskirts of the city should the central part prove too dangerous. This, however, was not found necessary.

Extent of the damage in last night's raid has not been made known.

TRUCK DAMAGED IN A COLLISION

Considerable damage resulted to the Belle Cleaner Company truck at the intersection of Victoria and Foster Aves. during the noon hour today. The Cleaners' truck, driven by Thomas Blaind, Belleville, turned over on its side and struck a pole after being in collision with a truck owned by E. Stapley, also of this city. The right side, top and fenders of the Belle Cleaning vehicle were all badly damaged as the result of the crash.

WOMAN FALLS INTO DON, DIES DESPITE RESCUE

Toronto, Sept. 25 —(CP)— Four policemen assisted in rescue efforts when Catherine Wilson, 53, Toronto, fell into the Don river early today, but she died before arriving at hospital. Chief Coroner Dr. Smirle Lawson said death was due to drowning and decided an inquest unnecessary.

6 SOLDIERS KILLED IN CAR-TRUCK CRASH

U.S. Restricts Iron, Steel Scrap Exports to Americas and Britain

Canadian Ship Captures Nazi Cargo Vessel

Plan to Conserve Metal for Defence Program of U.S.

No Mention Made of Japan, Though Big Buyer of Scrap—Some See U.S. Dissatisfied With Japan

Washington, Sept. 26.—(AP)—President Roosevelt today ordered restriction on exports of scrap iron and steel which will permit them after October 16 to go only to countries of the Western Hemisphere and to Great Britain.

A statement issued by the White House said Mr. Roosevelt had approved the establishment of additional controls over the exportation of iron and steel scrap "with a view to conserving the available supply to meet the rapidly expanding requirements of the defence program in this country".

No mention was made of Japan, which has been a big buyer of the scrap, but the latest step to restrict the exports immediately was regarded by some authorities as an additional indication of the United States' dissatisfaction with Japan's policy in the Far East.

ASKED TO BE LOCKED UP

Indianapolis, Sept. 26 (AP)—William Mueller, 35, appeared at police headquarters saying he had tried to kill himself, Capt. Roy Pope said, and asking that he be locked up overnight to prevent a repetition. Mueller didn't know that on Pope's desk was a warrant for his arrest on a charge of assault and battery signed by his wife, Mrs. Gladys Mueller. The Captain ordered him jailed. A few minutes later a turnkey found Mueller's body in his cell, hanging by his belt.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Air and life! Everyone knows how essential the oxygen of the air is to life. While the proportion of oxygen in the free air is almost invariable, at high elevations there is less than at sea level, and dilution may occur anywhere by an increase of water vapor or carbon dioxide. However, at high elevations where oxygen has been reduced as much as one-third, there seems to be enough for bodily needs. And carbon dioxide is harmful only when increased to 4 per cent of the air. This rarely occurs even with tightly closed windows and doors. What is important is that there be ample ventilation to do away with the feeling of closeness due to a combination of warmth and moisture.

HEAVY SHELLING BY BRITISH NAVY AT SIDI BARRANI

Italian Supply Bases and Troop Concentrations Considerably Damaged

NO OPPOSITION

Alexandria, Egypt, Sept. 26—(AP)—British naval forces again have shelled Italian supply bases and troop concentrations in the Sidi Barrani area, inflicting heavy damage and leaving behind a trail of huge fires, naval authorities announced today.

The warships were said to have moved into the waters a short distance off Sidi Barrani and fired at point-blank range, scoring direct hits on Italian military objectives.

A naval communique said the new attack on Sidi Barrani—the third in 10 days—was made about dawn yesterday. Many shells fell in the heart of bases established by Marshal Rodolfo Graziani for his invasion of Egypt.

Waves of Flames Seen

Waves of flames were seen to leap into the sky and severe explosions followed. One huge fire was observed burning two hours after the bombardment ended.

The British warships apparently further seriously disrupted Graziani's efforts to get his troops in advanced supply bases into fighting trim for a possible enlargement of his eastward thrust.

The British warships have shelled the Italian bases at will and thus far have not encountered any opposition from the Italian fleet.

"RAG" HELMETS MAY BE USED

Will Replace 'Tin Hats' as Steel is Needed for Tanks and Ships

London, Sept. 26 (CP)—Britons soon may be wearing "rag" hedmets due to a shortage of regulation "tin hats" made of steel. The steel is needed for guns, tank and ships.

Experts have produced a substitute "crash" hat made chiefly of rags for armament workers. It is half the weight of the regulation helmet and only slightly more pregnable. They will be placed on sale to civilians.

Airplane Collides With Parked Car

Toronto, Sept. 26 (CP)—Toronto's first airplane-automobile collision of the year was recorded today.

Bob Redmayne of Air Transport and Training, Island Airport, parked his automobile outside his office and shortly after an airplane glided across the lawn and crashed into the car. The pilot was not injured but the plane's undercarriage was torn off.

Redmayne said the pilot was trying to turn his light monoplane downwind but the wind was so strong it kept him the other way. A final burst of the engine to get him around carried the plane onto the car.

New Searchlight Technique Used To Combat Nazi Raiders at Night

London, Sept. 26 (CP).—The new searchlight technique used extensively early today to combat German raiders consists of crossing the beams at a sharp angle, and the sky is thus "combed" methodically for raiders.

Clusters of lights in far corners of the metropolis co-operate closely, aiding each other in the search. One light directs a steady beam, while a second slowly slides down to it leaving the unwary raider little chance of evading the dazzling glare.

Once a German bomber is firmly held by a cluster of lights it provides an illuminated target for the anti-aircraft guns.

JAPANESE TROOPS LAND AT HAIPONG

Planes Bomb Port and Troops Land Without Firing a Shot

By C. Yates McDaniel
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Haiphong, French Indo-China, Sept. 26.—(AP)— Two thousand Japanese troops landed this morning six miles from this port without firing a shot and without meeting French resistance after three Japanese planes had bombed a nearby railroad crossing, killing and wounding 15 natives.

Shortly after noon the Japanese troops, led by a squadron of light tanks, marched to quarters which the French had provided.

The Japanese Commander paid his respects to the French officers and expressed regrets for the aerial bombing. He said it was a mistake.

The landing on the coast was in fulfilment of a Japanese-French agreement which is being put into effect despite the Japanese army's forcible entry across the Chinese border—which the French say violated the pact.

FORGOT ALL ABOUT $2

Newark, N.J., Sept. 26 (AP) — Nine years ago police sergeant Edward Tucker lent a stranger $2 after the man told him he left his wallet at home. Tucker forgot about it until yesterday when Joseph Hughes stopped him on his beat, paid back the money and invited sergeant Tucker and his family to be guest for a week at his Wildwood home. Hughes said he had been all over the conutry and had just returned to New Jersey.

REMANDED WITHOUT BAIL

Toronto, Sept. 26 (CP)—Eugene Pattui, Toronto, charged under the Defence of Canada Regulations and the National Registration Regulations, was remanded to Oct. 4 without bail today. Only one charge, that of giving the wrong address in his application for a registration card, was read in court.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police officer said Pattui was believed to be an enemy alien. Police said he came to Canada from the United States some years ago and had been living recently in Northern Ontario.

British Subs Sink 3 Nazi Supply Ships

London, Sept. 26 (C). — British submarines have torpedoed three German supply ships, the Admiralty announced today, but the communique did ont specify the date or place of the engagement.

It said that the submarine H-49 attacked a convoy of eight supply vessels, scoring torpedo hits on two, and that the submarine Tuna reported the destruction of a large supply ship which was screened by two destroyers.

Capture of Weser, 9,180 Tons By Prince Robert of R. C. N. Announced by Navy Minister

Nazi Vessel is Being Escorted to Esquimalt, B.C., After Captain and Most of Crew Taken Off

NO DETAILS GIVEN

The Prince Robert Recently Commissioned for Royal Canadian Navy

Ottawa, Sept. 26 (CP).—The Canadian armed merchant cruiser, Prince Robert, captured the German express cargo ship Weser off Manzanillo, Mexico, Navy Minister Macdonald announced today.

The minister made his announcement to assembled Ottawa reporters, hastily called to receive the news.

The Weser, 9,180 tons sailed from Manzanillo yesterday and was captured last night.

The captain and most of the crew have been transferred to the Prince Albert and the Weser is being escorted to Esquimalt, B.C.

Manzanillo is a port in Mexico on a bay opening into the Pacific Ocean.

Recently Commissioned.

Only recently the navy minister announced the commissioning of the Prince Robert for the Royal Canadian Navy. She is a former Canadian National Steamships cruise vessel.

In the spring of this year the Canadian flotilla leader, H.M.C.S. Assiniboine, shared honors with a cruiser of the Royal Navy in the capture of the German merchantman, Hannover, in the Caribbean Sea.

Just after Italy entered the war, H.M.C.S. Bras d'Or, a minesweeper of the Royal Canadian Navy captured the Italian vessel, Capo Noli, 3,690 tons, after the Italian crew ran

British Reaction To Dakar Incident

London, Sept. 26—(CP)—Britain was disappointed today over abandonment of the attempt to seize Dakar, key port of French West Africa, after a three-day battle in which the Admiralty disclosed that British warships had suffered damage and casualties.

Among the press the News Chronicle alone sounded a note of censure, striking out with a bold headline "De Gaulle's expedition to Dakar fails" and printing an article by Vernon Bartlett, Independent member of parliament, storming against "delay and hesitation" and declaring "it has been decided" that Germany "must be allowed another success."

The decision to withdraw the free French forces of General Charles de Gaulle and the supporting British fleet from Dakar was made, the British Ministry of Information said, "when it became evident that only a major operation of war could secure the fall" of the port.

No Intention of 'Serious Warlike Operations'

The communique explained, "it has never been the intention of His Majesty's government to enter into serious warlike operations against those Frenchmen who felt it their duty to obey the commands of the Vichy government" and declared, "General de Gaulle himself was most anxious that he should not be the cause of bloodshed to his fellow countrymen."

While disclosing that hits had been scored on British warships by French shore batteries, the communique did not specify the extent of damage or casualties.

BERLIN DIRECTING DIPLOMATIC AND POLITICAL MOVES

Moves Appear to Foreshadow Hitler's Prosecution of Axis War Against Britain

U.S. MENTIONED

Berlin, Sept. 26 (AP)—Furious diplomatic and political activity appeared today to foreshadow swift and broad developments in the creation of Hitler's prosecution of the Axis war against Britain, whose bombers during the night held the capital under its longest air alarm of the war.

The impression grew that Spain was on the verge of indicating in some substantial measure her desire for closer relations with the Axis, and a more intimate understanding with Japan—as a counterweight to possible closer British-American collaboration—seemed to be in the offing.

(Trustworthy advices received by The Associated Press in New York yesterday said a special German mission to Tokyo has been successful, and announcement of Japan's new role in the Axis scheme of things—perhaps as an active ally—is expected soon. There was no confirmation in Berlin, however, that any new pact actually has been completed.

Berlin's longest air raid alarm of the war kept the capital's 4,000,000 residents and those of surrounding areas in cellars five hours last night and early today as British bombers attacked for the fourth successive night.

The alarm came before bedtime and caught many persons on the way home, forcing them to spend the night in strange shelters.

NOTES CONTAIN INSTRUCTIONS

New York, Sept. 26 (AP)—Amor Frederick Keene, 61, onetime mining engineer associate of former President Hoover, was found dead of carbon monoxide poisoning yesterday in the garage beneath his home in Queens Beside him were three nots giving instructions for the settlement of business affairs.

'Major Blunder' View of N. Y. Times On Dakar Affair

New York, Sept. 26—(CP)—The New York Times said today that "from first to last" the attempt of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's free French forces, aided by British warships, to take the West African port of Dakar "appears to have been a major blunder."

"It would be folly for the British, or for their friends, to minimize the probable effects of this defeat," said The Times editorially. "The authority of General de Gaulle as the spokesman of free France has been discredited. The effort to detach the French colonies has suffered a setback, and may have to be resumed in other ways, perhaps with other leaders.

"The prestige of Great Britain throughout Africa is bound to suffer for this fiasco, and the boldness of the axis will be correspondingly increased....for the British people, who have endured such trials with such matchless courage, Dakar will bring a new disappointment."

BRITISH RESERVE BUYING POWER REMAINS STRONG

Most of Gold and Securities Held in America Remain Untouched — $700,000,000 New Gold Turned Out Annually by Empire

U. S. PURCHASES HELP

Newly-Mined Gold, Rubber and Tin from Empire Give Britain $1,000,000,000 in Exchange Annually

By FREDERICK GARDNER
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, Sept. 26 (AP)—After more than a year of war British reserve buying power in the United States market remains largely untouched, analysis of trade and banking figures indicated today.

So far as the available figures show, Britain still has laid by for a rainy day most of the gold and American securities she held at the outset of the conflict.

British purchases of war supplies in the United States have been stepped up since the fall of France and the intense bombing of the British Isles.

Nevertheless, it appears Britain could continue buying at an accelerated pace for many months before the war chest is scraped bare of reserve gold and other liquid assets.

Newly-produced gold, rubber and tin from British Empire sources giving Britain more than $1,000,000,000 annually in dollar exchange to toss into the trade scales, it is figured.

BRANTFORDMAYOR IS GIVEN POST

Reginald Waterous Becomes Director of National War Services Department

Ottawa, Sept. 26—(CP)—Appointment of Reginald Waterous, Mayor of Brantford, Ont., as Director of Material Resources, National War Services Department, was announced by War Services Minister Gardiner at a press conference today.

The Minister told a gathering of reporters that Mr. Waterous would make surveys of production of material foods for war, farm production and the like.

Previously the appointment of G. H. Lash as Director of Public Information under Mr. Gardiner has been announced, followed by the appointments of Dr. Hugh Herbert Christie of Esterhazy, Sask., as Director of Medical Services; Dr. Ernest William Stapleford of Victoria College, Toronto, as Director of Voluntary Services and Georges Roger Gerald Benoit, Ottawa, Director of Recruiting.

The Minister explained that the Directors of Medical Services, Voluntary Services and Recruiting would handle Canada's human resources for the war effort.

Damage at Gibraltar "Surprisingly Light"

Madrid, Sept. 26 (AP).—Tuesday's air raid on Gibraltar by aircraft of the Vichy regime caused "surprisingly little" damage, Mrs. Jean Dixon, wife of the British Air Attache in Madrid, said today.

Mrs. Dixon said that about 200 bombs were dropped and that four persons were killed and a dozen injured.

A bomb, said Mrs. Dixon, fell close to the battle cruiser Renown. (The Vichy admiralty claimed a bomb hit had been scored on the Renown.)

STATION OWNER ROBBED

Toronto, Sept. 26 (CP)—Reuben Balshin service station owner, told police he was robbed of $100 early today, by an armed thug who thrust a gun and a flashlight in his face in his garage at his home here. "Hand over your money or I'll drill you," the holdup man snapped.

Berliners Spend 5 Hrs. of Night in Air Raid Shelters

German Raiders Take New Path in Their Attack on London During Night

London, Sept. 26 (CP)—The air war reached new peaks today with Berlin's longest raid alarm of the war, the heaviest bombardment of the German-held "invasion coast" and the 19th consecutive night of bombing for London.

In their third successive major night raid on the German capital, hits were made on the great Templehof Airdrome, a munitions factory and a railway yard. Important power stations also were attacked, the Ministry said.

The great naval base at Kiel was another night target.

When daylight again streaked the channel skies fresh British airmen, heavily bundled against the chill, roared off to a new offensive thrust inspired by the constant threat of invasion from the German-held French coast. Like the rumble of thunder in a channel storm, their bombs burst today in the region of Calais and Cap Gris Nez.

Daylight Assault

This daylight assault—45 minutes in which the terrific detonations were heard on the English side as virtually one continuous reverberation—followed a three-hour attack in the light of a pale moon from Boulogne to Dunkerque.

The weather on the English Channel may have been a factor in intensified British pressure on the "invasion coast." Choppy seas which had rendered impossible any navigation by shallow-draft boats—such as German invaders might use—quieted as the day came on.

Haze Masks French Coast

Even so there was a slight swell in mid-channel, and a cold north-east wind failed to break the sunrise haze masking the French coast.

In the first attack, observers on the cliffs of the English shore could see the flash of explosive and incendiary bombs, the sweep of searchlights and the glare of flares along the whole stretch of coast nearest England.

At times parts of the sky were almost as bright as day and the English earth seemed to tremble from the explosions little more than a score of miles distant.

Royal Air Force raiders also struck at Germany's Kiel naval base while their foemen dumped

POWER STATION 'STRADDLED' BY BRITISH BOMBERS

Fountainhead of Berlin's Industrial Power Set on Fire and Damaged

AIRDROME HIT

London, Sept. 26—(CP)—British bombs raked Berlin's 300,000-kilowatt Klingenberg power station, fountainhead of much of the city's industrial power, and other vital objectives last night in the Royal Air Force's greatest assault on the Nazi capital, the Air Ministry announced today.

The power station, in the heart of the factory section of the east of Berlin, was straddled by "sticks" of heavy-calibre bombs in four separate attacks within an hour, the Air Ministry communique said, and bombs bursting on and around the station were followed by fire.

Opening the bombing shortly after 10 p.m. and continuing into the early morning hours, the R. A. F. nighthawks also plunged explosives onto the capital's west power station, the Schoenberg railway yard, a railway station near the Charlottenburg district Templehof airdrome and nearby railway sidings.

The Air Ministry said "a line of bombs was laid across the northern half of the airdrome."

Seventeen miles east of Berlin, a munitions factory at Rudersdorf was picked out by a single raider and bombed in the light of parachute flares. Fire followed the hit.

The Rudersdorf raider searched 20 minutes for its target, amid heavy fire from ground batteries, before tripping the bomb rack, the Air Ministry said.

Says Hitler 'Lost Time' in Norway

Montreal, Sept. 26 (CP). — Although Hitler's losses in ships and men through the invasion of Norway were great, "he lost what is more important—he lost time," Dr. Karl Evans, director general of public health for the Norwegian government, told a public meeting Wednesday. "Many military experts are of the opinion," said Dr. Evans, "that if Hitler had tried to invade Britain in April, the war would have been won by his forces."

Intensive Search Fails to Reveal Trace of Airplane

Port Dalhousie, Ont., Sept. 26 (CP)—Intensive search of the waters of Lake Ontario near here throughout the night and early today failed to reveal any trace of an unidentified airplane which is believed to have been forced down late yesterday.

The plane headed out over the lake shortly before midnight and observers said it did a loop before coming to rest on the rough waters of the lake. Flares were sent up and a red distress signal was displayed but vessels were not able to reach the machine before all signs of it had disappeared.

Chauncey Thomas, Port Dalhousie fisherman, spent several hours searching the rough waters. The Canadian Government tug, Lavoilette, traversed a strip of water five miles into the lake and a United States coastguard cutter played its searchlight beam over the lake, but the plane was not to be seen.

Ralph Michael of Port Dalhousie, accompanied by Provincial Constable Frank Cooney of St. Catharines, set out in a speed boat while the plane's flares still were visible but the high waves forced the small craft back to shore.

Police in nearby St. Catharines said they were investigating reports from Dalhousie and St. Catharines residents that "suspicious flights" were taken by an unidentified airplane in this vicinity during the last two weeks.

One report said a plane landed in Lake Ontario two weeks ago at the point where last night's plane was seen.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK OBSERVED

Fire Prevention Week will be observed during the week beginning on October 6th it was announced this morning by Fire Chief Wm. Lynch of the Belleville Fire Department. Inspection of attic and basements throughout the residential area of the city will commence next week however, according to Chief Lynch, while an inspection of all manufacturers' plants is also planned.

The campaign will be brought more clearly to the minds of the children by the staging of essay writing contests in each of the five public schools with prizes to be given to be awarded for the best papers on the prevention of fire and the reduction of fire hazards. Local theatres will also aid in making the public "fire prevention" conscious and reels dealing with this subject will be shown on all screens.

PEACHES TAKE DROP ON LOCAL MARKET

A chilly wind kept attendance to a low figure on the Thursday morning's market and although produce was displayed in slightly lesser quantities than usual prices remained steady. Peaches dropped to 40c for No. 1's and 30c for No. 2's for practically the only change from Tuesday's prices. Pears were 45c per basket and plums were quoted at 40c. Blue Damsons sold at 25c the basket. Grapes were scarce at 40c the basket.

Tomatoes sold at 15c the basket or at 75c per bushel with apples selling at $1.00 per bushel for cooking varieties or at 30c per peck. McIntosh and Wealthy varieties sold at 25c per six-quart basket. Corn again sold for 20c per dozen ears. Cucumbers sold at 50c to $1.00 per basket according to size. Watermelons and muskmelons were quite plentiful, selling at 20c each and downward.

PERMITS NOW GIVEN TO SELL FIRE-ARMS

In the matter of the registration of shot guns, rifles and small arms, police today made it known that special registration cards to permit the owner of such guns to lend, give, barter, sell or transfer guns were now obtainable.

When the first announcement that all guns must be registered under the Defence of Canada Regulations, no mention of such permits to allow the transfer of shot guns or rifles was made, but of a more recent date the government will permit the transfer of guns, providing a special licence is procured from the authorities.

3-47TH BATTERY TO ATTEND CHURCH

Military trucks will rumble through the city early Sunday morning when members of the 3-47th Field Battery, R.C.A. will attend a church parade to be held in Cobourg. "A" Troop from Napanee, "B" Troop from Belleville and "C" Troop and headquarters from Cobourg will join with other units of the district at the service.

Members of "B" Troop, in Belleville over the weekend on leave will join their unit here at 8.15 a.m. Sunday where they will be picked up by the trucks at the Market Square. Major W. J. Van Steenburgh, well-known in this city, is the commanding officer of the battery.

Red Cross Canvassers Must Carry Permit

Down Kingston way it has been revealed that at least two unscrupulous persons have been soliciting money for the Red Cross without being in possession of regular permit carried by bona-fide canvassers. In both cases the suspected persons were asked to show their credentials but they were unable to do so.

Howard J. Clarke, local Campaign Chairman, stated this morning that there had been no trouble of this nature reported in the Belleville district but warned all householders to watch for solicitors, who could not produce the permit, which is carried by all bona-fide canvassers, and to report the matter immediately to him.

The progress of the local campaign to date has been entirely satisfactory, stated Mr. Clarke, who said that he was out with the canvassers on Wednesday and was very pleased with the welcome reception received, stating that the response had been very generous. All canvassers have not yet been alloted districts as the lists were late in being prepared but this matter will be all cleared up within a day or so, stated Mr. Clarke.

Lawn Bowlers To Aid Red Cross

Indicative of their whole-hearted co-operation with the Canadian Red Cross in its war efforts, the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club is donating its greens tomorrow (Friday) afternoon and evening to the district committee of the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association for the purpose of holding its Second Annual Red Cross Tournament. All proceeds derived from the affair will be given to the Canadian Red Cross.

The tournament will be a mixed rinks function and entry fees are one dollar per person.

Belleville district committee are singularly proud of the fact that they are the first district to hold bowling tournaments for the benefit of the Red Cross. Their inaugural effort last year was a splendid success and the idea swept over the province where lawn bowling associations function. A large number of clubs held similar affairs, and the Belleville club is again to the fore in paving the way for the second year's tournaments.

Officials of the Association are particularly anxious that all members turn out in the afternoon and evening and not only enjoy a fine afternoon's outing but by so doing aid a humanitarian cause.

Executive of Retail Merchants Assoc. Turns Down Holiday Proposal

The Belleville Retail Merchants' Association will take no action as an organization in the proposed Wednesday afternoon closing for ten months of the year, members of the executive decided at a special meeting today. It was included in the motion, however, that a general meeting would be called and nonmember businessmen invited to attend to formulate plans for petitioning for the holiday in separate business groups.

Divergent opinions of members entered into the discussion of the matter with the majority of those speaking against the proposed scheme contending the half-holiday should be universal to be effective.

Certain stores in the city stay open whether a holiday is declared or not, it was pointed out, and it was suggested that steps be taken to force a closing. The discussion ended with the majority voting for a motion that the Association as an organization take no action but that individual business groups organize and file their own petitions.

Plans for a Santa Claus parade were discussed and a chairman and committee to take charge of all arrangements will be appointed in the near future by President Jack McVeigh.

The executive also decided to invite Secretary Manager Haugham of the Canadian Retail Merchants' Association to be their guest at a dinner meeting in the immediate future where he will be asked to discuss several important matters pertaining to the retail business.

FRENCH SENATORS ARE INTERNED

Petain-Laval Government at Vichy Acts Against Former Administrators

Vichy, Sept. 26—(AP)—The Petain-Laval government announced today that Popular Front Senator Marx Doromoy and Deputies Jules Moch, Solomon Grumbach and Vincent Aurio have been confined in "administrative internment."

Auriol was Finance Minister and Dormoy, Interior Minister in the Blum Popular Front government. Moch was an Under-Secretary of State and Grunbach reporter for the Chamber of Deputies Foreign Affairs Commission.

The four parliamentarians will be interned in the village of Pellevison, and not in Chageron Chateau where Gen. Marie-Gustave Gamelin and other leaders of France before the armistice are held.

OBITUARY

INFANT MENZIE

(Trenton)

At the Belleville General Hospital early this Thursday morning the death occurred of the three-weeks-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Menzie, Trenton. The child was one of twins.

POLICE COURT

"This man is loitering about farm houses, sleeping in barns throughout the Tweed area and generally annoying the populace. His action also frightens the women and I might add he is a general nuisance," Chief J. C. Hayes of Tweed informed Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in County Police Court held here today after George English had pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy. English was arrested by Chief Hayes, but he denied a criminal record introduced today. His Worship immediately remanded the accused until such time as the record could be proven.

"I want a lawyer," stated Francis Moore of Stirling, when arraigned on a charge of the theft of a suit of clothes, the property of Charles Smith. His case was remanded. Moore was apprehended by Chief S. Eggleton of Stirling following complaints registered by Mr. Smith regarding the loss of a suit of clothes.

Florence Bowers, Thurlow, appeared on a charge of threatening her parents with physical violence. The accused pleaded guilty as charged and was bound over to keep the peace and be of good behaviour.

After pleading guilty to a charge of failing to produce his driver's licence and fined $10.00 and costs, Morris Nickols, of the R.C.A.F. pleaded not guilty to a subsequent charge of careless driving. The latter charge arose out of an accident in which Nickols' car was involved near Carrying Place on the night of Sept. 4th last. Nickols assured the court a front tire had blown out forcing him into the ditch. His Worship dismissed the latter count without costs.

Two other minor motor counts concluded the morning's proceedings.

SAYS JAPANESE WOULD AID NAZIS IF U.S. ENTER WAR

Japanese Informant at Tokyo Says Japan Convinced U.S. Opposes Japanese Expansion

TOKYO AND MOSCOW

Tokyo, Sept. 26 (AP).—A qualified informant said today it is expected Japan would actively support Germany if the United States should enter the war.

He said the Japanese government finally is convinced that the United States is unalterably opposed to Japan's "legitimate" expansion in the Orient.

This source said that "strengthening" of the anti-comintern pact of Germany, Italy and Japan had become one of the main objectives of Japanese diplomacy in the past year.

Meanwhile, he indicated, a nonaggression pact with Soviet Russia is not unlikely.

"Japan is and always will be opposed to Communism," he said, "but this doesn't mean that a working arrangement with the Russians cannot be effected."

(Recent Japanese press comment has urged rapprochement between Tokyo and Moscow and Japan recently changed her ambassador in Moscow for that ostensible purpose).

"Japan has consistently sought only peaceful, economic penetration of the Far East," said this qualified informant, returning to the question of the United States.

"Our sphere of action lies here and we prefer not to send troops and warships to the various corners of the Far East to guarantee that penetration.

"However, the United States has consistently attempted to block Japan. Even during times when the British offered conciliation, the American policy increased in strength."

NAZI-MODELLED STATE IN NORWAY

Quisling, Norwegian Nazi, is Named Sole Political Leader

Oslo, German-occupied Norway, (Via Berlin)—Sept. 26—(AP)— A newly-proclaimed "commission state"—a Nazi-modelled national union described as neither a German protectorate, nor a monarchy—is in force in Norway.

Norwegians were told by Joseph Terboven, Nazi High Commissioner for this occupied nation, that the measure of Freedom and independence they may regain depends on the degree of loyalty they show for the new commission-style Nasjonal Sambling (National Union).

In a proclamation of the change yesterday, Terboven announced the end of the Norwegian monarchy and parliament, declaring refugee King Haakon had been removed as Chief of State and the royal succession broken. Haakon last was reported in England.

Vidkun Quisling, the Norwegian Nazi, was named sole political leader, and a council of 15 commissioners selected by Terboven himself was given temporary charge of the government.

Perhaps the best known of these commissioners is Kheld Irgens, in charge of navigation, who for many years captained vessels sailing to North America.

Hitler Seeks Shelter Early When British Raiders Appear

Berlin, Sept. 26 —(AP)— Every night when an air raid alarm screams through the German capital Hitler retires immediately to a spacious air raid shelter under his palatial new chancellery and remains there until the all clear signal is given.

At present about 100 children and 20 women who are either expectant mothers or who have just become mothers are brought to the chancellery shelter nightly. Others who greet Hitler are his major-domo, adjutants, officials on night duty and servants.

In Berlin they are saying the shelter of the chancellery is Berlin's "safest lying-in hospital." Physicians and nurses are in attendance. Late every afternoon women and children living in the poorer quarters of the city, where air raid shelters are inadequate, are brought to the chancellery in omnibuses.

London, Sept. 26—(CP)— Prime Minister Winston Churchill's conduct during air raids is drawing complaints. The Press Association said his friends are worried over his habit of donning a tin hat and sauntering out into the streets to watch the nightly German attacks and the anti-aircraft barrages.

TRINITY CHURCH AT SHANNONVILLE 75 YEARS OLD

Anniversary Celebrated Over Last Weekend With Appropriate Ceremonies

CHURCH SUPPER HELD

Shannonville — The first Trinity Church, (frame) Shannonville, (one of the oldest villages in Ontario), was erected in 1854. It was destroyed by fire following the Good Friday Service in 1876. This church was consecrated in 1865 by Archbishop Lewis the "First" Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario, 75 years ago.

The last service in the first church was taken by Rev. J. W. Finlay, this buiding was northwest of the village. When the new stone church built in 1876-77 (now 63 years old) was erected on a new site east of the village, Rev. Wm. Roberts was rector. This church is of attractive design with square tower and tall spire. Three years ago the Diamond Jubilee of this building was celebrated. Fine clergy served in the first Trinity Church and from 1854 to 1864 the Rev. C. A. Anderson of the Mohawk Church, Tyendinaga, carried on the services. Rev. Wm. Lewin seems to have been the first incumbent in 1665 followed by Rev. James Mockridge. Rev. T. Crodden, Rev. C. J. Lowe and J. W. Finlay.

Had Twenty-Six Clergy

Altogether twenty-six clergy have served in the parish. Twenty-one of these serving in the present church. The Diocese of Ontario was founded in 1862 so that for eight years the first Trinity Church, Shannonville, would be under the jurisdiction of the Bishop of Toronto in Upper Canada. The old stone mill and the stone church are landmarks in the village and frequently painted by outstanding Canadian artists, both buildings being near the Shannon River. The minute book still in use records seventy-five annual vestry meetings and one entry states the stipend in 1864 as £74, 12s, 8½d. An interesting signature in this book is that of Venerable Archdeacon Patton, D.C.L., who conducted a meeting in 1873 in the first church. Clergy who have served in the present church include: Rev. Wm. Roberts, Rev. Stuart Foster, Rev. B. B. Smith, Rev. A. F. Echlin, Rev. T. C. Porte, Rev. H. O. Trewayne, Rev. T. Crodden, Rev. Wm. Fleming, Rev. T. F. Dowdell, Rev. A. L. Geen, Rev. de Po-Wagner, Rev. E. E. Lake, Rev. A. Bauham, Rev. C. Winter, Rev. J. Cantrell, Rev. C. Watson, Rev. R. Irvine, Rev. J. Hutton, Rev. I. Blow, Rev. A. E. Pepper. The present incumbent is the Rev. C. P. Heaven.

The present celebration commemorating the 75th Anniversary of the Consecration of the first Trinity Church, Shannonville, began on Sunday evening, with a Harvest Festival Service at which special preacher, was Rev. F. C. Beazer, rector of Roslin. The church was beautifully decorated and a large congregation was present. The offering was the best over a period of years. The Anniversary Supper was served in the old Presbyterian Church Hall and the special Anniversary service was held in the Church. The Rev. W. J. Province, chaplain of the R.C.A.F., Trenton, conducted the service. Christ Church choir of Belleville, rendered the musical portion of the service. Rev. Rural Dean Payne of St. Thomas' Church, Belleville, and many past rectors and visiting clergy attended. A new altar frontal was dedicated, the gift of Mrs. Dave Houston and Mrs. Earl. The church was decorated with flowers, fruit and vegetables also with grain and plants.

The Anniversary service was marked by prayer for King and Empire and for victory in our righteous cause.

Ciano On Way To Pay Visit To Germany

Rome, Sept. 26—(AP)— Italian Foreign Minister Ciano left for Berlin this morning.

A communique carried by Stefani, official Italian news agency, said:—

"This morning Foreign Minister Count Ciano left for Germany for a short visit."

(In Berlin, where the first word of the Fascist leader's trip came yesterday, it was suggested the visit was connected with axis plans laid in Rome last week during the visit there of German Foreign Minister Ribbentrop.

SENIOR OFFICER AT EASTERN PORT HOLDS 3 OFFICES

Eleven Ships Loading is Daily Average and in Winter Will be Doubled

ALL VESSELS CHECKED

By E. L. WILLIAMS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

An East Coast Canadian Port, Sept. 26—(CP)—All the Royal Canadian Navy's work isn't done at seas by any means, as a glance at operations at this port will show.

The senior naval officer actually holds three offices, naval officer-in-charge, naval service control officer and officer in charge of auxiliary vessels based here. He is responsible not only for the direction of shipping and naval services at this port but other coastal centres in the province as well.

A daily average of 11 ships are loading. And when the St. Lawrence River freezes up the number will be more than doubled. In addition loadings at other ports in the province have increased greatly since the German invasion of Norway forced Britain to seek pit props and lumber elsewhere.

Perhaps the heart of the naval control service building is the routing room from which are controlled the movements of all out-going shipping. It is in charge of a Prince Edward Island-born officer who was one of the youngest captains in the Canadian merchant marine service when he first got his masters' papers.

All Vessels Checked

An examination vessel check up on all incoming vessels and patrol ships cruise outside the port. Inside, harbor patrol craft flit around from dock to dock keeping a constant watch on piers and harbor works, never twice taking the same route and underway at least 20 hours of the 24. They may head out from a pier seemingly bound across the harbor only to return a few minutes later and cruise nearby again. Thus no one can keep track of their movements and be assured of an uninterrupted chance for sabotage.

The navy is ingenious, too. It was in need of a depot ship at this port and none was available. So an old public works department dredge was obtained, cleaned up and fitted out for that purpose. No one looking at her cabins, repair shops and storerooms would recognize in her the dredge of a few months ago.

It was at this port that it was found necessary to issue an unusual order which asked that all men not desiring to be transferred to destroyers hand in their names.

The reason was that the staff was overwhelmed with requests, often in some disguise such as a plea for "turbine experience"—which may be obtained in destroyers—for transfers to active service. They decided it would be far easier to record only the men who didn't want the transfer.

It was. So far they haven't had a request.

QUICK THINKING

A car driver was proceeding along the streets of Campbellford one day this week and he was going very, very carefully. The reason for his care was a package containing twenty-five sticks of dynamite and caps that was resting on the seat beside him.

Suddenly he was horrified to see that he was going to have an unavoidable collision with a truck, possibly through no fault of his, although we do not know about that, and he acted quickly. He just let go his grip on the steering wheel, grabbed the package of dynamite and hoped for the best. As it happened he was rewarded with a further extension of life after the collision and any others in the immediate neighborhood were allowed to live another day.

We do not know if the dynamite would have exploded had it been left alone on the seat but there are several places we could think of where we would rather be than in the immediate neighborhood if the driver had not used his head. Dynamite is rather a temperamental substance. Sometimes it will stand consideralbe jolting about and all will be well but at other times it will explode if not handled with the greatest care.

However, we just want to pay tribute to that driver in Campbellford for his presence of mind and hope he will never have to go through another experience quite as harrowing as that. We can imagine, as well, that the driver of the truck, if the fault was his, will long remember the incident for, no doubt, there was some very frank talk after the accident. People can get extremely annoyed some times.

HITLER'S DELAY OF ILL OMEN TO THE HUNS

The calendar of time does not wait for Hitler to get ready. The autumnal equinox was looked upon as the most likely time for the Hun Fuehrer to launch an attempt at invasion of Britain. In the opinion of observers, the weather, Britain's defences, the army and the Royal Navy and the heroic service of the R.A.F. in smashing the Hitlerian barges and flat-bottomed transports reduced any possibility that the Germans might try to cross the Channel. What Hitler really intended is known only to himself but he has shown by his desperate attacks on London, his disappointment and by his turning interest to the Mediterranean, his effort to minimize the blow to his prestige which he has suffered as Britain has steadily thrown back his airmen with losses far outnumberiing those of the British.

Time waits not on Hitler. He took advantage of time when he sneaked into Denmark and into Norway. But he could not sneak his way into Britain for airmen watched, guns bristled, ships kept guard, against the Hun.

Now opinion is expressed that the risks of attempted invasion are past for the immediate future.

Britain has shown her strength is growing at a rapid rate. One sees signs of Nazi interest turning to the Mediterranean but there Hitler will find the British strong too. French Colonial Africa is causing anxiety to the Vichy Government and the Nazis at Berlin as well and events no doubt cause anxiety to the dictator of Italy.

Britain has held out beyond the equinox and at no time was there the slightest sign that she was wavering. Her people have all through proven adamant against anything Hitler can send.

It is a sign of progress for the great democratic power.

The sand is not so high as it once was in the hour glass of Hitler and Mussolini. This brace of world-conspirators are coming to face the great facts of what is really invincible power. They are battering relentless facts. Hitler and Mussolini will miss the calendar again and again in their plans until they are finally crushed. They are weaker, Britain is stronger and is not yet what she is to be in fully mobilized strength in the months ahead.

Reduce Your Appetite When You Stop Exercising

It is well known that when an athlete or one who does hard work gives up his athletics or work, he usually puts on weight. Some of these athletes or workers, after accumulating considerable weight, become ashamed of their excess fat and plunge again into athletics or hard work. They find, however, that it is not as easy as it was before. Some give up the attempt and others do a little work or engage in some light form of exercise.

What these individuals and many more of us fail to remember is that anyone accustomed to work or exercise has also accustomed himself to a certain amount of food daily. When work or exercise stops, the appetite, which has long been used to eating a certain amount and certain kinds of food, remains as keen or almost as keen, as when work was being done or exercise taken. This means that the amount of food eaten is greatly in excess of the needs of the body and so, in most healthy individuals, this excess food gets stored away as fat in the body.

Every day we see some individuals who do no work or take no exercise but have a good appetite, yet they remain thin. There is something about their make-up, sometimes a gland condition, that keeps them the same weight year in and year out despite the fact that they eat a large quantity of food.

It is also a fact that when one has been ill or under a strain which by reducing the appetite, has reduced the weight, when the illness or strain is past, the appetite increases and the weight is soon back to normal.

The thought then is that athletes and hard workers should keep in mind that their appetite, which has been a good guide as to the amount of food they should eat when they were active, may continue as keen after they stop work or exercise, and so cause them to eat more food than is necessary now that they are less active. It is the appetite that needs to be "reduced".

Hitler's Vain Effort to Get 'News' to Canada

Back in Starnberg, Bavaria, Hitler has an ardent propagandist whose life is one long, vain regret. Before the war and since, this high-pressure salesman of Truth as it is known in Germany has been trying to get his mimeographed periodical "News from Germany" into Canada. He has his troubles. Generally, it's the British blockade, or "British illegal robbery of the mails" as the editor plaintively calls it, at the same time urging American correspondents to mark their communications "via Transatlantic clipper" or "via Japan-Siberia."

The last copy of "News from Germany" to arrive was mailed at the post office of a Berlin railway station on May 20. It had thus been on its weary way nearly four months.

One article in it tells how, before Hitler, millions of people in Germany were losing their faith in the Almighty. Then, the article continues, came Hitler. "What did he do? Did he burn down all the churches, did he hang all the priests, imprison all the pastors, uproot and stamp out religion? To the contrary. From the day Hitler came into power, new hope was kindled in the hearts of the German people. At least they felt that their Saviour had come to rescue them from their grim fate, that was beginning to manifest itself everywhere. New belief in the Almighty sprang up. What happened then bordered on the miraculous. Overnight thousands suddenly found their way back to Christ. Overnight millions had new faith in the Almighty. The churches began to fill again, one by one. Today they are packed as never before."

And by orders of this self-same German "Saviour" night after night Nazi bombers now rain torturing death on the women and children of London!—Director of Public Information.

FRENCH CROPS STOLEN

London Times.

Our Special Correspondent on the French Frontier, writes: — In the occupied French territory along the Swiss border—the Jura Doubs, and Pays de Gex — peasants are forbidden to thresh, gather potatoes, or slaughter cattle or pigs without the written permission of the German authorities. Sixty percent of the crops is taken by German officials, who send them to Germany in sealed bags. Payment is made in marks. Women are forbidden to knit or do needlework in the daytime, as they have to help in urgent farm work. Some French customs officers are compelled by the Germans to work on the land and the repair of roads.

FALL FROM FIRE ESCAPE FATAL

Calgary, Sept. 26 (CP)—Doris Bamford, 3 1-2 years old, died yesterday in hospital from injuries received in a fall from a fire escape at the rear of a downtown building. The girl fell about 30 feet, landing on her head on the cement blocks which paved the lane.

DOUKHOBOR SENTENCED FOR NON-REGISTRATION

Trail, B.C., Sept. 26.—(CP)—Peter Babakaiff, 30-year-old Crescent Valley Doukhobor, was sentenced to three months hard labor in Nelson jail by Stipendiary Magistrate E. L. Hodge in Provincial Court yesterday for failing to register as required by the National Registration Act. He said he was a member of the Sons of Freedom, a Religious Sect which is opposed to registration.

NAZI BLIGHT FALLS ON THE FREE PRESS OF A CONTINENT

To ascertain the truth about life in German occupied territory or territory in which German terrorism is at work is almost impossible at the present time. What is possible, however, is to be on guard against perversions of the truth disseminated daily under various disguises on German prompting.

It may help in this if we consider the various methods adopted. These differ in the occupied countries and in the neutral countries.

• • •

In the occupied countries what the Germans would prefer would be to keep established and highly respected newspapers in existence and to dictate to them what news they shall publish and what opinions they shall express.

But they discover that highly respected journalists will not consent to be used in this way. The utmost that these will do is to refrain from openly expressed anti-German opinions and they often qualify this negative attitude by comments which the censor perceives to have an anti-German tendency. They are then subject to a special military censorship, and if this does not bring them to heel they may be interned and the newspapers employing them suppressed.

"There is no censorship in Holland", said the Nazi Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, soon after the occupation of that country, "but the newspapers are supposed to take account of the new situation."

The hint seems not to have been taken as quickly as was expected, for a little later the President of the so-called "Council of Enlightenment", a Nazi-controlled organization, made a speech in which he warned the Dutch Newspaper Proprietors' Society that the sands were running out. This society, he said, had been treated with indulgence in view of the useful work it had done in past times and had been given another opportunity to "re-organise itself". But, he added, "haste will have to be made, for we are now living in dynamic times".

Haste was made, but by the Germans, who proceeded to suppress three Dutch newspapers for a period of eight weeks on the ground that "they had systematically maintained an unfriendly attitude to the occupiers and had been unable to cease their one-sided propaganda in favor of the Allies".

The procedure has been the same in Denmark, where the newspapers were told to carry on but warned that any expression of anti-German feeling or contradiction of the official German statements about events or public feeling in Denmark would expose them to the severest penalties.

They were forbidden to mark news as coming from German sources, and the slightest freedom of comment brought the military censorship about their heads. But the one thing the censor could not do was to induce the Danish public to read the papers thus handled. Their circulations dwindled, their readers turned to the foreign broadcasts which the invader tried in vain to smoke out.

In Norway explicit instructions were issued to the newspapers that they must serve as an instrument for shaping opinion in the manner laid down by the German News Bureau. They were forbidden to publish war reports coming from countries hostile to Germany, to report speeches made by statesmen, generals, or members of the Royal families in these countries, or anything else "likely to cause friction between the German troops and the Norwegian people". On the other hand German war reports had to be well displayed.

In France the difference between occupied and unoccupied territory offered a special problem and also a new opportunity to the Germans' manipulation of the press.

Many well known Paris papers ceased publication when the Germans entered the city; others, like the Matin, the Paris Soir, and the Dernieres Nouvelles de Paris, were annexed and turned to German uses. Under its new management the Matin became violently anti-Jewish and anti-British.

Sometimes the names of contributors were used who were known to Frenchmen not to be living in France, but would be supposed by foreigners to be the authors of the articles attributed to them. The only safe assumption is that all French newspapers published in the occupied territory are directly under German control.

The case is somewhat different in unoccupied territory. Here the newspapers appear to have allowed themselves more liberty. But the difference between the two gives the German censor an opportunity of turning Frenchmen against Frenchmen.

• • •

The neutral countries provide a wide and varied opportunity for the Nazi propagandist. In these there are German-owned or German-subsidized newspapers, with little or no circulation, which can be quoted abroad as if they expressed a genuine opinion.

This is an old German trick which has been played all over the world since the days of Bismarck, but the Nazis have been more systematic and profuse in their expenditure of money in its development than their predecessors.

The general object is to present neutrals known to be friendly to the Allies as shocked or depressed by their proceedings and in despair about their prospects. These are Daniels come to Judgment.

But in many neutral countries such as Switzerland and Sweden there are honest and courageous journalists who write what they think about Hitler and Nazi Germany. This, however, exposes their governments to diplomatic browbeating and threatening, for the Nazis refuse to believe that governments cannot control newspapers, if they choose to do so.

Staunchly as some of these governments have upheld the freedom of their press, the natural desire of journalists not to make trouble for them has undoubtedly kept plain speaking on the side of Britain within bounds in Europe. For full and frank expressions of opinion by neutral observers we have to look across the Atlantic.

• • •

The general conclusion is that the Nazi stronghold of the press is almost complete on the continent of Europe. Nothing can come out of France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark and Norway except with the consent of the German censor; much that pretends to be impartial, neutral opinion is of German authorship.

The object of the Nazi propagandist is to deceive and mystify, and no exposure of the falsity of the facts he alleges deters him in his pursuit of it. He has continued to repeat that Winston Churchill ordered the sinking of the Athenia and that Mr. Chamberlain incited the attempt to assassinate Hitler, and apparently he still hopes that perpetual repetition may cause these stories to be believed.

No proof to the contrary will prevent him from multiplying the losses of British ships or aircraft by five or twelve or any figure that may occur to him. It is enough for him if he causes some neutral or British observer to doubt the veracity of the British figures.

The only safe rule is to accept nothing at its face value in which his hand may be suspected. About all this the question to ask is not whether it is true, but why he says it.—London Exchange.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Widower Wants to Remarry for Son's Sake

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My wife died about two years ago and I am very lonely. I have two children, and we have a lovely home. My girl is 20 years old and is employed, while the boy is 12. This, you will see, leaves the boy home alone all day until we come home from our respective offices. Consequently he doesn't get the right kind of meals, and really needs the attention only a woman can give him.

I have been thinking that I'd like to marry again, and there are a couple of widows among my friends whom I am considering. Both of them have children, which makes me hesitate, as they might not get along with my boy.

Have you any suggestions? Do you think it advisable to marry a woman with or without children?

M. R.

As I have often written in this column, the best way to meet new friend is through those you already have. In your place I'd suggest that you make it known among your men acquaintances, who are employed in the same place of business as you are, that you would be glad to meet some women who would make a good mother for your little boy.

Have you thought of asking your pastor, who knows you, to acquaint you with a suitable woman?

Disliked Him, Now Misses Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Some time ago I met a young man whom I didn't like then, and now that I haven't seen or heard from him for a month, I miss him a great deal. And I must admit I really like him a lot and I've heard that he likes me too. He once asked me to go "steady", but I told him I didn't care for him.

Would it be proper for me to arrange a small gathering of some kind, invite him, or do you think that would show my feelings too much?

C.

It would not only be proper but very nice for you to arrange a little party and invite the friend.

Uninvited, Unwelcome Guest

Dear Miss Fairfax:

In this neighborhood there is a woman who's a nuisance. When she sees that we have company in to play cards, she will come in and insist on joining us. Of course, one of the men usually gets up and gives his place to her, and she will stay until everyone has left.

Another thing she does is to arrive at the time we are eating our meal and will stand around, as if waiting to be asked to eat with us. She's from another state where little children are just allowed to grow up without being taught any manners. Please tell us how to treat this person, especially when we have other visitors.

Southeast neighbor

It's permissable to rid one's self of a nuisance of this kind briefly and to the point. The lady certainly shows no consideration for you, barging in on your card games and your meals. So why should you be victimized by one wholly lacking in delicacy and good breeding?

Why not, the next time she presents herself and you are having a card game, sweetly say "I'm sorry we have guests, and the card table is full". And of course, one is at liberty not to answer the bell when a perpetual nuisance is outside.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Etiquette of Parsonage Weddings is Explained

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to be married the middle of this month, in the parsonage of our church. We are both members of the church, but it is too expensive for us to be married in the church. However, since our minister told us that we could have about fifty people at the ceremony in the parsonage, we are inviting all our relatives.

1.—I am also going to have a reception at my house. Would it be proper for me to invite to the reception friends whom I can't, because of limited space, invite to the ceremony?

2.—I thought that, since it is such an informal wedding (I'm wearing street clothes) that I could write the invitations myself. Would this be proper? And, if it is, could the following form of invitation to the reception be something like this:

Dear Jane,

Bob and I are to be married on October fourteen, in the parsonage, and would like to have you come to the reception at my house at eleven o'clock in the morning. Please try to come.

Sincerely.

3.—Where should I write my address?

4.—For the wedding breakfast, we are going to serve buffet style, as our house is rather small. Please give me some idea about what to serve that wouldn't be too expensive.

5.—We are going to have a double ring ceremony. It's proper for me to buy his ring, isn't it?

6.—Who takes care of the groom's ring at the wedding? Does the best man take care of both rings?

M.C.

1.—Yes, it would be completely proper for you to invite to the reception friends whom you are not able to invite to the ceremony. They will understand about the "limited space".

2.—Yes, either you or your mother may properly write the notes of invitation. The invitation-form that you suggest is good, but I think it would be best to make it more definite that the person is not invited to the ceremony . . . .there might be a misunderstanding. You might say:

Dear Jane,

Bob and I are to be married on Tuesday, October fourteenth at the parsonage, with only our relatives present at the ceremony. But afterward, at eleven o'clock in the morning, we are having a small reception at our house, and we want very much to have you come. Please say that you will!

Devotedly,

3.—Write your address either at the top of the first page at the right or at the end of your letter, to the left of and lower than your signature.

4.—For an inexpensive menu for this between-breakfast-and lunch reception, you need serve only small thin sandwiches with simple fillings, hot coffee, and for "dessert" the bridal cake only, or with ice cream or cut fruits or fruit compote. And something with which to drink the toasts!

5.—Yes, the bride buys the bridegroom's ring.

6.—No, usually the best man has trouble enough being sure that he has the bride's ring safe! It is the maid of honour who has the bridegroom's ring, and she hands it to the bride at the same time that the best man gives the bride's ring to the groom. Immediately after the bride has received her ring from the groom, she puts the groom's ring on his finger. . .and the ceremony proceeds.

You'll find a wealth of plain but colorful frocks this season. Parma violet silk crepe makes a pretty frock done with crossing strips of gilt kidskin in front of the belt, and skirt pockets that are draped on the diagonal.

Go forth wearing a smart suit. We admired a model of suede cloth, the skirt black, the fitted jacket in bright red with notched revers of stone marten. Matching red jersey blouse.

Get out into the country these brisk days and wear colorful clothes. A splendid suit is of suede in a deep plum color, worn with a rose pink sweater.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Pyelitis

Small babies are prone to develop a kidney disease known as pyelitis. It is a complaint that mothers do well to watch for. It may strike any child at any time, and it frequently follows on the heels of some contagious disease such as scarlet fever or measles.

I have seen a great deal of this disease in the course of my practise, and I have noted that it occurs most generally in girl babies. Because of their physical construction, they are more liable to the infection than are boys.

Pyelitis is due to some infection that enters through the urinary tract, and spreads to the kidneys. A diaper that isn't properly sterilized will often cause the trouble. A mother may first recognize a symptom of the disease when the baby begins wetting its diapers more often than usual. The baby will show signs of pain as she passes urine. These first signs are followed by a rise in temperature, and then the child will become acutely ill.

Of course, if you are watchful, your doctor has been called in before this acute stage is reached. The doctor will examine the child for any infection of the chest, throat, or ears, and after determining that these organs are all right he will turn to the kidneys. First he will want a sample of the urine, and when his examination of this has borne out his other observations, he will begin treatment immediately.

First drugs will be prescribed to kill the bacteria that have caused the infection. The mother will have a very important role to play in the treatment. The doctor will ask her to see that the child gets plenty of fluids to drink. These fluids, in passing through the kidneys and urinary tract will help wash out the infection.

Usually such treatment brings results within a few days. However in certain cases, the infection hangs on stubbornly for several weeks. When this happens, examination by X-rays is advisable, to see if there is any obstruction present.

Occasionally, some unfortunate child will pyelitis will develop a tumor in one of the kidneys. If it happens that the tumor turns out to be malignant in character, then it may be that the kidney affected will have to be removed. The cause of these tumors are very obscure; in small babies we think their cause dates back to before birth.

Home Help for Poor Speller

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

The child who has trouble with spelling needs help right away. The average parent can give it. The longer his troubles persist, the more penalties he will suffer. When he must do written work in the intermediate grades, upper grades and later in high school or college, poor spelling will bring him much discouragement and hold down his grades. It will annoy his teacher and cost him many ugly colored pencil marks. Furthermore, in everyday life's social or business pursuits, poor spelling will be a serious handicap.

All Can Learn

With normal vision, any person who can read or do arithmetic fairly well can learn to spell as well. Persons are not born with special shortness in spelling. They have just failed to get the hang of spelling. Except for a few words, good spelling is a matter of having learned by heart to spell those words most commonly used in writing.

In case your child in the grades is a poor speller, be sure first his eyes have been tested and properly fitted with glasses, if they be needed. See also that he knows the letters of the alphabet. He may not know a number of these letters.

Acquiring Confidence

I wish teachers would assign far fewer words in the average spelling lesson than they do. But regardless of the length of the assignment ,have your child at home attack only two or three of them an evening. Assure him he need not worry if he cannot spell the rest the next day at school. It is always better to master a few than to mess over many. As he discovers he can spell a few words without doubt or error, he will gradually acquire confidence in ability to improve his spelling.

First of all, create a calm, serene atmosphere. Make him feel relaxed and entirely at ease. Print the word he is to spell all alone on a clean page or card in large neat letters. Pronounce the word as he looks at it. Have him pronounce it after you. Then say the letters slowly in proper sequence as he looks at them. Have him do the same. After he rests, have him pronounce and spell the word as he looks at it. He will want to look away and try to spell it. Urge him not to do so but to pronounce and spell it several times while looking right at it. Before he tries himself out on it have him look at the word again and print or write it slowly and carefully. Attack the next word in like fashion. Keep drilling him on what he has already learned accurately.

Give Help

When the child writes a lesson or a letter at home, urge him to ask you to spell any word he is doubtful about. Encourage him to continue this practice on through the grades and high school. Don't tell him to look up a word in the dictionary or rebuke him for not knowing how to spell it. Occasionally you will look up a word yourself in the dictionary, setting him a good example.

When your child brings papers home on which are marked misspelled words, induce him to choose to write them in a special book, you spelling them for him as he does. Lead him, don't drive him, to do this. Anything you can do to cultivate a spelling consciousness and conscience in your child of the grades, high school or college will be a boon to his further growth in spelling.

MOIRA W.A.

A most successful dinner and meeting of the Women's Association of Moira United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Chas. Ketcheson on Thursday, September 19. Quilting was the order of the day. At 12.30 twenty-five members and visitors sat down to a delicious pot luck dinner served by the hostess.

At 2.30 the opening exercises of the meeting were conducted by the President Mrs. McInroy by all singing a hymn followed by prayer. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The Roll Call was answered by a verse of Scripture. Mr. Stewart gave a splendid talk on the Scripture lesson taken from 1st Corinthians.

Interesting readings were given by Miss Doris Farrel, Mrs. B. Ketcheson, and Mrs. F. Emerson. A piano solo by Mrs. J. Vandewater was much enjoyed. Splendid solos were given by Mrs. A. Mumby and Mrs. N. Welsh. The treasurer's report was very gratifying. It was decided to donate a double Coleman lamp to Fuller United church as there is no further need of it. The meeting closed with another hymn and benediction. Proceeds of dinner $7.05.

Worry Exhausts the Nerves

Only in recent years have the serious consequences of worry and nervous disorders been fully realized. And as they are realized, the value of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food becomes better and better appreciated.

Worry makes you nervous and irritable and sleepless. It destroys memory and the ability to concentrate the mind. It ruins digestion and makes you feel tired and downhearted and discouraged. Why not fight off worry by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to restore nerve force to the exhausted nervous system?

You will not be using it long before you find yourself resting and sleeping better, less irritable and nervous and looking on the bright side again. Your friends will soon tell you how much better you are looking and you will know again the joy of healthful living.

DRAFTEES TO GET 7½ HRS. TRAINING EACH CAMP DAY

Extensive Curriculum Provided for Those Going to Peterboro Camp October 9th

TRAIN THIRTY DAYS

Draftees going into militia camps for compulsory military training on October 9 will receive seven and one half hours training daily it has been announced from headquarters of Military District No. 3 at Kingston. Local men of the 21-year-old group who will go into camp early next month will be stationed at Camp No. 32, Peterboro, it has been revealed, while also included at Peterboro will be the following units: Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, composed of men from Prince Edward, Lennox, Hastings and Peterboro; the Midland Regiment from Durham and Northumberland, the Prince of Wales Rangers of Peterboro West and Victoria and the Argyll Light Infantry of Hastings South.

Instructors will report at the different training camp centres in advance of October 9 so that everything will be in order to receive the men and no time will be lost in getting down to the actual training.

The training received by those going into camp will be approximately the same basic training as given members of the non-permanent active militia camps during the summer months and will be common to all arms, that is, the men will learn things, which will be of value to them should they decide to join the army, navy or air force later. In the case of those who decide not to join up, and are attached to a non-permanent unit for training one or two nights a week during the winter, they will be able to start at the same place as those who went to N.P.A.M. camp.

Extensive Curriculum

The men will get drill, physical training, small arms instruction, including training in the use of the rifle against aircraft, bayonet drill, gas protection drill, marching, tactics, fieldcraft, including scouting, also get lectures on such subjects also et lectures on such subjects as the history of the N.P.A.M. unit to which they will be attached and the general set-up of the allied branches of the service.

Each training day will be of seven and one half hours, divided into ten periods of 45 minutes each. The men will get Saturday afternoons off and all day Sunday, as well as certain recreation periods.

Week-end passes will be available and the men will be able to go to their homes, at their own expense. Travel to and from the camp at the opening and closing will be paid for by the government.

The draftees will have it easier, in many respects, than those who went to the N.P.A.M. camps. There will be hot water to shave with in the mornings, from a tap, as well as hot showers. The camp will have recreational halls, libraries and other facilities. Besides, clothing like socks and underwear is being provided by the government, as well as uniforms which were given those going to camps earlier.

Air Marshal Bishop Visits Whitehall Area

London, Sept. 26—(CP)— Air Marshal W. A. Bishop, V.C., of the Royal Canadian Air Force, spent the greater part of his third day in England in the Whitehall area, conferring with Prime Minister Churchill among other personages.

After seeing a number of senior officers at the Air Ministry in the morning, he lunched with Sir Alan Lascelles, Assistant Private Secretary to the King. Then he conferred with Sir Archibald Sinclair, Secretary of State for Air, before going to 10 Downing Street.

Tonight he is to broadcast to the United Kingdom, to a people who remember his air exploits of the last war as well as the people of Canada.

DE GAULLE SYMPATHIZERS ARRESTED

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 26.—(AP)— Authoritative sources reported today that a number of French civilian and military sympathizers with Gen. Charles De Gaulle's Free French Movement were arrested in Syria and Lebanon September 24.

An Italian Armistice Commission now is in those territories, held by France under mandate, to determine their future status under the French-Italian armistice.

BERLIN TO BE BOMBED

London, Sept. 6 (AP).—In headlines stretching across the front page the Evening Standard declared today that the Royal Air Force "will be over Berlin every night".

The Standard's air correspondent wrote that the R.A.F. would start regular nightly raids now and that, as the winter nights grew longer, attacks on the German capital would lengthen until they "occupy eight to ten hours".

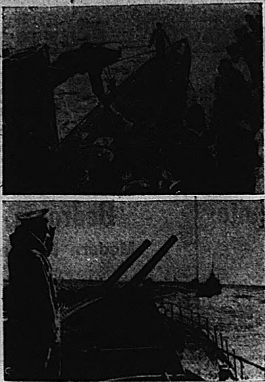
No source for the information was given.

CROLL TO GET COMMISSION

London, Sept. 26 (CP). — Mayor David Croll of Windsor, Ont., who enlisted as a private with the Canadian Active Service Force, has been sent to an instruction centre to receive training to be an officer.

It is understood that this is a reward for the hard, diligent work of the former Ontario cabinet minister.

GRIM GAME OF HARE AND HOUNDS



At TOP a U-boat commander is receiving the good wishes of his German comrades as he prepares to take his ship to sea on a commerce-raiding expedition. He is a very poor risk, and some of the reasons why insurance companies are not too eager to have him for a customer are in the LOWER photo, which shows a patrol of British destroyers on duty. Submarines and destroyers play a grim game of hare and hounds, with the odds greatly in favor of the hounds.

PRESIDENT'S SON JOINS U.S. AIR CORPS

Elliott Roosevelt, RIGHT, son of President Roosevelt, is sworn in as a captain in the U.S. army's reserve corps by Leon B. Hord, in Washington. Elliott was immediately assigned to active duty with the air corps' procurement branch at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio.

Wartime Prices Board Includes Trenton in Areas of Pegged Rentals

Trenton, Sept. 26.—Trenton was listed by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board as one of the areas where rents will be pegged at the levels of January 2, 1940 which will become effective on October 1, 1940.

The pegging of the Trenton rates will mean that a number of landlords in this town will be forced to lower their rates on October 1, to the level of the first of the year.

Mayor O. Alyea commenting on the matter stated that rents have not been increased a great deal in Trenton. The mayor personally, with the aid of some of the town officials, conducted an inquiry into the rent question some time ago and turned over his report to the Commanding Officer of the Airport.

"The result of that enquiry was that we assured ourselves that rents had not soared to unheard of heights just because the airmen were living here," stated the mayor. "A number of the landlords had increased their rents two or three dollars but most of these had done so because they had made improvements on their houses and apartments."

"In a number of cases, the airmen have themselves increased the rents. Some of the airmen wanting to get an apartment or a house have offered more money than the landlord has asked in order to assure that they get the house, if another prospect is also looking at the same house or apartment. Such cases have tended to increase the rent more than anything else," he continued.

Housing accommodation covered by this order includes "any furnished or unfurnished house, apartment, flat, room or dwelling designed or used for residential purposes together with all appurtenances thereto and such heating lighting, water, garage and other services, equipment or facilities as are supplied by the lessor."

Stolen Tools Returned

Trenton, Sept. 26.—As mysteriously as they disappeared, a number of tools stolen from the Canadian Creosote Company were returned Wednesday night. The tools were piled near the pole shed from whence they had been taken the night previous.

Police are continuing the investigation into the disappearance of the articles and their subsequent return to the same building. The thief or thieves entered the pole shed of the Creosote Company on Tuesday by breaking a pane of glass and unlatching the door.

After gaining entrance to the building they broke into two lockers and stole a number of articles from each locker. Before leaving the property, they damaged an automobile parked beside the building by breaking the spark plugs and cutting the hose.

Police are mystified concerning the affair as there were a number of men working in and around the factory on the night of the theft and when the articles were returned. The thief must have known his way about the plant in order to avoid the workmen.

Sentenced to Electric Chair

New York, Sept. 26.—(AP)— Harry (Pittsburgh Phil) Strauss, 33, and Martin (Buggsy) Goldtein, 34, members of the Brooklyn murder for money syndicate, were sentenced today in Brooklyn County Court to die in the electric chair during the week of November 4.

They were convicted of murder in the first degree by a jury last Thursday. Sentence was pronounced by Judge John J. Fitzgerald.

PRINCE ROBERT CAPABLE SHIP SAYS COMMANDER

Armed Merchant Ship Can Cruise 23 Knots an Hour and Has Cruising Radius of 7,000 Miles

ALL-CANADIAN SHIP

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A West Coast Canadian Port, Sept. 26 (CP)—Recently added to the Canadian naval strength, the armed merchant cruiser Prince Robert is in action on the Pacific.

Announcement she had captured a German express cargo ship off Mexico was greeted with applause by those formerly associated with the former Canadian National liner now under command of Commander C. T. Beard.

Unrecognizable as the white-topped luxury liner which plied the North Pacific Coast, H.M.C.S. Prince Robert is an all-Canadian fighting ship. Although built in Britain, she has operated in Canadian waters in the ensuing 10 years, is manned by 220 ratings and 16 officers drawn mostly from the Royal Canadian Naval Reserve and is commanded by a Canadian.

Commander Beard was born in Ottawa and his service with the Canadian Navy goes back to its inception. Recalled from a brief shore life in Victoria by the outbreak of the war a year ago, he is outspokenly proud of his new command.

"Her duty will be patrolling the ocean and denying it to enemy raiders," he told newspapermen who visited the ship when she was commissioned. "She will operate under orders of the Admiralty in any part of the world to which she may be assigned."

Carries Anti-Aircraft Guns

Low-lying and vicious in her coat of wartime grey, the Prince Robert looked capable of giving a good account of herself. The two gleaming white upper decks have been sliced off and muzzles of anti-aircraft guns and heavier armament point from the decks where tourists used to stroll.

In addition to her guns, the Prince Robert carried depth charges and is equipped with 36-inch searchlights. Paravanes can be swung from the bow for mine-sweeping purposes.

Removal of her superstructure is a big factor in the Prince Robert's wartime efficiency, according to Commander Beard. Low on the water, she would make a difficult target for enemy guns.

"The armed merchant cruiser has tremendous value for chasing any vessels larger than a destroyer and for scouting purposes," the Commander said. The cruiser can shadow enemy ships until larger forces are brought up.

The Prince Robert has a speed of 23 knots an hour, probably higher at forced draught, and Commander Beard believes she could give the German pocket battleship Deutschland a run for her money. She has a cruising radius of 7,000 miles which is equalled by few ships.

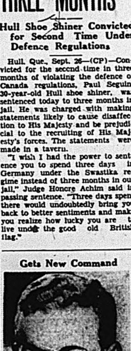
SENTENCED TO THREE MONTHS

Hull Shoe Shiner Convicted for Second Time Under Defence Regulations

Hull, Que., Sept. 26—(CP)—Convicted for the second time in three months of violating the defence of Canada regulations, Paul Seguin, 30-year-old Hull shoe shiner, was sentenced today to three months in jail. He was charged with making statements likely to cause disaffection to His Majesty and be prejudicial to the recruiting of His Majesty's forces. The statements were made in a tavern.

"I wish I had the power to sentence you to spend three days in Germany under the Swastika regime instead of three months in our jail," Judge Honore Achim said in passing sentence. "Three days spent there would undoubtedly bring you back to better sentiments and make you realize how lucky you are to live under the good old British flag."

Gets New Command



Lieut.-Commander Hugh Pullen, of Oakville, Ont., has been appointed to the command of H.M.C.S. St. Francis, one of the six destroyers turned over to the Royal Canadian Navy by the United States.

Urges Air Ministry to Tell British People About Britain's Advanced New Fighters, Bombers

Magazine 'Aeroplane' Says Neutral World Would Propaganda is Badly to Tell the World of People of Britain and the be Cheered and Adds 'Our Handled—This is a Chance Our Power'

London, Sept. 26—(CP)— The magazine "Aeroplane" appealed to the Air Ministry today to "tell the world" about some of Britain's advanced new fighters and bombers."

The magazine commented: "Our own people would be cheered with the knowledge of the new types in service. The remaining neutrals would be even more persuaded of the amount of fight left in the British Empire."

Arguing that the Germans "undoubtedly are acquainted" with the details of new British planes "just as we are with the newest German machine," the magazine continued:

"Our propaganda is badly handled. This is a chance to 'tell the world' of our power. Germany will soon be blazoning forth the wonders of its new machines. We should get our blow in first."

Far East Roundup

Washington, Sept. 26—(AP) — President Roosevelt today in effect, clamped an embargo on shipments of scrap iron and steel from the United States to Japan effective Oct. 16—but left open the way for exports to nations in the western hemisphere and to Great Britain.

The action came within 24 hours after export-import bank announced a new $25,000,000 loan to China, whose stubborn resistance has been the chief obstacle to Japanese expansion in the Far East.

(In Tokyo a Japanese informant declared that Japan at last had recognized the United States as an unalterable opponent of Japanese expansion. He said that Japan is expected to give active support to Germany if the United States enters the European war.)

A White House statement announcing the new export restrictions did not explain why continued shipments would be permitted to Britain, but this exception to the western hemisphere limitation obviously was in line with the administration's policy of aiding Britain in the war with Germany and Italy.

Nor did the statement mention the Japanese by name. But the action had been expected as a move against Japan in line with frequent United States declarations against disturbance of the status quo in the Far East.

Japanese purchases of American steel and iron scrap to help supply her military machine—active for three years in China and now apparently on the move against French Indo-China—have declined this year but still remain large, according to United States Commerce Department figures. Britain is now the biggest purchaser of the metal.

Italian purchases were substantial until the British blockade stopped shipment. Records showed no exports of the metal to Italy during July.

Silver Plaque Given Retired Rear Admiral

Washington, Sept. 26 (AP)—The Canadian Government through Minister Loring C. Christie, today presented a silver plaque to Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, United States Navy, retired, chairman of the Maritime Commission, in recognition of the rescue work done by the Commission-owned steamship City of Flint when the Montreal-Boune liner Athenia was sunk off the north coast of Ireland Sept. 3, 1939.

In accepting the plaque, Land said the conduct of the master, officers and crew of the City of Flint in the rescue of survivors of the Athenia "upheld the finest traditions of the sea."

Mrs. Roosevelt Hears Frank Comment at Newspaper Guild Meet'g

New York, Sept. 26—(AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt attended a four-and-one-half-hour meeting of the Newspaper Guild of New York last night and heard one member declare:

"I have no doubt that President Roosevelt will drag us into this war if he feels that he could."

The comment was made by John F. Ryan, Guild organizer, who reported on a Guild delegation's experiences at a New York State Congress of Industrial Organizations convention in Rochester recently.

The First Lady voted three times on the losing side of debate issues. She voted twice against motions involving acceptance of Ryan's report—which eventually was accepted.

Mrs. Roosevelt remained silent throughout the meeting, taking notes in a small notebook.

Long-Range Shelling Of Dover Area Is Reported

London, Sept. 26.—(CP)—Long-range German guns flung shells across the Channel into Dover this afternoon while the Nazi assault on London was renewed by two waves of bombers.

The shells bursting in Dover killed a man and a woman. For over an hour the bombardment continued.

The warplanes which flew against London did not penetrate to the centre of the city, but veered off about the time they reached the defence ring.

The Air Ministry declared that in heavy attacks against Berlin and seven German-occupied ports on the continent last night the Royal Air Force came off without the loss of a plane.

During the attack on the German naval dockyard at Kiel the flash of one big explosion was seen "very close" to the 26,000-ton German battleship Scharnhorst, the Air Ministry News Service said.

Early in the evening German planes again were reported over Wales and Southwest England.

SAYS 'HITLER WILL HAVE TO CHANGE HIS SALUTE'

Sioux City, Ia., Sept. 26 (AP)— Answering complaints that the traditional greeting of Kiwanis Club members resembles the Nazi salute, Bernard Caine, President of the Sioux City Club, told objectors: "Hitler will have to change his salute; we invented it long before Hitler was ever heard of and it's ours."

15,000 TROOPS IN SHAM BATTLE

Will Move on Lake Erie in Support of Army Holding That Area

Kitchener, Ont., Sept. 26 (CP)— Fifteen thousand soldiers stationed at Camp Borden will move out next Tuesday, it was learned here today, on the biggest troop movement in the history of the army. Only a skeleton staff will be left in the big training centre as the troops move on Lake Erie, theoretically representing the English channel, in support of an army holding that area.

The various brigades will move by parallel routes southward to rendevous in Hamilton, concentration centre for the scheme. Two thousand soldiers, travelling in 160 army vehicles, including motorcycles, troops, transports and cars, will move on Kitchener.

They are expected to arrive about four o'clock in the afternoon, tour the principal thoroughfares of Kitchener and Waterloo, debus and march to a vacant manufacturing plant where they will be billeted for the night. The unit will proceed to Hamilton Wednesday morning.

Units coming to Kitchener will be the first Canadian cavalry regiment (mechanized), Canadian armored fighting vehicles training centre, Fort Garry Horse, Ontario regiment (tank) and the Three Rivers regiment (Tank).

Huge Quantities Materials Used By Red Cross

Enough gauze to form a six-foot ribbon from Toronto to the Atlantic Coast, sufficient flannelette to span the Rocky Mountains .... trainloads of wool, tons of tobacco and awe-inspiring quantities of countless other products form the great bulk of Red Cross materials which have been purchased during the past year and shipped to Britain for the welfare and comfort of soldiers, sailors and civilians.

Hidden behind the brief, unimposing report of the Canadian Red Cross Purchasing, Warehousing and Distributing Committee, which revealed that almost $2,000,000 had been devoted to purchasing materials, lies a story of thousands of hours spent in study and discussion by a group of volunteers who, during the daytime, were business executives engaged in private affairs but at night were the genii which permitted Canadians to make the dollars they gave to mercy perform near miracles.

And, hidden also behind the report, was an untold story of the work of hundreds of thousands of women who took gauze, cotton, flannelette, wool and other things and fashioned them into millions of articles which filled Red Cross warehouses when Dunkirk caused the greatest need in British military history, and when the blitzkrieg of Britain blasted thousands of men, women and children into refugee lines. Teamwork provided the supplies when need occurred: Red Cross anticipation of the need, voluntary production of the materials, Red Cross transportation and distribution.

Some conception of the magnitude of the task of buying Red Cross materials can be gained by consideration of wool. In the first eleven months of war, 581,893 pounds of wool of various types were bought, and every pound was purchased on tenders which were opened at a regular meeting of the committee. All the wool was bought in Canada, always at prices far below current market prices. So important were Red Cross purchases that manufacturers developed special yarn types more suitable than yarns that could be obtained from usual commercial sources.

Nazis Suppress All Information On Damage Inflicted

London, Sept. 26 (CP)—A report from Switzerland, the British Broadcasting Corporation announced today, says the German government is suppressing all information as to damage done by British air raids. The B.B.C. broadcast another report from a traveller at Hamburg that the Germans there who are aware of the extent of the damage, are "bitter" about the erroneous impression made by official Nazi broadcasts.

Food Strictly Rationed In Channel Islands Now Held by Nazis

London, Sept. 26—(CP)— Food is strictly rationed, there is forced labor and the penalty of an attempt to escape is death in the one happy channel islands now occupied by the Germans, the British Broadcastings Corporation said today. It is forbidden to listen to a broadcast in English.

In Holland, according to the B. B. C. an official broadcaster today advised housewives to give up the use of tea and coffee and take to milk and fruit juice. He suggested that the main meal should consist of plenty of potatoes and vegetables with a little meat.

AUSSIES ARRIVE AT WESTERN PORT

Airmen Will Obtain Their Wings in Canada Under Air Training Scheme

A West Coast Canadian Port, Sept. 26.— (CP)— High-spirited sons of Australia came to Canada today to win their wings in the British Commonwealth Air Training plan and help drive the Empire's enemies from the skies.

First contingent to arrive from the South Pacific Dominion, the Australians have learned the rudiments of flying but their real training will be done in the Empire Schools jointly established in Canada.

Empire Air officials and leaders in the Commonwealth Air Training plan will greet the Australians in a formal welcome later today. The Canadian party is headed by Hon. C. G. Power, Minister of National Defence for Air, and Air Vice Marshal Lloyd S. Breadner, chief of Air Staff.

Nazi Consul in U. S. Objects to Manner Paper Refers to Hitler

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 26 (AP). —The editor of a German language newspaper here declared today a German consul had written him that the publication, the Texas Free Press, reported "in the very same manner the fuehrer objects to".

The editor, G. F. Neuheuser, said he turned the letter over to the Dies Committee on Un-American Activities.

He asserted the consul, Baron Edgar von Speigel of New Orleans, had sought to make him disregard his duties as an American citizen. He came to the United States shortly after the first great war.

Neuheuser said he also believed an implied threat was contained in the letter, written in German: "The fuehrer declared that Germany in the future will proceed with all means against international propaganda."

Neuheuser, who has been giving a series of lectures warning of fifth column activities in Texas, said the letter read in part:

"When you read the last great speech of Adolf Hitler word for word you will see that he has occupied himself intensively with the comment of the foreign press toward Germany.

"I notice with great regret that you report in your paper in the very same manner the fuehrer objects to—and I cannot help the impression such reporting must be hostile, to put it mildly—the article you wrote about Pastor Niemoeller also does not have my approval and contains lies.

"The fuehrer declared that Germany in the future will proceed with all means against international newspaper propaganda.

"Please be assured that it is very embarrassing to me that I have to write this to you at all, but after what I have read lately in your newspaper I consider it my duty to do this, especially if I and my government shall support you further through our co-operation.

"Baron Edgar von Speigel."

Neuheuser did not say to what von Speigel referred by "support" in his last paragraph of his letter.

Legionnaires Shout Down Resolution Favoring Neutrality

Boston, Sept. 26.— (AP)— The American Legion's 22nd annual convention shouted down today a resolution favoring strict neutrality by the United States in its Foreign Affairs dealings, and thus abandoned a 16-year-old stand by the veterans organization.

After a dramatic fight on the convention floor, the more than 1,400 delegates roared out a voice vote against the resolution.

At the same time the Legion approved a demand that the United States prevent shipments of war materials to aggressor nations.

TAKE THE "LEAD" FEELING OUT OF YOUR LEGS

Get More Oxygen In Your Blood and Get the Pep that Sends You Bounding Up the Stairs

People who smother to death die because oxygen has been completely cut off from them. Just as surely you are slowly smothering if your blood lacks red corpuscles. Red corpuscles are your oxygen-carriers. They carry the oxygen you breathe in to every part of your system. Without enough oxygen-carrying corpuscles, your kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels slow down. Your skin gets pale, flabby, often pimply. Your nerves may become jittery — you tire quickly — feel depressed.

What you need is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These world-famous pills help make more and better red corpuscles and thus increase the oxygen-carrying power of your blood. Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today at your druggist. See for yourself how quickly this time-proven blood-builder will help give you back your pep. Copr. [illegible], G. T. Fulford Co., Ltd.

LONDON'S HEROES IN WHITE

In the background are the grim ruins of St. Thomas hospital after it was struck by Nazi bombs. But still the work of tending the wounded must go on, and this doctor has heroically set up a first-aid station in a little clearing in the debris where he worked heroically until he almost dropped from exhaustion.

West Huntingdon

W. M. S. of United Church

West Huntingdon — The members of the W.M.S. of the United Church held a special meeting on Monday evening in the auditorium of the church. Members of the organization were present from Holloway, Eggleton, Ivanhoe, Moira and St. Andrews in large numbers. Mrs. Foster Wilson presided over the evening's program.

Mrs. (Rev.) Geo. Simmons, returned missionary from China, was the special guest speaker and gave a very inspiring address.

In travelogue style Mrs. Simmons recalled scenes from her early life as a worker in the Sunday School, Epworth League and choir of the West Huntingdon Church. In 1910 she and her husband left for China and although the work began in a small way the speaker described how marvellously it had grown. There had been many difficulties to face, such as famines, oppression, depression, wars etc., but many of these had been the agencies of spreading the Gospel rather than hindering it.

During the past two years many in the district where Mrs. Simmons labored had lost every earthly possession they had, but still they carried on.

This fine address was brought to a close with an appeal to all the missionary society members to be more in earnest concerning the missionary cause.

On behalf of the local branch here Mrs. Sandy McCurdy moved a vote of thanks for Mrs. Simmons and all others who assisted on the program. The motion was supported by Mrs. Peter McInroy.

The musical part of the program was furnished by the visiting members. Solos were given by Marion McMullen of Eggleton, Marjorie Prest, Ivanhoe, Mrs. Milton Shaw, of St. Andrews, and Mrs. Nelson Welsh of Moira, Mrs. E. T. Sarles gave the address of welcome and Mrs. J. C. Sills responded.

Mr. Kenneth Stewart closed the meeting, offering a special prayer for warring nations.

Fuller Y. P. U.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Mitts, Jr., opened their home for the regular meeting of Fuller Y. P. U. on Tuesday evening. Mrs. Mitts presided and was assisted in the program by Mrs. M. Hayton who gave an excellent address on "God and the War."

Mr. Billy Roland sang a solo. Readings were given by Mrs. Frank Kellar and Mrs. Clayton Rutter.

Refreshments were served at the close.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfist and pop said to ma, I'm not even going to unfold my paper to glance at the headlines this morning. I have a new realization of the value of time, from now on I intend to treat it with the respect it deserves. I wont even tarry for a 2nd cup of coffee, he said.

Well, what started this unheard of millenium? ma said, and pop said, I had the confoundest dream last night I dreamed I was trying to overtake old Father Time and instead of that he kept on overtaking me, somehow. And that's a way it went, it seemed for hours, with him behind me and continuously passing me and yet at the same time in front of me with the tail of his flying nightgown constantly eluding my fingers. By gollies it was one of the most terrible senstations I ever had, awake or asleep, and it gave me a conception of the flying nature of time that's going to revilutionize the remainder of my life, he said.

My, dont tell me you're going to get yourself up and shaved in lightning time every morning and eliminate the daily bussle and scramble to avoid being the last one to arrive at your office, ma said, and pop said, More than that, my deer. From now on the minutes are going to work for me. There's going to be a place and a time for everything and everything is going to be in its place and on its time. In other words all lost motion goes out of my life and each shining hour will yield its full golden crop, he said.

Well how is it you're down to breakfist even later than usual if you had such an arousing dream? ma said, and pop said, Because when I woke up and realized how helpless we are in the rush of passing time, I rolled over in despair and slept an extra half hour.

And he started to read his paper and was still there when I had to leave for school.

PORT OF DAKAR SCENE OF ATTACK

Here is a view of Dakar, which was reported stormed by units of the British fleet after the French West African colony rejected an ultimatum of surrender. The British guns opened fire on orders from General Charles de Gaulle, leader of the "Free French" forces.

No Wonder You Are Constipated!

What do you eat for breakfast? Coffee, toast, maybe some eggs? What do you eat for lunch and dinner? Bread, meat, potatoes? No wonder you're constipated . . . due to lack of "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean the amount you eat. It means the kind of food that forms a soft, bulky mass in the bowels. It's this mass that helps your bowels move.

The common sense thing to do about it is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. This ready-to-eat cereal will give you just the "bulk" you need. And it gives you, in addition, Nature's intestinal-tonic, vitamin B_1. Eat a generous portion of All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water; and life will be brighter for you! All-Bran is made by Kellogg in London, Canada. Sold by every grocer.

Cool-Headed Bit of Trailing By Youth Leads to Man's Arrest

Ottawa, Sept. 26—(CP)—A cool-headed bit of trailing by a young civil servant who watched a hold-up from across the street landed Malcolm Martin, 24, Montreal, in custody last night on a hold-up charge.

Within 10 minutes of each other, a hotel restaurant and a drug store in Ottawa's lower town were held up. When the hotel staff interfered with the robbing of the cash register there, the hold-up man fled after a commotion which attracted the attention of J. Romuald Mainville, 31, a government employee, who was walking past the hotel.

Mainville's suspicions were aroused by a man who walked out of the hotel at that moment but he spoke to him, suggesting they should stop whoever was holding up the place. "Sure you should," the man said and walked on.

Mainville crossed the street and shadowed the man, certain he was the guilty party. A couple of blocks away the man went into a drug store but came out immediately, while Mainville watched from across the street. The man proceeded another two blocks and went into Chartrand's drug store. From across the street, Mainville said, he saw the man pull a gun from his pocket, hold up the proprietor, get some money and walk out again.

The strange chase continued. Mainville asked a girl coming out of a house to walk with him to avert the man's suspicion. The girl screamed. The man ran. Mainville ran. The chase ran up and across several blocks, the man finally alighting on a bench in Major's Hill Park. By that time Mainville had encountered a friend near the park and asked him to get a constable.

The man shortly got up again, strolled through the city's main hotel and across to the Union Station. So the man would not think he was being followed, Mainville took off his suit coat and stood in his shirt sleeves near the man at a car stop. Just then a constable came along.

Huge Bomb Makes 30-Foot Crater Nine Feet Deep

Petawawa, Ont., Sept. 26—(CP)—The biggest bomb ever exploded in Canada was tested here Wednesday.

From a twin-engined bomber at 3,000 feet, a 1,100-pound test bomb was dropped on the sandy loam of the lower artillery range of the military camp here. A huge geyser of sand and smoke shot up 150 feet into the air. A crater 30 feet wide and nine feet deep was left.

The test explosion was observed by officials on the ground and in the air. Observers on the ground watched from a concrete, splinter-proof shelter 800 yards away from the huge white target aimed at by the bomber. High above, in a second plane, were other officials also studying the effect of the test.

TO COMMEMORATE HEROIC EXPLOIT

Tablet to Lt. Davies and His Men Will be Erected Near St. Pauls

London, Sept. 26—(CP Cable) — A tablet commemorating the heroic exploit of Lieut. Robert Davies and his men in removing a time bomb which threatened to destroy St. Paul's Cathedral will be placed near the position where the misslle fell, Dean W. R. Matthews announced today.

It is hoped that the names of at least some of the men participating will be included in the inscription. The tablet will not be erected until after the war or until after the attack on London ends.

Rt. Rev. Michael Furse, Bishop of St. Albans and Prelate of the Order of St. Michael and St. George and the Marquess of Willingdon, Chancellor of the Order, in an open letter, expressed their "deep sense of gratitude' to Lieut. Davies and his co-workers for saving The Wren Masterpiece and the chapel of the order housed there.

They added that they hoped to commemorate in the chapel the names of those who "rendered such signal service to the order."

Lieut. Davies, formerly of St. Catharines, Ont., is the leader of a unit of the Royal Engineers charged with dealing with the bombs dropped by German aircraft. In the St. Paul's case, Lieut. Davies personally removed the fuse of the half-ton explosive and drove a truck carrying it to hackney marshes where it was detonated harmlessly.

CHINA SECURES $25,000,000 LOAN

Borrows From United States and Will be Used to Purchase Tungsten

Washington, Sept. 26 —(AP)— The United States has agreed to lend China $25,000,000 through the export-import bank, the loan to be liquidated through the sale of tungsten to this country.

Jesse H. Jones, federal loan administrator, in announcing the [illegible] yesterday, said that the metals reserve company, a reconstruction finance corporation subsidiary, had agreed to buy $30,000,000 worth of tungsten to be delivered over a period of years at prices agreed upon in accordance with market conditions.

The tungsten purchase, Jones said, will be a part of the defence program. Tungsten is a heavy metallic element used in alloys and in making hard steel.

The loan brings to $70,000,000 to amount of credits to China authorized in the last two years.

Jones said that of the total $43,824,528 has been disbursed and $13,160,253 repaid "with nothing past due."

The American League at last has reached the showdown stage in its furious pennant struggle and Detroit Tigers are holding the aces.

Their double victory over Chicago White Sox yesterday was all they needed except to keep from falling dead overnight. They now can eliminate Cleveland Indians by winning any one of the three games the two teams have with each other this week-end. And they either can brush off New York Yankees by winning two of them, or they can wait for the world champions to wear themselves out.

The standings today:

	W.	L.	Pct.	G.B.	T.P.
Detroit ..	89	62	.589	—	3
Cleveland	87	64	.576	2	3
New York	84	64	.568	3½	6

The Yankees have a doubleheader today with the A's while Detroit and Cleveland gird for their final series opening tomorrow in Cleveland.

The Indians kept in the pennant fight yesterday by beating St. Louis Browns 4-2 as Al Milnar bested Vernon Kennedy in a hurling duel.

Milnar allowed six hits to his rival's seven, but Kennedy lost control of the game in the fourth inning by walking three men and letting in three runs.

The Tigers took two thrillers from the White Sox, who had won 13 of their 20 previous engagements, and big Buck Newsom got credit for both, bringing his victory total to 21 for the year. The scores were 10-9 and 3-2.

Tied in Eighth

The first game see-sawed back and forth with Chicago apparently nailing it down in the fifth when they routed Tommy Bridges by a six-run explosion. But the Tigers clawed back courageously, tying up the count in the eighth. Newsom went to the mound at the start of the ninth, allowed one hit in two innings, and profited when Rudy York doubled with two on in the 10th.

When big Bob came right back at the start of the nightcap everyone was surprised. When he gave a triple to Luke Appling and a home run to Larry Rosenthal for two runs in the second inning it appeared to be a mistake. Then Buck pitched shutout ball the rest of the way and his mates finally broke through the tight pitching of Johnny Rigney, who allowed only one hit in six innings. This was a double by Pinky Higgins that led to a run in the second. Hank Greenberg hit his 41st homer in the seventh and two singles and a fly sent over the winning runs in the eighth.

Cincinnati Reds divided a doubleheader with St. Louis Cardinals, taking the first game 5-0 with Junior Thompson pitching magnificent two-hit ball. However, Johnny Mize notched his 42nd home run to lead the Red Birds to a 4-3 decision over Bucky Walters in the second game, even though Walters allowed only eight hits, four less than the Reds made.

Chicago Cubs captured both ends of a twin bill 2-1 and 6-4, from Pittsburgh Pirates and moved within one game of fourth place in the National League.

GOLF

In weather that was more suitable for football and with a deluge of hail interspersing slices and drives down the fairway, a team of golfers from the Bay of Quinte Country Club triumphed over their city rivals from the Belleville Golf Club 29½ to 27½, on the latter's course yesterday. It marked the second consecutive time the Country Club veterans had won over the more youthful Belleville Golf putters.

Following the day's match the visiting golfers were guests at a delightful banquet in the clubhouse. The individual scores were as follows:

Hamilton Boxer Earns a Draw

Oakland, Calif., Sept. 26—(CP)—Baby Arizmendi, Mexican lightweight, and Jackie Callura, Hamilton, Ont., featherweight, fought to a 10-round draw in a feature boxing bout here last night.

Arizmendi, the only fighter to hold two decision victories over Henry Armstrong, world welterweight champion, entered the ring at 134½ pounds, 6½ pounds heavier than the Canadian.

The Mexican scored a seven count knockdown in the first round with a hard right to Callura's jaw and landed many effective punches the rest of the way.

CORNWALL WINS FIRST GAME

Montreal, Sept. 26—(CP)—Cornwall seniors, holders of the Quebec Senior Lacrosse championship, opened defence of their title here last night with a 9-7 victory over St. Regis-Caughnawaga Indians in the first game of a best-of-five series.

Second game of the series will be played in Cornwall Friday night. The winners will meet Vancouver Burrards in the Mann Cup semi-final playdowns, which open in Montreal around the end of next week.

MONTREAL TEAM IN BIG FOUR TO BE POWERFUL

Only One Team Will Operate and Best Players of Each to be Used

HUGHES IS COACH

Pete Jokus and Tommy Burns Come Out of Retirement With Johnny Ferraro

(By Jack Mitchell Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Montreal, Sept. 26 (CP)— Time alone will tell the story, but the men who foot the bills on the Montreal football scene hope there is truth to the saying: "United we stand divided we fall."

Fan and official alike can vouch for the exactness of the latter half of the quotation, for football has seen lean days in Montreal since one faction of the group behind Montreal's Big Four team went its separate way into the Ontario Rugby Football Union a few years back.

But now there is no Montreal team in the O.R.F.U. and the warring groups have called a truce. Montreal football fans, kicked about more than the ball in the past few seasons, are hoping for better things now the city has only a team in the Big Four and all the players are available for this one club.

Bill Hughes, who has guided four clubs to the Canadian championship, has been lured out of the retirement he entered in 1936 after guiding Ottawa Rough Riders to a Big Four crown. Hughes, sparing with words as far as pre-season predictions are concerned, will only say that "Montreal is going to have a team it will not be ashamed of."

Veterans Return to Game

Hughes holds little designs on a Dominion title this year for Montreal, last winners of the National crown in 1931. However the prospect of how far a Hughes-coached team may go has caused more than one veteran to forego retirement announced at the end of last year. Many of them will be on hand when the Montreal club opens its schedule on Oct. 5 against Toronto Argonauts.

For instance, there is hefty Johnny Ferraro of last year's Montreal Westmounts of the O.R.F.U., and long recognized as one of the east's best ball-toting halves. Johnny vowed he would hang up his cleats this year but the mention of the Hughes name brought him scampering back.

Two other "name" players in football for years—Pete Jotkus and Tommy Burns—also have given up plans of getting out. It took just the sight of his boots being passed out to another player to snap the "retirement" of Burns, once rated with Jotkus as forming the best middle-wing combination in the east.

The team hasn't a name as yet. In the past three years Montreal's Big Four entry has been officially titled the Indians, the Cubs and the Royals in that order. Hughes had a theory about getting the club a name this season.

"No matter what you call yourselves the fans always provide the name after the opening couple of games, so we'll let them pick one," he says. "The boys will work all the harder to make certain all the suggestions are complimentary."

GOOD RACING AT CAMPBELLFORD

Ginger Direct, Owned by Eddie Jones, Wins Free-For-All Pace

Campbellford, Ont., Sept. 26—(CP)—Despite the cold weather Campbellford fair, sponsored by the Seymour Agricultural Society and featuring trotting races, went over the top today. All classes of cattle, heavy draft and carriage horses were well filled while the poultry exhibits exceeded former years.

Free-For-All:

Peter J., J. Sutherland, Peterborough, 2 1 3.

Ginger Direct, Ed. Jones, Hastings, 1 2 1.

Rosedale, Allan Pacey, Roseneath, 3 3 3.

Isalee Hervester, G. L. Reid, Thomasburg, 2 1 2.

Starter, Percy Morgan, Campbellford.

Flood of Money Appears for Pat Comiskey

Jersey City, N.J., Sept. 26—(AP)—Accompanied by a tidal wave of rumors, a flood of money on Pat Comiskey hit the betting front here and across the Hudson in New York today, less than 12 hours before the Paterson Irishman tangles with Max Baer.

One betting commissioner estimated $100,000 of Comiskey money suddenly had appeared. As a result the odds on the tussle jumped in favor of the big-jawed Irish kid with the solid right hand, establishing him as choice at 5 to 8.

Most of the folks in the know, however, guffawed at the talk of "something doing" which buzzed about as a result of this show of betting money.

TIGER OUTFIELD WILL HAVE EDGE AGAINST RIVALS

Hank Greenburg So Overshadows Rest of Players It is Difficult to Compare

McCOSKY NO SLOUCH

Del Baker Has Capable Pair of Reserves in Averill and Campbell

By GAYLE TALBOT

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Sept. 26—(AP)— Big Hank Greenberg overshadows all rivals so completely that it is difficult to start to compare the outfields of the teams that will clash in the world series next week.

The great Detroit left fielder, though playing a position he had only seen at a distance up to last March, has pounded the ball at such a terrific pace this season that he hasn't even a remote rival on Cincinnati Reds, who will represent the National League for the second straight year.

The converted first baseman leads the American League in homeruns, runs batted in and runs scored, and he is a cinch to be acclaimed the year's most valuable player, succeeding Bucky Walters of the Reds.

In the world series (providing, of course, that he gets there) he will be perhaps the most serious single menace to face a set of worried pitchers since Babe Ruth hung up his wagon-tongue. As long as Hank is in there swinging, Detroit has a more potent outfield than either Cincinnati or Cleveland, the Tigers' rival for the American League title.

Barney McCoskey Will Help

To make the Tigers outfield superiority even more pronounced, they also possess the second-best gardener among the three clubs concerned. He is Barney McCoskey, their sophomore centre fielder, who at last official averages was banging the ball at .338 and generally crowding Greenberg as a run-producer. This pair, hitting in conjunction with Rudy York and Charlie Gehringer, give the Tigers a close approach to the Yankees' old murderers' row.

Their right fielder, Pete Fox, is no slouch of a slugger, himself, and when Manager Del Baker feels like making a change he has such a capable pair in reserve as Earl Averill and Bruce Campbell, both sound .275 hitters. So the Tigers, all in all, must have about the best outfield in the business.

Cincinnati, on the other hand, has won two National League pennants despite its weak and frequently shaken-up bleacher brigade. Ival Goodman, in right, was the best the Reds had for several years. He hit 30 homeruns in 1938 and last season had a highly respectable batting average of .323. But this year he has been in a bad slump and is down to .255.

QUINTE TENNIS CLUB DEFEATS TWEED IN FINALS

Win Sudden Death Contest Four Matches to Two at Point Anne

PLAY AT POINT ANNE

Clubs Tied in Regular Schedule in a Very Successful Season

After four years of endeavour, the members of the Quinte Tennis Club of this city realized their ambition in the tennis world when they won the championship of the Trent Valley Tennis League by defeating the Tweed Club four sets to two in the league's final sudden death matches played at Point Anne yesterday. Following the completion of the matches President Tom Bowler of the Canada Cement Club, personally congratulated the 1940 league champions and presented them with the league trophy. In winning the loop title the local netsters dethroned the defeated Tweed team.

The Quinte team took four of the six scheduled matches, losing only one set of mixed doubles and the ladies doubles matches. The Tweed and Quinte clubs were tied in points at the conclusion of the regular league schedule, which necessitated a sudden death play-off. In their first play-off matches, played last Saturday, the two clubs battled to a draw, each team taking three sets. Two extra sets were necessary during yesterday's match.

The results were:

Men's singles—H. Kerr (Quinte) defeated G. Wagar (Tweed) 3-6, 6-3 and 6-4.

Men's doubles—1. Burnett and Dudgeaon (Quinte) defeated E. Doyle and A. Tummon (Tweed) 6-0 and 6-4. 2. El Wickerson and D. Maclean (Quinte) defeated C. White and G. Elwood (Tweed) 6-0 and 6-2.

Mixed Doubles—1. J. Courneyea and Miss F. Graham (Tweed) defeated Miss Jo Cruji and A. Cunningham (Quinte) 7-5 and 6-3. 2. Miss M. Wardner and G. Barclay (Quinte) defeated Miss J. Sills and W. Arber (Tweed) 4-6, 7-5 and 6-3.

Ladies' Doubles—Connie Morrison and Mrs. Moffatt (Tweed) defeated Madge Howard and Marion Maclean (Quinte) 9-7 and 6-3.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

In a letter received from Trooper Andy Knott, who is with the C.A.S.F. somewhere in England, Andy informed his parents all was well with the boys overseas. Apparently he has been transferred from the 1st Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, with which he enlisted, for Andy speaks of managing a softball team that beat the "H. & P.E." 4 to 3 before a crowd of 15,000 people some time ago. As a matter of fact Trooper Knott is in charge of all sports in his unit. A post-script was added to the letter seeking a softball sweater from Belleville. Surely with three or four softball teams operating in Belleville this past season an odd softball sweater can be dug up and sent to Andy, as this type of woollen garment comes in handy to wear on cold nights beneath the soldier's tunic. If any person has an extra softball sweater it would be appreciated if given to Andy's parents, who in turn would see the sweater was delivered overseas.

More softball—guess the city softball finals have petered out. The Shell "Oilers" just aren't interested in the continuance of the Bank of Commerce trophy series, so it looks as though the Point Anne "Cementmen" will be awarded the cup and city championship, although Bubby Gaulin's Ox Point "mushballers" would much prefer to have played the series out. However, the Cementmen won the only game of the series and are entitled to the trophy and honours. Annually this series has been a bone of contention and seldom completed on the playing field. Another year the softball moguls would be well advised to play the City championship in the spring as a prelude to the regular O.A.S.A. schedule, thus assuring the completion of this series. For those interested the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" play Wallaceburg in the second game of the intermediate O.A.S.A. finals at Trenton on Saturday. The Airmen won the initial tussle 14 to 13.

"Nothing doing," quoth President Ed Barrow of the New York Yankeen in reply to proposed post-season series between the Bronx (?) Bombers and the Flatbush "Daffinessmen," as suggested by Larry MacPhail, colorful and dynamic head of the Brooklyn club. However, details for the 23rd Chicago city championship series between the White Sox and the Cubs were completed yesterday and this series will open on Oct. 1st, one day previous to the world series inaugural at Cincinnati. Two of these games will be played as night contests. The Cubs will have to get along without the services of Jerome (Dizzy) Dean, who delayed recall from Tulsa left him ineligible for the series, as this series is governed by the same laws and restrictions as the world series. Like the world series, this series will open in the National League Park.

Here's a story of a softball pitcher who won and lost the same game 2 to 1. It's hard to believe, but Pat Patrick pitched for two softball clubs in two different leagues in Phoenix, Ariz. When these two clubs met in the city finals Patrick pitched for both teams and didn't leave the mound during the entire game. He gave up five hits to the winners and scattered seven hits collected by the losers. P.S.—He didn't bat against himself, however.

Do you remember when Max Schmeling, former world's heavyweight boxing champion, stopped Mickey Walker in eight rounds at New York eight years ago tonight. At Chicago the same night Max Baer, who won the heavyweight crown in June, 1934, stopped Tuffy Griffiths after seven rounds.

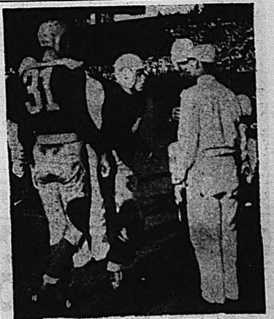
Congratulations are the order of the day to be extended to the Quinte Tennis Club upon their winning of the Trent Valley Tennis League championship yesterday in a sudden death play-off match versus Tweed at Point Anne. These two clubs completed their regular season's schedule deadlocked and last Saturday played a draw match play-off, but yesterday in their second saw-off for the league title, the local Quinte netsters were too hot for the tennis gals and boys from Sam Curry's adopted community and the locals sounded the loud cymbals in victory. The Quinte Tennis Club has had a hard struggle in their battle for existance which makes yesterday's winning of the title the sweeter. They are to be congratulated for their success after such a hard uphill struggle for recognition.

It wasn't a case of "The wind and rain in your hair," but rather the hailstones and hurricane in their faces yesterday when the Country Club golfers humbled a Belleville Golf Club team on latter's home course. Hailstones as large as peas fell, but they didn't seem to mitigate the efforts of our brave local golfers in the least. Harry Ridley and Tommy Carruthers, our two youthful ace golfers, took it upon themselves to give the two local pros., Bill Little and Jock Mitchell a lesson at their favorite pastime. The kids did fairly well, that was until the chips were down then old man Experience stepped in and the youths "blew" a side bet sky high on the ninth green of the first round.

Sport Spice — It was all Buck Newsom as the Tigers won two from the White Sox yesterday and advanced two full games ahead of Cleveland....Newsom's fine relief hurling and York's timely double pulled the first game out of the fire....While "Big Buck" scattered eight Chicago hits masterly to win the second tilt....They were Newsom's 20th and 21st wins of the season....Alymer won the intermediate "A" title of the O.B.A. as they disposed of Cobourg in successive games....The Cincinnati Reds boast of two outfielders, Ripple and Craft, who has perfect fielding averages for the current season.....If the Reds can win three more games, they'll be the first National League Club to win 100 games since 1935....The O.A.S.A. is considering the Oshawa "cry-babies" squawk, but only considering it.

VETERAN CAR STEWARD DIES

Boston, Sept. 26—(AP)—Alfred D. Lewis, 55, veteran dining car steward for the Canadian Pacific Railway who, railroad officials said, had six sons serving with Canada's armed forces, was found dead yesterday, victim of a heart attack.



WORDS SPILLED ON THE GRIDIRON

Davey O'Brien, the mighty mite of the American gridiron, who now stars with the Philadelphia Eagles professional football team, is shown with his captain, disputing a point during their league game with the Cleveland Rams. George McLaren, the head linesman, is the focal point of the argument which revolved about a shuffle pass. O'Brien contended a shuffle pass is an incomplete forward pass and cannot be recovered by the defensive team. The Eagles lost the argument and the game by 21-13.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 26 (CP)—The Toronto market today continued in dull trade during early afternoon business, prices showing little change from noon levels. One o'clock volume at 71,000 shares was 16,000 below Wednesday's level at the same hour, and all indices pointed downward.

East Malartic, the most active of a weak gold list, held around its morning low at 3.30, down 10 cents, but MacLeod regained an earlier 6-cent loss. Kerr Addison was down 5, recovering part of its morning setback. Western oils and base metals continued to be neglected and industrials showed little, if any, change from their morning irregularity.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 26—(AP)—Leading stocks back-tracked in today's market.

A little buying came in at the start, but this soon faded and, in relatively light dealings, declines near the fourth hour ranged from fractions to a point or so.

Brokers generally blamed the retreat mainly on the somewhat more confusing character of International news.

Among faltering stocks were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, Allied Chemical, Johns-Manville, Anaconda, Kennecott, Santa Fe, Dow Chemical and Western Union.

Among Canadian issues International Nickel and Dome Mines lost fractions while Distillers Seagram gained as much. Canada 4s, in the Bond Market, held unchanged.

Butter Prices Firm On Better Demand

Toronto, Sept. 26.—Slightly improved demand for the prevailing small offerings gave a firmer undertone to butter on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Afternoon inquiry for eggs was also better.

Current receipts cleared more readily on the butter market. Prices held previous levels, however, although the undertone was firmer. Members of the trade took notice of the announcement that the United Kingdom has inquired as to Canada's ability to supply foodstuffs on a much larger scale. Bacon, cheese and butter are among the products thought to be most needed. Britain's butter ration will be temporarily reduced from four ounces to two ounces per person per week on Sept. 30th. The first-grade Ontario product sold yesterday at 23 1-2 cents per pound.

Supplies slightly exceeded demand, which picked up in afternoon trading, on the egg market. Lower grades continued to meet with the best reception. Quotations were unchanged in both sections, and Government inspected shipments of graded eggs were offered at 1-2 cent per dozen premium.

No change was reported on the wholesale cheese market in spite of the lack of local demand. Offerings remained light.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Sept. 26.—Produce market prices here, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter—First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 24 1-2c-25c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 24-24 1-2c.

Eggs—Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 32 1-2c-33c; A-medium, 31c-31 1-2c; A-pullets, 27c; B, 26 1-2c-27c; C, 17 1-2-18 1-2c. Receipts, 548 cases.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Sept. 26 (CP)—Prices were unchanged at Brantford, Peterborough and Stratford in bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Liveweight: Brantford $8.50.

Dressedweight: Brantford $11.50 plus transportation; Peterborough $11.50 plus transportation; Stratford $11.50 plus transportation.

London reported $11.50 plus transportation dressedweight, unchanged, and Chatham reported $8.25 liveweight and $11.25 dressedweight, both unchanged.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Sept. 26 (CP).—Cattle trade was very dull at the livestock market today with sales on killers too few to establish prices. A few stockers sold at $4.50-$7. Veal calves and hogs were steady. No sales of sheep or lambs were reported. The cattle holdover from Wednesday was 1,300 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 150, calves 10, hogs 300.

Veal calves sold from $7-$11.50.

Hogs sold at $9 off-trucks for bacons and $12-$12.15 dressedweight.

BRITISH REACTION

It reported, however, two of three French submarines which took part in the engagement were sunk and indicated hits had been scored on the 35,000-ton French battleship Richelieu, which was damaged in an expedition to Dakar last July 8.

Report of Attack on Gibraltar

Linked with news of the withdrawal from Dakar was a report from Gibraltar that some 100 French planes had dropped more than 300 bombs on that British stronghold at the western entrance to the Mediterranean during a 2 1-2-hour raid yesterday.

The raid was the second executed by French planes at Gibraltar in two days.

The communique announcing the withdrawal from Dakar attributed to Gen. de Gaulle the initiative in undertaking the expedition. It said British warships were sent along to support him if he needed aid and because "of information that German influence was spreading to the colony."

The communique also placed upon the Dakar forces responsibility for opening hostilities, declaring they opened fire on de Gaulle's emissaries and subsequently on the British naval squadron.

De Gaulle's Appeal to French

Commenting upon the Dakar expedition, The London Times said:

"It is important to appreciate that Gen. de Gaulle went to Dakar as a Frenchman appealing in friendship to other Frenchmen to join him in continuing the battle for freedom of France.

"He had no idea of coercing his fellow countrymen, and when it became apparent that the proconsuls of Vichy at Dakar were in a position to prevent junction with his friends ashore—though their moral position was so weak that they are stated to have fired on a flag of truce instead of permitting a parley—he drew off his troops rather than precipitate a battle."

CAPTURE

their vessel aground off the Big Islands some ten miles west of Rimouski, Que.

The Prince Robert is commanded by Cmdr. Charles Taschereau Beard and carried a crew of twenty officers and two hundred men.

She is one of three merchant ships, originally built for the passenger service of the Canadian National Steamships and acquired by the navy early in the war.

The vessel was converted into an armed merchant cruiser at North Vancouver and commissioned in the naval service in July of this year.

Cmdr. Beard's message to naval headquarters did not say whether the Weser was armed or whether the Germans offered any resistance.

Weser Reported With Diesel Oil

The German ship is reported to have been tied up at various points on the Mexican coast since the start of the war. Recently she was reported to have loaded a cargo of Diesel oil and to be preparing to sailing.

Reports, of which the navy has no confirmation, were heard to the effect she had served or was about to serve as a re-fuelling ship for enemy submarines.

Commander Beard Veteran Officer

Cmdr. Beard is one of the veteran officers of the Royal Canadian Navy and a native of Montreal. He is 50 years old and retired last summer only to return to service on the outbreak of war.

He was a member of the first class of cadets to enter the Royal Canadian Navy in 1905 and served continuously until his temporary retirement last summer. His last post prior to retirement was commander in charge at Esquimalt.

On returning to duty in September, 1939, he was appointed commander in charge of convoys and in April this year was named to command the Prince Robert.

Off Mexico's Coast

New York, Sept. 26 (CP)—Capture by a Canadian armed merchant cruiser of the German cargo ship Weser suggests that loopholes on the American continent through which the enemy may receive war materials are being closely watched.

Manzanillo, off which the Weser was snared, is on Mexico's Pacific coast and could serve as a port of departure for craft relaying contraband to Siberian ports for transshipment to Germany.

It has been suggested that war materials have been reaching Germany and Italy from the United States through re-export from neutral countries. Yesterday the New York Daily News said oil, cotton, machinery and scrap iron was reaching Axis territory through Arctic ports and Spain, Portugal, Cuba, Mexico and Russia.

Yesterday also, Francis I. Dupont and Company, a brokerage firm, announced suspension of an employee "pending thorough investigation of his outside activities." The employee was Jose M. Mayorga, described by the news as "Spanish emissary of Franco's Juan March" (reputed backer of General Franco).

The news story quoted Department of Commerce figures to show that shipment from the United States to Spain and Portugal had increased more than $22,000,000 over last year's figures for the first seven months of 1940, and that exports to Mexico were up from roughly $45,000,000 to $51,000,000.

BERLINERS SPEND

fresh loads of destruction on London.

A church and working-class houses were destroyed in a southeast London district when incendiary bombs "fell like rain." A fireman was killed when a high explosive bomb fell into the ring of flames. A man and woman were burned to death in their home.

Nine Killed on Direct Hit

Nine people were killed in another London district when two houses were demolished by a direct hit. Two other houses were destroyed nearby with no casualties.

A mother of seven children was killed in southwest London while returning home from a cinema. Shops and cottages were damaged and two policemen slightly injured by shrapnel.

Two wings of a convent in the same district were destroyed by fire after a 'Molotoff breadbasket' was dropped.

"Our fine library is ruined and so are: our art rooms which contained many valuable objects," a nun said.

More than 100 sisters and nuns lived in the convent, which had been in the possession of the order for 90 years.

A children's hospital in southeast England reserved for youngsters evacuated from London was damaged but there were no casualties. The children were carried to safety by the staff.

The Nazi raiders took a new path to the British capital for their 19th consecutive dusk-to-dawn assault, coming up the Thames estuary, instead of by way of "Hell's Corner"—the southeast coast.

The heavily-bombed central area of the city, however, had a respite from the intense attacks of previous nights.

(Berliners spent five hours in air raid shelters during the night, the fourth in a row which has seen British bombers over the German capital.)

Suburbs Bear Brunt

The government said London, its suburbs and the surrounding districts again bore the brunt of the night's air attack.

The raiders, after coming up the estuary, divided into two groups, one attacking the northwest section of the city, the other the southern area. Bombing was reported particularly heavy in the northwestern region.

The government said fires were started in many parts of the London area, and that only prompt action by firefighters prevented "considerable" damage. Damage also was reported by direct hits on "houses and other buildings in many parts of the area."

Not Moment to Reveal Movements

An official statement said bombing was confined to outlying districts, where a number of houses were reported destroyed or damaged.

Neutral observers twice heard planes over Central Berlin, but no bomb explosions were heard in that area, and no fires could be seen.

Regarding all the speculation about impending events, an informed commentator said:—

"Everything is fluid—fluid, but moving swiftly. But the moment for revealing the direction in which events are moving hasn't arrived, and guesses are futile."

It seemed apparent however, the architects of the "new order" were thinking in terms much broader than Europe.

The scope of their vision was indicated by the interest manifest toward Africa, the Orient and—unofficially—even America.

Evidence of the interest in the United States was a lengthy comment in the influential Hamburger Fremdenblatt, usually well-versed in Foreign Office trends, which pictured the United States as embarking upon a course of "brutal Imperialism."

The newspaper said recent British-American transactions, including the deal involving western hemisphere bases and 50 over-age destroyers, showed that the United States is determined to "profit from the great new order which has been set in motion by the living crisis of the British Empire."

Kiel Canal Bombed

Casualties, some of them fatal, were reported, but the number was not known. Other attacks occurred in southeast England, in the northwest and in Wales.

The Press Association credited the intensity of the "flaming onion" barrage in northwestern London with keeping the raiders out of the centre of the city.

In announcing fresh British blows against German power, the Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security said:—

"Last (Wednesday) night, strong forces of our bombers attacked military objectives in Berlin and Kiel and invasion bases in enemy-occupied territory."

Twenty-six German planes were shot down in yesterday's fighting, four by anti-aircraft and 22 by fighter planes, the government announced.

Fighter Planes Needed

Fighter planes which can meet stringent requirements of night fighting are one of Britain's greatest needs, informed sources said. Unless such fighter planes can be developed and supplied to the R.A.F., London must face an entire winter of German bombing, they asserted.

Technical experts, working night and day, have developed three new weapons of the type needed to fight Nazi bombers, but it is plain they are not entirely successful because the experimental work continues apace. The nature of these new weapons was not disclosed.

Most sources believe no "secret weapon" will be found to conquer night bombers, that the one thing that must be developed to counter night raiding successfully is a new type of fighter plane.

PLANTS FROZEN BY SUDDEN DROP IN TEMPERATURE

All Parts of District Report Blackened Tomato Vines and Other Vegetables

Jack Frost's legions raced out of the north last night and laid down a frosty blitzkrieg that left a trail of blackened tomato vines and other farm crops. In all parts of the surrounding district with the possible exception of the regions bordering the bay shore, residents are complaining of frozen cucumber vines, of ruined tomato crops and other vegetables.

At the filtration plant just outside the city and on the bayshore, the thermometer dipped to 31.5 degrees Fahrenheit, only one half degree below the freezing point, but further inland more severe readings were noted. This morning city residents were surprised to find a white frost covering buildings and rural residents state that water troughs, etc., had a crust of ice covering them when they arose this morning.

Just what the extent of the damage will be to crops has not yet been determined but farmers state that corn will now have to be cut and it is estimated that thousands and thousands of bushels of tomatoes have been frozen on the vines.

At noon today, canning factory officials were still unable to state the complete extent of the damage done to the tomato crop, but all were unanimous in stating there had been very serious and widespread damage to the crop. Field men were still out viewing the ruined crop they stated and it was not known whether tomatoes still on the vines last night would be a total loss or whether they might still be used to some advantage in the canning industry.

Owing to the fact that tomato crop was exceptionally late this year the frost at this date proved more disastrous than it would have in the average year. Canning factory officials estimated that less than half of the tomato crop had been harvested and that the loss to the farmers would be enormous.

Farmers attending market this morning stated that watermelons still on the vines would be ruined by the frost. Muskmelons, however, they said, would stand more frost and it was unlikely that they would be affected. There will be no more cucumbers this season, they stated, as the vines are completely ruined. The next few days will see practically all the corn in the district cut and silo filling will be the order of the day, they said.

BRITISH RESERVE

Helping increase the British supply of dollar exchange are the United States purchases of rubber, tin and other strategic materials for war reserves. These come chiefly from British Empire producers and from the Netherlands East Indies, now clearing trade by way of London.

Among visible items in the British-United States balance, it seemed Britain in the first year of the war was almost able to balance off her empire merchandise deficit with newly-mined gold.

The Empire is estimated to be turning out around $700,000,000 in gold yearly, chiefly from Canadian and South African mines. Advances of capital for building of aircraft and munitions plants in the United States, together with such items as ships, required substantial amounts of dollar exchange not shown in the trade figures.

Only Minor Part of Holding Liquidated

However, treasury data indicates the United Kingdom has liquidated only a minor part of British holdings of American securities.

Out of about $1,700,000,000 in gold held under "earmark" here for foreign account, some banking quarters estimate, probably half of it is British metal available for purchase of dollar exchange in the future to balance sterling accounts.

Steadily-arriving gold from Canada, South Africa and other empire sources has limited the drain on earmarked metal and short-term bank balances and holdings of American securities, not counting what may be realized in the way of extra exchange from heavier imports of raw materials from the British Empire.

In the first nine months of the war, the figures revealed, Britain realized about $152,000,000 from sale of United States securities. British and Canadian holdings of American securities at the start of the war were placed at approximately $1,250,000,000.

Deficit Balanced by Gold and Exchange

Partly based on estimates, one banking analyst calculated the British Empire in the first year of the war had a deficit in exports over imports in trade with the United States amounting to approximately $700,000,000.

This deficit in merchandise items apparently was balanced by newly-produced gold and exchange realized from sale of securities, leaving the major portion of the war chest intact.

Trade circles expect the flow of war materials to Britain to increase as American plants expand output of aircraft, munitions and other supplies on order. Out of some $2,250,000,000 in British war contracts reported to have been let in the first year, deliveries are estimated to have totalled around $500,000,000, leaving the bulk to be shipped.

Banking circles pointed out the contracts are adequately covered by the remaining reserves of gold, bank balances and holdings of American securities, not counting what may be realized in the way of extra exchange from heavier imports of raw materials from the British Empire.

CAR PLUNGES

Pte. A. C. K. Carter, No. 1 Canadian Infantry Rifle Training Centre, of Toronto.

Injured:

Pte. Donald G. Manktelow, Essex Scottish Regiment, of Toronto.

Steve Marych of Toronto, driver of the truck.

On Leave in Toronto

After a night on leave in Toronto, the soldiers were driving back to Camp Borden military camp, 32 miles north of Newmarket, when their car ploughed into the back of Marych's fruit truck that had stopped at a highway traffic light.

The crash occurred on the heavily-travelled Yonge Street highway, about 28 miles north of Toronto and at a point where a road branches off to this town.

The impact was terrific, telescoping the automobile into the back of the truck with such force that first arrivals had to wait for additional help to extricate victims from the wreckage.

Coroner Dr. L. W. Dales of Newmarket described the scene: "It was horrible; the worst-looking mess I ever saw. The car was underneath the back of the truck, a complete wreck."

Four of the soldiers were found wedged in the front seat and three in the back. A passing army ambulance from Camp Borden carried the injured to hospital where Chapman died. The other victims died instantly.

Manktelow received severe head and body injuries and is in hospital. Doctors give him a good chance of recovery. Marych was hurled from his truck cab and received head injuries. His condition was reported as "satisfactory."

Car Reported Borrowed

Forsyth is reported to have borrowed the car from another soldier, Pte. F. Mahoney, (Oulette Ave.) of Windsor, for a trip to Toronto to see a friend, Mary Ferguson. Miss Ferguson was celebrating her birthday tonight and Forsyth went to Toronto to help make the arrangements.

He met fellow-soldiers around midnight and they crowded into the automobile for the trip back to camp. Police said that although they were not certain it appeared from the position of the victims after the accident that Gaines was driving.

Authorities in Toronto also reported that preliminary examination of samples of blood showed no indication that the men from whom the samples were taken had been drinking.

Sound of the crash was heard at Newmarket, a mile from the scene near a gasoline service station operated by Thomas Cook. Members of the Cook family were first to arrive and Cook said:

"Four soldiers appeared to be dead, wedged together in the front seat—or what was left of it. They never knew what happened, although three of them had instinctively grasped the windshield ledge. There were no skid marks. The car had just kept on going until it was stopped dead.

Bodies Mangled

"The soldiers were mangled. There were three more in the back seat and it was a while before we could get any out, the wreck was so complete."

Tom Cook, Jr., said the stop light had turned from red to green and the truck, fully loaded, was just starting across the intersection when "the car came north over the brow of a hill and the driver apparently failed to notice the truck." He termed the corner a "death trap."

Chapman visited his wife and three children at Toronto yesterday, driving down from Camp Borden with friends. His wife said goodbye to him at 11.30 last night when he left to return to camp.

Three Soldiers Hurt

Halifax, Sept. 26 (CP)—Three soldiers suffered minor injuries here yesterday when a truck loaded with 31 members of the Royal Canadian Engineers was struck by an automobile and overturned, spilling its passengers onto the street.

Work as Usual In British Factories Says Supply Minister

London, Sept. 26 (CP).—Herbert Morrison, Minister of Supply, declared today that German air attacks on Britain had "conspicuously failed" thus far to interrupt work in British armed factories.

"With isolated exceptions here and there the damage German bombers have inflicted on our war production has been vastly less than the enemy must have expected when the attacks were first launched," he said in a broadcast.

Norse Sailor Finds Safety After Dodging Nazi Bombing Planes

Buffalo, N.Y., Sept. 26 (AP).—First Mate Firtgof Wicklund-Hansen of the Norwegian tramp freighter Maysalen basked in the safety of Buffalo harbor today after dodging German bombing planes for a circuitous trans-Atlantic trip.

Wicklund-Hansen told reporters he witnessed the sinking of other ships by German bombers last spring, but the Maysalen escaped in a fog, was picked up by a British merchant cruiser after six days and escorted to Iceland, then sailed to Canada.

Tweed and District

Tweed—Tweed Lodge No. 290 I. O. O. F. held their annual Divine Service and Decoration of deceased members graves on Sunday, at St. James's Anglican Church where Rev. Caldwell of Marmora delivered a fine address and an appropriate theme.

Members of Madoc, Thomasburg, Stirling and Tweed Lodges were present. The oration in honor of deceased brethren was delivered by Past D.D.G.M. Dr. R. Beatty of Madoc while Tweed Band played a number of selections at the cemetery and preceded the parade of Oddfellows from the hall.

The Air Raid Victims' Fund sponsored by Tweed Consolidated School and the Tweed News has reached a total of $75.00 at the end of the first week. Contributions included $46.32 from the Home and School Club which was in operation a number of years ago. In making this contribution to the Air Raid Victims' Fund, the members of the former association expressed the belief that no better purpose could be served by this sum of money than by contributing it to relieve in some small measure the distress of those who have suffered so grievously.

A contribution of $10.00 was received from Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Toronto. Other contributions of varying amounts were received from a number of other contributors. The Staff of Tweed Consolidated School is holding a tea on Saturday afternoon at Potts' Hotel in aid of the fund.

Mr. C. E. White has been appointed to head the drive to raise funds for the Canadian Red Cross in Tweed. The following are the members of the Campaign Committee which will meet on Thursday night in the Veterans' Hall:—C. E. White, F. W. Clark, Dr. W. A. Paul, H. W. Crosbie, Reeve C. H. Kerr, S. A. McCarey, Wilfred LeSage, Mrs. W. E. Prust, Mrs. C. E. White, Mrs. Doyle, Mrs. D. W. Sills.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Berliners crouched in their shelters for five hours last night and complained of the early autumn cold while Royal Air Force planes swept across the industrial sections of the city and smashed at plants important to Germany's war effort.

For the 4,000,000 inhabitants of Hitler's capital it was a foretaste of what is to come in the winter, a season which, even last year, brought severe fuel rationing throughout the Reich. Much more favorably placed is Britain where the fuel problem is only one of distribution.

London's man in the street, glum over the withdrawal of free French and British naval and land forces from the region of Dakar, key to West Africa, smiled again when he read the Air Ministry's announcement of the Berlin raids. He had spent a considerable time in his shelter, himself, last night, while German raiders continued to lay waste his home town.

Yet this morning everyone who had a place to work was on the job. Many shopkeepers had no windows in their stores and householders were busy hanging up substitutes for glass, canvas or tar paper stretched on wooden frames, or boards nailed to the window sashes.

Announcement of Dakar Withdrawal

Britons sought to puzzle out the Ministry of Information's announcement of the Dakar withdrawal. The Ministry said the attacking forces found the defenders so well placed that to take the city would have involved a major assault which the British government was unwilling to launch against its former allies who still hold allegiance to the German-dominated Petain-Laval government.

Nevertheless, it was believed in some circles that the attack might have to be renewed with determination in the face of a possible Axis thrust against Gibraltar. With Gibraltar engaged, the Admiralty might well feel it must have Dakar as a base to continue its Atlantic blockade.

Meanwhile the Italian Press was full of warlike talk, telling its people how warlike Spain was getting to feel, that Franco's country still catching its breath after a long and devastating civil war, was in a state of "pre-belligerency" which might break out at the right moment into active help for Germany and Italy.

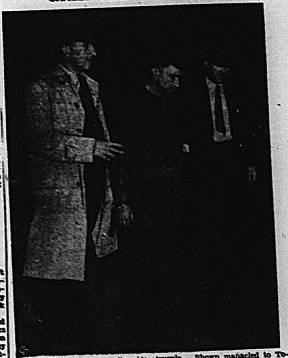
The Germans also were talking in a warlike vein of what Japan was going to do in the Orient and the German press suggested that an enlarged Axis might make war upon the whole "imperialistic" democratic world, including the United States.

Meanwhile 2,000 Japanese troops landed near Haiphong in French Indo-China by agreement with the Petain-Laval regime. The agreement was being put into effect despite the recent forcible entry into Indo-China by Japanese forces crossing the Chinese border in violation according to the French, of the terms.

The English Channel, rough yesterday, flattened out again today but those who watch from the cliffs of Dover and thereabouts reported a second series in two days of shattering explosions up and down the Nazi-held French coast where a short time ago Hitler's generals were reported massing flat bottomed, self-propelled barges for an attempt to invade Britain.

The force of the explosions again made the ground tremble in the English southeast coast, indicating that stores of munitions were being detonated—perhaps stores which the Germans had accumulated with an idea of transporting them to Britain for the pipe-dream "conquest".

CRAZED MURDERER CAPTURED



John Kluk, object of a city-wide search by Toronto police after the murder of Arie Borievich and the attempted murder of John Plachtek was arrested by police without a struggle. Shown manacled to Toronto detectives, Kluk is reported to have escaped from a Saskatchewan mental hospital a month ago.

KILLED IN COLLISION

Streetsville, Ont., Sept. 26 (CP)—Three-year-old Bruce McKinley of Port Credit, suburban Toronto, was killed last night in a head-on collision between two trucks. The drivers were injured slightly. The child was said to have been a passenger in a truck driven by Norman Glidden, 19, Port Credit, which collided with the truck driven by Gordon Adamson of Erindale.

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

So Judith had a new job. And what a job! In the next few weeks she was to be torn between despair and hysterical mirth. It was an incredible place, De Franc's.

Dudley finally found her two days later, and she was full of her new position. "I was in Chicago, Judith," he explained. "I didn't know about things until I got back today. Do you like De Franc's?"

"I like my job, Michael." And she did.

Judith wrote to her father and mother in glowing terms.

"I'm all right, really. Don't you worry about anything. My first pay was $25."

Work at De Franc's was difficult at times. The other salesgirls ignored her at first. But Judith had patience. Besides, the customers liked her. She observed, listened to De Franc, and began gradually to know something about clothes, about his stock.

Contrary to what she expected, she did not do any modeling. De Franc put his foot down. "When I get somebody who can sell, let well enough alone."

Judith had been at De Franc's a month. Mrs. Van Mathas was coming in at three and she had telephoned in advance to have Judith free to look after her.

Marian Wartin ,one of the pretty models, came back from lunching in one of De Franc's newest creations. She brought a newspaper with her. "Look here," she said to Judith tossing her the paper. "I'd never have let him get away, if I'd been you!"

Reno had given Tex Almes his divorce that morning. Sonia was there, and they were planning to fly to Arizona to be married, then go to Mexico for their honeymoon.

Judith's hands trembled. Beside the photographs of Tex and Sonia, was one of herself.

"HE PREFERS BLONDS," read the headline.

Of course the girls had known about her. She had suspected they did. De Franc came in just then. "Will this embarrass you, Monsieur?" Judith asked.

"That? No, most of my clients change husbands now and then."

Judith felt sick over the divorce news. But she had to be on duty Dick's mother. . . . Queer that she should care so much for Tex! But she did. She could not believe now that the divorce had been decreed, even when she looked at the stark headlines!

If Judith was unusually pale, Mrs. Van Mathas did not notice. When she left, she had ordered several frocks. She was going to Europe soon.

"I'm one of those patriotic women who prefer American clothes!" she said with a laugh.

By the time Judith tidied her hair, washed her face, it was about 6 p.m. She hurried. Why, she would not admit to herself. But she did feel that somebody would meet her outside. She had a hunch that Michael would be waiting for her.

And he was.

x x x

So began a new life for Judith as it began for Tex and Sonia. That first night she saw Michael after Tex had got his divorce, he pleaded his cause.

"Give me time, Michael," she begged. "I care more about you than any friend in the world. Yet—I guess I'm a one-man woman."

"But you don't love him any more," Michael persisted.

"No, not the way you mean. But I married him. Nothing can alter that . . . nothing!"

Michael did not give up hope. He was patient with her. That summer was one of the happiest Judith had ever known. Frequently she and Michael drove out into the country to dine. On week-ends they swam at the Van Mathas home.

As for Judith's job, she loved it. So pleased was De Franc with his newest saleswoman, that he promised in another year to take her to Paris with him on one of his buying expeditions.

Judith saw Hugh Lanning frequently. He, Michael, and she often had dinner together. Even in the summer heat, Judith bloomed like a proverbial rose.

Michael, watching her closely, felt hopeful. He loved her enough to be patient. And sometimes Judith admitted to herself that Michael was becoming more and more necessary to her. Most of the time she took him for granted. He was always there to listen to her problems and suggest solutions.

One day early in August, Sonia and Tex came to New York. They dropped in out of the sky without warning in a new racing ship Tex was testing for the transcontinental race in September.

Judith shook her head. Reading the interviews with Tex and Sonia, Judith could not believe that just a year ago she had been happy, that this man had been her husband. Now they were poles apart. But—

She read of Tex's new trophy ship with alarm. He shouldn't try it again. Sonia should stop him!

A great sense of foreboding took possession of her. She could not shake it off. She felt she ought to warn Tex. She had to see him! But that, she told herself, would be silly, if not worse.

Tex and Sonia had been in town a week. Judith had a date for dinner one night with Hugh and Michael in their favorite little chop house on 48th street. She wore a sheer black frock, very smart. One of the "markdowns" of De Franc's. She wore a small black hat, the sheerest of hose. Never had she looked lovelier, more genuinely alluring.

When Judith entered the restaurant, the head waiter said, "Mr. Dudley's waiting, Mrs. Almes." Judith caught a glimpse of Dudley over at their favorite corner table. Hugh Lanning came in directly after Judith. It was not until she and Hugh were close to Dudley's table, that Judith noticed Dudley's two guests. Her steps faltered. Just one glimpse of that blond head and she knew: Sonia—with Tex!

"I can't, Hugh."

"Chin up, here we go!"

There was nothing else to do. Dudley had seen Judith, and had stood up. So did Tex who saluted smilingly with, "Hello, Judith. How are you?" as she forced a smile of happy recognition.

"How nice," said Sonia. "We came in here and spotted Michael. When we found you were coming, we waitwhile and talk."
while an dtalk."

Judith sat down next to Dudley. Her throat was dry and her hands icy cold. Sonia, Hugh and Tex were keeping up a rapid-fire conversation, "Sonny" laughing a good deal. She was prettier than ever. The crack-up had not marred her beauty, though there was a tiny scar near her lip, like a kitten's scratch. It lent piquancy to her lovely face.

Tex eyed Judith openly: "No need to ask how you are. You're blooming! Snappier than ever!!"

"Isn't she!" Sonia chimed in. "Nothing but romance could do that for you, Judith!"

Tex smiled indulgently at Sonia, and shook his head. "Now, now, 'Sonny', don't be too personal. You're hard to handle."

"I'm not!" pouted the blond. "Well, let's talk about flying. Judith, I'd love to try the trophy race, but Tex puts his foot down."

"You mean the judges did. They don't want women in it!"

Then Tex switched the conversation back to Judith with, "How's the job?"

"I like it a lot."

"How's your mother and dad?"

"Fine. I'm going out to Detroit next week to see them."

Mother and dad! That brought thoughts of their last Christmas. But Tex seemed to find no embarrassment in the situation. Neither did Sonia. In fact, she was enjoying it. Perhaps she felt she was so glamorous that the contrast to Judith would be salutary. Certainly she was sure of herself.

Tex was drinking ginger ale. "I've got him on the wagon!" Sonia boasted. "Isn't that something?"

Judith agreed silently, that it was. Maybe she was what Tex needed. Sonia had warned Judith she wanted Tex and she'd got him. All was fair—

But Judith did manage to give some kind of warning to Tex. "I thought you were going to give up high speed racing."

Tex grinned. "Sonny won't let me. She's boss. Ambitious as all get-out. I haven't got a chance!"

"We're going to fly 'round the world this winter. Won't that be thrilling?" Sonia was full of their plans; her ready tongue was in a propeller-whirl.

There were many of Hugh's reporter-pals in the restaurant and he knew what the aftermath of this public dining would be. Sonia would love that!

"Why shouldn't we dine together?" Sonia demanded when Hugh mentioned the presence of some of his newspaper friends. "Judith bears me no ill will. Do you?"

"No."

"I'm just better for Tex, that's all."

The odd part of that was that Judith agreed with her. The whole incredible conversation . . . featuring Sonia's brazen self-sufficiency . . . left Judith limp.

"We're buying a place this Fall in Los Angeles, or rather Glendale. We want to be near the airport. Wish you'd come to the coast," Sonia said to Judith.

"I'm afraid I won't be travelling for a long time."

Sonia looked arch. "I don't believe that!" She smiled knowingly at Dudley. "I always believe in marrying men who have airplanes so we can go places, lots of places and far-off places."

That dinner was the bitterest Judith had ever known. Finally, it ended. They all left together. Hugh had to go back to his office. Dudley's car was at the curb.

"Can I drop you some place?" he invited.

"We're going to Radio City and we'd love a lift," Sonia said quickly. In the car the talk was more or less casual. When they said goodbye at last, Tex took her hand: "So glad to have seen you, Judith." And he meant it.

"If you come to Hollywood, Judith, look us up," Sonia added.

Then Judith and Michael were left alone in the car. He drove in silence. Judith did not notice where they were going. He headed to the George Washington bridge as he had that night when she had lost her job. On the Jersey shore, Michael found a parking place were twinkling Manhattan spread out before them. Judith tried to look at the lights but they blurred. Then she was in his arms. He kissed her. Then came his ultimatum.

"I'm tired of all this foolishness. You're going to marry me, Judith, right away! Tomorrow. Friday!"

She pulled away from him. "I wish I could make you understand."

"Maybe I do."

He drew her back into his arms. "I've waited a long time."

That touched Judith. His kindness, his patience had been her salvation.

"I'm afraid to chance losing you, Judith. I couldn't now, after all we've been through. Promise me, Judith. I won't press you too much."

Judith was glad to be in Michael's arms. But all she would say was, "You mean more to me than anybody else in the world."

"That's all the answer I expect—now. Kiss me, Judith."

x x x

That dinner did not pass unnoticed as Hugh Lanning had warned. In two afternoon papers the following day, there was a front-page story with "art" on an inside page. Cafe crowd columnists elaborated once more on these modern young people who remained friends after their divorce.

When Michael met Judith that evening, he seemed excited. They went to a little French restaurant near the Penn station. They sat a long time over dinner, laughing and talking. Just before they were ready to leave, when the dining room was deserted, Dudley tossed a small box to Judith with elaborate carelessness. Judith opened it.

A glimmering ring lay in her hand. It must have been three carats, square cut and perfect.

"How can I accept it, Michael?"

"You must. It's our pledge for our new life. For it is to be a new life, isn't it, Judith?"

"Yes."

"Then it's settled."

Judith felt caught in a net. She loved Michael, but something held her back. Her eyes told him she was troubled. But his plea was moving.

"I'm asking nothing, not for a long time, Judith. Just love me. That's all I ask." He kissed the hand that now wore his ring.

Presentation

3rd. Thurlow — On Monday evening August 26, 1940, about 150 neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tweedy in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon McPherson (nee Mildred Tweedy) and presented them with a miscellaneous shower and an address.

Signed on behalf of the community by Hazel Walker, Norman Christie, Claytor Ritz, Stella Bradshaw.

On Thursday previous they were also presented with a kitchen shower by about 30 neighbors and friends at the home of Mrs. Clayton Eggleton.

On September 14th a large number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tweedy to honor their son, Pte. Arthur Tweedy, and presented him with a wrist watch, ring and Testament and an address was read and signed on behalf of the community by Frank Walker and Clayton Eggleton.

Electric lamps to be mounted on rubber floats to outline landing lanes at seaplane bases have been invented that are switched on by radio signals from approaching seaplanes.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

SWIFT-MOVING events of a drastic and as well problematical and perplexing nature are read from the lunar as well as mutual aspects. Sudden, decisive and forceful action may be looked for with many factors of defeat to be manipulated with resolution, determination and with the cooperation of involved groups—labor, political, educational or humanitarian.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves beset by a year in which some frustrating or delaying influence must be with rigorous or drastic action. There may be several fronts to combat and vanquish with determination, especially involving group action or large bodies of a political, humane, social, or even mystical nature.

A child born on this day may be steady, persistent, dependable and aspiring, although it may have subtle, compassionate and humanitarian traits outstanding. It may have several unusual talents seeking artistic expression.

GERMAN SAYS PLOT WAS ONLY 'A JOKE'

Montevideo, Uruguay, Sept. 6 (AP).—Adolfo Fuhrmann, one of the eight Germans accused of plotting the Nazi conquest of Uruguay, assumed full responsibility for the plot yesterday, but insisted it was a "joke". Fuhrmann's fellow defendants pleaded not guilty at arraignment to the charge of attempting to subvert the government and institutions.

Fuhrmann said he thought up the plan as a joke upon fellow Germans in Argentina following published reports of Nazi plans for an invasion of Patagonia, southernmost region of Argentina. The other defendants, he said, were unaware of his plot.

DAILY MAIL COMPLAINS OF TARDINESS IN DETAILS OF DAKAR

London, Sept. 26 (AP).—The Daily Mail complained today at British tardiness in announcing details of the Dakar incident. "Most of the information given to the world has come from Vichy," the newspaper said. "Once again propaganda is two jumps ahead of truth. It is a grave mistake always to handicap our case by tardy revelation of the facts."

AT THE McCARTHY

"Mutiny on the Blackhawk"

Telling a daring story and picturing a spectacular mutiny on the high seas, Universal's adventure drama "Mutiny on the Blackhawk" currently holds the screen at the McCarthy theatre.

Richard Arlen is seen as an army secret service man investigating the lawless traffic. Andy Devine has the hilarious role of a swaggering sailor whose weakness for tattooes and attractive windows gets him into trouble. Noah Beery, distinguished character star, portrays another great role in the part as the ship captain.

Romantic interest in "Mutiny on the Blackhawk," centres upon Constance Moore, vivacious screen starlett who has recently scored in a number of Universal productions, including "Ma He's Making Eyes At Me" and the feminine lead with W. C. Fields, Bergen and McCarthy in "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man."

Mamo Clark, who appeared as Clark Gable's sweetheart in "Mutiny on the Bounty," has the role of a dusky native girl who meets Arlen and Devine on a tropical island. Malo, the Eskimo actor, Thurston Hall, Richard Lane and Princess Luana noted Hawaiian dancer, are also seen in the exciting drama, which is one of the most interesting pictures of the year.

"Trouble in Sundown"

George O'Brien, favorite western star of the screen in "Trouble in Sundown," is also now playing at the McCarthy theatre.

Replete with hard-riding, adventure, and two-fisted action, the story of "Trouble in Sundown," laid in the old west, also introduces a baffling bank robbery, providing a mystery angle which makes the picture that much more exciting than previous O'Brien hits. Comedy is provided by Chill Wills, as O'Brien's comical companion, cowboy songs are provided by Ray Whitley and his cowboy song-birds and for romantic interest lovely Rosalind Keith holds the spotlight in a most capable performance. A new chapter of "Terry and the Pirates" is also presented.

"The Boys From Syracuse"

Allan Jones, Rosemary Lane, Joe Penner, Martha Raye and an excellent supporting cast of musical-comedy stars in the musical-laugh hit of the century "The Boys From Syracuse" will open next at the McCarthy theatre following the present engagement of "Mutiny on the Blackhawk" and "Trouble in Sundown" now paying.

AT THE CAPITOL

"When the Daltons Rode"

"When the Daltons Rode", Universal's saga of frontier America in the days of the celebrated Dalton gang, is now playing at the Capitol Theatre with Randolph Scott and Kay Francis heading a distinguished cast.

Based on the exciting book of the same name, the film traces the careers of the Dalton boys as ranch owners who are led into spectacular crime by the persecutions of a land company.

Double Held-up

The story reaches a climax with the historic raid on Coffeyville, Kan., in 1892, when the gang was destroyed while staging the Old West's only double bank robbery.

Miss Francis, portraying the first action role of her career, appears as the winsome telegraph operator of Coffeyville, a character based on the reel-life sweetheart of one of the Daltons. Scott plays a frontier lawyer who befriends the Daltons and helps bring the land company agents to justice.

The four Daltons are portrayed by Brian Donlevy, Broderick Crawford, Stuart Erwin and Frank Albertson, while Andy Devine has what has been described as one of his best roles as the Dalton's girl chasing-ranch hand who joins the gang in their maraudings.

Well Known Talent

Other important roles are played by George Bancroft as the rich man of the town and by Mary Gordon as the mother of the Daltons; also in the cast are Harvey Stephens, Quen Ramsey, Edgar Deering and others.

George Marshall directed "When The Daltons Rode" from a screen play by Harold Shumate.

A select list of short subjects are included with this fine western feature, The Universal News of the World, 11th Chapter of the thrilling serial "Buck Rogers", "Sue My Lawyer" a Harry Langdon comedy, "Woman is a Mystery", a funny cartoon, and "Movie Dog Stars" colored parade.

"Gold Rush Maisie"

Ann Sothern and Lee Bowman aided and abetted by Slim Summerville and Virginia Weidler, provide some of the season's most hilarious and heart-warming comedy in "Gold Rush Maisie" third in the popular series dealing with the adventures of the stranded showgirl, which is now on the Belle Theatre screen.

Miss Sothern was never in finer fettle with her wisecracks and timely homilies than in the Arizona desert setting in which this latest adventure finds her. Enroute to a cafe-singing job in a small Arizona town, her jallopy breaks down and leaves her adrift on the desert. Lee Bowman as Bill Anders, young ranch owner, comes to her rescue but withdraws his welcome when she dodges his advances. His misogymist hired hand, played by Summerville, disapprove more than ever when Maisie returns with a whole family of itinerant crop-followers who have turned gold prospectors. Virginia Weidler turns in another fine performance as the daughter of this family who insists on "adopting" Maisie. When the gold strike proves a fluke, all their troubles start anew, of course, and once again Maisie must figure out a solution.

Turning in individual gems of portrayals are Charles Judels as the unfeeling cafe owner and Wallace Reid, Jr.

"We Who Are Young"

A story as simple, straightforward and heartwarming as any to reach the screen in some time is announced as the associate feature attraction. It is "We Who Are Young" featuring Lana Turner and John Shelton.

The new picture unfolds the story of a young couple, portrayed by Miss Turner and Shelton, who marry with high hopes for conquering a large city. It moves from the courtroom where the marriage is performed through a rapid series of climaxes which finds the couple eventually forced to go on relief.

The role of the wife, Margy, is a distinctly new departure for Miss Turner who up until this time has been seen in collegiate and dancing daughter roles. Her ability straight dramatic actress cannot be denied from now on. She shows rare sympathy and understanding for the character she portrays.

As the husband, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer introduces John Shelton, a personable chap whose dramatic abilities have also been more or less untried. Shelton, too, gives an excellent account of himslef in a difficult role and will probably be given more important assignments on the strength of his performance.

"Danger Spots in the Carribean" is the title of the new issue of March of Time to be exhibited on the same program.

Ann Sothern is back again as Maisie, the stranded showgirl, in "Gold Rush Maisie," now on the Belle screen with Lee Bowman, Slim Summerville and Virginia Weidler in leading roles.

JAPAN SIGNS MILITARY PACT WITH AXIS

Nazi Raiders Sweep Over England but Only Few Penetrate Defences

Kiel Harbor and Ports Battered by R.A.F.

Pact is Intended To Forestall U.S. Fascists Declare

Powers Agree to Collaborate to Create New Orders in Europe and Asia

Berlin, Sept. 27—(AP)—Germany, Italy and Japan signed today a 10-year military and economic pact in which they agreed to collaborate in their efforts to create new orders in Europe and Asia.

The pact, effective immediately, has six articles.

The three powers agreed, in the "creation of a new order in Europe and the greater Asiatic realm," that they would support each other mutually with all economic and military means should they be attacked by any power not at present a belligerent in the European or Far Eastern conflicts.

(Fascists in Rome declared the pact was intended to forestall United States entry into the second Great War.)

Germany and Italy agreed that Japan would be recognized by them as the leader in the creation of a new order in Asia. Japan, in turn, recognized Italy and Germany as the leaders in the creation of a new order in Europe.

The agreement set forth specifically that in no way was the individual relationship between any of the contracting parties and Soviet Russia to be affected.

Alliance Does Not Mean Japan Will Enter War, Says Spokesman

Tokyo, Sept. 27—(AP)— Japan's new alliance with Germany and Italy does not mean Japan is going to enter the war, the foreign office spokesman, Yakichiro Suma, said today.

He said Japan has not abandoned hope of composing her differences with the United States.

Suma declined to make any comment on the fifth article of the pact which says it has no bearing on existing commitments of the signatories with the Soviet Union.

"We are not going to participate in the European war. We are not going to attack any country," Suma said, adding the purpose of the pact was to solidify the community of interests of the signatories.

The signing of the pact came at a time when Japanese sources asserted that the United States, having embargoed scrap metal shipments to Japan, definitely had allied herself with Britain and China.

Japanese Paper's View

A clash between Japan and the United States "now seems inevitable," said the influential newspaper Asahi.

Suma said such words as "attacked" and others used in the summary were more closely defined in the actual text of the treaty, which might be published in the future.

Asked directly whether the treaty would be applied to Soviet Russia if she attacked any contracting party, Suma replied, "the treaty neither is delimited to any one country nor does it except any one country."

He said the article regarding the Soviet Union is "clear as it stands."

Tokyo, Sept. 27 (AP)—Yakichiro Suma, spokesman for the Japanese Foreign Office, said the major purpose of today's Berlin treaty is "to end these disastrous wars."

Poor People Show Appreciation to RAF

London, Sept. 27 (CP)—There are many instances on record of the sacrifices that have been made by poor people to mark appreciation of the work done by the Royal Air Force. A typical letter received by the Commander of a station of medium bombers came from "just an ordinary working woman." She wrote:

"The chaps in our patrols must have brave and stout hearts to go out and tackle the enemy as they do, day in and day out. I enclose just a small sum to buy the patrol baccy or cigarettes. Here's wishing them all the best of luck."

There was 10 shillings with the letter.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 27—(CP)— The weather has been mostly fair and cool in Ontario and moderately warm in the Western Provinces.

Ottawa and Upper St. Lawrence Valleys: Fresh southwest winds; fair and a little warmer today and part of Saturday, followed by scattered showers.

Lake Superior: Moderate southwest winds; fair. Saturday: Moderate westerly to northerly winds; partly cloudy with light scattered showers and becoming a little cooler.

Manitoba—Northerly winds; fair and somewhat cooler tonight and Saturday.

Saskatchewan—Fair and somewhat cooler tonight and Saturday.

Alberta: Mostly fair and somewhat cooler today and Saturday.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Sunlight! The best light is the natural light from the sun because it not only services for seeing but also has in it the elements for the preservation of health. Sunlight, however, is variable during the day and not to be had at night, so it must be supplemented by other sources of light. Inventors and engineers are seeking methods to create a light environment similar to that provided by the sun outdoors. This not only means an artificial light similar to that of the sun for use indoors, but also a glass for windows which does not filter out those rays of the sun that have biological importance. For some of its chemical reactions the body depends upon ultraviolet light, which can not come through ordinary glass.

JAPANESE POUR INTO HAIPHONG DESPITE PROTEST

French Troops Suffer Heavy Losses in Fighting Near Langson

(By C. Yates McDaniel)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Haiphong, French Indo-China, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Additional Japanese troops with full equipment and supplies for a long stay poured into Haiphong in a continuing stream today and six Japanese planes flew low over Hanoi, drawing no anti-aircraft fire but evoking a strong French protest.

The soldiers disembarking today were the followup for 2000 Japanese admitted yesterday under a French-Japanese agreement in which Japan has gained new bases for operations against the Chinese forces of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek.

The French Colonial administration ordered a protest to Tokyo as a result of the low altitude flight of the warplanes over Hanoi, Indo-China's capital.

Leader Leaves Country

Meanwhile, high quarters said that Mj.-Gen. Issaku Nishihara, head of the Japanese Mission in the negotiations for Japanese entry, had left French Colonial waters with Japanese naval units last night. Departure of the warships left only Japanese army transports.

Indo-China authorities had asked Tokyo to send a plenipotentiary to take Nishihara's place with power to command all Japanese forces, including the South China armies, units of which crossed the Indo-China border from the north last Sunday night. The French said this was a violation of the agreement, which provided only for entry at the coast.

French officials said that all military operations had ceased in Northern Indo-China after the French withdrawal from Langson, in the border region.

French Suffer Losses

The French troops, having suffered considerable loss in the fighting for Langson before a truce was effected, faced the Japanese across a river just south of the town.

It was said that the Langson clash in no way affected execution of the Hanoi convention of Sept. 22 in which details of the Vichy-Tokyo accord were worked out permitting peaceful Japanese entry.

Under the convention the Japanese will land 6,000 men to garrison Haiphong and "protect" three air bases, including the Hanoi Civil Airport.

ADMIRAL MAKES STATEMENT

London, Sept. 27 (CP)—Rear-Admiral Alfred Thayer Mahan's statement that in "Anglo-American naval supremacy" lies "the greatest hope of peace" was recalled by Rear-Admiral R. L. Ghormley, United States naval observer, in a speech here today.

Beaverbrook Praises Fine Work Of Defiant Squadrons in Battle

By EDWIN STOUT
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 27 (AP)—New secret devices with which to combat night raiders were reported today in use in the London area which last night had one of the lightest night raids in the three weeks since the air "blitz" began.

The devices were said to have been developed by British scientists and observers declared there was a chance that, used together, two of the devices might make night bombing as hazardous as raiding by day.

There was no immediate indication whether the new weapons were responsible for the softening of the German blows on the capital, and there were no intimations of their nature.

In a gradual lifting of the curtain of censorship, however, British correspondents were permitted to comment upon these new air-raid noises heard by Londoners in the last few nights:—

1. A heavy single explosion disintegrating into staccato cracks high up in the heavens.
2. A flat roar which seems to strike a ceiling several miles up and bump its way clamorously along the top of the sky.
3. A muffled rattling like a "carpet slipper machine-gun."

New Type of Weapons

"These queer noises to which Londoners have listened with increasing interest and speculation are in fact caused by new types of weapons, or by well tried weapons adapted to new uses," said one observer.

He mentioned "another new weapon which makes very little noise except an odd rustle like the froufrou of a taffeta gown."

Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production, called on the Government director of one British aircraft factory, meanwhile, to "give us more defiants."

Defiants, two-seater planes with a revolving gun turret, are the only fighters which can fire in all directions.

"The splendid work of defiant squadrons in battle makes the manufacture of this aircraft a task of paramount importance in the defence of our country," Lord Beaverbrook said.

Two Nazi Vessels Are Presumed Hit, Bombs Blast Highway

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 27 (CP).—Kiel harbor and shipyards got a battering from Royal Air Force bombers in the course of widespread raids over Germany Thursday night, the Air Ministry News Service announced today.

In amplification of an official communique, the news service said a "large vessel lying at anchor is believed to have received a direct hit" at Kiel.

One pilot reported leaving a "colossal red and orange fire" on the east side of the harbor basin. A large fire also was started on the west side and another vessel was presumed hit, the news service said.

Despite low clouds hampering observation, "bombs were seen to straddle the new aqueduct and a salvo of high explosives fell beside the lock gates" of the Dortmund-Ems canal.

Direct hits on an automobile highway seven miles west of Andermunde were plainly seen. Fires visible from 20 miles were started at Bremen.

"The invasion ports came in for their regular nightly hammering," the news service added, the heaviest attack being against Le Havre. The first pilot was unable to observe the results of his bombing due to clouds and the glare of search lights. Subsequent raiders saw fires.

"There was a particularly large blaze at the eastern end of the railway quay. Sticks of heavy bombs fell across the entrance to one basin and the entrance to a smaller dock adjoining. At the end of the attack one fire was visible more than 40 miles away."

46 Persons Off Refugee Ship, City of Benares, Rescued After Eight Days of Peril in Lifeboat

London, Sept. 27 —(CP)— Back in England today are 46 persons—including six shivering schoolboys—who spent eight days of peril and hardship in a storm-buffeted lifeboat after the City of Benares went to the bottom 600 miles out in the Atlantic.

Rescued through the combined work of two coastal command flying boats and a warship, the survivors were landed at a British port late last night.

"We lost all count of time after the first two or three days," said Mary Cornish, 41-year-old school teacher-escort and only woman in the lifeboat.

"But the children were admirable. They passed the time singing and telling stories. They were quite cheerful and to help them along we had a serial—my own version of Bulldog Drummond. Never at any time did the boys complain."

Two hundred and forty-eight of those aboard the Canadian-bound City of Benares, 81 of them evacuee children, still are missing and probably are dead. The vessel went down Sept. 17.

Thirteen - year - old Kenneth Sparks was the first to see the Sunderland flying boat which sighted the 46 floating in the storm-tossed waters.

"I shouted 'Look! An airplane,'" Kenneth said. "Everybody looked up and was glad. We started praying. All us children did. We prayed and prayed that the plane would come near enough to see us. The plane circled us. One seaman signalled, and the plane signalled back with a light."

Plane Calls Warship

The Sunderland, an Australian Air Force plane, just had been relieved from convoy escort duty when it found the lifeboat. The pilot flew back to the convoy and asked another Sunderland to take over the rescue because he was running short of gasoline. The second flying boat sped to the scene, dropped food by parachute and flew away to bring back a rescuing warship.

Bohdan Nagorski, 49, a Polish shipping millionaire, one of the rescued, said they were almost out of food and absolutely without water when the flying boat appeared over their lifeboat, which held 32 Lascars, five white crew members and two escorts, in addition to the boys and Nagorski.

"The children behaved magnificently," he said. "Heavy seas burst over us time and again, and it took all of our time to save the children from being carried overboard."

Miss Cornish said the excitement was "terrific" when young Sparks first spotted the flying boat.

"I think we all thought we'd be able simply to swarm up the sides of the rescuing ship. What actually happened was that we had to be

HON. PAUL LEDUC NAMED CLERK OF SUPREME COURT

Liberal Member for East Ottawa and Minister of Mines for Ontario Will Resign

BORN IN MONTREAL

Ottawa, Sept. 27 (CP)—Justice Minister Lapointe today announced the appointment of Hon. Paul Leduc, Ontario Minister of Mines, as Clerk of the Supreme Court of Canada, succeeding J. F. Smellie who is retiring on superannuation.

Mr. Leduc, 51, entered the political field in 1934 when he was elected Liberal member of the Ontario Legislature for East Ottawa. He was immediately sworn into the Cabinet of Premier Hepburn as Minister of Mines and has held that portfolio ever since.

Born in Montreal

Born in Montreal, Jan. 28, 1889, Marie Charles Denis Paul Leduc was educated at St. Mary's College, the Quebec Seminary and Laval University, Quebec, receiving his law degree from the latter in 1911.

He read law with the late Armand Lavergne, K.C., and with Bedard and Company, Quebec, and was admitted to the Ontario Bar in 1916, opening practice in Ottawa where he made his home.

He is married to Gabrielle, daughter of the late Senator N. A.

59 Alien Employees Of Bata Co. in States Must Leave Country

Washington, Sept. 27 (AP)—Attorney-General Robert Jackson announced today that he had refused to renew visitors' permits for 59 alien officers and employees of the Bata Shoe Company of Belcamp, Md.

Jackson said at a press conference that all must leave the United States upon expiration of their permits.

The Bata workers were admitted about a year ago under a blanket permit which allowed up to 100 Czecho-Slovakians to be admitted as "instructors" for Americans to be employed in the new plant in Maryland. Of those who came in, 47 workmen sought renewal of the year's permit, while 31 did not ask for extensions and apparently intended to leave. Twelve officers who were admitted under individual permits also had asked extensions.

Jackson said that the deportations had been ordered because all the employees entered the country "under misrepresentation" of the character of the work which they were to do and the length of their employment.

Jackson said a careful investigation of the Belcamp plant had not disclosed any processes different from those with which American workmen were familiar, with one minor exception, and that "apparently the chief characteristics of the Bata methods are child labor, low wages and an apprenticeship system which is completely foreign to the American system."

BLEW HITLER'S BARGES, BOATS INTO SPLINTERS

P-O Lewis Who is Awarded D.F.C. Figured in Daring Battle at Antwerp

100 HOLES IN PLANE

Scores of Hitler Craft Destroyed as Lewis and His Mates Dive-Bombed and Dropped Explosives

By SAM ROBERTSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 27 (CP Cable)—Pilot Officer W. J. Lewis of Welcome, Ont., has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for carrying out an attack which was as successful as it was daring against the barges and power boats concentrated at Antwerp for Hitler's invasion hordes.

As a result the slender young Ontario aviator's bullseye bombing in the face of anti-aircraft fire that riddled his great plane with 100 holes, the German invasion armada was decreased by scores of craft.

(Lewis' parents in Welcome were advised several days ago by telegram that the D.F.C. would be awarded their son.)

The 22-year-old Lewis and a number of his squadron mates drove their planes against Antwerp's defences to reach the basin near the centre of the city where giant motorboats were moored. When flush over the target the bombers were power-dived to 2,000 feet and sticks of high explosives plopped among the boats.

Great Showers of Splinters

"Our explosions lifted great showers of splinters up at us," The Canadian Press was informed by the flyers.

Anti-aircraft fire from the ground was "hotter than all hell," but "Mike," as he is called, and the others maintained the dangerously low altitude for more than four miles. Their bombs whistled a "beautiful tone of destruction" among the boats jam-packed in the basin and along the Schelde Channel leading into the city.

When Mike got back to his station there was scarcely a square foot of his plane that did not show puncture from an anti-aircraft shell fragment but neither he nor the men of his crew were scratched. One shell punctured a gas tank and another damaged one of the motors.

Mike guesses that "My luck was super-super that night."

May Revive Claims

Rome, Sept. 27 —(AP)— The Albanian newspaper Tomori reported today the "barbarous" killing of three Albanians in Greece, including the niece of the so-called Albanian "patriot" Daut Hoggia allegedly slain earlier in Greece. The new alleged "crimes" threaten to revive Italian claims against Greece, which were brought to the fore a month ago by the reported slaying of Hoggia.

Repeated Raids on Berlin Indicate British Less Worried Over Invasion

London, Sept. 17 (CP).—Evidence that the British high command considers the threatened German invasion of England "off" indefinitely was seen by authoritative military quarters today in longer and more frequent — perhaps even nightly — British raids on Berlin.

The Royal Air Force, which raided Berlin four successive nights this week but not last night, has not announced the new policy officially, but it has been put down as a "certainty" by some sources.

These quarters point out the R.A.F. is not neglecting the "invasion ports" across the channel, but the fact the air force feels it can deviate from a policy of concentrating almost exclusively on the German-held channel coast is taken as a sign of "growing confidence"

Military informants said the R.A.F. must feel it has battered the German barge concentrations sufficiently to allay the worry the concentrations caused a few weeks ago.

Two other factors also are seen as permitting the switch of targets to Berlin, the rapid approach of bad weather and the reported arrival on the fighting line of squadrons of new and powerful British bombers.

Sea-sickness Not Discounted.

Authoritative military quarters also do not discount seasickness as another potent defensive weapon against invasion.

"We know it sounds silly, but if you have ever been seasick on one of those channel crossings yourself, you know how much you would feel like fighting at the end of the voyage," they say.

The diversion of Britain's bombing strength to Berlin is meeting with ardent approval of the large section of the military which has felt for some time it was being over-employed on the "invasion ports".

Military sources in London, however, admit that Britain has not found the answer yet to Germany's night bombing attacks despite intensive research. They also recognize that night bombing can become an even greater "nuisance" with the lengthening of the nights this winter.

"But Germany has not found the solution either," they point out.

98 Nazi Planes Shot Down by RAF In Furious Defence

Three Assaults Hurled Back, the Attacks Being the Heaviest of War

(By Harold Fair)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 27.—(CP Cable)—Germany sent hundreds of airplanes in a massed assault against Britain today. By late in the afternoon at least 98 of the raiders had been shot down by the Royal Air Force which staged a furious defence.

Attack and defence alike were on a scale rarely achieved in the long-drawn battle of Britain.

At least three assaults on London were hurled back although a few German planes penetrated the defences and dropped bombs in some areas.

Informed sources said 120 raiders were involved in the first foray but that only a few eluded the death-dealing fighters and then had to face the roaring anti-aircraft barrage. From an apartment window I saw a formation of 15 big black planes streaking westward with puffs of ack-ack fire appearing between them.

A bomb fell in south London, causing many casualties, some fatal. Fleeing from the fighters, the raiders also dropped bombs on a southwestern district.

The Nazi struck at the capital after the 20th successive night-long raid. There was an hour's all-clear between the attacks.

Everybody Except Good Single Men Ready to Enlist Says U. S. Sergeant

Kansas City, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Lt.-Col. Fred M. Logan, Army Recruiting Officer, received the following report from a harassed recruiting sergeant at a Missouri branch office: "Big rush this week of draft dodgers, floaters, highbrows wanting Air Corps only; flying cadets with eighth grade education; important citizens wanting information; preachers, doctors, lawyers, dentists, reserve officers; CCC plugs with administrative discharges; married men with and without kids; in fact, everything except good single men wanting enlistment in the line of the army".

ADJOURNED ONE WEEK

Kitchener, Ont., Sept. 27 (CP).—Trial of Mrs. Mary Smellovich and Lambro Gakeff, charged under the Defence of Canada Regulations, was adjourned one week at the request of Crown Attorney W. P. Clement today. It is alleged they instructed their children not to sing the National Anthem or salute the flag at school.

Text of Treaty

The governments of Germany, Italy and Japan, considering it as a condition precedent of any lasting peace that all nations of the world be given each its own proper place, have decided to stand by and cooperate with one another in regard to their efforts in greater East Asia and regions of Europe respectively wherein it is their prime purpose to establish and maintain a new order of things calculated to promote the mutual prosperity and welfare of the peoples concerned.

Furthermore, it is the desire of the three governments to extend cooperation to such nations in other spheres of the world as may be inclined to put forth endeavors along lines similar to their own, in order that their ultimate aspirations for world peace may thus be realised.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

60 P.C. OF TOMATO CROP DAMAGED

Approximately sixty percent loss in the tomato crop in districts north of the Bay of Quinte is the estimate of the damage done by Wednesday night's frost according to field men from local canning factories who have made an extensive survey of the damages. In Prince Edward County, the area around Wellington and Bloomfield was especially hard hit with the loss estimated at fifty percent. Regions immediately surrounding the bay, however, were not touched by the frost they said.

Tomato patches with heavy vines afforded considerable protection, it was stated, and in such cases the damage was not nearly so extensive. While it might still be possible to use some of the frozen tomatoes for some purpose, the pack would necessarily be of inferior quality and it was doubtful that salvaging the affected crop in this way would prove profitable, stated factory officials.

CANADA GEESE STARTING TREK

Warned by cold nights and chilly winds that autumn weather is in the offing, the Canada goose has once more started its annual trek southward. Early Friday morning Mr. Herb Scallon of Point Anne saw a flock of fourteen geese flying over that village and heading directly into the south. Although the geese were flying fairly high, the noise of their honking as they passed over was easily heard by persons on the ground.

FROST IS HEAVY NEAR MILLBRIDGE

Thursday night frosts put an effective quietus on any plant life that survived former activities of Jack Frost in the regions north of Millbridge, according to Provincial Police Constable Stanley Palmateer, Bancroft. The ground was frozen hard in spots while ice was seen fringing shores of lakes and small streams.

LOCAL MEMBERS 21ST. BATT. WILL GO TO TORONTO REUNION

Many local members of the famous Fighting Twenty-First Battalion got out their berets, medals and armbands today in preparation for the 22nd annual reunion of the unit which takes place in Toronto on Saturday. It is expected that large delegations from all parts of Ontario including Belleville, Kingston, Peterborough and Trenton will attend the function which annually attracts members from all parts of Canada as well as the United States.

FEMALE SPANIEL IN CITY POUND

Thomas Thorne, custodian of the city dog pound, found a cream-colored female Spaniel dog wandering at large in the east hill sector of the city. The canine is being held for possible identification and recovery, but if not claimed until 48 hours the animal will be destroyed.

NOTED ENGLISH BAND TO PLAY COMPOSITION

Mr. Reg Hinchey's arrangement of the popular British battle-song "There'll Always be an England", which found favor at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, caught the ear of the Director of Kneller Hall, London, England, while listening to an overseas broadcast recently, with the result that the arrangement will be played by the Grenadier Guards or Coldstream Guards Band at their regular concerts near Buckingham Palace.

The arrangement, heard in Toronto by Mr. Goldman, conductor of Goldman's Band, famous New York musical organization, was taken by him to Gotham and broadcast overseas. It was during this broadcast that the director of the famous London school of military bands heard the arrangement.

Mr. Hinchey's latest composition, "The Argyll Light Infantry," a score dedicated to the officers and men of Belleville's militia regiment, has been completed and will receive its premiere on Oct. 7th, when it will be played over station CBL by the Toronto Symphony Band.

WOLVES REPORTED MORE PLENTIFUL

Thought to be steadily increasing by virtue of their trailing game animals southward, wolves are reported to be fairly plentiful in the northern sections of the county, according to a veteran Tweed hunter yesterday. The animals have been seen in some parts of the district, and while no reports thus far have come in regarding depredations on cattle and sheep, it is believed the animals will take their toll of deer.

Substantiating this report is a story from Peterborough which states that an American tourist and his guide spotted a pack of seven wolves roaming the shore of Stoney Lake a few days ago. The men were in a boat and there was no mistaking the bushy tails and characteristic trot of the marauders.

SHORT CIRCUIT BELIEVED CAUSE

Believed to have started as the result of a short circuit in the electric wiring, a pump house at the Montrose Dairy Farms, Trent Road, was completely destroyed by fire on Thursday night. The pump house was situated on the bay shore, directly opposite the buildings proper and was used to pump water to barns and stables on the north side of the road. The fire was not discovered until the small frame building was a mass of flames and it was impossible to save the pumping equipment which was housed in the building.

OBITUARY

SINE BLAKELY
(Picton)

Picton, Sept. 27—One of the leading citizens of Picton in the person of Sine Blakely passed away yesterday. He was a former Warden of Prince Edward County and prominent in public life. He served ten years on Athol and Picton council and was elected Warden of Prince Edward in 1935. He had been ill only a short time.

Mr. Blakely was born in Athol township and during his residence at Cherry Valley owned and operated the cheese factory there. Coming to Picton, he purchased and operated Picton Creamery for a quarter of a century, retiring a few years ago.

He was a member of the United Church and served on the Official Board as well as treasurer for several years past. One of the oldest members of Prince Edward Lodge, A.F. and A.M. he received the 55 year membership jewel. He was a former president of the Kiwanis Club, a member of the county hospital board and this year retired as chairman of the County Children's Air Society but remained a member of the Board. He was very popular with persons in all walks of life and his death is deeply regretted.

His wife died several years ago. Surviving are his daughter, Mrs. Philip Browne of Picton.

JOSEPH VINCELLI

After an illness of one week's duration Joseph Vincelli passed away in the Belleville General Hospital on Thursday afternoon, Sept. 26th.

The deceased, who was 77 years of age, was born in Italy. For some years he resided in Montreal and of late he made his home with his daughter, Mrs. P. Ferraro, 151 Station Street, Belleville. In religion he was a member of St. Michael's Church and well respected.

Surviving him are his wife, two daughters and one son, all residing in Montreal, and another daughter, Mrs. P. Ferraro, Belleville.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

LATE MRS. EARL OUTWATER
(Plainfield)

The funeral of Mrs. Earl Outwater took place Thursday afternoon, Sept. 26th, from the family residence in Plainfield to the United Church in that village where an impressive service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. G. T. McKenzie.

Interment was made in Victoria cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. James Hamilton, Donald Hall, John Colden, Blake Collins, Clarence Hall and Erle Denyes.

INFANTS MENZIE
(Trenton)

The three-weeks-old twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Menzie, Trenton, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Thursday, September 26th.

MRS. EMILY JANE RAPSON
(Avondale)

One of Avondale's most highly respected residents passed away at her home early this Friday morning, in the person of Mrs. Emily Jane Rapson. The deceased who was in her 79th year, had been ill for a period of six months.

Born in England, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Martin, Mrs. Rapson had lived in this locality for the past 53 years. Her husband, the late Mr. Alexander Rapson predeceased her some years ago.

She was a member of Bridge Street United Church, and enjoyed the respect and esteem of a large circle of friends.

Left to mourn her passing are one son John, at home; two brothers, Albert Martin, Oswego and Richard Martin, Chicago; and two sisters, Mrs. Walter Noyes, Oswego and Mrs. Eva Smith, Long Branch, California.

The funeral notice appears elsewhere in this edition.

Police Blotter

City police were called to a Coleman Street residence early today where the man of the house was causing a disturbance. He was removed from his home and lodged in the police cells charged with intoxication.

Detective Fred Isard found the mechanical parts of a radio yesterday after it had been reported missing from a local radio shop. The mechanical portion of the radio had been removed from the premises by a local collector of old papers, who told the officer he thought the parts were scrap. The finding of the radio parts relieved the dealer of a rather embarrassing position, as the machine was the property of a customer.

Northern Visitor Surprised by Lack Of Towels on Walls

He comes from the northern boundary of Hastings County, and is disgusted with city life after his first visit here. He wants to get back as soon as he can where "everything is comfortable." It all happened when he was taken into a Front Street Chinese restaurant by a friend to have a meal. Speaking of his experience afterwards, he confided to a close friend, that "these city places had better get wise to themselves."

Asked why, he said, "Well, I was taken into some place where a Chinaman was working, and went to the lavatory to wash my hands. And do you know," he added, "these city places are too durn far behind the times, they don't hang towels on the walls. I had to reach in a tin box and dry my hands on pieces of paper."

Give Generous Support to I.O.D.E. Who Hold Tag Day Saturday

Women's organizations of the city are doing a heroic work in providing comforts, necessities and other vital war work for Canada's fighting forces overseas and at home. As in other wars, the women of the country have come to the fore in their desire to serve, and the ladies of Belleville have taken second place to none in this respect.

In the forefront of women's organizations in this respect is the Argyll Chapter, Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire. To-date these women have been doing their share towards helping Canada and the Empire win the war. But they cannot do it alone. Finances are urgently needed if the work is to be carried on.

Tomorrow (Saturday) they are holding their annual tag day to raise funds to carry on the work that has been going on at a magnificent pace. They realize the drain on the public purse is heavy in these days, but feel sure that the residents of Belleville and district count no cost too great to bring the necessary comforts and supplies to the boys in khaki, blue, and grey. They are appealing to an ever-generous Belleville public to support them in a cause that is as humanitarian as it is worthy.

Saturday, the tag-sellers will be at every corner. Buy a tag, and help bring comforts to the boys—and the knowledge to the enemy that Canada's all walks of life are behind her determination to win the war.

Field Day

Sweet music as played by Alan Argue on the drums, ably assisted by the other members of B.C.I.V.S. band, started Field Day off with a bang. The sun shone, the wind blew, the band played, and events proved it to be the best Field Day ever. Herb Correll and Les Pickering rather shocked the girls as they entered the grounds with an extra special strip-tease, and the events started with Bart Warren bellowing through the megaphone that a fifty-yard heat was on. Kay Martin set a stamp of approval on the meet by attending, complete with movie-camera and fur coat, while Mary Alice Rogers conducted a knitting and gossiping circle in red socks. The band went to town with swing, jazz and classics. The girls clad in blue uniforms if participating, or in slacks and school colors if not, presented a festival and on-holiday appearance, emphasized by strains of "Strive On To Victory", our school song. Drum Major Argue chased half-milers around the track, followed by his devoted musicians(?) while the crowd shifted and twisted like a snake in the grip of an invisible enemy. Miss Hitchon proved that she's keeping up with the times by driving in with a load and the adorable Teko.

In the afternoon rain not only threatened but came down in torrents but despite this fact events were carried through. The teachers marched proudly forth in their best attire. (Perhaps they were trying to make a good impression on the pupils in order to conteract that made by years of daily encounters.)

Trying to act very nonchalant in their best clothes several of the feminine-teachers posed against bustling non-activity for photos. The band played, during the morning "There's be a hot time in the old town tonight," which was more of a promise than a threat. The field was crowded with cars and cycles, including the red jalopy of Jack Carefoot. The afternoon got off to a cool and cloudy start threatening rain, and promising plenty of action—if only to keep warm. The day on the whole was marked by valiant attempts and brilliant victories. Mr. MacLaurin, wrapped to the ears in an overcoat vied with Don Cherry who was clad in a sheep-skin hat. The band managed to keep warm by playing most of the afternoon. One of the most amusing sights during the afternoon was the attempt of various members of the athletic clique to bawl into the megaphone to attract the attention of the various entries. One of the serious events occurred when Meriam Drew received a severe cut just below her right eye. After having several stitches put in she was able to return in the afternoon.

On the campus each day we see a group of young robust students who will constitute our school Rugby team.

This team we will cheer to victory, we hope, during home games with Albert College and Cobourg Collegiate. So come on, fellow students and encourage our team with the old school spirit, that same school spirit with which they are tackling the job of helping the Red Cross Society.

This evening our gym will be packed with students for our tea dance, the proceeds of which will start our Rugby team on the road to victory.

Our War Savings Stamps, Bonds, etc., has reached the grand total of $800.00 on Monday last.

Come on, B.C.I.V.S., the boys at the front need equipment. Let's see that they get it. Buy War Savings Stamps.

Bomb Splinters From Battle of Britain

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Farmer William Brown grows plums in England's west country and has spent a small fortune looking for water on his land.

One stout Canadian newspaperman's days are numbered if he doesn't stop that snoring. He repeatedly has driven his neighbors to quieter parts of the shelter, the first time after spending an hour "shooshing" a couple of talkative females across the narrow shelter floor from him.

The theatre manager was getting tired walking on the stage and telling the London audience an air raid was in progress. When he stepped on the stage for the fourth time he said, "You know why I'm here—that damn fool is over us again."

London workers trekking to their offices afoot through a congested West-End street looked weary and tired after several sleepless blitzkrieg nights. But they smiled when they saw a theatre billboard, announcing Shakespeare's "All's well that ends well"—even though the play has been taken off.

You can't beat the Cockney spirit. The proprietor of a small London cafe whose gas supply was interrupted by bombs served meals on schedule, but they were cooked on a coke-pail stove on the sidewalk.

Latest in Spitfire funds: Customers of Mrs. Florence Butler, a London barkeeper, have an "extra one for the road" at closing time and she sets aside the takings for her own fighter fund —already up to more than £51. ($227.)

Magistrate at Tottenham: Did you tell your wife the time you would be home?

Man: No, that's a mistake many men make nowadays. I always say, "expect me when you see me."

Nearly 4,000 Dorothys in Great Britain and overseas have contributed £2,500 ($11,125) to the Dorothy Spitfire Fund. The Dorothys aim to raise £5,000 to buy for the Royal Air Force a Spitfire to be called Dorothy.

Just Overheard

Ron. Herman, of the Athletic Society, recently elected, isn't back at school yet, and arrangements in that connection are still indefinite. ......Just to counteract rumors floating around, there will be an Elevator published this term, despite the probability of higher costs and of less advertising space being sold...... Plans for the two minor plays have been tossed aside for the time being, while the Green Room Club forges ahead with the big play for the year, which should, incidentally, be produced this fall. ......Students are being allowed, for the first time, to take night classes in some of the less crowded classes...... We're curious about the sounds and noises....there's a split opinion....coming from the auditorium last Wednesday, just about 4.30.

Operetta Scheduled

Mr. Maybee has made definite arrangements for the production of his operetta during the second week in February. "Bulbul", as it is called, will 'star' Bernice Saunders, in the title role; Willis Jackson as the Prince; Thomas Hyland as King Iamit: Other soloists include Mary Redfern as Lilla; Marie Duesberry as Ida; Don Wannamaker as Alian; David Payne as Dosay, and Carn Bray as Justso. As will be seen by some of the titles, the operetta is full of puns. There will be a large chorus.

POLICE COURT

Failing to produce a bond, under which she was placed yesterday and ordered to keep the peace, Florence Bowers, Thurlow, re-appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., today and was committed to the Women's Reformatory for a period of six months' determinate, with a further indeterminate term of three months. The Bowers woman pleaded guilty to a charge of threatening her parents. She was bound over to keep the peace and a bond to assure the sentence ordered. Today the accused appeared and informed the court she was unable to raise the necessary bond.

Two inebriates appeared facing second offence charges of intoxication, contrary to the L.C.A. The conventional $50.00 fine, or in default 30 days in the common jail, were imposed in each case. "These cases of repeaters are going to be more severely dealt with for second offence infractions where drunkenness is concerned", warned Chief Kidd today. Lancelot Bell, who gave no home address changed his plea from innocent to guilty, when charged with a first offence of intoxication. A fourteen day jail term followed in default of the payment of the assessed fine.

A suspended sentence was given a member of the Air Force who appeared for sentence after pleading guilty to a charge of joy riding. "This man lost a promotion through this episode and perhaps that is punishment enough", suggested Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson. His Worship agreed as he assessed costs, amounting to $13 upon the accused.

THE CIVILIAN IN THIS WAR

In no war in history have civilians been so prominent in playing the part of heroes and heroines as in these days. When Nazi raiders bombard the cottages of workers and the mansions of the wealthier, these people of all ranks carry on. The necessary services in the hands of civilians are being maintained through the courage and staying power of these people with the aid of course of the military, naval and air arms of the defence service. Countless deeds of bravery and heroism are daily being performed and are very important links in the chain which will lead to British victory.

With the institution of two new decorations of honor for conspicuous bravery, the George Cross which is to rank next to the Victoria Cross (which is awarded for conspicuous gallantry "in the presence of the enemy") and the George Medal, which His Majesty announced last week, there is the proof of the changed nature of war which affects civilian as well as soldier, sailor, and airman. The days of old of course called for heroism of the non-combatant persons, particularly in beleaguered cities, but not to such an extent as today when the whole complex life of a nation must be preserved in all its details for its smooth operation in spite of war. It therefore calls for civilian service and in this service there are many heroes and heroines as His Majesty said in his message broadcast to the Empire.

These awards of the George Cross and the George Medal will be treasured beyond price as evidences of the great spirit of people in these trying days when the British peoples will save democracy.

WHAT WORLD THINKS OF NAZI PROPAGANDA

A scathing analysis of the Nazi appears in the New York Times which shows the warped nature of the mind and the impossible logic of the German propaganda. The writer says "The Nazi position is that if there is to be frightfulness in this war they will furnish it and that while it is a fine and dandy thing for Nazi aviators to kill or wound thousands of British civilians, it is unsportsmanlike for British aviators to drop bombs anywhere in Germany. So they have been threatening to 'anihilate' the whole British Empire."

Then says the Times, "Having uttered this threat, they turn a shocked humanitarian countenance towards a neutral world as they reply to the accusation that a German submarine sank the vessel, now identified as the City of Benares, which was carrying ninety children and more than three hundred civilian refugees to Canada. They declare, first, that no German submarine sank any passenger ship last week; second, that the City of Benares had aboard members of the 'plutocratic class' some 'propagandists' and a quantity of gold; third, that German submarine commanders have orders not to attack unarmed passenger ships without warning; fourth, that Prime Minister Churchill has announced that all British merchant ships are armed, so that the City of Benares was therefore fair game. That is to say, the Germans did not sink the City of Benares, but on the other hand, they did sink it and were justified in doing it.".

Then the Times goes on to indicate the folly and feeble-mindedness of the Nazi attitude and propaganda.

"The point of this episode is the clumsiness of the Nazi explanations. Berlin is apparently so infatuated with its success in lying to its own people that it forgets that public opinion outside of Greater Germany is not in the same mental stupor. It therefore permits its newspapers to speak of the drowning of 83 children and 210 civilian adults as a 'tear jerker' and allows American correspondents to cable that happy phrase home. There is no reason for doing this other than the apparent belief that it will make friends for the Nazi cause in the United States. The brutality of these attitudes surprises no one. It is their feeble-mindedness that is startling."

THAT TOUCH OF AUTUMN

The cold nip on Thursday morning when a blighting frost hit vegetables and plants and made humans hurry along is just a reminder of the winter which it is hoped is far off yet.

The weather can always be trusted to cause a surprise for it has a way of working its own will in relentless events.

But even a Canadian frost which "is on the 'punkin'" is something characteristic of this country which possesses one of the healthiest climates in world. It puts new vim into the human body to resist the chill without. It puts human and material resources to work.

Such a frost as Thursday morning's hints at days of beauty through the next two months and more. This is the first touch of autumn and usually autumn is one of the loveliest times of the year. There is yet much work to be done outside in the fields, there are harvest festival gatherings to be had, there is thanksgiving, there is the beauty of the changing panorama of nature, especially in the skies and in the colorings of the leaves until these fall to earth to be blown by the wind, to retreat into shelters where they provide the mould for next spring's growth.

The changing year provides a variety of experience and outlook and autumn has its lessons as well as springtime and summer.

Use of Foreign Words

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

It may be that there'll always be an England, but there seems to be less concern about preserving the English language. Whenever a foreign word catches the fancy of press or public, the equivalent English term is promptly scuttled, though usually it is quite as good.

A fixture ever since the last war is "communique", a French work which means neither more or less than the English "statement." Another French word, "personnel", has got into the English dictionary but is used beyond its original meaning—a staff of servants or officials. "Squadron" was long ago borrowed from the Italians, and has graduated from the cavalry to the air force. Indeed, some French words in connection with aviation have been legitimately adopted because we had no precise equivalents.

Latin phrases seem attractive, and any sort of session not open to the public is described as "in camera", though not originally was a law term meaning in judge's chambers. A common monstrosity is "re", which is part of at Latin phrase "in re", meaning in the matter of, but which evidently passes as an abbreviation for "regarding". Worst of all is the misuse of the French "ne" or "nee". If people only would stop to think that it merely means born, and is not feminine, we should write birth notices after the Old Country fashion, and not as we do.

Most lingual vagaries, however, are attributable to the war vocabulary. A reader dropped in the other day to say that in his opinion we could manage to get along somehow without "blitzkrieg". If he is right about that, there seems no need for persistent use of "luftwaffe".

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Sept. 27th, 1920.

In the final and championship baseball match in the Industrial League which was played at the Agricultural Park between the Marsh Engineering Company and the G.T.R. Works Shop teams, the former team won, the score being 22 to 7. The winners will receive the valuable cup donated by Mr. Elliott of the Elliott Wood Working Company. H. Smith was the umpire and gave entire satisfaction. The following composed the teams: Marsh Team—Cornell, McKenna, Rushlow, Draycott, Schosner, Canning, Stork, Rogers and Knott. G.T.R. Team—F. Miles, Bunton, Reynolds, Ford, J. Miles, Morrison, Walsh, Rainbird and Hibbard. Some of the best G.T.R. players were unable to take part in the game.

At the meeting of the Belleville Cheese Board, 1170 boxes of cheese were boarded and all were sold at 25 3-16 cents.

Mr. H. Vernon Clarke of this city has entered upon a course of study at Queen's University, Kingston.

The steamer Niagara arrived in this port last evening with a party on board from Clayton, N.Y. The members of the party will spend some days here fishing for bass and maskinonge.

Pay for the members of the 15th Battalion has arrived and will be distributed on Monday evening.

The Technical Education Commissioners will visit this city on Saturday and will meet the Board of Education and representatives of the City Council and Board of Trade.

Mr. William Carnew, Barrister, is in the northern part of the county on legal business.

Dr. Dolan is spending a few days in Toronto.

Dr. W. J. McCormick and wife of Toronto are visiting the latter's parents at their home on Dunbar Street.

40 YEARS AGO

Sept. 27th, 1900.

Private Jack McNair has returned from the South African War. He is the first of the Belleville contingent to arrive home; the others will follow soon. At the station today he was met by a large crowd of citizens; the schools were closed for the day and the children were there and along the line of march in large numbers. The officers of the 15th Regiment were present in civilian dress, but "Jack's" old comrades the Sergeants were there in uniform. When the train pulled in there was much cheering and the bugle band played. A procession was formed headed by the bugle band, then came Jack McNair seated in a carriage with Col. Ponton, Chaplain M. W. Maclean, and Major Pope. The second carriage contained Mayor J. W. Johnson, Ald. Curtis Bogart, Ald. John Doyle, Ald. Clarke and Ald. Grills; in the third carriage were seated Messrs. J. Warham, Wm. Johnson, A. R. Walker, J. Taylor and J. P. Thompson. Many citizens in carriages followed, also citizens on bicycles and on foot. The line of march to the Armouries on Bridge Street was lined with people. At the Armouries speeches were made by Col. Ponton, Mayor Johnson and Chaplain Maclean, to which Jack McNair replied in a happy manner. This evening Jack McNair and the Sergeants of the 15th Battalion will be the guests at the opera house which has been decorated in his honor. Here's hoping the rest of the boys will soon be home.

Sept. 27th, 1890.

At the annual meeting of the Athletic Association at the D. & D. Institute, the following officers were elected: Hon. President, Mr. R. Mathison; President, Mr. Wm. Nurse; Vice-President, Mr. D. J. McKilloo; Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. William Douglas. The football team will get into line at once and will be open for challenges from any of the city teams.

Mr. E. Gardner has returned to Toronto where he will resume his studies at the Medical College.

Mr. H. A. Kennedy of Montreal, son of the late Hugh C. Kennedy, is visiting friends in the city.

What's the Answer

BY THE ACE CAMERAMAN

(Distributed by the King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

1.—From the following description, can you name the city in mind? It is the oldest city in the world, stands on the banks of the River Abana, and is famous for its swords.

2.—Choose the correct figure. The average yearly mileage of the American passenger auto is estimated at 8,850 miles, 10,211 miles, 13,480 miles.

3.—With the world's attention on the cathedral cities of Europe, tell which one claims the distinction of having rung the first curfew.

4.—Gigurtu and Antonescue are respectively the former premier and the new premier of what country?

5.—To what does the "Great Lakes of the South" refer?

6.—Supposedly a modern weapon of war, "screaming bombs" have been used for centuries. Can you tell which people are responsible for the noise-making missile?

7.—The common vanilla plant is well known, but can you tell to what family it belongs?

Answers

1.—Damascus, in Syria.

2.—8,850 miles.

3.—The one in Winchester, England, when all fires had to be extinguished at 8 p.m.

4.—Rumania.

5.—A series of ten great artificial lakes created by T. V. S. engineers in the Tennessee Valley.

6.—The Chinese who, as far back as 100 B.C., used whistling arrows.

7.—Orchid.

Treatment of Mental Symptoms by Electric Shock

The use of insulin and metrazol to cure mental patients of their fear, anxiety, dream state and other behavior symptoms has been very successful, but there is always some fear on the part of the patient and of his family that the convulsions brought on by insulin or metrazol will cause some physical damage and perhaps further mental harm.

What may be a more simple and harmless method is being advocated by European scientists. Instead of insulin or metrazol, the convulsions are caused by means of electrical shock. Dr. J. A. J. Barnhoorn describes his experience in thirty-five cases in which 266 attacks of convulsions were caused by this method.

Unfortunately, the real value or help given these patients by this method cannot be estimated yet, but Dr. Barnhoorn thinks that the electric shocks shows considerable progress in the use of the convulsion method in psychoses—disturbance of behavior. And if, as it is believed, it is the convulsion that gives the beneficial effects, it would appear, at first anyway, that the electric method has many advantages over the insulin or metrazol methods.

You may remember that the success of the treatment of advanced mental cases by first infecting them with malaria and then curing the malaria with quinine was first believed to be due to having the attack of malaria. It was later discovered that it was the great rise in temperature, the increased heat of the body due to the malaria, that brought about the cure so that intense heat is now used in these cases rather than attacks of malaria. Similiarly, the advantages of the electric method in treating behaviour symptoms. It is easily applied and it produces immediate loss of consciousness and complete forgetfulness. Thus the patient's objection to this form of treatment is easily overcome. In addition to this, the patient rapidly recovers and there are no unpleasant after effects. The method is apparently harmless.

Thirty-five cases is not many and the method is still under experiment but it does not seem too much to expect that it will be of great value in curing or benefitting these mental cases with behaviour symptoms.

Uncensored War Report

One of the factors confusing American opinion on the results of the warfare now raging in the skies over England and Germany has been the irreconciliable contradictions in the official British and German reports of damage inflicted and losses sustained. Now we have the impressive report of Brig. Gen. George V. Strong, a thoroughly qualified military observer sent to England for the special purpose of watching the conflict.

His conclusions are, first that Great Britain will win the war after a long struggle; second, that German bombing has not seriously damaged London or other British centers in a military sense and cannot do so for a long time; third, that the Royal Air Force is outfighting and outflying the German pilots, while its own strength is constantly increasing; and fourth, that the British have frankly reported their own losses and are only on the side of conservatism in reporting German losses. He reveals that captured Nazi raiders don't like the reception they met over England and fear the deadly odds against them, which may account for an apparent slackening of the attack on London. As to invasion, he holds that it cannot now take place without losses which would prove appalling.

In substance, these are the same conclusions reached by American correspondents cabling their own newspapers as German bombs exploded around them. Nevertheless, many here may have felt that the newsmen were reflecting an undue official optimism or submitting, to a rigid censorship. No such considerations apply to General Strong. His views are not censored, and he was granted every opportunity to form them soberly and carefully. They will be accepted here and lend added authority to reports from the harried correspondents.—N. Y. Times.

Dong Dang

The name of the border town attacked by Japanese troops when they invaded Indo-China brings into the news an apt descriptive term for the clangor, the curses and the general devilishness characterizing almost any battle of this war. But Dong Dang is not merely a good swear word; it is a signpost along a new road of conquest which Japan may regret advertising to the world in this violent fashion.

Not satisfied with taking advantage of the prostration of France to force humiliating concessions by negotiation on the French authorities at Hanoi, an aggressive army clique had to shoot its way across the frontier after the agreement was concluded. Once more it appears that an unbridled young military oligarchy — the Japanese Nazis—defied the government, this time to follow the example of Russia and Italy in striking a once powerful neighbor when he is down. But in violating the territory of Indo-China by force, while the French put up unexpected resistance, Japan not only takes a decisive step beyond the confines of China. She runs into the opposition of the United States, expressed by Secretary Hull yesterday, and applies what may turn out to be the final pressure to expedite the conclusion of an agreement between this country and Great Britain for the joint use of naval bases in the Pacific.

This development the Tokyo government is most anxious to prevent but it cannot expect Washington to be indifferent to this overt disturbance of the status quo in the Pacific, especially since the military penetration of Indo-China is a move toward undefended Siam, where Japanese influence is already strong and where air bases might easily be established for an attack on Singapore. If the Japanese are threatening American ported from British and Dutch possupplies of rubber and tin, largely imported from British and Dutch possessions in this area, in retaliation for our limitations on exports of scrap iron and oil, they are going far to clinch the pending abrogation of all their trade with this country and to hasten a combination against them which no sober patriot on the other side of the Pacific can contemplate without grave misgiving. Neither the Japanese nor the Americans can afford to underestimate our stake in the Pacific. For the United States this stake is a powerful reason for the rapid strengthening of our defenses; for Japan it should be an argument against challenging this developing strength. Dong Dang strikes a bell that may have far-reaching reverberations. —N. Y. Times.

Hewers of Wood

There are those of an earlier Canadian generation who remember the broad axe; there are those who, later comers and more effete, have never seen one nor have they witnessed the wizardry with which the artist wielders of this pioneer tool could fashion and fabricate a timber or even a building. The broad axe weighed about 12 pounds; it was true to its name in having a long, straight edge and a deep blade. The handle, unlike the ordinary chopping axe, was straight and relatively short.

The tool was, however, insignificant in comparison with its master. Anyone could pick up such an axe and swing it but only the chosen few could, by a fine co-ordination of eye and thew, make it sing a song of craftsmanship. Such were the elite of the axemen. "Hew to the line and let the chips fall where they may" was an aphorism current when the broad axe was king tool of the pioneers who went, literally, into the wilderness, to carve a farm and a home.

The most common use of the broad axe was in the hewing of square timber. Square timber was fashioned from the longest and straightest of the white pine trees which, felled, were cut into suitable lengths and placed on skids or supports of logs. A chalk line was snapped down the length of the section, the axeman mounted the round piece and began his work. The usual procedure was first to chop with an ordinary, razor-sharp axe a series of cuts through the bark and well into the outside layer of the log the full length of the log. Then the broad axe was taken up and the expert began a series of blows which, in the delicacy and strength of their execution, equalled the strokes of a sculptor.

The broad axe was made of the finest steel; it was pampered like a baby by its owner. Hours were spent in grinding and honing the blade, in bringing the edge to the pitch of cutting perfection. The material in which the wielder worked was ideal, a soft, white wood which was knotless and which curled under urgent or caressing impact as the progress of the work demanded. The swinger of the axe was not consciously an artist; his job was strictly utilitarian, but instinctively and as a matter of pride he turned out a job which today would do credit to a master carpenter with a blue print, a power saw and a plane.

Square timber was a commodity which in pioneer days was distinctly valuable. The tall white pines, which have long since disappeared from the ridges and the mountains of the Lower Ottawa River valley, were ship timber quality. Firms made a business, in those days of wooden ships and iron men, of garnering from the highlands of the accessible water sheds of Eastern Canada those rare specimens of pine which could later be worked into the bone structure of sailing vessels in Liverpool or Bristol. The timber was floated to the Ottawa River via its tributaries, was gathered into rafts and taken to Quebec on the spring flood waters, under the guidance of a crew of experienced water men who lived in small huts built on the raft, traversing for weeks the broad reaches of the St. Lawrence.

But it was in a more homely and less romantic arena that the broad axe exercised its useful magic. In the construction of homes and barns the art of the expert was more frequently used. It is so long ago since these men worked that it is difficult to find remaining today a good example of their craftsmanship. In an odd out-of-the-way place one may discover an old sagging barn or homestead which reveals in its joined corners and smooth walls, defying the ravages of time and weather for eighty to a hundred years, the evidence of a bygone wood-working art which, while primitive, was truly enduring.

The occasions when the broad axe worker exercised his skill in house or barn construction were ones of pleasure and excitement. A barn or house "raising" not only brought together the local community of farmers and their families for miles around but was the signal for the congregation of the experts in axe work. This was a chance for them to display their unique qualifications. The fact that the work was done under the most amiable conditions, induced by rivalry and certain frequently repeated libations, did not materially affect the quality of the final product. There was a general recognition of the circumstances but there was no skimping of the performance. Usually the timbers had been squared well in advance and all that remained to be done was the fitting of the corners. This involved, as the structure raised its height, a certain amount of footwork in elevated places and nobody was encouraged to take chances. Of course, sometimes rivalry developed to a point where somebody could not be dissuaded from going aloft when he should have been firmly planted on the ground and, as a consequence, there was the old tumble but, strangely enough, few troublesome accidents resulted. The fairies who taught the broad axe men their art looked after their own.

More seriously it is hard to decide how the broad axe men, who were usually first-generation from the Old Country, learned their craft. It has been suggested that they picked it up from the ship builders on the Atlantic coast or from the French-Canadians who had been ahead of them in Canada for over a century and a half. Either explanation is credible, particularly in view of the fact that rare was the man who travelled straight from the Old Sod to a backwoods farm; usually he had had an apprenticeship in the Maritimes, in Eastern Quebec or in the United States. The essential fact was and is that they somehow had learned the trick and had transmitted it direct to their own generation. In fact it is a matter for conjecture how Europeans and inhabitants of the British Isles (not to particularise about the French who came so much earlier and who apparently had picked up and successfully developed technique which improved upon the native practices) were able to enter a new land and make such headway as they did. Truly, it must have been hard for them, in more senses than one. They were more or less forced to evolve their own arts, the most essential of which was home construction.

The writer of these comments came along too late to see the fully qualified exponents of the art of hewing in action in the days of their prime. But he has been privileged to witness old men trying to teach younger ones the trick. They would prepare the axe, mount the timber and hew to the line, laboring under the physical strain of age and dimming eyesight. They would invite their sons to try it and the attempts of these younger men were amusing. Most men of the time knew how to handle a small axe expertly but the big one, with its long, straight blade and its weight, was a new tool to them. They laughed shamefacedly and admitted that there was a knack to it. The coming of the power saw had rendered unnecessary the laborious work of fashioning timber by hand and the younger generation had no real reason for learning the art of hewing. The hewers of wood have long since departed and the tradition of their art alone remains. —By W. J. Gorman in The Northern Miner.

Denmark, Plundered, Regains Her Soul

Little has been heard of Denmark since that grey morning in April when German airplanes droned low over the rooftops of Copenhagen and mechanized columns crossed the land frontier and forced Denmark to surrender after a few hours' fighting. More spectacular shows were soon afterwards staged on the European scene, and Denmark disappeared from the limelight. Occasionally news penetrates the German embargo on truth to confirm the fears and conclusions of Danes in exile.

Conditions in Denmark hardly compare with those in any other occupied territory. King Christian and the Stauning Government perform their duties as before and exert an influence on internal questions which is by no means negligible.

• • •

Much trouble has been taken to conceal the wholesale plunder of the country behind elaborate trade agreements. If the Danes were ever under any misapprehension as to whether the Germans would pay for what they took away, they were bluntly disillusioned by their own Minister of Commerce, Hr. Christmas Moller, who recently declared that the German debt to Denmark on the trade account had risen by 800,000,000, in four months, and he hardly concealed his doubt that this debt would ever be paid.

Most Danes are resisting the Nazis quietly but in a spirit of unbreakable resolution. Their resistance may not be spectacular, but it will prove efficient in the long run.

The only political concession so far made to Wilhelmstrasse is the appointment of Hr. Scavenius as Foreign Minister instead of Dr. Munch, the ardent believer in disarmament and neutrality. Hr. Scavenius hastened to pay lip service to the "new order" in Europe, but seems to have overdone it, for nothing has been heard of him since. On the surface, Denmark is quiet, but the country is in ferment.

There is evidence of the economic effect of British blockade and of German exploitation. The Danish population, predominantly employed in agriculture, cannot in itself be starved as long as there is a pig in the sty or a plot of rye on the acre. Otherwise the effect of the blockade is tremendous. There are no private cars on the road. All common commodities are rationed, and the Minister of Commerce has foreshadowed rationing of milk in this former land of plenty.

As no fodder can be imported, the Government has ordered a reduction of the livestock by 750,000 head of cattle, 1,500,000 pigs, and 7,000,000 poultry. The invaders are anxious to buy, but are met with profound suspicion from the farmers, who do not believe in exchanging their pedigree animals for doubtful credits in Berlin. The Danish Ministry of Agriculture announced that it would buy 12,000 head of cattle a week for export to Germany. They raised the price to make the offer more attractive.

The farmers find it revolting to submit to the swift destruction of an agricultural system which they and their fathers have built up. They are required to support the creation of a new agricultural order in Denmark as a self-sufficient corn-growing state, fed on artificial fertilizers from the subjugated neighbor Norway, with cattle and pigs reduced to a minimum. This is a reversion to early 19th century agriculture.

• • •

In this hopeless picture of economic disaster, underlined by a steadily growing unemployment, there is a ray of light which must warm the heart of any Dane, whether he shares in the fate of his country inside or outside the Danish boundaries. This ray of hope is the outspoken revival of national feeling in Denmark.

The complacent belief that "peaceful little Denmark" would never be drawn into the European whirlpool tended to make the Danes neglect their national duties. Under the invasion they have come to realize that only a united nation, faithful to national tradition, will survive. The revival has recently found expression. Almost forgotten patriotic songs, which were sung behind closed doors when the Kaiser's Germany tried to stamp out Danish language and culture in North Slesvig, are now sung night after night by tens of thousands of enthusiasts at open-air meetings all over the country.

If Denmark regains her national conscience she will not have suffered in vain.—London Exchange.

Good for the Indians!

(Hamilton Spectator)

A statement issued by the Department of Mines and Resources, Ottawa, describes the contributions being made to the national war effort by native Indians of Canada. Among the troops already serving overseas are representatives of many a famous tribe and there are still more of them in camps established in the Dominion who are training for the time when they will be called for active service in whatever part of the world they may be needed. The department, in the particular account under consideration, is mainly concerned with the financial contributions made by the Indians to different war causes, the most popular of which, it is stated, is the Red Cross. Recently it was reported that the Six Nations Indians of Brantford had made the generous donation of 1,000 to this worthy object; another notable contribution being $850 from the Blackfoot band in southern Alberta—$1 per head—with smaller sums from bands in different provinces. For this and other objects—including support of the Salvation Army, assistance to the evacuees' funds, etc. — a total of about $3,000 has been subscribed.

Praise is given not only to the men of the reserves, but the women, "who refuse to be outdone by their menfolk and are entering into the work of the various war services with enthusiasm." One item is especially worthy of grateful recognition—the donation of $260.85 by the bands of the Norway House agency. Practically the only money seen by these Indians is at treaty-time, it is pointed out, when each Indian receives $5. "Undoubtedly a goodly part of each treaty payment went to make up this donation," the department comments. These are outright contributions, in addition to which substantial sums have been invested by the different bands in war bonds and savings certificates. The Indians are thus setting an excellent example to their white brothers.

Wrote or Collaborated In 400 Pictures

Hollywood, Calif.—Grover Jones, who as a boy ran away from the Indiana coal mines to grow up with the motion-picture industry and to hold for nearly three decades top rank among Hollywood's writers, is dead at the age of 47.

On June 25 he underwent a major operation for a kidney ailment, but almost as soon as he came out of the anaesthesia, friends recalled, he began dictating the screen play of "Three Girls and a Gob", which was to be his last. Two weeks ago he re-entered the hospital, but the scenario, which is to be produced by Harold Lloyd, was finished.

Mr. Jones, a noted story teller and prolific writer, was born in 1893, the son of a coal miner, in West Terre Haute, Ind. He worked in the mines with his father and painted signs on the side. With his extra money he came to Hollywood, where he obtained work as a sign painter at the infant Universal Studios.

He continually pestered the executives with ideas for plots and finally sold a "short" to Carl Laemmle. He quickly became a director and produced 125 short features, 121 of which he wrote himself. In the early days of motion pictures he also worked as a gag man for the old Vitagraph Comedies.

During his career in the industry he was under contract to almost every studio in Hollywood, but recently he had written free lance scenarios and sold articles and fiction to national magazines. Collier's bought the first seventeen short stories he sent them. The Saturday Evening Post published his recollections in serial form.

Among the notable films which Jones wrote or collaborated on were "The Thundering Herd", "Huckleberry Finn", "Trouble In Paradise", "If I Had a Million", "One Sunday Afternoon", "Annapolis Farewell" "One Way Ticket", "Lives of a Bengal Lancer", "Souls At Sea", "The Plainsman", "Fifty-second Street", "Shepherd of the Hills" and "Trail of the Lonesome Pine", He had written or collaborated on the screen plays of more than 400 feature pictures.

Belleville Truckdriver Committed for Trial On Manslaughter Charge

Hubert Herrington Will Appear at Fall Assize of Supreme Court

BAIL RENEWED

Occupants of Auto in Which Mrs. Allore Lost Her Life Testify at Hearing

Tweed, Ont., Sept. 27 (Staff)—Eighteen-year-old Hubert Herrington, Belleville truck-driver, was committed for trial on a charge of manslaughter by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd, Northbrook, in police court here yesterday at the conclusion of the preliminary hearing, which saw the Crown produce fourteen witnesses. The charge arose from a motor accident on the night of August 17th, when a loaded wood-truck driven by Herrington and owned by Edward A. Kellaway, Belleville fruit merchant, crashed into a car driven by William McPhee, Belleville, on Highway 62, three miles north of Millbridge, instantly killing Mrs. Jessie Allore, 35, Trenton, and sending four Belleville residents to hospital.

Kellaway,—who is charged with criminal negligence in connection with the accident, will undergo preliminary hearing at Madoc next week. County Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson conducted the hearing with E. Ormonde Butler, Belleville, represented the accused. Herrington will stand trial at the Fall Assize of the Supreme Court of Ontario which convenes here on October 28th under Mr. Justice Godfrey.

Nothing to Say

Asked if he had anything to say after his committal to trial, Herrington answered, "I have nothing to say," in a low but firm voice.

The hearing, adjourned from Madoc last Monday, where two witnesses identified the Kellaway truck as that which forced their vehicles to the shoulder of the road on Highway No. 62 a short time previous to the accident, concluded after the evidence of seven witnesses had been heard.

Principal witnesses at the concluding sitting of the hearing yesterday were the occupants of the ill-fated automobile. All testified that none had been drinking nor had any liquor been placed in the car. A keg of beer in the trunk of the car was found unopened and with its seals intact. Police Officer Stanley Palmateer told the court. He told of the finding of a partially-consumed bottle of gin, and six empty beer bottles in a swampy marsh, approximately 75 yards from the scene of the accident. Occupants of the car strongly denied any knowledge of these bottles.

Doctor Testifies

Coroner Dr. E. Nickle testified to finding the dead body of a woman, later identified as Mrs. Jessie Allore, of Trenton, in the back seat of the McPhee car. The skull had sustained a compound comminuted fracture and the jaws were broken.

The cause of death was given by witness as a fractured skull and lacerated brain.

He had seen Mr. and Mrs. McPhee being driven away from the scene of the accident. The man appeared deranged and complained of pain in his shoulder. Mrs. Marjorie Hammett had been examined by witness and found to be suffering from a hurt shoulder. W. Hammett, her husband, had minor head wounds. Both were suffering from shock.

Detected No Sign of Liquor

"Did you in your examination of the occupants of the truck or car, detect any signs of liquor " the Crown asked.

"No, sir, there was nothing to indicate any of them had been drinking."

"Did you see any sign of liquor around?"

"No, sir, I did not."

"Were you close enough to McPhee, the driver of the car, to detect any liquor?"

"He was lying on the floor of the car and his face was turned away. I think if had he been drinking, I could have smelled it in the car," replied Dr. Nickle.

County Constable P. Wells, Bancroft corroborated Constable Palmateer's evidence given earlier in the hearing.

Wilbur Hammett, Belleville, denied any knowledge of gin and beer found near the scene of the accident.

"There was no gin in your car," the Crown queried.

"No sir, there was not."

"Was there any beer in your car?"

"No sir, only a keg in the rear of the car."

"Did any of the occupants drink or otherwise dispose of any gin at any time?"

"No, sir."

Car Travelling North

The McPhee car was proceeding north to Bancroft at a rate of 35 miles per hour previous to the accident, Hammett said.

"I saw two lights coming toward us. The nearer they came to us the further they moved to our side of the road. Then I heard the crash. I hit something with my head and then heard my wife crying."

Witness was riding on the right hand side of the car next to Wm. McPhee, driver. Mrs. J. Allore sat on the left hand side of the rear seat behind the driver. His wife was next to Mrs. Allore and Mrs. McPhee sat next to her.

Lights Did Not Appear Bright

The lights on the approaching vehicle did not appear very bright, Hammett said under cross-examination. McPhee kept his car over to the edge of the road as far as he could, for "the lights were crowding us over."

Witness admitted purchasing a bottle of gin a day previous but denied ownership of the one found near the scene of the accident.

"No one, to my knowledge, in our car had been drinking at any time during the day," he said. The McPhee car had been in good mechanical condition.

Marjorie Hammett corroborated her husband's evidence regarding position of the lights of the approaching vehicle.

Her husband had not been drinking that day, and no liquor had been in the car at any time. McPhee, the driver, was "perfectly sober" in witness' opinion.

Mrs. Hilda McPhee, wife of the driver of the car, stated her husband had not been drinking on the day of the accident. She corroborated earlier evidence given regarding the "crowding by the lights of a vehicle" of the McPhee car, previous to the accident.

Carl Bierworth, Bancroft, testified he had been riding to Bancroft in the back of his father's truck on the night of August 17th, when it suddenly swerved to the right and a big red truck loaded with wood shot by. His father had been forced to the shoulder of the road to avoid being hit.

Not Fit to Testify

William McPhee, driver of the ill-fated car, was physically unfit to appear in court and give evidence, Crown Attorney Robertson told the Court. He had been severely injured and was, according to his physician, temporarily mentally unfit to testify.

Cross-examined by Defence Council Ormonde Butler, Constable Stanley Palmateer, investigating officer, told the court empty beer bottles and a bottle with 3 or 4 inches of gin had been found in a swamp about 75 yards from the scene of the accident, and near the old Gilmore road. The beer bottles and the gin bottle were found 20 yards apart. He had checked the liquor purchases of occupants of the car and found that one had purchased a bottle of gin previously. The empty bottle was produced at the home later and it coincided with the purchase made, the witness said.

He had made certain measurements and noted tracks near the point of impact. He was definitely sure where the point of impact was and did not think any other car had passed between the truck and the wrecked McPhee automobile after the accident had occurred.

MINISTER OF AIR GREETS AUSSIES

Hon. C. G. Power Terms Arrival 'An Event of First Importance in Empire History

A West Coast Canadian Port, Sept. 27—(CP)—Canada opened hospitable doors today to young men from the sister Dominion of Australia, here to train with Canadians in an Empire air force whose task is to sweep the Nazi air force from the skies.

After a day of sightseeing and entertainment the Australians will begin advanced courses under the British Commonwealth Air Training plan. Young men from other parts of the Empire and even volunteers from the United States will be their "comrades in arms and partners in victory." Hon. C. G. Power, Minister of National Defence for Air, told them on their arrival yesterday.

Terming their arrival an "event of first importance in empire history," Mr. Power said their participation in "the plan to obtain supremacy of British forces in the air makes you champions of common destiny."

The Australians were the vanguard of thousands more who will come to Canada in ensuing months.

After an inspection by Sir William Glasgow, Australian High Commissioner to Canada, Lieut.-Gov. Eric Hammer of British Columbia and high-ranking officials of the Empire air training plan, they were assured a warm welcome awaited them throughout Canada and told their arrival gave the lie to Nazi claims the Empire lacked solidarity.

"May the winds of victory be in your wings," said Mr. Power, and Sir William told them they could be confident in the knowledge that thousands of others would soon follow them through Empire training schools.

Medical Examination Of Canada's Defenders Now in Full Swing

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—(Special)—Examination of thousands of "Canada's new defenders" in the first group called by the Government for possible thirty days military training under the National War Services Regulations 1940 (Recruits) is now in full swing with doctors throughout Canada giving whole-hearted co-operation.

Already according to Hon. James G. Gardiner, Minister of National War Services, examination certificates, which report the medical categories of the men examined, are pouring into the offices of the divisional registrars of the thirteen Administrative Divisions set up throughout the Dominion. He pointed out that men who are found to be fit will be called upon to report for thirty days military training on October 9th next.

Mr. Gardiner explained that upon the advice of officers of the Canadian Medical Association every medical practitioner, in good standing and resident in Canada, had been appointed an examining physician. In all, approximately 10,500 Canadian doctors had received detailed instructions on how to carry out the examination, and had been supplied with the necessary examination certificates.

Upon completion of an examination, the certificate is signed by the examinee and the doctor who forwards it to the registrar in his Administrative Division. The men themselves are not called upon to pay any fee whatever, the doctors being paid a nominal fee by the government on the basis of returned examination forms.

Major General L. R. LaFleche, associate deputy minister, who is in immediate charge of the plan, pointed out that there had been a few cases where either the doctor or the man examined, or both, had failed to sign the certificate, while some physicians had failed to record the examinee's serial number on the certificate. Serial numbers, he explained, are recorded on all notices of call which go out to the men, and pointed out that such omissions make it difficult for the Divisional Registrars to compensate doctors and tend to interrupt the smooth operation of the plan.

Mr. Gardiner intimated that he had been notified by competent medical authorities that in Canada and everywhere a certain percentage of the young men called for medical examination may not meet military physical standards. "It was with the idea of saving our own men as much inconvenience as possible", he stated, "that arrangements were made to permit them to appear before their own doctors, living in their own neighborhood, in their spare time and at any time during the three days of clear notice."

Young Manhood Ready to Serve

Discussing the fine spirit exemplified by the first group of men called, Mr. Gardiner declared, "The immediate response as well as opinions expressed by examinees to doctors bear eloquent testimony to the fact that the young manhood of this country is ready and anxious to play its part in the defence of our Dominion and its ideals if the need were to arise".

The Minister of National War Services also paid a high tribute to the fine co-operation which is being given by the doctors. He mentioned that only one out of the thousands of acknowledgments received from doctors had suggested a somewhat different plan. On the other hand, he directed attention to the hundreds of complimentary expressions, which had come from physicians. Many of them had expressed gratification at being able to serve their country, and some stated that they would even be willing to give their services gratis.

One well-known Hull doctor complimented the Government upon the system of examination and offered to do anything he could to serve. Another doctor who had retired from active practice, stated that he would be willing to go anywhere in Ontario to "help out in the examination work". And still another physician wrote the department, stating that he was paralysed in one arm and no longer able for regular practice. "However", he wrote, "I shall be willing to lend myself to this work to the best of my ability, and even get help".

Referring to individuals who wished to get information as to procedure, Mr. Gardiner stated that they should apply to the divisional registrars in their Administrative Divisions. He also intimated that copies of the proclamation authorizing the calling of men for medical examination and possible military training had been sent out to postmasters, sheriffs, clerks of the peace and other authorized parties for public posting.

FIFTH COLUMN WELL ORGANIZED SAYS A. SLAGHT

Liberal Member Tells G. M. Heads Canada and U. S. Objects of Hitler's Ambition

SPEAKS AT LANSING

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 27 (CP)—The Fifth Column on the North American continent is better organized and financed than it was in the countries subjugated by Germany. Arthur G. Slaght, member of the Canadian Parliamentary Committee to revise the Defence of Canada Regulations, charged in a speech here last night.

Speaking at a gathering of departmental heads of General Motors Corporation, the Liberal Member of Federal Parliament for Parry Sound said that Canada and the United States are objects of Hitler's ambition. He quoted utterances of the German dictator and listed sabotage operations in the United States as evidence that the Nazis would extend to this continent their quest of world power.

He said he spoke at first hand of anti-sabotage efforts in Canada because he had been entrusted by the Federal Justice Department with special services in co-operation with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the custodian of alien enemy property.

Once the United States and Canada are geared for war, "your resources make the rest of the world look insignificant," Mr. Slaght added.

"Your capacity to produce the goods essential to carry on a modern war is nearly two and a half times that of Germany. And by Germany I mean the German empire with all the Nazi-conquered territory included. The exact survey ratio is 242 against 100. Adding the resources of Canada it is estimated would raise our joint ratio 3 to 1 against them."

SOLDIER KILLED, SIX ARE INJURED IN FERGUS CRASH

Military Truck Overturns Into Ditch on Guelph-Fergus Highway

TRUCK HITS TREE

Fergus, Ont., Sept. 27 —(CP)—One soldier was killed instantly and six others injured, one critically, when a military truck carrying members of the Perth regiment Canadian Active Service Force, overturned on the Guelph-Fergus highway five miles south of here Thursday.

Pte. W. A. Bowers was killed and Pte. Arthur Smith was critically injured. The other four, who suffered head lacerations and bruises, were: Ptes. Ken Skidmore, Leslie Willis, Plummer McIlveen, William Dickie, and L. Cpl. Cyril Smith. All the injured are in hospital at Guelph.

(Early yesterday near Newmarket 28 miles north of Toronto, six members of the C.A.S.F. were killed when their automobile crashed into the rear of a slowly-moving truck).

Truck in Transport Line

The truck in the accident was one of a group of 60 transporting the regiment to Camp Borden. The machine, in sixth place in the motorcade, slipped off the edge of the pavement while rounding a curve. It collided with a tree and overturned pinning several men beneath it.

The trucks were reported to be travelling at approximately 30 miles an hour at the time of the crash. The injured were removed to hospital in an army ambulance.

London, Ont., Sept. 27 —(CP)—Pte. W. A. Bowers, 18, of the Perth regiment, who was killed when a military truck overturned five miles south of here Thursday, was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bowers, farmers of near Dungannon. He enlisted with the regiment the first month after the outbreak of the war.

Pte. Plummer McIlveen, one of six injured in the crash, is from Owen Sound where he enlisted in July. Pte Leonard Skidmore, also injured, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Skidmore, Stratford. He enlisted in June.

WEDDINGS

HARRIS—McWILLIAMS

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday morning, September 25th., at eight o'clock at St. Michael's Church, Belleville, when Agnes Josephine McWilliams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George McWilliams, Corbyville, became the bride of Joseph Cornelius Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Harris of Belleville.

The Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson, V.G., performed the ceremony in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. The altar was beautifully decorated with asters and snapdragons. During the Mass Mr. Harold Barrett sang "On This Day O Beautiful Mother".

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father looked charming in a gown of powder blue French lace over taffeta with short puffed sleeves and shirred bodice. She wore a navy picture hat with matching accessories and carried a bouquet of red American Beauty roses with maiden hair fern and baby's breath.

Mr. Joseph McWilliams brother of the bride acted as groomsman.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents to the immediate relatives of the families. The room was prettily decorated with pink and white streamers hung from a large white bell.

The groom's gift to the bride was a heart-shaped gold locket to the bridesmaid, a bracelet and to the groomsman a leather billfold.

Amid showers of confetti and good wishes the happy couple left on an extended motor trip to Niagara Falls, Kitchener and other western points, the bride travelling in soldier blue crepe with black accessories.

TAYLOR—JONES

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place in Parry Sound on Sept. 16, when Dorothy May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Jones, was married to Mr. Arthur Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Taylor, of Cobourg.

Owing to the absence of her father, the bride was given in marriage by her brother and was a dainty and pretty figure in tropical blue velvet with turban to match and she wore a corsage of Briarcliffe roses.

The mother of the bride wore a sheer dress of navy blue and a corsage of white roses. Mrs. D. Anderson acted as matron of honor and was also in navy blue with accessories to tone.

PRESCOTT—KELLEY

A very pretty wedding took place at Christ Church on Thursday evening at eight o'clock, when Pauline Isabel Kelley of this city, daughter of Mrs. P. B. Herman and the late Mr. George Kelley, became the bride of William Francis Prescott, R.C.A.F., Trenton, son of Mrs. Prescott and the late Mr. Prescott of Westport, Ontario. The officiating clergyman was Rev. G. G. Wright and Mr. George Maybee, organist of the church, played wedding music and during the signing of the register the boys' choir sang.

The bride was lovely in a street length frock of soldier blue wool crepe with hat to match and wore a corsage of Talisman roses.

Mr. Robert Flegg, of Westport, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mrs. Walter Waite, 51 Strachan Street, sister of the bride. The rooms were tastefully arranged with Autumn flowers. Mrs. Herman received with the bride and groom, wearing navy blue and red roses. Mrs. Prescott, mother of the groom, wore wine velvet.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Prescott left on a motor trip to Ottawa, the bride wearing a grey wool jacket frock with black accessories. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Prescott will reside in Belleville. Guests were present from Westport, Trenton and Bednersville.

FASHION FLASHES

Made for happy times, is an exquisite dance frock of aquamarine silk jersey in a sheer weave, the long-waisted top embroidered in tiny plumes of mother-of-pearl sequins.

At least one hat in the wardrobe should be important and gay this season. One shop is showing hats of velvet in jewel color such as sapphire, amethyst and ruby, untrimmed save for one big stone in the form of a pendant or earring, and a mist of veiling.

Look about in the smart spots and you'll notice lots of fur-trimmed suits. Done in deep putty velvet is a smart dress and matching coat the later trimmed with bands of sheared beaver at the neckline and pockets. On the frock there are bands of velvet in the exact shade of the beaver.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

AN EXTREMELY lively and eventful day is read from the predominant astral influences. It is probable that sudden visitations may be precipitated of breath-taking effect and unpredictable denouement. The devastating and disruptive action may involve removal, travel, change of plans and objectives, but not with ominous finality if tact, diplomacy and clever intrigue be resorted to.

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year of sudden surprising and unpredictable events, descending with whirlwind force and causing a radical change of plans, purpose, surroundings and associates.

A child born on this day may be versatile, clever, constructive with much shrewdness and ingenuity. It may be thoroughly practical as well as being impressionable and artistic.

What Do You Know About Today's Fashion in Hanging Pictures?

There is a fashion in the use of pictures, and when we enter a home today we know by the way the pictures are hung whether the woman-in-the-home knows about today's fashion.

She won't, if she is knowing, follow the fashion of some years ago when the walls were smothered with too many pictures. Nor will she hang her pictures in such a hit-or-miss way that they look as if she had been blind-folded when she put them up. Also she will know that the bare walls that were in high fashion ten or fifteen years ago are now acknowledged to be bleak and not pleasant to live with.

Today pictures are chosen with greater care . . . and this, happily, does not at all mean with greater expense. And . . . most important . . . they are hung in an orderly pattern. No hit-or-miss procedure.

The first question that you will probably ask yourself is: At what level should I hang my pictures? Since we look at pictures at eye-level, it is natural that most pictures are hung at eye-level. However, there aren't any definite rules about this, and how high or how low we hang our pictures depends a good deal on the size of the picture or group of pictures, on how high the wall is, and on how you are planning to group the furniture in the room. Consider the picture as a part of a group . . . furniture, pictures, accessories . . . and use your sense of proportion and balance. Also notice what a difference an eye-appeal it will make if you can possibly hang the pictures in a room so that the tops of all pictures (or the top ones in a group) will be the same distance from the ceiling.

If you're a bit uncertain about the exact final placing of your pictures you might hang them from the picture molding (if there is one) with picture wire. But when you've really decided that "all is well" draw the wire flat against the screws on the back of the picutres and hang them flat against the wall on the hooks that are now sold for that purpose. (They come in various sizes, made for different weights of pictures . . . and blessings on the genius who designed them!) If it is humanly possible, dont let any picture wire show on your walls! However, if you must, because of some condition of your wall, use picture wire, don't have the wire hung in inverted V-shape. Hang the wire or cords in two straight lines from molding to picture.

Now over each of your large important pieces of furniture . . . . a sofa, table, sideboard or head of a bed . . . or over a mantel, you may wish to hang one large, important picture, either vertically or horizontally.

But, for variety, instead of one picture, try hanging a pair of pictures. These, of course, must be the same size (have them re-framed if they arent); and they must be hung precisely side by side. And hang them with not much space between them.

Another effective thing to do is to hang three or even more pictures in a row over a sofa or table or fireplace. It's smart, too, to hang three rows of pictures, two or three in a row. The pictures must be similar in type (for instance, a row or rows of flower prints); they must be identical in size and framing; and the rows or rows must be centered over the piece of furniture.

Another pleasant and balanced grouping: hang a large picture, perhaps vertically, over, say a sofa or a table or a fireplace and hang two pairs of pictures, either of the same size or different sizes, just beyond the ends of the piece of furniture. If the pairs are of different sizes, hang the larger pair over the smaller pair.

Let's say that you have a sofa flanked by two end tables with matching lamps on them, but you have no large picture to hang over the sofa. Hang a pair of pictures one exactly over each lamp.

There are many variations of these arrangemetns, is that the patterns must show orderliness, and most of all, balance.

Use Your Eyes When You Talk

By HELEN FOLLETT

THIS DAY we'll have a little confidential talk with the girl who makes grimaces when she talks. Or maybe it will be a bawling out—which is coming to her. She is on the way to collect a multitude of wrinkles and, anyhow, she doesn't look pretty when she does it.

When she talks, she talks all over. Face, hands, shoulders. An unnecessary waste of energy. To express surprise she must lift her eyebrows and her hands. To show disgust she endeavors to tilt her nose and she blinks her eye shutters. When intolerant or angry she clicks her teeth together, does her mouth into a purse string which will cause up and down wrinkles to appear on her upper lip.

Surprising that the human face can stand the strain. In time it doesn't; it gives way and flops into tissue pleats.

Tryst Mirror

Use the eyes, dear girl, for expression. They are equal to all expressive needs. If you like to make gestures with your hands, see that they are graceful ones, and don't fling your arms in the air.

Be particularly mindful of the expression of, your mouth. Hard lines can become permanent fixtures. Eyes stay always the same, but the mouth is what one makes it. Paste that on your looking glass and read it once a day.

"Use the eyes, dear girl, for expression."

Don't forget that women who are courageous, spirited, gay and tolerant are the ones who have few beauty woes.

If you are wearing tuck-in blouses, do please see that the belt of the skirt is snug. It it isn't you will be continually tucking yourself in at the back as a small boy is always tucking in his shirt tail. With blouses, the figure must be trim and neat at the waistline. With the slip over, it doesn't matter so much; it may ride up a bit but seldom looks sloppy.

The Skirt Line

Be observing about the lower skirt line, see that it is even. And do, for goodness sake, you soldiers in the fight for good looks, keep the seams of your stockings straight and get new taps on your heels when you need them. Then teacher won't give you any black marks.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Responsibility in Children

Of some persons we say, "They are mature". Of others, we say, "They haven't grown up". We are prone to regard as mature any one who acts his age, acts responsible and dependable.

Persons become mature by having to do things for themselves as well as others. So sometimes persons do not mature because they are not permitted to do things for themselves. Thus if a boy of eight continues to be dressed every day by his mother, he is being retarded in maturing.

So many times I have seen boys and girls, ready to shoulder more responsibility— responsibility that would make them grow up mentally as well as physically, but their parents wouldn't let them. Such children often become rebels. They resent being babied, and they struggle for their freedom. These boys and girls—yes, often young men and women—think they are old enough to know when to go to bed without being told. They think they are old enough to go out without asking permission every time; they think it is humiliating to have to account for every cent of money they spend. And they are right. If they didn't have such feelings, they wouldn't be normal.

There is no better way of training a child than by teaching it the proper use and values of money. This should be begun quite early, so that by the time adolescence is reached, he has definite ideas on the earning, saving and giving of money.

When the child gets to the point where he knows what money is for and how it should be spent, he should be put on a definite spending allowance, no matter if it is only a small one.

Then, just as soon as the child is old enough to be of some use, he should be given the opportunity to find out for himself, just how much work it takes to earn a dime, or a quarter. He quickly learns there is a lot of difference between the money that is given him and that which he earns. And he spends it accordingly.

You find that a youth, as he grows older, resents what he considers unnecessary control over all his activities by his parent. Of course, this resentment is often unjustified, but again I have known many parents who could have accomplished a great deal more toward the control of the child if they had gone about it in such a way as to develop a sense of responsibility in him.

Unfortunately, it sometimes happens that a young person denied a natural development of its responsibility will as a result develop a dislike and even a hatred of a parent. When this happens the harmony of family life is broken by bitter quarrels, with the young person struggling for the right of independent thought and action, the parent attempting to impose his views on youth.

This desire for independence, for greater control over activities and thoughts, is more normal than the attitude of the child who clings to the parent and refuses to take any step toward independence.

Is Marriage Only Alternative to Unemployment?

Suzanne is terribly discouraged. She graduated from college in mid-June and felt that by Labor Day, at least, she would have taken root in a congenial job. But it seems there is no great demand for the things she burned the midnight oil to acquire at college.

Her chief ambition is to write, and she specialized in modern English, absorbing plenty of the Victorian big shots. They had special courses in Ruskin, Browning, George Eliot, and, to be ultra-modern, H. G. Wells, Galsworthy and Arnold Bennett.

Suzanne formed her style on what she tells me is a "combination of the best modern authors". But all her manuscripts come back. She's written short stories, essays, point of view for syndicates, but they bounce back like bad checks. She can hear the dull, sickening thud of the heavy envelope as the postman drops them through the letter slot, and she asks me what's the good of a college education anyhow?

At this point in her discouragement, two alternatives appear on the scene. One is a boy of 21, good-looking, athletic and about as disillusioned concerning college as she is. He wants to marry Suzanne, but is living miserably enough at home.

He's full of mad schemes. At least the girl thinks they're mad. He has a car of sorts and suggests he and Suzanne get married, go out and take photographs of people in trailer camps, of scenery, of children, pet animals, anything at all, and sell them. He's a nice boy and Suzanne is almost in love with him, but she says: "that scheme butters no parsnips".

Lots of money has been spent on the educations of these two young people; they want to make good but find it impossible.

The other alternative is 42 years of age. He's on the "gay side" according to the girl. Has been married, divorced, pays alimony and maintenance for two children. All of which he can afford because he's successful in his profession. Suzanne is flattered by the attentions of this man, but not in love, and wonders, inasmuch as no one seems to want to buy what she writes, if it wouldn't be well to marry one or the other of these men.

I'm honestly curious to know why a college graduate should be so utterly outmoded in her point of view. In her grandmother's day, girls married for their bread and butter, but, thank heaven they're not reduced to such dreadful measures at the present time.

The thing for this girl to do, and also the college boy, is to go in for some form of practical training. Forget all about the ologies they acquired in college, and learn something for which there is a demand.

Suzanne could take Vocational Training and learn to be a good stenographer. And with her college background that would help immensely. She could learn to be a dietition .She could take a course in library science; dozens of things are taught, even things like tap dancing and tea-room organization. The U.S. Government, in their various preparedness projects, have need for good stenographers who should be good spellers and know the art of punctuation as well.

All sorts of interesting careers are open to young men, especially those who have had any mechanical training. Defense measures have already doubled the number of applications. The Government is offering special mechanical courses to boys who've had rudimentary mechanical training.

This is no time for a girl to give up and think life holds nothing for her but marriage to an impractical boy, or an older man whom she doesn't love.

FASHION FLASHES

Setting out for college is a grand tweed suit. The frock is of sapphire blue tweed in a thin fine, soft weave. With it is worn an oatmeal colored jacket of herringbone tweed, with blue tweed collar, revers and bandings on the fitted hipline pockets.

More than ever it will be a fur hat season. Impudent and smart is a hat formed of a blue fox head mounted on a taupe wool turban. Taupe antelope gloves have narrow bands of the fur or a fur button.

Plenty of work ahead for a new model, a loose long coat of snowy white caracul that is at home over sports or ski clothes as it is over evening things. Double, upstanding collar.

Parade of School Children Opens Agricultural Fair

Colt, Swine, Poultry and Grain Clubs Hold Achievement Day

HEAVY EXHIBITS

Picton, Sept. 27—A parade including many hundreds of school children from all parts of Prince Edward County opened Picton Fair this afternoon. The Hastings and Prince Edward regimental band led the procession. All schools carried decorated banners and many of them wore colored caps and other decorations.

At the fair grounds, the band led in singing "O Canada." Sam Dodds, President of the Fair, extended a welcome and pointed out the fair had adopted the slogan "Carry on" this year. A minute of intercession for victory was observed in silence. The school children, directed by F. E. Walden, Picton, sang "There'll always be an England." Warden J. H. Rutter, Wellington, added a word of greeting and Dr. S. H. Roblin urged school children to buy war saving stamps. The National Anthem closed the ceremonies.

There was a general stampede by the children for the big midway, one of the largest here in years, having five rides and many concessions.

During the afternoon the Colt, Swine, Poultry and Grain Clubs held their achievement day. Results will not be announced until next week as further competitors are necessary to complete the events. There were 11 entries in swine club, 43 in poultry and grain, 24 in calves and 17 in colts.

Band in Attendance

The regimental band gave a concert during the afternoon.

The Crystal Palace is filled with fine displays, all classes being well filled. Attracting much attention is the "Nail Hitler" booth sponsored by the War Saving Committee. With the purchase of a stamp, the buyer is given a nail to drive into the partly completed coffin, wherein reposes an effigy of Hitler which is to be buried with suitable ceremony Saturday night.

The I.O.D.E. has a display of their war work as has the Prince Edward County branch of the Canadian Red Cross.

County Has Exhibit

Prince Edward County Chamber of Commerce has an excellent display featuring the variety of canned foods processed in the county. These were loaned by various factories.

The model airplane building is very popular by a big display of fine craft.

Local merchants have attractive displays. The floral display is the best in years. Entries in apples are fewer due to the busy season. Grains, roots and vegetables and Ladies' work are up to standard.

The entry of horses is as usual very heavy. Over 100 head of Holsteins are in the cattle barns ready for the Black and White Day Saturday with A. D. Runions, Kemptville Agricultural School, as judge. Swine entries are down but there are more sheep than usual. The poultry exhibit is normal.

Race Horses Prominent

Quite a number of horses are here for Saturday's three races.

With an abundance of flags and colored lights, the grounds present a gay appearance and given good weather the fair is an assured success.

Tonight the R.C.A.F. band of Trenton is to give a concert and "C" and "D" Compaies of the Second Battalion, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, N.P.A.M. are to be inspected by Lt.-Col. B. C. Donnan, Belleville, following a military review. On Saturday, Flying Officer Denton Massey of the R.C.A.F., Trenton, is to speak before the horse races begin.

Some of the exhibitors are: Jos. Cook, Bloomfield; Ken. Carson, Cressy; Mrs. Jesse Cole, Mrs. Gordon Cahoon, Bruce Falconer, Billy Henley, Chas. Hotston, Mrs. M. Payne, B. Ryckman, Leonard Thomas, Bertha Terrill, Anne Terrill, Picton; Mrs. Harold Foster, East Lake; Mrs. B. Dodds, Picton R. 3; E. W. Gorsline and Sons, Demorestville; Murney Ferguson, R. 3 Picton; Ralph Dodds, Cherry Valley; Stirling Grimmon, Black Creek; Mrs. Alex Gilmour, Carrying Place; Archie Kerr, Waupoos; Mrs. Wm. Loney, Greenbush; Harry Leavitt, Picton R. 6; A. W. Hensman, Milford R. 2; Mrs. B. P. Minaker, R. 1, Milford; Percy McConnell, Point Petre; W. Robinson and Son, Northport; Dolph Roblin, Green Point; Ed Robbie, Northport; Mrs. Carrie Heffre, Fred Campbell, Fred Webster, Frank Cowan, Neil McLean, Mrs. Himan, Picton; Morley Williams, Bloomfield; Rose and Dodds, Woodrous; Huff Bros., Mt. Pleasant; Mrs. Addie Storms, R. 5, Picton; Hubert Thompson, Newburgh; Clifford Wilson, Picton, R. 8; Morley Williams, Bloomfield; T. A. Crawford and Sons, Bethel.

In addition there are 95 entries in boys' clubs and about 50 exhibitors in the Holstein Black and White Day. names of which are kept separate. In all, some two hundred exhibitors are represented at the fair.

County Has Heavy Frost

Prince Edward County experienced a severe frost early Thursday morning and great damage was done. The greater part of the tomato crop was ruined. This means considerable money lost as the price is forty cents a bushel and there were thousands of tomatoes still on the vines, the season being two weeks late. While the crop was only an average one, there was a larger acreage than usual. Some districts were harder hit than others.

Tops of potatoes were frozen, flowers withered and garden produce frozen due to the cold spell which saw ice form on pails outside.

Acquitted on Charge

Appearing in Magistrate's Court here Wednesday before Magistrate Garvin, Cecil Cox acquitted of a charge of reckless driving. Cox was driver of the car which last month overturned on the Bloomfield road as it was passing a transport, and Clifford Nelson was killed. Cox was found guilty of driving without an operators' permit and fined ten dollars and costs. Magistrate Garvin stated he believed there should be a tightening up of highway laws in Ontario which would permit unsafe cars, such as accused was driving, to be taken off the roads. He also felt that there should be greater care in granting permits for driving, and that tests should be stiffer.

AIKEN'S W.A.

The September meeting of Aiken's Woman's Association was held on Thursday at the home of Mrs. Wm. Wheeler with almost every family represented in attendance.

An appetizing dinner was served at the noon hour and enjoyed by all present.

The President, Mrs. Selburn Westover opened the afternoon meeting with the use of the W.A. theme song and a hymn. The National Anthem was repeated in unison as a prayer.

The Bible reading was given by Mrs. W. H. Kells, and the lesson on the Scripture by Mrs. E. K. Hubble.

The roll call was answered with names of favorite hymns

Appreciation was expressed by Mrs. Arthur Saylor for cards of sympathy sent her mother, Mrs. Palmer and herself, at the time of their recent bereavement.

Readings were given by Mrs. S. Spafford, Mrs. Wm. Bush and Mrs. Bruce Hogle. A piano solo was rendered by Mrs. Harleigh Hamilton. The meeting was closed with prayer by Mrs. Bruce Hogle.

Red Cross work was accomplished by the members during the day, and the Red Cross President, Mrs. Arthur Saylor discussed future work, and ways and means of raising funds.

Poultry Supplies Equal to Demand

Toronto, Sept. 27.— (CP)— A better feeling was in evidence in the poultry market during the past week, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

While receipts of live poultry have not been so plentiful, supplies have been adequate to take care of a fairly good demand with the exception of broilers which are scarce and show a price increase.

There is a good demand for heavy chicken of good quality when killed and dressed.

Arrivals of dressed poultry are of only fair quality, poorly dressed and finished. There is good inquiry for heavy chicken of top quality. In fact, it is reported, there is a little better demand generally. Broilers are scarce and some dealers have increased their quotations for this class of poultry. Other prices are unchanged.

Nursing Sister Dies Overseas In Car Accident

Toronto, Sept. 27 —(CP)— Mrs. William Bell, Toronto, has been notified by Dominion authorities of the death of her daughter, Marian Elizabeth Bell, a nursing sister attached to the 15th General Hospital, with the Canadian Active Service Force overseas. She was killed in a motor accident yesterday.

Miss Bell, who joined the nursing unit here soon after the outbreak of war, is believed the first Canadian nurse killed overseas. Her father died six weeks ago and Mrs. Bell had written her daughter suggesting that she obtain leave and return home.

Miss Bell, who celebrated her 28th birthday last December, was a graduate of St. Michael's Hospital School for Nurses here.

Surviving besides her mother are an aunt, Annie Bell of Toronto, and two uncles, Allan Bell, Toronto, and Fred Bell of Buffalo.

The War Today

By Guy Rhoades

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Germany, Italy and Japan today signed a military alliance and agreed virtually to divide Europe, Africa and East Asia among them—providing they win their respective wars.

Mainly, however, the agreement appeared as a stunt to attract the attention of the United States and curtail its help to Britain. There seemed little likelihood that any of the contracting parties, beset with difficulties as they are in their effort to defeat Britain and China, would want to fight anyone else.

For Japan the alliance presented anything but a rosy picture. Already she has been deprived of her American source of scrap iron and steel, through an embargo on their export imposed by President Roosevelt. The question remained open for the moment whether she might not now become subject to the British blockade.

No official word was forthcoming, but it seemed possible that the British Government would immediately reopen the Burma Road over which China used to obtain a large portion of its military supplies. The Road was closed to arms traffic many weeks ago at the request of Japan. The closure aroused considerable Chinese indignation.

The British Foreign Office made no immediate comment on the new situation except to say it was not surprised by events. It gave no indication of any change of course in its attitude towards Japan.

Some observers believed the Treaty would be a fore runner of a Japanese attempt to seize the rich Netherland East Indies. What the consequences of such an act would be remained a guessing matter for the moment.

Russian Role Causes Speculation.

It was recalled, however, that both Britain and the United States have repeatedly proclaimed their disapproval of any move to change the status quo in the East Indies.

The treaty brought more clearly than ever into light the fact that the second great war and Japan's second war on China area, in effect, wars of divergent ways of life—totalitarianism, despotism, denial of freedom on the one hand, and on the other the liberty and right to self-government implied under the British and American systems.

It also aroused speculation regarding Russia's eventual role in the various "new orders" in Europe, Africa, and Asia. Russia, nominally Socialist but actually as totalitarian as Germany, has given no indication of which way, if any, she will eventually jump. Her troops often have exchanged blows with Japanese border forces and she has at times lent support to the northern Chinese Communists who joined hands with the forces of Chiang Kai Shek in the fight against the Japanese.

That would indicate a leaning toward the democracies, but Russia frequently has expressed hatred and contempt for the democracies whom it calls "imperialists".

The eventual attitude of Russia even more than the present attitude of Jap, is of grave concern both to Canada and the United States, for the Moscow government already has built an airport on an island off the Kamchatka Peninsula within site of the American owned Aleutian Islands and within striking distance of Alaska.

Alaska, rugged and wild for the most part, nevertheless is vulnerable in its isolation from the rest of the continent save by sea and air. This isolation is well realized by the United States as evidenced in Canadian-United States talks concerning construction of a highway through British Columbia linking Alaska with the Dominion and the State of Washington.

People 'Get Dressed for Sirens' After Rushing Thru Dinner Says London Correspondent

By HAROLD FAIR

London, Sept. 29 (CP). — Night after night as Nazi raiders roar over London, occupants of the city's big apartment houses pour into basement air raid shelters and the surrounding corridors until the whole place resembles a huge dormitory.

The apartment building where several members of The Canadian Press London staff live is typical. People no longer wonder "what to do tonight". They rush through dinner and "get dressed for the sirens". When the banshee howling comes they trek to the shelter where they earlier took their bedding to make sure of having a good spot.

First arrivals get choice locations in the small shelter while others scatter their bedding through the gymnasium, squash courts and long narrow corridors. The shelter itself becomes stuffy but somehow the people make the best of it. Anyway it seems safe enougn there about 30 feet below the street.

There was a time when we laughed at those people rushing to the basement but that happened before an air raid on the metropolis meant something. Now you don't think twice—especially if you've looked out a ninth-storey window and seen eight bombs dropping in a line on the distant horizon, each kicking up a shower of sparks as big as a house.

Lights Out At Midnight.

If the alarm is one of those frequent long-drawn-out affairs life goes on as usual until bedtime. Some people read in the shelter, some play bridge, others talk. Around midnight the corridor lights are turned out.

You get the usual nuisances—the fellow snoring too hard, the two women who talk in loud whispers, that baby crying, the man who persists in crinkling a newspaper. The worst pest went into action one night, informing the crowd in our corridor somebody told him a warden said they should go to a lower basement because a delayed action bomb had landed in the courtyard.

Of course he was wrong but it caused a near panic among some women.

Some big apartments really try to make life for the shelterees a treat. They provide tea at 11 o'clock and hot drinks around three in the morning—if the raid lasts that long, as it generally does. In our flat the policy is to bring one's own beverages.

The famous Dalton brothers, most notorious of frontier outlaws, are dramatised in Universal's "When the Daltons Rode," now showing at the Capitol.

MAIL DELIVERY IN MORNINGS ON MONDAY HOLIDAYS

Ottawa, Sept. 27 (CP).—Morning mail deliveries will be resumed on statutory holidays falling on Monday, starting with Thanksgiving Day, Oct. 14, and there will be a mail delivery on Christmas Day, Postmaster-General Mulock announced today.

Such deliveries were eliminated in the interests of economy some time ago, but, with Canadian industry working on overtime schedules in the war effort, morning mail delivery was deemed necessary where holidays fall on a Monday.

Maj. Angus Mowat Presented With Watch

Trenton, Sept. 27—Trenton soldiers of the Second Battalion of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment presented Major Angus Mowat, Officer Commanding the Headquarters Company with a fine watch at the conclusion of the parade last night.

"To the toughest and most liked Major in the Regiment," was the way Sgt. Ahearn described the Major, during the presentation. "Major Mowat has spent a great deal of time working with the company and whipping it into the best company in the Regiment. As a token of our appreciation, we wish to present you with this present."

The watch wrapped in a parcel about as large as a shoe box was presented to the Major by Sgt. Ahearn. While unwrapping it, Major Mowat was the object of many good natured jokes as wrapper after wrapper was taken from the parcel.

"I did practically nothing towards making the Company, one of the best, but the non-commissioned officers should get the praise," Major Mowat returned the compliment paid to him by Sgt. Ahearn. "This company is one of the best because the N.C.O.'s have made it such and because they have good material to work with."

Headquarters Company started on the weekly training again last night. The company will train on Tuesday and Thursday nights of each week, until the 30 days have been completed. All officers and non-commissioned officers will be given courses three nights a week in order that they might qualify for their ranks.

Not all BUSINESS IS BIG BUSINESS
A LITTLE steam lifts the lid of your tea-kettle. A lot of steam drives trains, machinery. Your bank deposit may be little, but it combines with millions of others to make a lot of "steam". It helps to run the nation's machinery of production, marketing, employment, business. It is important indeed to the country's war financing and war-time effort. The money is yours yet it helps provide the credit necessary to move the goods and services of the nation. ¶ Canada's chartered banks thus perform functions of great usefulness. They receive the deposits of millions of Canadians, and extend credit to individuals, governments, businessmen and marketing organizations. The small depositor is important to the banks. The "little fellow", popularly so-called, is welcomed by any bank, as a customer.
[In war, as in peace, Canada's Chartered Banks maintain, uninterrupted, their useful services — safeguarding depositors' funds; facilitating the nation's business — looking forward to peace with freedom as the only sure basis of enduring prosperity.]

Connie Mack Has Last Chance To Make Good His Prediction Yanks Would Crumble this Year

If A's Beat Yankees Today and Detroit Wins from Cleveland the Tigers Are "In"

A'S BEAT TWICE

Yankees Hold Mathematical Chance by Winning a Twin Bill

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

Connie Mack, who was a well-known baseball manager and little-known prophet when he predicted last spring that the four-times world champion Yankees would crumble this year, has his last chance to make good on that prediction today.

With an almost imaginary chance to retain the American League flag, the Yankees have won their last eight games in a whirlwind finish that even now is looming like a sword of damocles over the heads of Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers.

Detroit can eliminate Cleveland with one victory any time it can get it—today, tomorrow or Sunday. But unless the Yankees get whipped, the Tigers will have to win twice at Cleveland to evade a tie with the champions.

That's why old Connie's forecast is right back in his lap today, for his Philadelphia Athletics will be meeting the Yanks for the last time this season and the A's can make certain that New York doesn't get any farther by winning this one game.

The A's couldn't do it yesterday. The Yanks swept a doubleheader 5-4 and 2-0. The Yanks were outhit 10-9 in the first game but Joe Gordon and Bill Dickey each hit homers with one on and Ruffing himself doubled and scored the deciding run in the sixth. Each team was held to four hits in the nightcap, but Ernie Bonham won the victory by keeping his scattered.

In the only other American League game yesterday the Senators squeezed past Boston Red Sox 6-5 with two runs in the ninth inning.

The National League champions, Cincinnati's Red, divided a double-header at St. Louis, 4-3 and 5-1. Boston Bees bottled Brooklyn Dodgers twice 5-2 and 5-4. New York Giants took two from the tail-end Phillies 3-1 and 2-1 and Pittsburgh squeezed past Chicago Cubs 7-6 in a typical free-hitting tussle.

MAXIE BAER K.O'S PAT COMISKEY IN FIRST ROUND

Referee Jack Dempsey Steps in After Baer Floors Opponent Twice

DRAPED OVER ROPES

Baer Has Pull in Weights and Appeared to Have More Boxing Ability

Jersey City, Sept. 27—(AP)—Bids are in order today on a rebuilding job on the heavyweight title aspirations of Patrick Edward Comiskey as the fight world speculated anew on the merit of the game's most unpredictable figure—Max Baer.

The 31-year-old Maxie, transferring to explosive fists the energy often reserved for clowning, knocked out the youthful Paterson, N. J. fighter, in two minutes and 39 seconds of the first round of their scheduled 15-round bout last night.

Referee Jack Dempsey stepped in to stop the fight with Comiskey draped over the ropes after being down for an eight count a few seconds earlier.

A wicked short right caught the green Pat solidly on the button to mark the beginning of the end. Comiskey had started out dancing lightly about and stabbing the grim Max with darting lefts.

He survived one brief flurry of looping rights and lefts and it appeared the Paterson boy might be able to take it, but that flurry was just the skirmish line for the main attack of the cagey Baer.

"I sucked him in and found out I could nail him," Max said in explaining his method of setting Comiskey up for the kill.

Nail him he did, Pat sitting down abruptly. He came up fighting, but Max, always the killer when he senses a weakening in an opponent, was on him with a tremendous barrage of lefts and rights. There was nothing for Dempsey to do but to step in and stop it.

Baer weighed 223 1-2 and Comiskey 207 1-2. It was Comiskey's first knockout defeat.

COLONELS MAKE IT 2 IN ROW

Kansas City, Sept. 27 (AP) — Louisville made it two in a row over the Blues in the American Association playoff finals by winning the second game Thursday in 11 innings, 5-4. Vince Sherlock walked, stole second, took third on Tony Dephillips' high throw and scored the winning run on a fly to left.

Sports Roundup

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Sept. 27 (AP)—Mr. Terry now refers to his Giants as "Humpty-Dumpties" and promises sweeping changes next season.... Anyway, Dick Chapman is a conscientious guy. The day after he won the United States amateur golf title, he was down at the Merion Club at Philly taking a golf lesson from Sam Byrd...... That wrestler, "the Angel" is front page news in North Carolina...... And in some of the other States down there, the papers are assigning their crack gal feature writers to the man who is proud to be called the ugliest guy in the world.

Billy Durocher, first cousin of the Dodger manager, is doing all right on the Franklin and Marshal Freshman football squad.... Mike Jacobs got a taste of the old razzberry when they introduced him at the Farr-Armstrong fight at Washington the other night.

Giants fans are cheering the Yankees for their fine pennant drive and that, gentlemen, is something...... Heywood Hale Broun, son of the late columnist, has joined the Sports staff of "PM," new New York daily.

One of the Cleveland insurrectionists is reported to have told Al Simmons: "I don't know whatever got me to go up to the front office with the fellows and ask to have Vitt fired...... He always was good to me, and if it wasn't for him, I might not be in the Majors...... I guess it's just that I haven't a mind of my own and followed the crowd."

TIGERS "FIGHTING" FOR THAT PENNANT

COLUMBUS GRADS MEET 'COMBINES' IN NEXT ROUND

O.B.A. Entry in This District Goes Into Semi-Final Round

FIVE TEAMS IN

'Doc' Empson's Squad Will Practice at Fairgrounds Saturday

"Doc" Empson's South Hastings "Combines" meet the Columbus Grads of Toronto in the semi-final series for the intermediate championship of the Ontario Baseball Association, it was learned here today. The Combines advanced to the provincial semi-finals by virtue of eliminating Deloro and then when the Port Hope Ontarios defaulted the third round playdowns, the Empson-led Combines found themselves in the provincial baseball semi-finals.

Word was officially received from the office of W. J. Snyder, secretary of the O.B.A. at Hamilton and immediately negotiations were opened today regarding the venue of the initial game of the series. Already Manager Empson has been in communication with Manager Carmen Bush, of the Toronto Columbus Grads, and suggested the series open in Belleville on Wednesday next with the second game going to Toronto next week.

At present five teams remain in the intermediate O.B.A. race, the two above clubs and Hensal, while Hagersville and Waterloo are tied in their series. The winner of the Hagersville-Waterloo third game on Saturday will meet Hensal and the winner of this series clash with the Combine-Toronto series, winners for the championship of the province.

ORIOLES LOSE SECOND IN ROW

Newark Bears Take Distinct Edge in Battle for Loop Title

Baltimore, Sept. 27—(AP) — It was chilly all over Baltimore today, but it was downright cold around Oriole Baseball Park. Newark's Bears were out ahead 2-1 in the International League playoffs.

About 9,000 top-coated fans shivered through the Bears' 14-hit assault on Baltimore last night and saw the flock lose their second straight in the Governor's Cup series, 8-4.

Hank Borowy, pitched smart seven-hit ball for Newark and wasn't responsible for Baltimore's two-run splurge in the third. Bud Netheny threw the ball into the Newark dugout trying to catch Eddie Collins, Jr., Collins scored, Corbett went on to third, and scored on Benjamin's long fly.

BALMY BEACHERS ARE BEST BET IN O.R.F.U. LEAGUE

Alex Ponton Loses Eleven of Last Year's Team but Replacements Have Class

PORTER IN LINE

Coach Thinks Team Has Better All-Round Strength Than Last Year

(By Wilf Grusen Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, Sept. 27 (CP)—The reward that patience brings appears to be on the way for Alex Ponton of Toronto Balmy Beach who has waited since 1930 for a second Ontario Rugby Football Union title. If it comes this season it will lack much of the sweetness it might have had in other years.

Ten years ago Ponton took over Toronto's east end club after six years as a Beach player and led the team to the O.R.F.U. title and ultimately to the Dominion championship. It was the fifth time Beaches had taken the group crown, and the second occasion they had won Dominion laurels.

Since then Ponton's attempts to capture another O.R.F.U. title and a chance to conquer further fields have failed. The mighty Sarnia Imperials always stood in his way, winning the O.R.F.U. title nine times in a row.

But now the Imperials have disbanded—for the duration of the war—and in the renovated league the Beaches look to be the best bet over three new clubs which have yet to prove they are of senior calibre. Their first test will come when they open the season Oct. 4 at Hamilton against the Cubs.

Ponton has lost 11 of last year's squad, including Eddie Thompson, a halfback on The Canadian Press All-Star eastern team, backfielder Shelley Lush, and Cal Moore, one of the best secondary defence players in the country. Despite this Ponton has high hopes for his club.

All-Round Strength

"On the whole in this year's club I have better all-round strength than in last year's team," he says.

To take the place of Thompson and Lush on the backfield Ponton has picked up Bobby Porter, who played for the Beaches four years ago before he turned to professional baseball, and Eddie Shuba.

Frank Seymour, Johnny Manson and Jack Frizelle round out the first string backfield. The first two will share most of the plunging with Shuba, Hugh Tunncliffe and Jack Alexander, a newcomer and a good one from Assumption College. The guiding hand will come from Frizelle at quarter, replacing Bus Young —the promising passer who left to enter the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph.

The retirement of Moore left Ponton with a big gap to fill in his defensive make-up but the return of Syd Reynolds, a crack outside, after a year's retirement will go far towards plugging the hole. With Reynolds, Bob Reid, an inside, and middle George Shields, Ponton has the makings of a powerful line.

Ivan Miller, Hamilton, Wins Golf Tourney

Kitchener, Ont., Sept. 27 (CP)—Ivan Miller of the Hamilton Spectator toured the Kitchener Westmount golf course in 84 Thursday to take low gross honors in the third annual tournament for Ontario sports writers. Bill Herbert of the Galt Reporter won the low net award.

Second low gross went to Fred Jackson, sports editor of the Toronto Star, and second low net was Tommy Moore of the Hamilton Spectator. Vern DeGeer, sports editor of the Toronto Globe and Mail, took third low net, while Vic McKenty of the Kitchener record was fourth.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Joe Gordon and Ernie Bonham, Yankees — Former hit two-run homer and singled home deciding run in first game against Athletics; latter pitched four-hit shutout in nightcap.

Gee Walker, Senators—Hit triple in ninth to drive in tying run and scored himself to beat Red Sox.

Harry Gumbert and Bob Carpenter, Giants—Pitched double victory over Phillies, Gumbert allowing only four hits and Carpenter six.

Johnny Vander Meer, Reds, and Newt Kimball, Cardinals—Former pitched six-hit ball to win first game, and latter with seven-hit hurling won second game.

Don Manna and Max West, Bees —Former hit home run with bases loaded in first game, and latter delivered pinch double with bases filled in ninth inning of second game with Dodgers.

Although the weather was fit for anything else but, the annual Belleville Collegiate Institute track and field meet was held regardless as to the bitter cold and inclement weather yesterday. As the result no new school athletic track or field records were established, although we were glad to see lanes were introduced for the dashes, which can no doubt be credited Cliff Yerex, newly appointed physical director at the local secondary seat of knowledge. A couple of repeaters were seen as school champions, when Bill Pigden won the senior title and Gord Theobald captured the intermediate title. Both have won school track and field honours on previous occasions. A new junior champ. was crowned when Doug Burns ran up a total of 22 points to nose out Ray Lancaster. William (Buck) Sharpe gave Pigden a merry chase for the senior boys' honours, as Sharpe had 21 to Bill's 23 points, but the latter excelled in the track events, as Sharpe garnered in the most of his points in field accomplishments. Theobald was all by himself in the intermediate ranks as he gained 33 points as against 21 piled up by Warren Gannon, who was second.

"Doc" Empson's South Hastings "Combines" today find themselves in the semi-final series of the intermediate O.B.A. playdowns and they'll meet the Columbus Grads in their next series, which doubtless will open here early next week. Billie Snyder, Secretary of the O.B.A., communicated the fact to Manager Empson today and immediately "Doc" called a full turnout to practice on Saturday afternoon. "We haven't had a full practice since we put Deloro out nearly two weeks ago, so I hope all of the boys will come out to practice at the Fair Grounds Saturday afternoon," Skipper Empson urged today. Incidentally Carman Bush is the manager of the Columbus Grads, intermediate champions of the Toronto Baseball Association. This fellow Bush is the pitcher the old Belleville Nationals tried to induce to take up residence here about ten years ago. He was a pitcher of parts in those days, but apparently valued his services quite highly as he wanted a mint of money and a mortgage on the city hall as security. That was the year Jim Barclay, Ossie McInroy, Art Calhoun and others ultimately landed in town.

If the size and weight of his opponent means anything in his disfavour, then rough-house George Pavish is in for an old-fashioned going over Monday night at the Hume arena. "Big Mike" Domerko, who tips the weight beam at 231 pounds, has been signed to meet Pavish and for the express purpose of eradicating the villainous Macedonian once and for all. Domerko already has a decision over Al (Bunny) Dunlop, the Red Mask and several other well known heavies who have appeared here. Of course the resigning of Jimmie Allen, former Canadian amateur welterweight champ., versus Pedro Valdez, the lithe Mexican, will meet with the popular consent of all grappling fans, as these two boys put on a wrestling exhibition worthy of attendance last week when they battled to a 30-minute draw.

At Pittsburgh recently pitcher Danny McFayden's dig at Umpire Bill Klem, which brought some laughs at the veteran umpire's expense, had a second chapter—a $100 fine, which brought no amusement to the Pirate pitcher.

When Klem called a third ball on a pitch which McFayden thought was a game-ending third strike against Shortstop Bragan of the Phillies, Danny tossed his glove into the air. Klem then stalked out to the pitcher's box. As he met the umpire, MacFayden removed his glasses.

"Here, Bill, you take 'em," he said. "You need 'em much worse than I do."

Making a sweeping arc with his thumb, Klem banished Danny for the first time the Pittsburgh hurler ever had been tossed out by an umpire.

Do you remember when Sam Snead, 1939 Canadian open golf champion, took down top money of $5,000 in the $13,500 Westchester 108-hole open tournament to set a new record for one-year prize winning at White Plains, N.Y. two years ago today. The money brought his earnings since Jan. 1 to $17,572.

Max Baer's boxing career resembles an elevator attendant's labours, lots of ups and downs. With the odds against him Baer slapped down Pat Comiskey, Jack Kearns' white hope in less than one round. Baer went to work on Comiskey early and laid a couple of solid gloves as he nailed the Irishman early and hard. Jack Dempsey, the third man in the ring, was forced to stop the scrap in less than three minutes, as Comiskey lay helpless over the ropes. What next—Louis?

You can do your little bit by taking in today's bowling tournament, at the Lawn Bowling Club, and help to swell the Red Cross fund.

Sport Spice — The Yankees moved a little closer by beating the A's twice yesterday, but the odds are very much against the Bronx Bombers getting to the top of their league....The final moneyed series of the junior loop opens with Detroit at Cleveland today when Schoolboy Rowe will oppose Bob Feller....Detroit has to win but one game to assure nothing short of a tie and if they win two they're in....One loss for the Yankees in their remaining four games means the gate.... Cincinnati needs two more wins to bring their total to the century mark and they'll be trying for that shot....Hank Greenberg is considered the most serious menace to American League hurlers since the reign of Babe Ruth.... Hankus Pankus has corralled most every batting honour in the junior loop this year...."Doc" Empson just this minute called to say his Combines would play in Toronto on Saturday and back here next week. All players please note.

9 BOMBS FELL ON SPANISH TERRITORY

Gibraltar, Sept. 27 (AP)—Spanish workmen returning to this British stronghold from La Linea, Spain, reported today nine bombs fell on Spanish territory during French air raids on Gibraltar Wednesday, and said they heard Governor Munoz Grande of Algeciras planned to protest to the Vichy regime.

Planes which raided the Rock flew over La Linea, San Roque, Algeciras and intermediate towns before and after the bombing, drawing the fire of anti-aircraft posts at La Linea and Algeciras, the workmen said.

NAZIS SHELL DOVER

London, Sept. 26 (CP)—German long-range guns from across the Channel shelled Dover for an hour this afternoon, killing at least two persons.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

AT THE CAPITOL

"When the Daltons Rode"

Action from start to finish marks Universal's new saga of frontier America, "When the Daltons Rode", which is now playing at the Capitol Theatre, with Randolph Scott and Kay Francis in the leading roles.

The Dalton gang, last great outlaw band of the old West, comes spectacularly to life in this screen version of the book of the same name by Emmett Dalton and Jack Jungmeyer, Jr. The mingling of excitement and comedy makes it particularly satisfying entertainment.

Heading the cast is the versatile Randolph Scott in an excellent portrayal of the frontier lawyer who befriends the embattled Dalton boys. No less outstanding is the performance of Kay Francis in her first "outdoor" role as the winsome telegraph operator of Coffeyville, Kan., centre of the Dalton gang's exploits.

The Dalton boys themselves, whose careers from ranch men to desperadoes are traced in the picture, are expertly delineated by Brian Donlevy, Broderick Crawford, Stuart Erwin and Frank Albertson. Andy Devine, in the role of the Dalton's girl-chasing ranch hand, also gives an impressive performance. George Bancroft is effective as the rich man of Coffeyville. One of many surprises is the intensely dramatic portrayal of Ma Dalton by Mary Gordon. Fine supporting work is done by Quen Ramsey, Harvey Stephens, Edgar Deering, Fay McKenzie and others.

George Marshall, who directed "Destry Rides Again", has done an equally fine job with "When the Daltons Rode". Not the least of his achievement is the injection of comedy into his action scenes.

The climax of the film is the celebrated Dalton raid on Coffeyville in 1892 when the outlaws went to their destruction attempting the old West's only double bank robbery. The wealth of action preceding this event in the picture makes it difficult to imagine the possibility of any greater excitement, but director Marshall has done it.

Harold Shumate as supplied a screen play aptly suited to the spirit of the picture and Hal Mohr's camera work is first rate.

A select list of short subjects is included with this fine feature.

Ann Sothern and Virginia Weidler as they now appear on the Belle screen in "Gold Rush Maisie," featuring Lee Bowman and Slim Summerville. Lana Turner and John Shelton are co-starred in "We Who Are Young."

AT THE BELLE

Walt Disney's Festival

There have been so many things written about Walt Disney's production that now on the eve of the Belle theatre's Great Walt Disney Festival, which opens as the next feature attraction, it might be fitting to present some of the highlights of this notably popular program.

Topping the bill is "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" an RKO Radio release and Walt Disney's first feature-length production in Technicolor which caused a sensation in practically every corner of the world.

When this picture opened at the Radio City Music Hall in New York City early in 1938, people lined up four to six abreast at 50th Street and 6th Avenue standing in freezing temperature and blizzards for three hours waiting to get inside. During that run of five weeks the picture was seen by 800,000 people.

"Snow White" has played in forty-three countries, and there has been no instance in any country where the first run did not break all-time records. In Paris at the Marignon theatre, it ran for thirty-one weeks.

Original drawings from "Snow White" have been exhibited in art galleries throughout the world and last year the Metropolitan Museum of Art purchased one of the drawings.

It took 250,000 drawings to make this feature picture, not counting the thousands of preliminary drawings and sketches.

Seven hundred and fifty artists worked on the picture, including 32 animators, 102 assistants, 167 inbetweeners, 20 lay-out artists, 25 artists doing water color backgrounds, 65 effects animators and 158 young women adept at inking and painting the Disney figures on transparent celluloid sheets.

As for the other features which round out the Festival program:

"The Ugly Duckling" is based on Hans Christian Andersen's immortal fairy tale. It was released last year and on every program it played it overshadowed for appeal every feature picture it played with. Many people consider this the greatest Walt Disney subject. It won the Academy Award for 1940.

"Ferdinand the Bull" was adapted for the screen by Walt Disney from Munro Leaf's best selling juvenile book, "The Story of Ferdinand." Ferdinand took this country by storm, for among other things he was used as a prize-winning theme for a float in the Pasadena New Year's Tournament of Roses last year, as the main character in R. H. Macy & Co's Thanksgiving Day Parade in New York. Hundreds of newspapers used Ferdinand as a political cartoon theme.

"The Practical Pig," released in 1939, was a tremendous sensation. It revived the song made famous in "The Three Little Pigs"—"Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?"

"Donald's Lucky Day," uproarious comedy, is also in the Disney group being shown during the Festival.

Two complete performances will be presented over the week end and a new and thrilling chapter of "The Oregon Trail" will be exhibited.

Two Features

A new romantic team that squabbles more than it romances are seen in "Gold Rush Masie" now at the Belle with Ann Sothern and Leo Bowman as its battling duo, Slim Summerville and Virginia Weidler add to the comedy.

Introducing the screen's newest romantic team, Lana Turner and John Shelton are seen in "We Who Are Young" is announced as the companion feature. A new issue of The March of Time will also be exhibited.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Mutiny on the Blackhawk"

One of the season's most outstanding adventure comedy-dramas "Mutiny on the Blackhawk" is now thrilling large audiences with delight at the McCarthy theatre.

With the advantage of a carefully selected cast the dramatic spotlight was turned upon a little known chapter of history dealing with a slave ship mutiny and other incidents which brought California into the Union. Told at rapid-fire pace throughout, the picture presents enough thrills and spectacles to gratify the heart of every lover of red blooded action.

Richard Arlen gives a top flight performance as the secret service agent sent to Hawaii to investigate reports of slave running between the islands and California. Noah Beery brings grim realism to his portrayal of the slave-ship captain. Andy (Hi-Ya Buck) Devine provides hilarious comedy as the sailor who meets his match when he encounters the widow, Mabel Albertson. Others in the cast are Mamo Clark, Clark Gable's girl friend in "Mutiny on the Bounty", and Princess Luana, as a pair of romantic native girls, Malo the Eskimo as a boy from the islands, and Guinn "Big Boy" Williams in the role of a heartless first mate. Thurston Hall and Richard Lane, play strong supporting roles.

George O'Brien

Popular western star George O'Brien in his finest to-date action-packed outdoor adventure production of the real old west entitled "Trouble in Sundown" is now also playing at the McCarthy theatre as the companion feature to "Mutiny on the Blackhawk" and makes a two-hit show of perfect entertainment that will perhaps not be equalled for many weeks to come. "Terry and the Pirates" the exciting chapter play is also shown at each daily performance.

The British government has accepted an offer from an anonymous war-giver to remit rents amounting to $4,450 a year from properties let to government departments.

The Knight of the Garter banner of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy has been removed from St. George's Chapel and stored with that of the Kaiser and others struck off the roll in 1914-18.

AMERICAN LEGION PLUMPS FOR BRITISH VICTORY

Holding their annual national convention, the American Legion has taken staid old Boston by storm, and it is estimated that more than 3,000,000 persons have turned out to watch the colorful parades being put on by the legion. Placards bearing such inscriptions as "There Will Always Be An England" and "To Hell With Hitler" reflect the legion's attitude towards the war. Two high-stepping drum majorettes are shown strutting their stuff during one of the many parades.

"Flying Blind" by VERA BROWN

CHAPTER THIRTY

When De Franc saw the engagement ring the next day, he was quite disturbed. "I just get you trained so you are of some value and then you get married?"

"Not for ages," Judith insisted.

"I don't believe it! I know you women!"

"But you don't know me."

De Franc shook his head. "Maybe I don't." He went off into his inner office and pouted for an hour.

Judith finally went in to him to emphasize that "I mean it when I say I'm not getting married for a long time. For years, maybe."

"Then you aren't really serious about this?" De Franc beamed.

Judith's face flushed. She realized then that she never should have taken Dudley's ring, and she didn't have the courage to give it back. But she could not explain that to De Franc.

He came over to her, put both hands on her shoulders. "I dress women. I don't like them—much or many. But I like you. Stick with me. You won't be sorry. I might even make up my mind to marry you . . myself!"

Judith gasped. Then he began to talk about the skirt lengths for winter. He was a high authority on this elevated professional topic.

Late in August when Judith went home to Detroit for a week, she did not wear her ring. She left it locked in De Franc's safe. She could not face her father and mother. Not yet. They had found the break-up of her marriage too difficult to understand. Maybe some day, when they knew Michael, they might feel differently.

Her mother and father were kindness itself, determined to make her first visit home in more than a year, a success. But they were stunned at the divorce, more so at Tex's remarriage. They had come to love the great flier. They did not blame their daughter. But beyond that they could not go. Mrs. Van Dyck could not quite understand her daughter's handsome clothes, her radiant face. For Judith had never looked more attractive.

When Judith tried to explain about De Franc and her life in New York, it seemed so far away and foreign to home, she gave up.

Michael Dudley telephoned while Judith was home. Later her mother came to tuck her in for the night just as she had used to do in the old days. She kissed her daughter lovingly, sat down on the bed for a little chat. Judith now dreaded these intimate talks.

"My dear, you aren't thinking of marrying again, I hope?" Mrs. Van Dyck touched her daughter's black hair lovingly, looked with anxiety into Judith's deep blue eyes.

"No, mother. At least not for ages, if I ever do."

Mrs. Van Dyck shook her head. "Your father felt terribly, and so did I." It was the first time she had spoken about the divorce. "We were so fond of Tex."

Judith tried to meet her mother's eyes. "So was I."

Mrs. Van Dyck braced herself to ask the question which she felt she must ask. "There wasn't any other man, was there?"

"No, darlin'!" Judith could say that whole heartedly.

Mrs. Van Dyck seemed relieved. "Now go to sleep. I didn't want to upset you, but I had to say this."

x x x

The short visit came to an end. Michael met Judith when her train got in the next morning, exclaiming: "You've been away a year!"

"Two! I missed you, Michael—so much!"

"Then I'm the happiest man in Manhattan. Let's have breakfast before you go to the shop." They ate at Grand Central, both of them talking cheerily. If Michael noticed that Judith had not worn her ring home, he made no comment.

Judith told him about her plans for an apartment. He tried to hide his disappointment, but remarked, "I thought we'd be married by Christmas!"

Judith begged hard:

"I just want a little while, Michael. I want to try my wings. There won't be anybody else. You know that. I do love you, dear. Try to be patient. We'll be much happier in the end!"

"There's nothing more I can say when you put it that way." Then he added, "What would I do if I lost you now.?"

"You can't lose me!" Judith tried to make him smile.

He shook his head. "But suppose you lost me?"

"That's impossible."

"Don't be so sure, young woman. I'll stand a lot. But I might revolt. Don't trust me too far."

"I won't," she promised.

So Judith won her point. Three days later she found a little apartment off Washington Square. It was an inexpensive walk-up, four flights. But it was clean, close to the subway, and furnished after a fashion.

Just before Labor Day, Judith invited Michael to be her first dinner guest. Together they climbed the four flights of stairs, Michael carrying the big steak Judith had ordered and a bottle of wine. Michael's tall frame seemed to fill the tiny room. The kitchen was an electric plate behind a screen. The day bed was Judith's couch at night. But wonder of wonders, the apartment had a fireplace!

"Now, isn't it sweet?" she demanded. There were geraniums in the window, and Michael's gift radio in the book case.

Together they set the small table. Judith cooked the steak, made a salad. The candles on the table caught the facets in Judith's lovely ring. Dudley stopped her, caught her in his arms and kissed her.

Each day Judith felt more sure of herself. She tried again tonight to make Michael understand with. "I just couldn't marry before a year, Michael. I know that may sound prudish and absurd. But I couldn't. You see, I detest divorce."

Michael frowned. "So do I! But when it occurs to an innocent party, it shouldn't be allowed to spoil lives. Not our lives!"

"I won't spoil them, Michael."

Judith looked forward to the Labor Day holiday with dread. Tex and Sonia were flying a cross-country race, and Tex had a special ship for the Thompson classic. Early in the week, Mrs. Van Mathas invited Judith and Michael for the week-end. Although Judith did not know it, Dudley was responsible for that. He'd said something to Dick Van Mathas.

If Judith could have gone to sleep on Saturday night, awakened on Tuesday morning, she would have been deeply thankful. Her holiday memories were painful. Cleveland seemed to represent everything which had happened to her since last year. A year! Sometimes she couldn't believe it. But it was so.

Michael called for her Saturday night when the shop closed. De Franc insisted she take along a new fall dinner dress of black. And she had a handsome new bathing suit from Paris, one of De Franc's alluring imports.

When they arrived at the country club, Judith was in excellent spirits. At supper she sat between Michael Dudley and Werner Griffith, a young artist. Talk turned to Dick in Cleveland, his new ship, and finally, the Cleveland races and Tex Aimes.

Dudley made an effort to change the subject, but one of the men knew Sonia and held forth on her beauty. "Can you imagine flying with your wife? The only time I ever fight with mine if when she's driving the car. Personally I wouldn't want any woman to be pushing me around the sky, even a Sonia!"

There was general laughter.

"That marriage can't last!" The man was persistent. Then somebody added, "Career and money difference usually spell split-ups. Sonia is a spender. Tex may not be tight, but—I hear they're having real serious trouble already."

For the first time fear took possession of Michael Dudley. The bit of casual gossip concerning a rift between Tex and Sonia had hit both Michael and Judith hard.

Michael tried to face the situation. If Sonia and Tex broke up, what? He tried to tell himself Judith would never go back to Tex. But he was no longer sure.

Saturday morning. Judith and Michael were at the pool, for it was a perfect early September day. Dudley watched Judith covertly; she tried to be gay and casual. In the afternoon Judith took a nap. Dudley went for a long walk. They joined each other at the pool for a final swim before tea time and Mrs. Van Mathas was there. She broke the news that "Sonia and Tex Aimes won the cross-country air race. They were both on the radio just a little while ago."

"Good!" said Dudley and he meant it. Success might keep those two together. Failure would separate them.

Judith felt the color rise to her cheeks as Dudley's eyes rested on her face. She was glad that Tex and Sonia had made it. But Monday's race might be a different story for Tex.

x x x

Monday brought torture to Judith. In the late afternoon when the Thompson Trophy race was to be broadcast, she excused herself, said she had a headache, went up to her room. She knew Dudley understood, and that made it harder. She had to listen to the broadcast but she could not do it with him beside her, watching.

Alone in her room, she bolted the door, turned on the radio beside her bed. She could hear the music of the band which played before the grandstand, the shouts of the crowds, the announcer's voice:

"Greatest aviation classic in the world—more than a hundred thousand people here to watch these true speed marvels," etc., etc.

She could see them nestling, ready for flight on the green airport. Tex's ship was the red bird. "Greatest civilian flier in the country," they called him. There was the sound of a gun. They were off!

Judith was numb. Memories crowded so swift. Poor Elsie! Judith had not thought of her in weeks.

Tex was ahead on the first turn, going strong. He seemed certain to win. On the second turn the announcer's voice rose sharply, caught Judith's attention.

"Something is wrong with Aimes' ship. It's spouting smoke. He's pulling up! She's high now, turning to get in. There's a cloud of vapor trailing the ship as it settles."

Judith was on her knees close to the radio, as the voice followed Tex's downward course: He's landing hot. The smoke's rolling."

Then, as the wheels touched the ground: There's a spurt of flame. She's on fire!"

Judith did not move. She could not even hear. "The ship's rolling. He's jumping out!"

Even the microphone caught the loud report as Tex's trophy hope went up in flames.

"Aimes' shirt sleeve is on fire. He's beating it out."

There was a shriek of fire sirens!

"Aimes has fallen down. He's rolling away from the flames. He's up—apparently O.K." Judith could hear no more. She turned off the radio abruptly. For a long time she sat there dazed.

At last Judith got up wearily. It was time to dress for dinner. She cold-creamed her eye lids carefully, put on make-up to hide her pallor. There must not be a shadow on her face which showed she had been carrying bitter tears over . . . Tex!

Judith was radiant as she came down the stairs. Dudley met her in the hall, scrutinized her face. She smiled at him.

"You're all right?"

"I had a grand nap. I feel wonderful. Headache's all gone."

Dudley watching, believed her. A great weight rolled off his heart. He said: "Tex had some bad luck in the Thompson. His ship caught fire, but he's OK."

Judith's manner was perfect. "Oh, I'm sorry! How disappointed he and Sonia will be! Let's send them a wire."

"I'll phone it immediately. It's a good idea!" He left her feeling years younger. Judith walked on into the drawing room and out onto the terrace for a moment of reprieve and soul-searching reflection.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was walking to school with Puds Simkins and Glasses Magee this morning, all wishing we were going the other way the other end of the day, and Puds said, O well, I guess we're prett[illegible] to be getting an education at that.

Sure, when we get it we'll probberly appriciate it, I saic, and Glasses said, Sure, good night look at all the things we know already. Do you realize Columbus discovered this country in fourteen 92 before Edison discovered the electric light or Victor discovered the talking machine? he said.

Do you realize everybody has 5 senses including the sense of site, heering and taste, and I wouldn't swap any 2 others for taste? Puds said, and I said, Do you realize that there are only 2 sexes of people, masculine and feminine, and do you realize it's a lucky thing for the population there's at least that many?

Do you realize if 4 men can bild a wall in 8 days, it would take one man 4 times that long or 32 days, so it would take 3 men one third of 32 days, however many that is, if they all stayed healthy and didn't go off on a strike, Glasses said, and I said, Do you realize the exports of China are silk, tea, fire crackers and Chinamen?

Do you realize iron, tin and copper belong to the mineral kingdom and lettuce, corn, and stewed tomatoes belong to the vegetable kingdom? Puds said, and Glasses said, Do you realize the north is bounded on the south by the east by the west, so if a compass points any direction except north it must be out of order?

Do you realize we're libel to be late for school if we dont do a little more walking with our talking? I said.

Wich we almost were, but not quite.

WAR HITS MINING

Swansea (CP)—Hard hit by the loss of export trade, especially to France, several West Wales anthracite collieries are closing down and 1,000 miners will be out of employment.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The foreign news seemed to give stocks a slight chill in today's market.

The list stumbled at the start in fairly active dealings, but no actual weakness developed. The pace slowed appreciably later, and, near the fourth hour, early losses running to a point or more were shaded in many instances.

Stocks inclined to back away were U.S. Steel, American Telephone, Dow Chemical, Westinghouse, Standard Oil of N.J., N.Y. Central, Sears Roebuck, General Motors, Anaconda, American Smelting, U.S. Rubber and Douglas Aircraft.

A loss of one point in McIntyre weighted Canadian issues. Losses ranging from 1-4 to 3-4 of a point were registered by Hiram Walker, Distillers Seagram and Lake Shore Mines. Canada 4s, in the Bond Market, lost 3-4 point.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 27—(CP)—Little change in prices prevailed on Toronto Exchange today. Volume of 77,000 was 7,000 shares ahead of yesterday's turnover.

San Antonio continued to firm in the face of an easing market and added another few cents. Sylvanite added 3 to its noon-hour loss of 5 cents. MacLeod continued unchanged.

In industrials, papers returned their slight margin on the up side and Bell Telephone recovered 1-4-point from a previous 2-point loss. Nickel and Noranda eased fractions. Western oils were dull.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Sept. 27 (CP)—Dressed-weight were down 10 cents at Hull and prices were unchanged at Brantford and Stratford in bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Liveweight: Brantford $8.50.

Dressedweight: Hull $11.30, Brantford $11.50 plus transportation, Stratford $11.50 plus transportation.

Prices were unchanged at Chatham and London, it was reported later, London $11.50 plus transportation dressedweight and Chatham $8.25 liveweight and $11.25 dressedweight.

Butter Price Improves ¼ Cent

Toronto, Sept. 27.—The improved buying in butter at yesterday's session of the Toronto open produce market. Prices advanced 1-4 cent per pound. A steadier tone appeared in eggs.

Light offerings met ready absorption even at the higher price levels on the butter market. Trading was steady during the day as buyers purchased for immediate requirements. Possibility of export business to the United Kingdom buoyed confidence on the market. Early sales of first grade Ontario solids were reported at 23 1-2 cents per pound, but later business was transacted at 23 3-4 cents.

Although current receipts still slightly exceeded demand, the egg market was steadier, with pullets and grade B firming in the graded section and the three top grades improving one cent per dozen in the retail division. Government inspected shipments of graded eggs again moved at a 1-2 cent premium.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Sept. 27 (CP)—Produce market prices here as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter — First-grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 24 1-2c to 25c; first-grade solids, jobbing price, 24c to 24 1-2c.

Belcourt, and has two children.

Resigns Cabinet Post

Toronto, Sept. 27 (CP)—Hon. Paul Leduc, Ontario Mines Minister, said today he is resigning his Cabinet post and his seat in the Ontario Legislature for Ottawa East to accept the Clerkship of the Supreme Court of Canada.

He said he will communicate his decision to Premier Mitchell Hepburn, now at his farm near St. Thomas, Ont.

Mr. Leduc said his resignation will take effect Sept. 30.

Acting Premier Harry G. Nixon said he regretted losing Mr. Leduc as a Cabinet colleague. He did not say who would be named new Minister of Mines.

Premier Gives Statement

St. Thomas, Ont., Sept. 27 (CP)—Resignation of Hon. Paul Leduc as Ontario Minister of Mines was made with the full knowledge of Premier Hepburn. At his home here today the Premier said he had talked over the change with Mr. Leduc, and although he deeply regretted losing so valuable a minister and so agreeable a colleague, consented to the change being made.

Mr. Hepburn says he will return to Queens Park Monday, when he expects to name a successor to Mr. Leduc.

"Naturally," added the Premier, "The new minister will be a French-Canadian."

He declined to say who he had in mind.

Text of Treaty

Accordingly, the governments of Germany, Italy and Japan have agreed as follows:

Article I:

Japan recognizes and respects the leadership of Germany and Italy in establishment of a new order in Europe.

Article II:

Germany and Italy recognize and respect the leadership of Japan in the establishment of a new order in greater East Asia.

Article III:

Germany, Italy and Japan agree to cooperate in their efforts on aforesaid lines. They further undertake to assist one another with all political, economic and military means when one of the three contracting powers is attacked by a power at present not involved in the European war or in the Chinese-Japanese conflict.

Article IV:

With the view to implementing the present pact, joint technical commissions, members of which are to be appointed by the respective governments of Germany, Italy and Japan will meet without delay.

Article V:

Germany, Italy and Japan affirm that the aforesaid terms do not in any way affect the political status which exists at present as between each of the three contracting parties and Soviet Russia.

Article VI:

The present pact shall come into effect immediately upon signature and shall remain in force 10 years from the date of its coming into force. At the proper time before expiration of said term, the high contracting parties shall at the request of any of them enter into negotiations for its renewal.

In faith whereof, the undersigned duly authorized by their respective governments have signed this pact and have affixed hereto their signatures.

Done in triplicate at Berlin, the 27th day of September 1940 in the 18th year of the Fascist era, corresponding to the 27th day of the ninth month of the 15th year of Showa (the reign of Emperor Hirohito).

ignominiously carried aboard, for none of us could stand, after lying so long."

The mother of one of the rescued boys, William Cunningham Short, nine, of Sunderland, exclaimed: "The news is almost too good to be true." Her younger son, Peter, still is missing, but her husband commented: "This gives us hope that Peter, too, may yet prove to have been saved."

Joy In Six British Homes Over Children's Rescue

London, Sept. 27 (CP Cable)—Joy dispelled grief in six British homes today with word that six more "sea evacuee" children had been saved along with 40 adults from the liner City of Benares.

Paul Shearing, 12, of Bournemouth, was taken to hospital suffering from exposure after a week in an open lifeboat on the wild Atlantic. The other children, though weakened by the ordeal, had not to go to hospital.

Mrs. Shearing, mother of Paul, told a reporter: "I can hardly believe the good news. A miracle has happened and we have hardly had time to realize it yet."

She added that Paul had been so keen to go to Canada that he went personally to get the necessary application forms.

"We shall not let him go again unless there is some guarantee of hsi safety, such as sending an American ship or something like that," she said.

Names of the other children:

William Cunningham Short, nine, Sunderland.

Harry Frederick Steel, 11, Southampton.

Howard Francis Claytor, 11, Middlesex.

Derek Alfred Capel, 12, Middlesex.

Kenneth John Sparks, 13, Wembley.

Peter Short, five-year-old brother of William, drowned when the ship went down.

Companions in the children's dramatic and painful adventure included 37 seamen, 32 Lascars and five white men, all of whom were taken to hospital, the Polish shipping magnate, Bohdan Nagorski of London, who only 24 hours ago had been given up as dead, Father Roderick O'Sullivan, 32, of Kent, a Roman Catholic priest and Miss Mary Cornish.

Father O'Sullivan and Miss Cornish had been acting as the children's escorts.

Kenneth Sparks, who first spotted the flying boat which directed the rescue, took his mother's pre-sailing advice—and was glad.

"Keep your overcoat on, Kenneth," she said. "It will keep you warm."

"I'll hang on to it," he said.

He did, all through the bitter days and nights in the lifeboat. He was still wearing it when he was landed with other survivors.

His parents have not yet decided whether to send him on his way to Canada again. His father is going to ask him what he thinks about it.

When Mrs. F. A. Steel of Southampton received tiding that her son, Harry Steel, 11, was safe, she said: "I had never given up hope and Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday I dreamed that I saw him safe in a boat."

The heroine of the boat, Miss Mary Cornish, 41-year-old music teacher, had helped in the evacuation of school children from London since the outbreak of war.

Shipping Magnate Saved

London, Sept. 27—(CP)— Bohdan Nagorski, 49, Polish shipping magnate and General Manager of the Gdynia-America Line in London, given up for dead two days ago, was among the survivors of the torpedoed City of Benares who drifted for a week in a lifeboat.

Nagorski, who landed last night with 45 other survivors, said the six children aboard the lifeboat "behaved magnificently."

"We had made up our minds there was no hope of our being rescued.....

"Suddenly we heard the roar of airplane engines. We looked up and to our joy and belief saw the flying boat appear from the clouds. It looked as if it were going to land, but the pilot signalled to us and then disappeared. Later, he returned and dropped some fruit and other light food. The food fell into the water, but we weren't worrying about food by that time.

"The flying boat went up again and returned some time later, simultaneously with the appearance of a British warship. We were taken aboard and revived by the crew.

"The children behaved magnificently. Heavy seas burst over us time and again and it took us all of our time to save the children from being carried overboard."

98 NAZI PLANES

A hospital, two old established central London shops and, as usual, homes were struck by the German bombs.

Number of Fires Started

In the meantime a number of fires were caused and working-class residential districts bombed in a concentrated attack on a Merseyside town which had the war's worst raid last night. However, casualties were reported light considering the amount of explosives dropped. A large number of fires were started.

Explosion of a time bomb after the all-clear early today wrecked four houses in a north London district. A man and his wife and son were trapped in the ruins of one house.

Families who took shelter in a subway emerged at dawn to find themselves homeless. They tried to save their scattered belongings while the search for bodies was carried out.

One huge formation of 60 bombers which attacked a town on the southwest coast was scattered by British fighting planes after some bombs were dropped. One small bomber was forced down on a southwest beach and the crew of three made prisoner.

At the same time the Air Ministry declared "particularly heavy damage" was inflicted in mass attacks on Le Havre, on Kiel, the German naval base and terminus of the vital Kiel Canal, and other "military objectives in northwest Germany."

The R.A.F. also singled out Germany's internal waterways for attack.

The Air Ministry said 34 German planes were destroyed in yesterday's actions, two by anti-aircraft fire and the remainder by fighter planes. Eight British fighters were reported lost.

Started at Dunkirk

The Royal Air Force, dropping bombs at such a rate that the Germans' stabbing searchlights virtually were lost in the flashes, set off roaring flames along the 100 miles of continental coast from Zeebrugge Belgium, to France's Cap Gris Nez, little more than 20 miles from the English coast.

The Royal Air Force started first at Dunkerque, then struck at Calais, Boulogne and Cap Gris Nez, and then returned to the north to complete the raging string of fires with an attack on the Ostend area.

At the same time, Nazi warplanes raced over widely scattered sections of London, dropping incendiary and explosive bombs.

The maternity wing of a north London hospital was struck by high explosive missiles during the peak of the attacks, which appeared to be centred in that area and in the northwestern section.

Residential Sections Hit

A few incendiaries damaged shops in central London, which was shaken by one particularly heavy explosion.

Two waves of raiders roared across the great port of Southampton during the night, attempting to blast industrial plants and workers' homes. Authorities said some residential sections were hit and a number of persons killed and wounded. Two British fighters crashed during dogfights and six attackers were reported shot down.

In all, the Air Ministry reported 34 German planes shot down in yesterday's fighting, a third of them bombers. Eight British fighters were reported lost. Some of the 34 were reported bagged in a furious battle over the Isle of Wight.

A northwest town was subjected to its worst night bombing of the war. A number of coastal buildings —including a vaudeville house — were hit.

Observers Watch Plane Fall

As today's daylight air activity began, roof-top observers in central London saw a German plane fall, apparently out of control, belching smoke. It was believed hit by anti-aircraft fire.

Thousands of Londoners, instead of taking shelter, stood on the streets and watched the A.A. guns pepper the skies.

Nine high-flying planes, believed to be Nazi raiders, zoomed across the central part of the capital soon after the raid began, and a large number of planes, also flying very high, were heard in the neighborhood of the Thames Estuary.

The archies opened up a heavy barrage as these latter planes neared London, and the sound of machine-gun fire overseas indicated Spitfire fighters had taken up the chase.

After further short bursts of gunfire were heard, it was believed the raiders had been driven away from the London area.

Raid Quickly Repelled

It apparently was an "armed reconnaissance" raid, quickly repelled.

Earlier, 15 raiders came in over the London area, flying in close formation. Encountering heavy A. A. fire, they made off in a northwesterly direction and then apparently veered northway.

One force of German bombers had crossed the Kent coast flying very high, and the heavy drone indicated a large number in the flight.

An Exchange Telegraph correspondent reported seeing a flight of yellow-nosed German Messerschmitt fighters, flying in an arrow formation, at a height of about 12,000 feet, but a barrage from ground defences turned these out toward the Channel, he said.

German Crew Bails Out

During a battle over the southeastern outskirts of London four, members of a German bomber crew were seen to bail out after their ship was hit by anti-aircraft fire.

In the southeast district, the raiders attacked in waves of 12. One large bomber in the first wave crashed near Orpington.

One bomber dropped two bombs in a northwest London suburb which smashed windows in several houses. The plane streaked away as the anti-aircraft sent shells crackling around its tail.

The raiders dropped some 20 bombs on south London in the first daylight raid. Four straddled a road, destroyed a number of buildings and killed four persons, including an air raid precautions girl, who were walking along the street.

During the night a bomb demolished tenement houses and flats in central London, killing eight persons, including a baby and a member of the home guard. A ninth victim died before he could be released from the wreckage.

PACT IS INTENDED

The new treaty was announced in one of the most pretentious ceremonies of the Nazi regime.

Signed in Chancellery

Foreign diplomats, the foreign and German press and other dignitaries gathered in the great reception hall in Hitler's chancellery while the general outline of the treaty was read in several languages over a world-wide radio hookup.

Signatories of the pact were Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister, Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister Saburo Kurusu, Japanese Ambassador to Berlin.

Ribbentrop, addressing the assembled diplomats and journalists following the reading of the pact warned:

"Any nation which intends to mix in the joint affairs of the contractors (of the new agreement) will have to meet the compact power of the three united nations of 250,000,000 people."

Ciano Arrives by Plane

Ciano arrived by plane from Munich for the ceremony of signature. Fog held up his plane and delayed the ceremony an hour.

Ribbentrop described the pact as an "alliance of the three most powerful powers in the world."

He said it was directed against "those warmongers in the world who are intending to continue and to spread this war."

The German Foreign Minister said specifically of Soviet Russia: "The three powers have established that neither the existing relations with Russia nor the relations with Russia which are to be established are to be touched in any way."

Recognizes Japanese Plans

Under the treaty Japan specifically agreed to leave European affairs in the hands of Germany and Italy, but equally important—and perhaps even more so in view of the fact that a greater portion of the British and French colonial possessions are in the Far East—the Axis powers agreed to recognize Japan's leadership in creating a "new order" in Asia.

The pact was to be effective immediately against all comers.

Ribbentrop said, however, the intention of the signatory powers was to "seak peace and not war."

"The contractors will sincerely and gratefully appreciate the collaboration of any nation that wishes to aid them in the creation of a new order in Europe and the great Asiatic region," the German Foreign Minister said.

Ciano, in Italian, made an address similar in tone to Ribbentrop's.

Ambassador Kurusu made a declaration on behalf of his Government, also speaking in his mother tongue.

Confirmed by Pledge

Ciano said that the treaty "confirms by solemn pledge of political, economic and military cooperation the communion of interest and aims existing between these three countries during recent years in which a new history of the world was being forged."

"In the magnificent work of regeneration," he declared, "our three nations have constantly encountered the same sinister and stubborn resistance, the same unwillingness to understand and the same hostility.

"They all three had to breath in order to live, they all needed work for their sons and space for their peoples."

"This breath, this space and this work has been refused them by those mighty empires who, having monopolized the resources of the world, intended to deny to three nations those elementary and vital requirements which are their most crying need.

No Intention of Challenge

"These three powers have no intention of challenging or threatening anyone.

"Their pact, as confirmed by today's treaty, aims at preventing any unnecessary extension of the present conflict and represents, together with the bloc ensuing from the union of military and civil forces of our three empires, an insurmountable rampart that will shatter every attempt to spread the conflict beyond the present confines," Ciano said.

The text of the pact was read to the assembled correspondents by Minister Schmidt, chief of the foreign press section.

Points in Pact

The six points were:

"1. Japan recognizes and respects Germany's and Italy's leadership in creating a new order in Europe.

"2. Germany and Italy recognize and respect Japan's leadership in creation of a new order in the great "Asiatic region."

"3. Germany, Italy and Japan agreed to collaborate in their efforts at the creation of a new order in Europe and the great Asiatic realm and mutually support each other with all and any economic, political and military means should they be attacked by any power not at present involved in the European or the Chinese-Japanese war.

"4. Technical commissions will be set up and will assemble immediately, to which Germany, Italy and Japan will delegate members.

"5. Germany, Italy and Japan declare that the above agreement in no way touches upon the political status of any agreements concluded between the three powers and Soviet Russia.

"6. The newly-concluded pact takes effect immediately it is concluded for a period of 10 years and can be renewed."

Spain Moving Closer

Madrid, Sept. 27—(AP)— Spain appeared today to be moving closer to casting her lot with the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo axis as the Spanish press voiced a chorus of rejoicing at the success of Germany and Italy in getting Japan to join them in an alliance.

The press unanimously took the view that the possibility of United States aid to Britain henceforth must diminish because of American preoccupation with affairs in the Pacific.

"The United States faces the alternative of renouncing its plans or of intervening immediately against the new totalitarian allies without awaiting execution of its grandiose rearmament program," declared ABC in an article typical of the rest of the press comment.

ABC hailed the signing of the alliance as a "new, brilliant diplomatic victory" for Berlin and Rome.

'Uncle Sam' Warned

Arriba warned "Uncle Sam" against aiding Britain, declaring, "you can't fight halfway or play halfway without risking everything."

Other Spanish commentators, writing under Rome dateline hinted that the final peace settlement would restore to Spain "not only her national territories, but also those colonial ones to which Gergraphy, economy and history entitle her."

The press for days has been declaring that the hour for decision is approaching, and that for Spain, as for others, it is essential to stand right with the probable victors.

The newspapers have been emphasizing that the difference between Spain and some others is that Gen. Franco's Spain chose its side in 1936 when Hitler and Mussolini decided to help the Fascist revolution.

All that remained to be decided when the second Great War broke out, the press has been saying, was the extent of Spain's collaboration with these partners.

To Forestall Entry

Rome, Sept. 27 (AP)—Authoritative Fascists indicated today that the new economic and military accord of Japan and the Rome-Berlin axis was intended to forestall possible entry of the United States in the European war.

While the fundamental purpose of the alliance was described as "the assurance and maintenance of peace," a competent authority said it could be considered a "warning to those who are thinking too lightly of pushing their countries into a dangerous adventure."

Political circles said the alliance would put other countries in a position where, if they encroach on the "living space" of any of the signatory powers, they would have to face "an imposing force of allies."

Washington Not Surprised

Washington, Sept. 27 (AP)—Japan's new alignment with the European axis powers drew only mild expressions of surprise today from Washington officials, familiar with what they described as an intense German campaign to enlist Tokyo's support against growing Anglo-American co-operation.

State Department officials withheld formal comment pending a close study of the details and implications of the new three-power military and economic pact of Germany, Italy and Japan.

Informally, however, officials made it clear that such a development had been anticipated here. They noted that the Japanese press, commenting on the action of President Roosevelt in prohibiting scrap iron exports yesterday, said that the embargo placed the United States definitely on Britain's side.

The fanfare attached to the signing of the new alliance in Berlin was considered in official quarters here as a further sign that the war against Britain was not progressing according to Nazi time-tables and, it was implied, a diplomatic "victory" would be encouraging to the German people.

The immediate purpose of the pact was recognized in informed Washington circles as an attempt to divide American attention between Europe and the Orient with a view to keeping the United States out of the war, reducing its aid to Great Britain, and restraining American resistance to Japan's attempt to dominate all East Asia.

While conceding that the alliance of Japan and the axis powers forced a cautious policy on the American government, officials indicated there would be no modification of the United States stand against disturbance of the status quo in the Pacific, already charged to Japan in connection with its march into French Indo-China.

To strengthen this policy, the main body of the United States fleet is being kept in the Pacific, now based in Hawaiian waters. There has been talk of possible American use of the strong British naval base at Singapore.

No Ottawa Comment

Ottawa, Sept. 27 (CP)—News of Japan's military and economic accord with the Rome-Berlin axis went without immediate comment in official circles here but it was apparent the development was fully anticipated.

Word of the agreement signed between Japan, Germany and Italy was sent to the Prime Minister and it was possible he would make some official comment later in the day.

The Prime Minister was busy yesterday with a long meeting of the cabinet war committee, after which he remained until far into the evening at a cabinet council.

It is assumed Japan's action will be taken into consideration by the Canada-United States joint defence Board when it resumes discussions in Boston next Wednesday. Since the last meeting, in Washington, service members of the Board have been making a survey of defence positions on the Pacific coast.

Says Pact Aimed at U.S. Group

Berlin, Sept. 27.—(AP)— An "authorized German spokesman said today the "war mongers" against whom the German-Italian-Japanese Pact is aimed includes "a certain group" in the United States. The statement was made at this afternoon's Press Conference.

While it was not his task or intention to pass judgment on United States policy, the spokesman said the circles referred to in the United States was made up of "persons who lack the spirit which animated the meeting (at the Chancellery) this morning".

The spokesman declined to be drawn into a discussion of what was meant by "greater East Asia" named in the treaty.

He would not say whether it included such places as the Philippines, French Indo-China, Australia and Eastern Siberia.

These questions, he said, involve "political dynamics".

Roosevelt Waits Official News

Washington, Sept. 27.—(AP)—President Roosevelt told his Press Conference today he could not say anything about the new Japanese-German-Italian pact because he had received nothing official on it.

The President added that the State Department undoubtedly had received official news on the agreement.

Asked whether the 10-year treaty was unexpected, Mr. Roosevelt replied yes and no, but did not elaborate.

Asked whether an embargo on oil shipments to the Far East, was contemplated the President referred questioners to the State Department.

Attorney-General Institutes Probe Into Soldier Deaths

Toronto, Sept. 27 (CP).—Attorney-General Gordon Conant of Ontario said today he has instituted investigations into soldier fatalities in Ontario which since May has taken 16 lives. "The situation is disturbing and almost alarming," he said.

Commenting on the death early yesterday at Newmarket of six members of the Canadian Active Service Force wro were returning to Camp Borden in a borrowed automobile, Mr. Conant said that "loaning of a car is a serious responsibility, not only the civil responsibility but there are provisions of the highway traffic act regarding the person to whom it is loaned."

(Provincial police said today that P. Mahoney of Windsor, owner of the car in which the six were killed, has not been located and as a result do not know how the soldiers obtained the machine.)

WORKERS DEMAND MAN'S DISMISSAL

Courtaulds Limited at Cornwall Scene of Strike to Back Up Demand

Cornwall, Ont., Sept. 27 —(CP)—Courtaulds (Canada) Limited workers went on strike today, pending company action on a demand of the Rayon Workers Union for dismissal of an Italian-born worker. The Union asks ousting of Louis Cinquina, naturalized Canadian, on grounds of "misdemeanour," claiming that he deliberately struck a boy worker in the plant last Thursday.

A protest was staged in the plant yesterday when workers declined to work but remained at their posts until late in the afternoon. A Union meeting last night supported the strike call and pickets were on duty when the night shift was to have started work.

The plant was idle last night and was manned today only by a safety crew, office workers and executives.

Cinquina, whose four sons and one daughter also work at Courtaulds, is not a Union member and has been employed in the plant since it was opened.

A statement by the Union regarding last Saturday's incident, said that the boy, pushing a rayon-laden cart, bumped against Cinquina who "deliberately struck the boy, first with a board and then proceeded to administer a resounding slap to the boy's face."

The matter was reported to the foreman and to the Union and Cinquina was suspended. He returned to work yesterday.

Wallace Praises Foresight of The President

Enid, Okla., Sept. 27—(AP)—Henry A. Wallace declared last night that in view of the developments abroad "it certainly is providential that we acquired the new naval bases in the Atlantic."

The former Secretary of Agriculture and Democratic Vice Presidential nominee, during a three-speech trip through Oklahoma's eighth congressional district, told a gathering here:

"We should give thanks that we have a President who understands our dangers—the dangers of any combinations of dictators.

"Look what happened at Dakar. It's only 1,880 miles from Natal, Brazil—not much distance for airplanes.

"This situation is especially serious for the United States. What would it mean if Spain, the mother of the Latin American countries, lined up with the Rome-Berlin axis? The air trips are short between Spain and the Azores, the Azores and Bermuda and New York City.

"Apparently the French government does the bidding of Nazi Germany. On all of this we might well stop and ponder.

"The price of peace with mad men running loose in the world is full and complete preparedness."

Wallace said he was confident "no American blood will be shed if we pursue our present course."

WELL AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

Washington, Sept. 27 (AP)—By next July 1, Canada will have sent more than 2,200 air pilots to Great Britain, C. D. Howe Canadian Minister of Munitions and Supply, said today.

Here to consult with the British purchasing mission, Howe said the entire air training program in Canada, ultimately to produce 25,000 pilots a year, is well ahead of schedule in all respects.

Merely to be alive is adventure enough in a world like this, so erratic and disjoined; so lovely and so odd, and mysterious and profound. It is, at any rate, a pity to remain in it half-dead.—Walter de la Mare.

First of New Bases for U. S. May Be Started in Short Time

Washington, Sept. 27—(AP)—The United States Army and Navy are shielding their intentions with wartime secrecy, but dirt may fly shortly on the first of eight new naval and air bases in the Atlantic acquired from Britain.

Recommendations of a joint army-navy survey board of experts for the development of the two northernmost points on the new outer line of defence already are in President Roosevelt's hands and reports on the rest are expected to be complete within a month.

Meanwhile the President is in a position to save time by using his $200,000,000 discretionary defence fund to start work on the Bermuda and Newfoundland bases, without awaiting detailed plans for the other sites yet to be surveyed.

Even before any actual improvements are undertaken, however, naval authorities said that planes and ships of the neutrality patrol could make some use of the North Atlantic, Caribbean and South American bases as soon as the exact limits were fixed.

The recommendations on the Newfoundland base went to the White House Wednesday. Earlier a report was submitted on Bermuda, first of the new base sites to be examined after the historic exchange of 50 destroyers for 99-year leases was announced Sept. 3.

With Balky Motor Spitfire Pilot Downs 3 Huns And Lands Safely

London, Sept. 27 (CP).—A lame duck Spitfire, lagging behind its unit with a balky motor, managed, the Air Ministry news service said today, to:

1. Shoot down a German Dornier 17 bomber in flames over London;
2. Set a second Dornier 17 afire;
3. Set a Messerschmitt 109 fighter diving vertically toward the ground;
4. Carry its pilot safely to a forced landing in Essex.

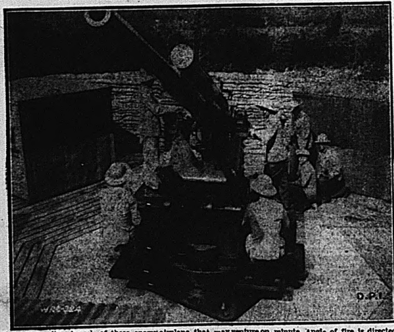
75 Aged Patients Safeguarded From Fumes of Blaze

London, Ont., Sept. 27 (CP)—Steps were taken to safeguard about 75 patients in the McCormick Home for the Aged, while firemen seek to reach the seat of a fire which has been burning three days in the institutions coal pile of more than 100 tons.

Fire Chief Robert McRonald said there is no immediate danger from fumes, though firemen have been unable to use oxygen masks successfully on account of the density of gases in the brick building housing the coal supply.

The Fire Department was called last night, when fumes were noticed in the institution itself. Firemen aided by institution workers, started the job of shovelling into the coal pile.

POINT SKYWARD TO THE EAST



The long, slim barrels of these business-like anti-aircraft guns point threateningly skyward, ready to pour steel into any marauding enemy airplane that may venture on this side of the Atlantic. In the hands of an experienced crew, these 3.7 guns can fire 12 shells a minute. Angle of fire is directed by a range and height finder and a Vickers predictor.

'BERLIN IDYL' OF SCENES IN HITLER'S SHELTER

New York Editor Muses Over Story Telling of Hitler's Retirement During Air Raids and Asks if Hitler Ever 'Catches Certain Look in Clearer Eye of Childhood'

New York, Sept. 27.—(CP)—The New York Herald Tribune mused editorially today upon an Associated Press dispatch from Berlin yesterday which told of Hitler's retirement to an air raid shelter each time air raid alarms sound in the German capital.

Children and women who are either expectant mothers or have just become mothers also are given protection in Hitler's luxurious shelter under his new chancellery, the story related. This prompted the following editorial, captioned "Berlin Idyl", in the Herald Tribune:

"There is not much that is amusing about this war, but The Associated Press has added measurably to its small stock of grim humor by transmitting Berlin's latest propaganda story, describing the Fuehrer sitting nightly in the 'spacious air-raid shelter' under his palatial chancellery, surrounded by a happy throng of children and expectant mothers.

"Accommodations will provide for 600 children and 120 expectant mothers a night, selected (no doubt with the Gestapo's most careful attention to such matters as party regularity and Aryan ancestry) from the city's poorer quarters, where it seems that even the god-state has been able to provide no more than 'inadequate' bomb proofs. Late every afternoon the day's detachment is deposited, by motor bus, at the chancellery's vast doors, and the enraptured children and expectant mothers—or vice versa—descend to pass the air raid in the overpowering presence of their leader.

"There they are given a supper. After that, until bedtime, there is such entertainment as fairy tales, by kindergarten teachers, Punch and Judy shows or children's dances. Hitler often visits the children before they fall asleep'.

'Too Much for Comment'

"There are some situation too much for comment, too much for tears. This idyl of the propaganda machine is one of them. The men of barrenness and death surrounded by childhood and fecundity (mingled in teutonically exact proportions), this author of the new world opening the little ones' eyes to its beauties in a bomb-proof cellar under his palatial chancellery, while the anti-aircraft and the bombs which he loosed on so many other children roar above them—what fairy tale could produce a picture like this? In the morning, no doubt, they ramble—in columns of twos—happily away to their buses, their childish prattle,—of course the prescribed prattle for the day, authorized by Dr. Goebbels—warming the Fuehrer's heart. The expectant mothers probably adore him. But does he ever catch a certain look in the clearer eye of childhood?"

BRITISH GUNS REPLY TO NAZIS

London, Sept. 27 (CP).—British long-range guns replied today to a bombardment of the Dover area by German guns on the French coast and an artillery duel was fought across the Strait of Dover.

The German shells rocked the Dover area. About four salvos were fired.

Then after a lull of 25 minutes Britain's long-range rifles began firing, and the bombardment became more intense after half an hour.

A German scouting plane, evidently spotting for the range finders back on the French coast, flew high over the Dover area during the shelling.

Then, soon after the shells began to fall, a formation of Royal Air Force bombers roared out to sea toward Cap Griz Nez, where flashes of the guns could be seen clearly.

Churchill May Make Statement On Dakar Incident

London, Sept. 27 (CP)—Rising criticism for the handling of the Dakar expedition inspired predictions today that Prime Minister Churchill soon would make a formal statement on the failure of the free French-British attempt to align French West Africa into opposition against Germany.

Lobby talk among members of the House of Commons indicated detailed questions would be asked.

The tabloid Daily Mirror carried talk of Parliamentary criticism under the banner line, "Dakar probe is demanded," and commented editorially that "Dakar has claims to rank with the lowest depths of imbecility to which we have yet sunk."

The Times printed only the last communique issued by Gen. Chas. De Gaulle's Free French headquarters, but The Daily Herald (Labor) said "Dakar echoes Narvik. That is why it disturbs us. That is why Parliament must probe the origins of this fiasco and prevent its repetition."

London Observers Claim Pact Aimed at the United States

Hoped it Would Divert Washington's Attention From Europe

SNUB TO MOSCOW

(By J. F. Sanderson Canadian Press Staff Writer).

London, Sept. 27 (CP Cable) —Signing of the German-Italian-Japanese alliance has produced the biggest diplomatic bombshell here since the Russians and Germans announced their non-aggression pact and economic agreements a few days before the war broke out.

There was no immediate official reaction to the tripartite agreement but diplomatic observers suggested it was aimed primarily at the United States in an attempt to divert Washington's attention from Europe and limit American help to Britain.

It was suggested the general strategy behind the pact was a belief by the Nazis and Fascists that they could clean up the war in Europe quickly if American assistance to Britain could be stopped or limited. Then with Japan the three dictator states could dictate their terms to the United States which would be left alone without an active ally.

One of the big questions left unanswered by the published terms of the axis agreement was that Japan would be paid. Both Germany and Italy are putting forth their maximum effort in the war against the British Empire, and it is difficult to see in what way they could help Japan. It may turn out to mean that Japan has picked up nothing more than embarrassing obligations.

Snub To Moscow

It was suggested the obligation assumed by the three axis states to support each other if any of them was attacked by a country not at present engaged in the European war or the Sino-Japanese conflict could only be directed against the United States.

Russia, the only other country which might be affected was expressly exempted in a political sense.

At the same time it was difficult to resist the conclusion that the pact administered a distinct snub to Moscow because of Russia's active support of China against Japan. The view is held here that the Russians have had no reason to welcome Germany's recent diplomatic moves in the Balkans and now the Nazis have linked up with Japan in the Far East with the obvious intention of squeezing the Soviets out of the Asiatic sphere of influence.

The agreement has vast economic implications. At first glance it would not seem that Germany and Italy could add to Japan's economic strength except by using the slow, expensive and laborious route of the trans-Siberian railway which of course would entail Russia's consent. On the other hand Japan, especially if she gains control of Indo-China and perhaps Thialand as well, would be in a position to strike severe economic blows at Britain and the United States.

Soviet's Position "Grave" Claims Moscow Spokesman

Possibility Alliance Presented to Stalin Prior to Signature

MANY CONJECTURES

London, Sept. 27 (CP)—Informed Russian sources declared tonight that the Soviet Union's position in the light of the new German-Italian-Japanese military pact is "dangerous and very grave."

They said the crux of the question was whether Germany had informed the Moscow government of the plan for the tripower alliance as she is bound to, they explained, under clause 111 of the Russian-German pact and "the new agreement turns the anti-comintern pact into a military alliance."

"There is a possibility that the alliance was presented to Moscow prior to signature and that Stalin agreed to it," one Russian source said.

This source believed it unlikely that Moscow had been informed beforehand in view of the fact that the new pact had not been announced in the Russian Capital up to this evening.

He expressed the feeling that "Germany is riding so high she feels she needs no approval save Italy's rubber stamp."

If Russia actually had agreed, he went on, "it is in line with her policy of 'let the world fight and we will pick up the post-war pieces'."

Such a policy might be behind rumors of a proposed non-aggression agreement between the U.S.S.R. and Japan which would protect Russia from war in Asia as the Russian-German pact was supposed to do in Europe, he said.

HIS MAJESTY CONFERS V. C. ON 18-YEAR-OLD

Sergeant John Hannah of Glasgow Wins Eleventh Victoria Cross in War

HIS HEROIC ACTION

London, Sept. 27 (CP)—The King has conferred the Victoria Cross on 18-year-old Sgt. John Hannah of Glasgow, "in recognition of most conspicuous bravery." The announcement was made today by the Air Ministry. It was the 11th time the coveted award "for valor" had been made since the start of the war.

Hannah was wireless operator-air gunner in a plane attacking barge concentrations at Antwerp Sept. 15. An explosive, incendiary bullet started a fire which quickly enveloped the rear cockpits of the plane. He forced his way through the fire to obtain two extinguishers and discovered the rear gunner had left the craft.

Hannah chose to remain to fight the fire. When the extinguishers were emptied he used log books to beat at the flames while thousands of machine-gun bullets exploded and he was almost blinded by the white heat from aluminum melting away. Hannah extinguished the fire and then crawled forward and ascertained that the navigator had left the craft. He passed the latter's log and maps to the pilot who brought the plane successfully to its base. Hannah was badly burned about the face and hands.

SECRETARY HULL GIVES STATEMENT

Alliance of German-Italian Axis With Japan Merely Makes Clear a Relationship Which Has Long Existed Says Secretary

Washington, Sept. 27 (AP)—State Secretary Cordell Hull said today that Japan's alliance with the German-Italian axis merely made clear "a relationship which has long existed in effect" and which the United States had taken into account in determining its own policies.

Hull made this comment in a statement to a press conference. Previously President Roosevelt had told reporters he could not say anything about the pact signed today in Berlin because he had received nothing official on it.

Hull's statement follows:—

"The reported agreement of alliance does not, in the view of the Government of the United States, substantially alter a situation which had existed for several years.

"Announcement of the alliance merely makes clear to all a relationship which has long existed in effect and to which this Government has repeatedly called attention.

"That such an agreement has been in process of conclusion has been well known for some time and that fact has been fully taken into account by the Government of the United States in the determining of this country's policies."

Hull refused to elaborate in any way on this statement.

The Secretary said he had seen the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian, during the morning but that the conference related to the location of the air and naval base sites recently acquired from Great Britain in the Atlantic, and not to the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo action.

Mr. Roosevelt, when asked at the White House whether the 10-year treaty was unexpected, replied yes and no, but did not elaborate.

WILLKIE DETAILS FARM PROGRAM

Calls for Expanded Markets and Improvement of Present Projects

Aboard Wilkie train enroute to Madison, Wis., Sept. 27 (AP). —Wendell L. Wilkie travelled today across Iowa's broad corn fields from Omaha, where he recommended a farm program calling for expanded markets and improvement of present United States federal agricultural projects.

The Republican presidential nominee also promised that if elected, he would invite representatives of farm, factory, labor and consumer to the White House to "tackle the job, at long last, of ending economic stagnation and of preventing a common disaster."

In his first general discussion of farm problems, Wilkie told an Omaha audience last night:

"Let us take over—and improve if possible—these elements of the present (federal) program which are helping the farmer in his battle against the contradicting economy that the new deal has brought about.

"But let us not pretend that that program is our solution. We must go to the roots of our trouble. By the application of the simple laws of economics we must expand the domestic market and the foreign market."

He offered these suggestions designed to accomplish that end:—

1. Develop new industries to increase both farm and national income.

3. Reduce the cost of transporting marketing and distributoin of farm products.

3. Reduce the cos tof transporting farm products to market, including Federal aid to build farm-to-market roads.

4. Encourage co-operative marketing.

5. Continue the marketing agreement program now in use for dairy products and fresh vegetables.

6. Continue distribution of surplus commodities to the poor as long as a relief problem exists.

He proposed continuance of five New Deal farm programs, subject, he said, to improvement: soil conservation, commodity loans, rural electrification, a farm credit system under an independent agency, and crop insurance on wheat.

Power is so characteristically calm that calmness in itself has the aspect of power, and forbearance implies strength. The orator who is known to have at his command all the weapons of invective is most formidable when most courteous.—Bulwer-Lytton.

Treaty of Havana 'Minimizes Effect' Of Tokyo—Axis Pact, Washington View

London, Sept. 28 (CP).—The British press, almost without exception took the view today that the chief effect of the new German-Italian-Japanese alliance was to link the United States more closely to Britain.

The Daily Mail attached great significance to the conference in Washington yesterday between President Roosevelt and Lord Lothian, the British Ambassador, declaring:

"The announcement of the conference strengthened authoritative but unofficial reports that an agreement of vital importance between the British Empire and the United States has been almost completed."

Most editorials expressed belief that the three-power pact was aimed directly at the United States, and gave great space to reports of American reaction.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Water particles! Water particles in the air vary greatly in size. The smallest are fog or cloud particles so tiny that it would take 2,500 in a row to make an inch. The largest are those that fall in excessive rains or cloud-bursts; it takes only about 12 of these to make a row an inch long. Drops from ordinary rain measure about 25 to an inch. In quiet air these water droplets are always falling. Fog particles fall at the rate of one-tenth of a foot per second, while ordinary rain falls 17 feet per second. They are also always evaporating, which together with vertical currents holding clouds aloft give the impression that clouds float in the air.

Mr. King, Dr. Dafoe And Quintuplets To be Heard Over Radio

Week-end speakers of note over the radio will include President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King. Mr. Roosevelt will be heard today, at approximately 3:30 p.m., during the twice-postponed ceremonies at Washington National Airport, over the major networks in the United States and over CBL and CBC stations in Canada.

Mr. King will speak during a Canadian Red Cross program, which starts at 8 o'clock Sunday night, in which Dr. Allan Dafoe, the Dionne Quintuplets and stars of the stage, screen and radio will take part. This feature will be broadcast by CBL and stations across Canada, as well as by WOR and the Mutual Broadcasting System in United States.

JAPANESE BLAME U.S. ATTITUDE

Say They Cannot Understand U.S. 'Concern Over Areas Where U.S. Interests Hardly Exist'

Tokyo, Sept. 28 (AP).—Japanese reaction to the new Rome-Berlin-Tokyo pact crystallized today in the view that the United States was mainly responsible for conclusion of the treaty through consistent and unfailing opposition to Japanese policies in the last nine years.

"In short," a highly placed Japanese told The Associated Press, "the attitude of the United States forced Japan to take sides. We have done so.

"Japan's friendship need never have been alienated, particularly since America has neither economic nor strategic considerations of any importance in the Far East. We were unable to understand America's concern over areas of the world where America's interests hardly exist."

This source said private conversations between former foreign minister Hachiro Arita of the Yonai government last July constituted the "last attempt" to resolve American-Japanese problems on that basis.

Scrap Metal Embargo.

In response to a question whether the economic pressure of the United States' embargo on scrap metal could be considered an "attack" under Article Three of the new pact, Yakichiro Suma, foreign office spokesman, told Japanese reporters a more exact definition of the word

FINANCE FOURTH ARM OF DEFENCE SAYS CHANCELLOR

Britain Fighting War Wtih Something Axis Powers Lack—Gold

SAVING GROUPS FORMED

Many Cities and Towns in England Regularly Hold Savings Week

By Godfrey Anderson Associated Press Staff Writer.

London, Sept. 28 (AP)—The British Empire is fighting this war with something the axis powers lack —her gold.

"Finance is the fourth arm of defence no less important than the other three," the Chancellor of the Exchequer has said.

But it isn't just an affair of the treasury, of banks and corporations. Humble John Citizen, Britain's "little man," can throw his pence or shillings into the pool.

"Save your way to victory— buy National Defence Bonds" the billboards proclaim, and "lend to defend the right to be free."

Military Cross Awarded to Toronto Insurance Agent

London, Sept. 28—(CP Cable) — Lieut. Robert James Williams, whose daring work in mining bridges helped cover the withdrawal of Allied troops from Namsos, Norway, last spring, was awarded the Military Cross today.

Lieut. Williams, a former Toronto insurance man, was a member of the British forces when, with the assistance of French Alpine troops, he mined the Steinkjer bridge and tunnel and the bridge at Namalseid before the British and French forces sailed down Namsos Fjord.

Since then Lieut. Williams has been transferred to the Canadian Active Service Force.

The official citation says simply that Lieut. Williams received the award "for gallant and distinguished services in action in connection with operations in Norway."

It does not tell how the nerveless Lieutenant, who now has the temporary rank of Captain, blew up bridges, roads and tunnels, delaying the arrival of the Germans at Namsos until the Allied troops had successfully embarked.

Toronto, Sept. 28—(CP)— Lieut. Robert James Williams, awarded the Military Cross for his daring work in covering the withdrawal of Allied troops from Namsos, Norway, was a "live wire" insurance man who worked in Toronto and was also connected at various times with the insurance business in New York, Cincinnati and Newark, N.J.

He was born in London, Eng., Aug. 9, 1891, according to records of the Confederation Life Insurance Company. Friends here described him as "clever, energetic and aggressive" and a man with plenty of nerve.

Migration of Ducks, Geese to South Predicts Early Winter Says Expert

Pasadena, Calif., Sept. 28—(AP) —The wild ducks and geese are right, says Dr. Irving Krick—we're in for an early winter.

"Cool' winds have been blowing down from Alaska and Canada," the California Institute of Technology weather expert said today. 'Instinct seems to tell the wild fowl that now is the time to ride these tail winds south for the winter.

"They have been on the wing for some time and scientific investigations show the birds have had the right weather tip

"Another reliable sign of an early winter is the heavy growth of fur on rabbits. Many of the old weather proverbs are reliable."

Dr. Krick, who used the air-mass system of forecasting, has been making long range forecasts for more than a year now as a sideline to his teaching.

He picked up a written prediction he had made for Michigan State Highway Department which said there would be frosts in the upper part of the State the latter part of September. News reports have just been carried of an early freeze there, he said.

"It will be getting colder, particularly in the east and mid-west now and in early October," said Dr. Krick. "Because this is an early winter does not necessarily mean that it is going to be an unusually severe winter."

Sumner Welles States U.S. Gov't Preparing 'For Any Eventualities'

Reasserts Intention of Government to "Render All Material Support and Assistance" to Great Britain in Her Defence of Democracy

Cleveland, Sept. 28—(CP)—Sumner Welles, United States Undersecretary of State, today reasserted the intention of his government to "render all material support and assistance" in the form of supplies and munitions to Britain and her Dominions "in what we hope will be their successful defence against armed aggression."

In a foreign policy pronouncement considered especially significant because of yesterday's formal alliance of Japan with Germany and Italy, Welles warned that the United States faces as grave a danger as any in its history and said the government was preparing "for any eventualities."

The address was prepared for delivery to the foreign affairs council here.

It served as a response to the Tokyo-Rome-Berlin pact, which was interpreted in world capitals as a move to curb American aid to Britain.

Welles praised the heroism of the British people "in defending successfully their homes and their liberties" and added:

"It is the policy of your government, as approved by the Congress of the United States, and, I believe, by the overwhelming majority of the American people, to render all material support and assistance, through the furnishing of supplies and munitions, to the British government and to the governments of the British Dominions in what we hope will be their successful defence against armed aggression."

Could Peacefully Solve Trouble.

Setting forth "the requirements of the United States" in the Orient, Welles declared there is no problem in the Far East "which could not be peacefully solved through negotiation".

Japan's assault on French Indo-China he condemned as a threat to "the integrity of the French colony" contrary to promises of the Japanese government to respect the status quo in that area.

"In essence," Welles declared, "the primary requirements of the United States in the Far East may be thus simply set forth:

"Complete respect by all powers for the legitimate rights of the United States and of its nationals as stipulated by existing treaties or as provided by the generally accepted tenets of international law.

"Equality of opportunity for the trade of all nations.

"And finally, respect for those international agreements or treaties concerning the Far East to which the United States is a party, although with the expressed understanding that the United States is always willing to consider the peaceful negotiation of such modifications or changes in these agreements or treaties as may in the judgment of the signatories be considered neces-

$1,000,000WORTH OF COAL, COKE SOLD BY CANADA

Dumped on Market When France Capitulated to the Germans

35 BOATS IN CONVOY

Ottawa, Sept. 28—(CP)—How the Wartime Prices and Trade Board successfully disposed of nearly $1,000,000 worth of British soft coal and coke suddenly dumped upon the Canadian market when France capitulated, was described in a "now it can be told story" released Friday by the Board.

A great fleet of grimy coal carriers scurried across the Atlantic, unconvoyed and most of them unprovisioned for an ocean voyage, to prevent their cargoes falling into enemy hands.

Carried across the Atlantic in a fleet of about 30 vessels ranging from small coastal colliers to huge freighters, the coal was originally destined for France but was diverted when that country asked the Germans for an armistice.

When Germany first struck down into France and took over the principal large mining areas, British coal had to be shipped over in large quantities to help French industries.

At the moment France asked for an armistice there were 35 boat loads of British coal and coke either enroute to France or actually unloading at French ports. They were ordered to proceed full steam to Canada.

American Steamer, Alice Tebb, Disabled

Thomaston, Me., Sept. 28.—(AP) —Mackay radio said today it had picked up a distress signal from the "American Steamer Alice Tebb", giving her position as about 600 miles northeast of Jacksonville, Fla. The vessel reported her seams had opened.

The Tebb reported she was in need of assistance of nearby ships or coast guard vessels.

Mackay said several other ships had picked up the distress call but that it was not known whether they were near enough to give aid.

Cause of the seams opening was not known.

The Tebb gave her position as latitude 31 north and longitude 71.10 west.

SIR F. STUPART, METEOROLOGIST, DIES IN TORONTO

Affectionately Known as "Old Probs" Would Have Been 83 in October

RETIRED IN 1929

Toronto, Sept. 28 (CP).—Funeral services will be held here Monday at the Church of St. Alban the Martyr for Sir Frederic Stupart who died at his home last night. He would have been 83 next Oct. 24.

Sir Frederic, affectionately known as "Old Probs", was one of the world's outstanding contributors to the advancement of meterology. He retired eleven years ago as director of the Meteorological Service of Canada. His fame as a meteorologist spread far beyond Canada and his contributions to literature of that science appeared in many publications.

Since his retirement in January of 1929, Sir Frederic lived quietly with his books. His interest in the forces which go to make up weather never flagged following his withdrawal from active work. He was Canada's "weatherman" for 34 years and to his efforts is given much of the credit for the sound position of Canadian meteorological work today.

Born In Toronto.

Born in this district, Sir Frederic was educated at a private school and at Upper Canada College here. He entered the Canadian Meteorological Service in 1872, advanced rapidly, and the present methods of fore-

Italian Advance Not Considered Menace

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 28.—(AP)— The newspaper Al Azima said today Egypt has not declared war on Italy, whose troops have driven a 60-mile spearhead into her western desert, because the "overwhelming superiority of the Allied (British) forces over the invaders leaves no doubt as to the result".

Discussing the same subject, the newspaper Messawar said military experts believe that, by not declaring war until Egyptian objectives are attacked, Egypt would be more fully prepared to take a full share of the war burden when the time came.

The Italian advance up to the present over "desert and negligible regions", Messawar said, could not be considered as a menace, and had been expected for six months.

BOMBS DROPPED FIVE-A-MINUTE FOR OVER AN HOUR

Buildings and Warehouses in French Atlantic Port Destroyed

TIMBER YARDS ABLAZE

Attack is Extension of RAF Raids on Possible Invasion Bases

London, Sept. 28—(CP)— Royal Air Force bombers wrecked buildings and warehouses and set timber yards ablaze in a 3 1-2-hour bombardment of the French Atlantic port of Lorient last night, Air Ministry announced today.

In the first phase of the attack high explosive and incendiary bombs fell at the rate of five a minute for over an hour, an Air Ministry bulletin said.

"Good visibility and a cloudless sky enabled many of the attackers to pin point the damage caused by their bombs," it stated.

Lorient is in the occupied zone of France on the southern side of the Brittany peninsula. The attack there was an extension of the R. A. F. offensive against low-country and French coastal bases for possible German invasion.

The new "invasion base" was engulfed by billowing smoke as the last of the raiders departed in early morning. Some of the fires were visible to the fliers as they crossed the northern coast of the Brittany peninsula, 70 or 80 miles away.

A large munitions works at Dusseldorf, as well as the familiar railway yard targets at Hamm and Mannheim in Germany, were also bombed.

Spain Hestitant About Joining The Axis Powers

New York, Sept. 28 (CP)—The New York Times said editorially today the delay in Spain's formally announcing her adherence to the axis "is a further indication of hesitation to fall in completely with the plans of Germany and Italy."

"In her present state Spain can do little to further these plans except to open a way for a land attack on Gibraltar, and this would involve a virtual occupation of the country which even the most Nationalistic and Fascist elements would detest," said the Times.

CHINESE SAY ACT HOSTILE

Hong Kong (AP)—A section of the Chinese press today urged recall of the Chinese Ambassadors to Germany and Italy in protest against the Axis' alliance with Japan. The newspapers said recognition by Germany and Italy of Japan's "right to establish a new order in East Asia" was a hostile action against China. They asserted the Rome-Berlin Axis had no right to meddle in Far Eastern affairs and that Japan had no right to meddle in European affairs.

Hamilton, Ont. Sept. 28.—(CP) —Mrs. Kathleen Palmer, 28, of Hamilton, who suffered a fractured skull in a freak accident yesterday died early today at the General hospital.

She was riding in a car driven by her husband, Clifford Palmer, the door of the machine came open and she fell out on the street.

Overnight Raids On London Area Cost Nazis Dearly

800 Enemy Planes Observed in One Flight Trying to Reach Capital

London, Sept. 28—(CP)—German bombers struck at London again today in a mid-morning raid after a furious overnight assault that wound up three successive weeks of air siege of the British capital.

Royal Air Force fighter planes immediately swarmed up to intercept the first raiders and after a short time Londoners emerged from their shelters.

Authorities said the overnight raids, had cost the Germans dearly. They estimated the Nazis lost 133 aircraft yesterday alone, bringing their total losses for September, so far, to more than 1,000 machines for the second successive month.

Cloud-darkened skies hid the number of German planes sent at Britain in almost endless procession, during the night, but observers said they kept to the recently stepped-up pace of attack.

The force of the latest air blows at Britain was illustrated by reports of observers that at least 1,000 German planes were launched at London alone yesterday. One great wave of raiders seen trying to smash through the Kent coast defence apparently included 300 bombers and an escort of nearly 500 fighting Messerschmitts.

Br. Pilot Sacrifices Life to Destroy Large Nazi Bomber

London, Sept. 28 (CP)—Illustrating the official view that the defense of the metropolis has been extraordinarily successful, the Air Ministry declared last night that of 180 German planes that crossed the Kentish coast in the day's first big offensive wave, only thirty—all fighters—got through to London, the bombers having been turned back.

One of the most dramatic incidents of the day was reported from the coast near Beachy Head. Watchers there saw a British pilot apparently deliberately ram a German Junkers plane, tearing off its tail, at the cost of his own life.

Residents in the vicinity of Kinneridge, Southwest England, saw the destruction of three enemy planes, one of which exploded in mid-air "like a ball of fire, from which thousands of sparks appeared to be thrown," it was stated. Three other aircraft were reported downed further westward.

Spectators crowded the streets of the Wareham district, also in the southwest, and cheered when three Nazis were brought down during a tremendous air battle over the Dorset coast.

Watchers at Hastings saw two planes, one of them a bomber, come down. One of Germany's latest four-engined bombers crashed at East Grinstead, in the southeast, with a Spitfire at its tail.

LAST LEADER DIES

Madrid, Sept. 28.— (AP) —The last leader of Spain's Republican Government, Julian Besteiro, 70-year-old Socialist leader, died last night in the prison cell at Carmona to which he was committed a year ago after a military tribunal convicted him of helping to prolong the Spanish Civil War.

Signing of New Pact Shows Failure Of Invasion Plan Has Axis Worried

New York, Sept. 28 (CP). — The New York Times said today the signing of the German-Italian-Japanese pact shows clearly that the plans of the axis for the swift conquest of Britain have met with a real reverse "and that they now feel it necessary to call upon fresh reinforcements in the form of the psychology of fear"

"Japan has two motives for entering the alliance," said the Times editorially. "She needs to convince her exhausted people that they have 'friends' abroad and to force the United States to lift the sanctions which now promise to handicap her military efforts, or at least to refrain from imposing new ones.

"On their side the axis powers are increasingly troubled by the effective assistance which the United States is giving Britain. The authors of the new alliance have miscalculated badly if they think it possible to confuse the American people about the importance to us of the successful defence of the British islands and the eventual victory of Britain in this war."

Uruguayan Papers Fire 'Reprisal' Blasts At Italian Sheet

Montevideo, Sept. 28—(AP)— Uruguayan newspapers fired "reprisal" blasts yesterday at the Italian newspaper Regime Fascista of Cremona in a bitter word battle over the neutral status of Uruguay, which currently is sifting evidence against Nazi plotters.

Regime Fascista yesterday accused Uruguay of being "at the service of sterling"—meaning the British pound sterling—that she must consider herself "a belligerent against the totalitarians" and added something about a settling of accounts in the not too far distant future.

Meanwhile eight Nazi charged with an ambitious plot to conquer Uruguay remained in jail while Judge Hamlet Reyes thumbed volumes of evidence prepared for their trial.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

32½-POUND LUNGE CAUGHT IN MOIRA R.

The "muskies" are still running in the Moira River, despite frosty mornings and other inclemencies of fishing weather. Proof of this is seen in the fine catch hauled in Friday by W. I. Cole, Corbyville, and Fraser Worrell, East Moira Street, Belleville. The big fish which put up a strenuous fifteen-minute battle before saying "uncle" tipped the scales at 32 1-2 pounds and measured four feet, two inches from tail to gills. It was the biggest fish the two fishermen have caught thus far and naturally they are elated over their late-season good fortune.

WINS GRAIN PRIZE AT MEAFORD FAIR

Hastings County grain compared favorably with that grown in other parts of the province at the Meaford Fair recently when barley grown by Clem H. Ketcheson, Sidney township, took fourth prize in a province-wide competition. The contest was sponsored by a Mr. Stanley Knight for the winners of field crop competitions throughout Ontario. Mr. Ketcheson's barley, which won for him the sum of $20.00 was of the O.A.C. variety.

MAJOR H. S. ALDERMAN TO PREACH FAREWELL SERMON SUNDAY

Members of the local corps of the Salvation Army and a large number of friends of other denominations will pay a farewell tribute Sunday to Major H. S. Alderman, popular commanding officer, who leaves on Wednesday of next week for his new charge in Sussex, New Brunswick.

Major Alderman's successor will arrive on October 10th, but today his identity has not been released by Salvation Army headquarters.

The popular Salvationist will preach his farewell sermons at both morning and evening services at the Citadel, Pinnacle Street, on Sunday.

SIX KITTENS DESTROYED AT POUND

Six little kittens without their mittens, or even a home, were destroyed at the city dog pound yesterday. The offsprings of a feline were found abandoned near the Swift Canadian plant yesterday where they had been left by a group of children. Thomas Thorne, city dog pound custodian, stated the animals had been brought to Belleville from Point Anne and given to a group of children, who in turn deserted them.

A brown and white Spaniel dog was picked up and placed in the city dog pound yesterday. A collar, but no city dog tag, was found on the canine.

AUTOMOBILE STRIKES SIDE OF HOUSE

The family of P. O. Pitney, 157 Ann Street, were justified in believing a bombing raid was in progress when their home not only quivered, but was actually moved on its foundation early last evening. The family ran to the doors and windows only to find that a neighbor in an attempt to drive his automobile into his family driveway had collided with the side of Mr. Pitney's house.

Mr. H. O. Truesdale, 159 Ann Street, was driving home and had turned into the driveway between his home and that of Mr. Pitney's when he apparently turned the vehicle too sharply, resulting in the automobile striking the side of the Pitney home with such force that the house was actually shifted slightly on its foundation. Mr. Truesdale's son, who was riding in the family car, was hurled forcibly against the windshield of the vehicle and sustained painful head lacerations. Dr. G. S. Cronk attended the injured lad at his home.

VISITING ORCHESTRA ENTERTAINS MEMBERS OF ST. MICHAEL'S BAND

Members of the St. Michael's Academy Band thrilled to the rhythms of an outstanding radio, stage and dance band in the school Friday when the Morgan Thomas orchestra, which has made its headquarters in this city for the past two weeks, entertained the young musicians with a varied program.

The versatile members of the orchestra, who were invited to hear the youngsters rehearse the other day were so enthused over the children's ability and art that they acceded to a request of the youngsters to stage a regular rehearsal in the school.

Intense interest was shown by the children as the orchestra went through its musical paces, and each number was given a fine reception.

Morgan Thomas and his clever artists, who have been playing throughout the district for the past few weeks, are rapidly gaining popularity with dance-lovers, and their smooth style and sparkling rhythms mark them as one of the outstanding dance bands to play in this vicinity.

Demure Tag Seller Bests Crusty Male With Smart Repartee

Quick thinking resulting in smart repartee gained a youthful tag-steller a contribution for her box today. It appears the young lady in question solicited a prosperous looking gentleman to purchase a tag. He looked at her, snorted, and gave her his opinion generally of tag-days, finishing with the remark, "This tag business is getting to be a habit—and I don't like it."

The young miss looked at the man for a moment then remarked demurely, "And that Lieut. Davies who removed the bomb from St. Paul's Cathedral didn't like the job either."

The man, temporarily nonplussed, gazed at the young woman for a second, then gave her a dollar bill for her tag box and strode away.

BAPTIST CHOIR CONCERT ENJOYED

Varied Program Given by Leading Artists in This City

The concert held Friday evening in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, under the auspices of the choir was a source of rich enjoyment to the many music lovers, who were present. Interspersed with clever readings, the program was a delight to those who seek cultural entertainment of the highest order.

Mr. Leo Riggs played Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata" and the facility with which he executed the three movements was completely satisfying. Appreciated to the full was the organ music by Mr. Alec Gordon, who played three numbers, "The Little Red Lark", "Triumphal March" and "The Navy's Here."

Vocalists included Mr. John W. Deacon, whose magnificent voice was heard in the singing of "Thank God for a Garden" and "Lift Thine Eyes". Mrs. C. L. Ellis, who sang the lovely number by Stanton, "A Spirit Flower" and Mr. Harold McNish, who contributed splendidly with "From Wave to Wave." Piano accompaniment was supplied by Mr. Alec Gordon.

Miss Mildred Lloyd's gift of mimicry was exercised to the full when she gave the impressions of a registrar's difficulties in dealing with different ages and characters during National Registration. Another humorous number, "Watching the Sparking" was also given. Miss Bernice Arbuckle recited S. R. Crocket's stirring story, "In Coventanting Days" and a humorous number, "The Embattled Feminist", which the audience enjoyed immensely. Miss Anna Hogle's contribution with "Angela's Mission Box" was very favourably received as also her recitation "Canadian Born" by the Canadian Poetess, Pauline Johnstone. Mrs. C. Franklin played softly on the piano, "O Canada" during this soul-stirring number.

Mr. John Jury, who acted as chairman, led a brief sing-song of favourite patriotic numbers. Closing prayer was offered by the Rev. C. T. Olmstead.

Lawn Bowling

A splendid geature was displayed by the winners of the annual Belleville Lawn Bowling Club district rinks tournament, held in this city Friday, when the tournament winners turned their prizes back into the fund for which the matches were played. The Belleville Lawn Bowling Club inaugurated a rinks tournament in aid of the Red Cross one year ago and held their second annual tournament, with lawn bowlers being present from Stirling, Havelock and Belleville. All proceeds were given over to the Red Cross. Following the winning of the matches the three teams to win prizes reverted their winnings into the Red Cross fund. The prizes of the day were War Savings Stamps.

Flowery Advice

Married men paused hopefully outside the Dorothy Quick florist shop early today and gazed wistfully at a sign that hung in the window It read "The Quickest Way To Get Out of The Doghouse." But here is the catch. Underneath the large letters ran the advice in small type, "buy a dozen roses for such and such a price."

200 MEN, WOMEN FOR NIGHT SCHOOL

Night School Will Open at B. C. I. & V. S. on Tuesday Night

After only two nights of registration over two hundred young men and women from the Belleville district have enrolled for the night school classes which are to open next Tuesday evening at the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School, stated Principal MacLaurin on Saturday morning. Vocational studies such as machine shop work and welding seemed to be the choice of the majority of the young men seeking registration, it was revealed, but all classes for the night school are now completely filled.

So prompt was the response of young persons seeking instruction through night school classes that 120 were registered on Thursday evening, the first night of registration. Thursday night's registration alone proved sufficient to fill the machine shop class and many applying on Friday evening were disappointed to find that this class was closed to them. In addition to the machine shop class in which about fifty are enrolled, there is the welding class with 40 entrants, the motor mechanics class with 35, the woodworking class with 25 and also a typewriting class.

Although the night school classes are now closed, there is still room in the war emergency classes for the training of skilled workers. These classes will be for mechanics who can spare part time to attend and will undoubtedly comattend and will undoubtedly commence around three o'clock in the afternoon, stated Mr. MacLaurin.

OBITUARY

MRS. GOLDIE T. CAMPBELL (Toronto)

The death occurred suddenly on Friday, Sept. 27th, at St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, of Coral Stewart, wife of Mr. Goldie T. Campbell, and mother of Shirley and Robbie.

The funeral will take place in Toronto on Monday, Sept. 30th. Interment will be made in Pine Hill cemetery.

LATE JOSEPH VINCELLI

The funeral of Joseph Vincelli took place this Saturday morning from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. P. Ferraro, 151 Station Street, to St. Michael's Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father Rowell. The committal prayers at the graveside in St. James' cemetery were said by the Rev. Father Collins.

The bearers were Messrs. Fred St. Louis, James Jenova, Nicolf Pidgon, Domenoc De Carlo, Percy Barnett and Robert Carey.

THE LATE GEORGE BRIGDEN (Napinka, Man.)

The friends of the late George Brigden will be sorry to hear of his passing away, Sept. 26 at the home of his son after a short illness.

The late George Brigden was the son of the late Harry and Annie Brigden ,he was born at Roslin 79 years ago. His early life was lived at Roslin and the past fifty years he has resided at Napinka, Man. He was married 48 years ago, his wife who formerly was Mary Holbert, of Moira, predeceased him a year ago. He was a member of the United Church.

He is surprised by two sons, Allan and Ernest Brigden, both of Napinka, Man.

The funeral will take place from his late residence Saturday afternoon, Sept. 28th.

PRICES REMAIN UNCHANGED ON LOCAL MARKET

Fruits of All Kind Offered in Plentiful Quantities With Peaches Predominating

EGGS 35 CTS. DOZEN

Prices remained steady on the Belleville market on Saturday morning with all kinds of produce being held practically at last week's levels. Peaches sold at 45 cents for special grades, 40 cents for No. 1's, and 35 cents for No. 2's. Grapes were offered in larger quantities than at any previous occasion this season, selling at 40 cents per basket for both blue and green varieties. Bartlett pears were plentiful at 45 cents per basket for No. 1's and 35 cents for seconds. Plums sold at 45 cents per basket for Raine Claudes while Blue Damsons were plentiful at 20 cents per basket. British prunes were 40 cents the basket.

Tomatoes remained at 75 cents per bushel or at 15 cents per basket despite the fact that frost ruined a considerable portion of the crop. Watermelons and muskmelons sold at 25 cents each and downwards for both varieties. Cooking apples sold at $1.00 per bushel for most varieties or at 30c per peck. St. Lawrence apples sold at 35 cents per basket and McIntosh at 25 cents. Crab apples were 25 cents per basket.

Corn sold at 20 cents per dozen ears and potatoes remained at the usual figure of 25 cents per peck, 85 cents per bushel and $1.10 per 75-pound bag. Cauliflower was plentiful, selling from 35 cents downward according to size. Cucumbers sold from 50 cents per basket and up to $1.00 per basket for gherkins. Quart boxes of gherkins were held at 20 per cent. Bunched vegetables were displayed in profusion at 5 cents per bunch, while other vegetables held at the usual prices.

Grade "A" large eggs sold at last week's price of 35 cents per dozen with medium grades at 32 cents. Grade "A" pullet eggs sold at 30 cents per dozen. Fresh dairy butter was held at 30 cents per pound. Fowl was held at prices approximating 25 cents per pound with large birds selling for $1.25 and downward. Broilers sold from 75 cents to 90 cents per pair. A few ducks were offered at 90 cents and $1.00 each.

Buyers missed the usual offering of whitefish and lake trout with only pike at 10 cents per pound, mudcats at two pounds for 25 cents and rock fish at 40 cents per dozen being offered.

Mixed wood, in one foot lengths, sold at prices averaging $8.00 per cord, while young pigs sold at $4.50 to $5.00 each.

Son of Restaurant Proprietor Returns Lost Purse to Owner

Jimmie Ling, son of the proprietor of the Quinte Cafe on Bridge Street, brought joy into a tourist's life Friday when he was instrumental in the returning of a lady's purse, containing over $100.00 to the rightful owner.

A party of tourists dined at the Quinte Cafe at noon, but following their departure Mr. Ling Jr., found a lady's purse, containing a large sum of money, that had been left behind at the cafe. Mr. Ling immediately notified the police authorities of the incident. Shortly after 6.30 p.m. last evening Belleville police received a long distance telephone call from St. Catharines, Ont., stating that a purse was missing and the caller sought the possibility of it being in the Quinte Cafe in Belleville.

"Yes, we have your purse here. It was given to us by Mr. Ling, proprietor of the cafe where you stopped here at noon," assured local police officials. The owner instructed the police to give the finder a suitable reward, which was refused. The purse was sent to St. Catharines today.

THREE SQUADRONS OF R.C.A.F. MEN READY FOR NAZIS

Canadian Units in the Skies Guard England and Canadians in the R.A.F. Bring Honor to Dominion

Ottawa, Sept. 28 — (CP) — An all-Canadian air force establishment of two squadrons will probably be attached to Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton's army corps. This is expected to happen when the corps becomes the "Canadian Corps" — probably in a few months when the 2nd Division completes its training and joins the 1st Division.

Canadian airmen have already gained laurels in the Battle of Britain, but many of them as members of the Royal Air Force. While one squadron of the Royal Canadian Air Force battles the enemy over London skies, two others stand ready for action in support of the Canadian land forces when and if the Germans land on British soil or the Canadians move out to fight on continental battlefields.

The three R. C. A. F. squadrons went overseas as units complete with all categories of trained personnel and took aircraft and equipment with them. Two are army co-operation squadrons, one to be attached to each Division and the third is a fighter outfit, commanded by Squadron Leader Ernest McNab of Regina. These men have already made headlines with their success against the Nazi raiders.

Canadians in the R. A. F. are for the most part men who went overseas before the war, many of them working their way across in cattle boats and taking other means of getting into what was then the expected fight.

Canadians' Leaders

Squadron Leader Douglas Bader, D.S.O., who lost both legs in a crackup before the war, is the English chief of an "all-Canadian" squadron of the R. A. F. which includes a large number of lads from Canada. Last month he led a dozen R. A. F. Hurricanes against 70 enemy aircraft and bagged 13 of the raiders. His squadron is credited officially with destroying 72 enemy planes in France.

The first R. C. A. F. squadron to reach Britain was the army co-operation unit under command of Squadron Leader Wilbur Van Vleit of Winnipeg. They went overseas in February to serve with the 1st Division.

These army co-operative squadrons and a fighter squadron consist of something in the neighborhood of 400 men each and for the co-operation work squadron strength ranges upwards from 15 planes.

The army co-operation squadrons are the eyes of the ground forces. They scout out the enemy territory and advise the ground forces and in addition may be used for bomb work or ground strafing.

Ordinarily one air force army co-operation squadron is assigned to assist an army division on active service.

Canada's second army co-operation squadron and the fighter squadron moved across at the time of the German push through the Low Countries. This army co-operation squadron is under the command of Squadron Leader William Clements of North Devon, N. B., and is expected to serve with the 2nd Canadian Division now completing its training overseas.

Canadian air operations overseas are under the general supervision of Air Commodore L. F. Stevenson, formerly of Regina, who recently succeeded Air Commodore G. V. Walsh as air officer commanding overseas headquarters of the R. C. A. F. Air Commodore Stevenson in turn reports to Air Vice Marshal L. S. Breadner, chief of air staff, in Ottawa.

BOMBER CREW HAS ADVENTURES

Saga of Experiences in Battle Over German Canal

London, Sept. 28.— (CP)— Adventures of a Royal Air Force bomber crew over the Dortmund-Ems Canal in Western Germany:—

The bomber flew into intense anti-aircraft fire during a shallow dive and both the hydraulic system and the braking system were put out of action.

The machine completed its attack, although considerable damage was done also to the oil temperature and pressure gauges and to the cylinder temperature guage of the port engine.

A few minutes later the machine was caught in the glare of several searchlights and the pilot was blinded temporarily but prompt advice from the navigator saved the situation. According to the wireless operator the bomber was so low that trees near the target interfered with the enemy's line of fire.

Soon after this encounter the rear gunner reported that oil was running out of the damaged engine. It was therefore throttled back and the return journey was made on the one good engine, with occasional assistance from the other. Later the starboard and the tail wheels dropped down and reduced the air speed.

"In spite of this handicap the aircraft behaved excellently and we landed at our base only half an hour after our estimated time", the captain reported.

"Everything From Soup to Nuts" Will Be On Bill of Fare For Men Called Under Training Act

Ottawa, Sept. 28—(CP)— Men trained under the compulsory military training scheme which begins to operate Oct. 9, need not worry about what they will have to eat in camps. They will have "everything from soup to nuts." And it will be prepared by real cooks.

The National Defence Department announced Friday that the food will be prepared and dished up by men who really "know their onions." These cooks will be a permanent staff in the centres to which they are assigned, after completing a special training course at Camp Borden.

During the six-weeks' course, they were shown how to prepare generous, sanitary and good-tasting rations based on recommendations of a committee of scientists and experts in dietetics. Formed through the National Research Council of Canada, the committee has worked out a diet providing for a balanced ration featuring health-giving foods.

The menu for trainees will be the same as that for Canada's armed forces and includes 17 standard commodities and certain alternatives, such as chocolate for tea or coffee. The diet is arranged also to bring under-nourished men to the pink of physical condition in a short period and then maintain that condition.

A Great Variety

Included in the menu are Canadian fish, fresh, dried, canned, filleted or smoked. The beef and fresh meats ration has been reduced from one pound to 14 ounces so that a greater variety may be had in the soldier's meals. Bread now is provided on the basis of 14 ounces per day, but the cook may draw 14 ounces of flour as an alternative plus shortening and baking powder, for pies, cakes, cookies.

In lieu of the bacon allotment, three ounces of salt pork per man may be had. The issue of eggs for each man is four a week. Cereals and macaroni are alternative issues to the rice ration. Units may draw 10 ounces of fresh pasteurized milk for 50 per cent of its strength each day, and five ounces of irradiated evaporated whole milk for the remainder.

Canadian honey is also now on the list. So are corn syrup and molasses, as alternatives for jam. Fresh apples are available, as well as dried Canadian apples, canned Canadian apple-pie filler and canned Canadian pumpkin.

Canned tomatoes are an alternative for fresh vegetables which have been increased to eight ounces from six daily. Split peas and dried beans remain on the list as before.

Each man is allotted three ounces of granulated sugar a day. Iodized salt, 1-2 an ounce a day, replaces the ordinary table salt. There also is an allowance of 1-36th of an ounce of pepper daily. No mention is made of toothpicks.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, September 29

SUNDAY'S horoscope is of paramount importance for all concerns of church and state, all religious, philanthropic, educational and humanitarian interests and movements. These are all under a most expansive and benign influence, with a stabilizing force as well making for enduring and productive growth with increasing prestige and popularity. It is a time to reach for high goals and rich fruition of exalted aspirations. Use initiative but discretion.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year of splendid promise and excellent opportunity for attaining their highest ambitions, aspirations and objectives, in whatever direction these may trend. This comes as recognition and reward of merit, for fortitude, industry, enduring courage solidity and responsibility, and the returns and token of esteem should be corresponding. Seek promotion and all cherished manifestations of fond hopes and wishes.

A child born on this day may have many sterling qualities of character and capability, with initiative, generosity, humane, compassionate and trustworthy, all making for a career of signal success and happiness.

For Monday, September 30

Monday's astrological forecast is for a singularly active and exciting day, with much commotion and probably drastic uprooting from old fastnesses, plans, ideas. It is a time for radical reorientations, opportunity descending with dramatic and dynamic force. There will be opposition to challenge such openings, such to be handled with suavity and discretion rather than tempest and impetuosity. Social matters and elders, figure and probably romantic adventure also.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of sudden and surprising events which may have a radical and far reaching effect on future destiny. Splendid opportunities for progress and dynamic achievement are ahead, but opposition is to be placated by tact and discretion rather than quarrels and recklessness. It is possible that romance and high adventure await as well, with thrills and joy.

A child born on this day will be original, independent, in thought and action, skilful, ingenious, romantic and adventurous.

Inquiry Opened Into Cause When Wing Commander and Flying Officer Lose Lives

Ottawa, Sept. 28—(CP)—An examination will be made today by Royal Canadian Air Force officials of the wreckage of an advanced training plane that crashed near here yesterday, killing its two occupants.

The victims, Wing Cmdr. Grenville Hammerton Shaw, Royal Air Force, and F.O. Donald Sidney Thomson Young, Royal Canadian Air Force, had taken off at nearby Uplands Air Training School, a unit of the British Commonwealth Air Training plan. Wives of both men reside in Montreal.

The National Defence Department said cause of the accident was "not immediately discernable." Farmers who watched the plane in its fatal plunge to a rocky embankment on a farm, said they heard an explosion just before the crash.

The engine and propeller were imbedded deep in the ground a few feet ahead of the plane itself which was found right side up, as though it had pulled out of its spin before it hit earth.

Wing Cmdr. Shaw was born in England 33 years ago and was seconded to the R.C.A.F. in January this year. He was attached to No. 3. training command, Montreal, and was a son of Capt. and Mrs. F. H. Shaw of London.

Flying Officer Young was born at Saint John, N.B., in 1907, attended public schools there, Rothesay Collegiate school, Rothesay, N.B., and McGill University. His father is Sidney Clark Young of Saint John.

Canada's War Chiefs

HON. CHARLES GAVAN POWER

Minister of National Defence For Air

By C. R. BLACKBURN

In his office at Royal Canadian Air Force headquarters Hon. Charles Gavan Power, Minister for Air, is a grim-visaged, dead-in-earnest administrator of a tremendous war undertaking.

But in his moments of relaxation "Chubby" Power is a jovial companion, a mirth-provoking after-dinner speaker and a master of repartee in political debate.

He was made Minister of National Defence for Air when the new department was created by act of parliament last May.

Two months later he was sworn in as Associate Minister of National Defence, an additional portfolio created to lighten the burden upon Defence Minister Ralston who has general jurisdiction over all arms of the service.

Thus his full title is "Associate Minister of National Defence and Minister of National Defence for Air." But nearly everybody calls him "Chubby" and he does not seem to mind, even when it comes from an absent-minded correspondent at a formal press conference.

The name "Chubby" was applied to him when he was a small, well-rounded boy at Sillery, a Quebec suburb where he was born Jan. 18, 1888.

It stayed with him through his college days when he was a star hockey and football player, through his service overseas which brought him the military cross and crippling wounds, and throughout his long political career.

Now, nearing his 52nd birthday, Major Power is of medium height, well-built and jaunty in his bearing, active in his movements. His thick, dark hair is graying, as is his crisp moustache. He is somewhat swarthy and wears horned-rimmed glasses at his desk. He swings these in his hand when in conversation or debate.

Of Quebec Family

The Powers have been prominent lumber dealers in Quebec for three generations. His great-grandparents on both sides of his family came out from Ireland near the end of the 18th century. Charles Gavan trained for legal practice and has devoted to that profession what time he has had to spare in 23 years' constant membership in the House of Commons.

When he became Air Minister, Major Power declared at once that he would have to learn from the ground up. He put in long hours at it and soon produced results. He is head of the $650,000,000 commonwealth air training scheme launched last fall and designed to turn out great numbers of air personnel for the forces of Great Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

Germany's crushing defeat of the Low Countries and France forced a halt in British plane deliveries for the scheme and looked for a time as though it would be wrecked before it got well underway.

"We're going to get those machines somewhere, and we are going to get this plan working in half the time (three years) originally planned," Major Power declared. Recently he was able to announce virtual attainment of these objectives.

Major Power always felt a dislike for the so-called "brass hats" and frequently said so publicly. When he went into the defence department he felt a little apprehension on that score. But he found no "brass hats," as he had pictured them, in the air force and he has been happy in his associations with the great number of officers he has to work with.

Career in Other War

On Sept. 26, 1916, after a brilliant career of service in France, Major Power was severely wounded. He was being helped by a comrade to reach a dressing station near Regina Trench on the Somme, when a German stretcher bearer, lost on rapidly changing field of battle, encountered the two Canadians and tried to give first aid. A bursting shell killed the German and the other Canadian, and Major Power received further wounds.

After a year in hospital he returned to Canada unfit for further service, in September, 1917.

Three months later he was elected to the House of Commons as Liberal member for Quebec South and he has represented the same riding ever since. His father, William Power, had represented the same district from 1901 to 1917, thus setting up a father-and-son combination of continuous representation probably unequalled in any other riding.

Major Power is fluently bi-lingual. He is a hard-hitting political debater and an authority on election legislation.

A newspaper writer said of Major Power, in 1933, that he was "the owner of as pleasant and friendly a voice as ever cast aspersions upon the honesty, wisdom and good manners of a Tory minister."

He has been a minister himself since October, 1935, when he was sworn in as Minister of Pensions and National Health. He liked this portfolio because it gave him a chance to deal with war veterans. For years he had been active in connection with pension legislation.

As minister he won the respect of his former comrades in arms by his fearless advocacy of their rights, and his candid advice to themselves when he believed they were asking too much.

He was Postmaster-General for several months last winter but creation of an air ministry was already rumored and observers in Ottawa rightly guessed that he would be its head.

Major Power is a little drawn and haggard these days because his job calls for long and arduous toil. But his eyes still twinkle merrily when he has time to tell a new story and hear one in exchange.

ANOTHER CAPTURE BY CANADIAN NAVY

The Canadian Navy has struck again at the enemy in the capture of the German Nazi cargo boat Weser of 9,180 tons, off the coast of Mexico. Reports indicate that this vessel which is said to have been carrying 19,000 barrels of fuel oil and to have had a gun mounted aft may have been a refueling ship for German submarines.

Canadian and naval authorities especially were naturally jubilant about the success of the Prince Robert, a converted merchant cruiser, in taking the German boat which has been hiding about southern ports since the war's outbreak. It is the third capture by Canadian ships.

RAIDS ON BERLIN MILITARY TARGETS

A London newspaper has stated that Royal Air Force planes will appear over Berlin every night. That is disagreeable news for the Germans and for Hitler, who has been spending hours in the twenty-four in the shelters under the Berlin chancellery.

From the days of the pamphlet raids in the early days of the war to the era of nightly raids over the German capital seems a long time but the R.A.F. has with annoying and relentless regularity made its calls on the Berlin people's time as it seeks military targets and pound them in a way which distracts the minds of the Berliners from war work.

The paper stated that when the nights grew longer the R.A.F. visits would be extended to as much as ten hours. The source of the information was not given, but there is no doubt that the British airmen will be over Berlin with regularity.

STAYING POWER OF BRITONS

Speaking of the aerial warfare the Hamilton Spectator says, "It is a question of the survival of the fittest, and happily, in this matter of aerial warfare, the British have clearly established their superiority in machines and personnel. Moreover, in the awful trial of endurance, the advantages are undoubtedly with the Mother Country. Her relative strength improves with every week that passes. Not only at home, but in the assistance she gets from the Empire and the United States, she is piling up an immense reserve which will have increasingly spectacular effect. When the King spoke of the spring as being a time of encouragement for his hard-pressed subjects, he undoubtedly had in mind the vast fund of resources—moral and material—which spell victory for our cause. While the people over there in the Homeland doggedly hold out against the tide of Nazi ruthlessness, it is for those who live in less exposed parts of the Empire to do their bit, by contributing, to the limit of their ability, to every form of support."

This ability to endure, this staying power is what will without doubt be the deciding factor in the struggle.

Britons have the moral staying power and an eminent economist, John Maynard Keynes, says that "Germany has already suffered the nervous tension and muscular exhaustion of five years of prodigious effort." Britain is actually richer in national wealth than she was at the beginning of 1937 and "nothing has happened to us to date to give us excessive anxiety."

Montreal Gazette points out that some buildings have been destroyed from the air but the damage done in London from August to the present time has not exceeded the normal capacity of the building trade. A million pounds worth of destruction could be suffered every night for a year and 'we should not have lost more than 4 per cent. of our buildings and their contents, or more than we could replace in a couple of years.' In the meantime there are in the country great reserves of commodities, foods and raw materials, and these have been increasing rather than diminishing.

"This is as reassuring an analysis as has come out of London since the German attacks commenced, and it is completely dependable because of its origin. It means, among other things, that London cannot be starved; that the national strength is not only unimpaired but is greater than when the struggle began. As to the shipping losses, the official figures show that Britain has lost 8 per cent. of her pre-war merchant fleet but has more than made up for it by new construction and acquisitions."

Mr. Keynes is confident that Britain need not be uneasy about problems of personal and national income.

U. S. SCRAP METAL EXPORT BAN

Only the Americas and Great Britain will be able to buy United States scrap iron and steel in the future.

The ban which placed restrictions on export to all other parts of the world was put into force on the order of President Roosevelt.

Japan whose actions in French Indo-China have had a disturbing influence and who has now signed a ten year military and economic pact with Germany and Italy, will be hit hardest of all the nations by the order. The Japanese have been securing ninety per cent of the material which they use from the United States.

There are heavy demands upon scrap at this time in the intensive defence program which the great Republic is carrying out along with other nations in the two American continents to make the New World safe against aggression.

FINE FEATHERS

Lucio, in the Manchester Guardian.

(The Germans in Paris are threatening to take over and run as German businesses all "fashion houses" whose heads have escaped to America or elsewhere.)

There are those who would disparage German culture,
There are those who say our manners are not nice,
That in plumage we are nearer to the vulture
Than we are to any bird of paradise.
That is nonsense: at the minor airs and graces
We are just as good as any Paris chap,
And in spite of all grimaces from the viler subject races
We can soon put German fashions on the map.

Art with us, you know, is quite a ruling passion,
And one that every Nazi chief supports,
For Goering is a very glass of fashion,
And the Fuehrer was a painter once of sorts.
You need not think that tools of desolation
Exhaust our range of Nazi selling lines;
When we take to decoration we shall yet astound creation
By the novelty and chic of our designs.

Sing hey for Nordic hats to wear on Sundays!
Sing ho for Nordic gowns to shine at night!
Sieg Heil for Nordic slumber—wear or undies,
And any other items of delight!
Did you say that we were more or less barbarian?
When you see our "Paris fashions" going strong,
That are guaranteed all-Aryan, Nazified, totalitarian,
You will also see how greatly you were wrong!

Mr. D. C. Paul, a native of this district and who for the past thirty four years has resided in Saskatchewan at Macdowall, will return shortly to reside in Belleville. In referring to his departure from the district the Daily Herald of Prince Albert says: "D. C. Paul, who for the past ten years has been a familiar and active figure in the life of the rural municipality of Prince Albert, is shortly leaving for Belleville, Ontario, and with his removal the municipality loses its Reeve and the district one of its best known citizens. For the past ten years he has been an active member of the council of the municipality, holding the position of Reeve for half that time."

The Board of Health has instructed citizens to boil the city water until further notice.

Dr. J. E. Affleck of Penticton, B. C., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Affleck, George Street.

German-Canadian Newspaper's View of Hitler

The following is a translation released by the Director of Public Information, of an editorial which appeared in "Der Nordwesten", a German language newspaper published in Winnipeg, Manitoba, on Sept. 20th.

The progress of Hitler's war of invasion on Great Britain is watched with intense interest by the peoples of all races in Canada. By none more so than citizens of European origin, who realize perhaps to a greater extent than ever, that if such a calamity as the fall of British Empire should occur, all their hopes of peace, liberty and security in Canada would collapse simultaneously. The issues at stake are as vital to us in this land as life itself and it is well for our people to realize that. It all helps to contribute to the magnificent effort put forth by this Dominion to save all that is left of the Democracies of this world. A Hitler victory would mean for Canadians servititude, regimentation and an absolute farewell to the privileges that we as a freedom loving people cherish deeply. The opportunity of avoiding such a disaster is open to all of us — by strengthening our fighting forces, by contributing to the utmost of our ability to the different funds for which the Government of Canada is appealing in its great task. There is no sounder security for our earnings to be found anywhere today than the guarantee of the Dominion of Canada. Every Dollar will come back with interest, whether it be in Bonds, Certificates, or Stamps. The plan includes facilities for small sums as well as large. Every Dollar invested with the Government becomes a soldier, fighting on our behalf, the battle of Right against the tyranny of Cruelty and Wrong. Force must be met with force. The enemy understands no other language. All the strength and genius which the people of Britain, Canada, and the other Dominions can munster, are necessary to victory. There is something everyone of us can do in this conflict of unprecedented violence which has been thrust upon us by an unscrupulous and ruthless foe, to whom the lives of helpless women and children are less than nothing. While the seriousness of the situation must not be minimized it would be equally foolish to let any idea of defeat take possession of us. In England, where the war wages in all its fury, people know no such spirit. Their courage and determination, amidst carnage and destruction, is a shining example to the world. In the defence of the British Isles, we are proud of the part being played by our own Canadians, and the part, we believe, this country will play in the final victory.

The spirit of Britain was never better exemplified than in an address by Prime Minister Winston Churchill in the House of Commons on September 11th. He knows the situation as few people do, and he knows his own people better than any other British statesman. He said:

"It is with devout but sure confidence that I say let God defend the right. These cruel, wanton, indiscriminate bombings of London are of course a part of Hitler's invasion plan. He hopes by killing large numbers of the civilians and women and children that he will terrorize and cow the people of this mighty imperial city and make them a burden and anxiety to the government, and thus distract our attentions unduly from the ferocious onslaught he is preparing.

Little does he know the spirit of the British nation or the tough fibre of the Londoner whose forebears played a leading part in the establishment of parliamentary institutions and who have been bred to value freedom far above their lives.

This wicked man, the repository and embodiment of many forms of soul-destroying hate, this monstrous product of former wrongs and shame has now resolved to try to break our famous island race by a process of indiscriminate slaughter and destruction.

What he has done is to kindle a fire in British hearts here and all over the world which will glow long after all traces of the conflagration he has caused in London have been removed. He has lighted a fire which will burn with a steady and consuming flame until the last vestiges of Nazi tyranny have been burnt out of Europe and until the Old World and the New can join hands to re-build the temples of man's freedom and man's honour upon foundations which will not soon or easily be overthrown.

This is a time for everyone to stand together and hold firm, as they are doing."

CREATORS OF PLANES ARE MODEST MEN

(By C. A. LYON)

The skill and courage of our fighter pilots have helped bring two new words into everyday language: Spitfire and Hurricane.

People to whom a year ago aeroplanes were just aeroplanes, now speak of Spitfires and Hurricanes with the familiarity extended to old friends. But not one in a thousand people know the names of the men whose brains created these fighters. Reginald Mitchell, the designer of the Spitfire, died three years ago at the age of forty-two. He did not live to see and enjoy his Spitfires' fame. Mitchell began life as an elementary school boy, the son of a printer at Stoke-on-Trent. From there he went to Stanley high school. When he was sixteen he entered engineering as an apprentice with a firm of locomotive builders at Stoke. His father recalled some time ago how, after long hours in the workshop, he would go on to science classes in the evening.

During the last war he went to the Vickers Supermarine factory as an engineer charged with the installation of aero engines. He had had no training in air designing at all. As a master aero-designer he was entirely self-taught. The war ended. Mitchell, in his twenties, had already had his genius recognized and fostered by his firm. He was given the job, soon after 1920 of making a seaplane that would win the Schneider Trophy for Britain. He began with a plan that shocked the experts. He decided to make a monoplane.

• • •

The fixed idea of the whole aircraft world at that time was a biplane Young Mitchell's attempts to build a high-speed monoplane were regarded sceptically. The Air Ministry held a watching brief. They were not willing to back the experiments.

Mitchell built a plane like a toy. It seemed impossible that anything so slender, almost fairy-like, could fly. It did not have an ounce of "fat" on it anywhere. Even the petrol was stored in the floats. There were no petrol tanks in the ordinary sense. Never was there such astounding slenderness, never was so much packed in so small a space.

The name of this seaplane was the S4. It justified Mitchell's faith, the passionate faith he had in all his planes, by capturing the world's speed record. And Mitchell was only thirty when he achieved this feat.

Mitchell went on to make the S5, S6 and S6b, which won the Schneider Trophy three times running for Britain.

Now the moral of this is — the Spitfire is little but a Schneider plane with the floats taken off.

It was in the early thirties that Mitchell began making a single-seater fighter monoplane, which was to be the Spitfire. The basis taken was Mitchell's latest Schneider plane. The work was done in great secrecy. Even now, it is only possible to mention some of the more superficial refinements that Mitchell put into the machine. Such, for instance as polishing the paintwork to eliminate "skinfriction." The result was a remarkable tribute, perhaps the most remarkable of all tributes, to Mitchell's designing genius.

• • •

When an aeroplane is projected a prototype, or first hand-made example of it, is built. It usually happens that this is so altered and improved in actual flying experience that the machine which finally goes into mass production is practically a new plane. This was not the case with the Spitfire. It flew perfectly from the very first. There were so few modifications that the first experimental model was in every respect a standard Spitfire.

But Mitchell was seriously ill, and he knew that he was going to die. When the newspapers announced his death they referred only to the "fastest military aeroplane" which had been his last work. And so it turned out to be the fastest military aeroplane in the world, with a speed of over 400 m.p.h.

Mitchell was abnormally shy. He liked quiet motoring trips and the company of other engineers well known to him. When his native town of Stoke-on-Trent banqueted him they had to send three times up to his house to fetch him.

• • •

Alongside the name of Reginald Mitchell will stand the name of Sydney Camm. The one for the Spitfire and the other for the Hurricane.

Mr. Camm is at least as modest and retiring as was Mitchell. Twice I have been to see him, but it is little he wanted to say about himself, for he detests personal publicity.

Mr. Camm is tall, dark, slightly bald picturesque in talking about aeroplanes, embarrassed and taciturn when you ask him to talk about himself. He was born at Windsor forty-six years ago and was flying model aeroplanes almost as soon as he went to school. At fifteen he was secretary of the Windsor Model Aero club. He began his aircraft career at the Martinsyde Aircraft works in the last war. He lives with his wife and school-girl daughter at Thames Ditton.

One of his hobbies is still model aeroplane flying, and he is president of the club at Hawker works. He also plays golf, but not often in these days.

He said next to nothing about himself, but he gave me a first-hand idea of the problems he faces as an aircraft designer. The first thing he thinks about is how much weight it is going to have to carry, what weight of bombs, men, guns and petrol. Then he sets out to find how light a structure it is possible to build capable of carrying this weight.

If the plane is too heavy the speed will suffer and nothing can put it right. The plane will not take off unless it has a run so long as to be impracticable. But if, on the other hand, the plane is made too light, it will not stand the incredible strains which the war-time manoeuvring of planes imposes. It will have speed, but it will fall to pieces in the air.

As the plane develops the authorities may want to increase the load of bombs, for instance. Then the designer will have to throw his plane away, unless he has kept a little load-carrying capacity in hand.

Designing of wings involves a similar problem. To make a plane leave the ground you want big wings. A big wing is necessary to supply support and grip the air as the plane takes off. But a plane does not need nearly so much wing-space to keep it in the air once it is up there. In fact, the big wing creates resistance and holds it back.

A wise aircraft designer, moreover, will design his plane so that it will carry a little more than the load demanded by the Air Ministry at the time.

• • •

Mr. Camm is proud of the characteristic shape of his Hurricane. He is a believer in shape. It is true, to a certain extent, in aviation designing, he says, that what looks right is right.

One thing Mr. Camm told me with all the weight of his authority: "The British fighters are superior to the Messerschmitt."

A Messerschmitt fell into the hands of the French and was flown by their pilots. But there was nothing to be learned by it.

British fighters can out-manoeuvre Messerschmitts because of their superior qualities. There is nothing, says Mr. Camm, which is so discouraging to pilots and destructive of their morale as to feel that their opponents have a better machine.

And those "better machines" have been designed by two Britons —Reginald Mitchell and Sydney Camm.

The Lance-Jack's Lament

Wiv a lovely new dog's leg adornin' my sleeve,
An' a great deal of pride in my 'eart,
When I went on parade I'd no cause to believe
I was lettin' myself in the cart.

But the sergeant, 'e 'ands over squad drill to ME!
I stood there, the boss of the show.
I felt twice as proud as a bloomin' V.C.,
An' got ready to let myself go.

But parade grounds are big, an' lance-corp'rals are small,
An' I found to my 'orror an' dread,
That I might just as well 'ave not bin there at all,
Cos no one could 'ear what I said!

When I 'ollered "Form Threes!" 'alf the boys stood at ease,
While the others marched off at the double!
My tongue it got twisted, I shook at the knees,
As I watched the squad get into trouble.

They wheeled an' inclined in the oddest of ways,
An' all I could do was shout "STOP!"
But somehow they seemed in too much of a daze,
An' wandered all over the shop!

Well, I've been an' lost my dog's-leg, but I'm makin' no complaint,
Cos I'm famous as "The Man Who Made the Sergeant-Major Faint!"

Hitler's Bully In Alsace-Lorraine

By EUGENE LENNHOFF
(United Correspondents)
(D-22)

One of Hitler's most striking characteristics is his deep distrust of all the Quislings who have betrayed to him their respective countries. Not one of these traitors has Hitler placed in command in the territories he has thus forcibly acquired. Seyss-Inquart does not govern in Austria, nor Henlein in Czecho-slovakia. Nor does Clausen in Denmark, Mussert in Holland or Quisling in Norway.

Again, in Alsace-Lorraine, now torn from France and incorporated in the Third Reich without even the formality of peace negotiations, the local Nazi leaders, the so-called "autonomists", have been set aside after the few days of insecure office that followed the German invasion. Hitler's deputy in Alsace-Lorraine is Herr Joseph Buerckel, a man to whom the Fuehrer has once more entrusted the task of breaking the will of a large community or a nation. Herr Buerckel is not a native of Alsace-Lorraine, but comes from the Palatinate, where as Gauleiter in 1933 he earned an evil reputation by his savage brutality. His ruthlessness towards political enemies marked him out as the man best qualified to "prepare" the inhabitants of the Saar for a plebiscite on reincorporation within the Reich.

In March 1938, after the "Anschluss", Buerckel went to Vienna. He had not been there many days before the world, which was beginning to forget what Nazism really means, was made fully aware of its dread significance. Buerckel, sent to Vienna ostensibly to "liberate" Austria, turned out to be a Prussian bully of the worst type. This fat, stocky fellow with the huge shoulders and the face of a prize-fighter, made it clear to the Austrians at once that he had come as a colonizer. It is evidence of his ruthless administration that opposition first came from those same Nazi activists who for years before the annexation had been conducting their underground campaign in support of Hitler's cause. To most of them he refused the leading positions they had hoped to secure. A few who thrust themselves into office amid the first confusion, Buerckel threw out without the least compunction. He governed Austria, not through Austrians, but with S. A. and S. S. leaders, especially Gestapo men, brought to Vienna from all over Germany. Such few Austrians as he thought worthy of his trust were proved terrorists and assassins. Buerckel saw to it that there was not a moment's check to the stream of real and alleged anti-Nazis that poured into Dachau, Buchenwald and other concentration camps. Tens of thousands of Austrians of all parties suffered imprisonment or torture in concentration camps. They included Catholics and Socialists, monarchists and members of Schuschnigg's Patriotic Front, Liberals and — of course — Jews.

When for weeks on end gangsters in uniform ruthed through Vienna in lorries, systematically looting the shops and homes of non-Aryans and Social Democrats, this was the work of Herr Buerckel. He, too, was the instigator of the mob which attacked the palace of Cardinal Innitzer, Archbishop of Vienna, which ill-treated the clergy, threw a priest from a window and made a bonfire of sacred relics stolen from a church. The flames of this bonfire nearly spread to St. Stephen's Cathedral near by, one of the finest Gothic churches in Austria. And, when despite all suppression, popular indignation rose against this bestial conduct, Buerckel's condemnation was directed not against the desecrators, but against the Church itself. It is not surprising that a little later Cardinal Innitzer was personally assaulted, being pelted with rotten eggs and potatoes, knocked over the head, his biretta trampled under foot. It was Buerckel again, who gave the order for the bloody pogroms of November 10th, 1938. On that and the following days, synagogues were set alight in German towns, Jews killed, beaten and otherwise ill-treated. Nowhere, however, except at Nuremburg, where Julius Streicher took charge, were terrorist excesses so extreme as in Vienna.

Yet even these outrages were surpassed a month later, when Buerckel put up against the wall 165 Nazi leaders who still persisted in opposing his rule. All of them were shot. These men had fondly imagined that they might themselves govern Austria as a separate, but important member of the Third Reich. They had had to look on while Buerckel broke up Austria at Hitler's command into seven "gaus", and had seen the country roughly shorn of all its peculiar and individual features. Against this they had protested.

All Buerckel's promises at the time of taking over office proved to be lies. In February 1939, he himself cynically explained not only why the Nazis could not improve the standard of living of the people, but why that standard appreciably fell after the Anschluss. "All that matters", he said, "are guns, bombs and tanks. Neither these, nor the money to make them, fall from the sky. Therefore, the people must draw in their belts."

Buerckel's appointment in Alsace-Lorraine means that here, too, Hitler intends to make a clean sweep. He knows that the Alsatians and Lorrainers are stubborn folk and that in all the years between 1871 and 1918, imperial Germany failed to germanize them. Hitler thinks that better results may be expected from Herr Buerckel's methods.

Facing Life's Conflicts

One of my dislikes is looking down from a high building. I feel very uncomfortable but I go to the top of the Empire State and Rockfeller buildings in New York trying to make myself gradually overcome this feeling. I took my first air plane flight with the same idea in mind but found no fear or discomfort present when I looked down some thousands of feet. This was explained by the fact that I was not standing on the earth or building connected with the earth.

However, I sometimes find myself when problems or difficulties present themselves, tempted to turn to other things or to my work instead of working out the plan or problem. I then think of my dislike of looking down great distances and how I am overcoming it by going up to these heights and so I try to think and plan to meet my problems. And I believe this is the way most of us handle these things that is, if we are well.

Psychologists and mental specialists tell us that it is the unwillingness to face our conflicts that causes not only mental but physical ailments also. Many heart, stomach and intestinal disturbances are directly due to mental conflicts.

Dr. B. Liver, in Medical Record, says that conflicts should not be avoided. If not excessive, they are desirable. The human mind is developed and built to stand conflicts just as the eye can resist some glaring light. The very fact that difficulties and problems arise in life makes us get used to them and we gradually learn how to meet them. Conflicts and clashes of ideas occur in infancy and childhood, which is the period of apprenticeship for later living. While the child should be spared sudden and difficult conflicts it should not be overprotected from them.

The facing of conflicts is necessary in child life just as with adults. Parents who want their child to have less home work, not engage in group games, be excused from normal responsibilities, are "overprotecting" their child and storing up a difficult time for him when later he has to face life's problems and responsibilities.

Two-thousand Voice Chorus Rehearsing For Concert in Toronto's Hockey Arena

Group Which Gave Concert in C.N.E. Coliseum Will Stage Repeat Performances Oct. 18 and 19—Proceeds Go To Red Cross and Other War Funds—Noted Leaders of Music Combine To Prepare Outstanding Program

Toronto, Ont. — Encouraged by the response of music lovers and critics who turned out wholeheartedly and showered warm praise on its first two initial programs at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, the newly reorganized Coliseum Chorus is now in rehearsal for two "repeat performances" in Toronto's huge Maple Leaf Gardens on the nights of Oct. 18 and 19. Headed by an enthusiastic group of choral workers in this city, including Augustus Bridle prominent music and drama critic, the chorus, which challenges comparison with the Schola Cantorum of New York City, the Bach choir of Bethlehem, Pa., and the large choruses at Robin Hood Dell in Philadelphia, was organized hastily this summer to provide two evenings of music in the Exhibition coliseum. So great was the success of the project that the decision has been made to keep the choir intact as another highly important link in the already lengthy chain of superlative Toronto musical groups.

Red Cross to Benefit

Proceeds of the two concerts to be held in October will be turned over to the war funds of four prominent groups—the Red Cross, Salvation Army, Y.M.C.A. and the Knights of Columbus. Dr. Charles Peaker will retain his position of conductor, while the services of Sir Ernest MacMillan, conducting the great Toronto Symphony orchestra, have been offered and accepted. Nucleus of the choir are three local choral groups—the Bach, Mendelssohn and Conservatory choirs, who will total approximately 450 members of the group. Representatives of almost every church choir in Toronto, with voices ranging in tone from basso profundos to boy sopranos, have already registered and will swell the total to 2,000. In addition to these, it is hoped that the Elgar and Bach choirs of Hamilton will join hands with the Torontonians on dress rehearsal and concert nights after having held rehearsals by themselves in their own city.

Will be Colorful

"All the choristers and the conductor are ready for more sensational results than those at the Coliseum," Mr. Bridle said. "The mass of the crowd, the colors and the scenic projection on the stage, the lighting effects—all will be accomplished with greater skill than they were in our first concert. In Maple Leaf Gardens, lighting effects are as feasible as they are at the skating carnival, where colossal scenes are shifted in the dark. Floodlights and spotlights and color projections of all sorts are available to pick up the physical dimensions and shapes of the stage show to conform to the splendor of the musical tone."

Mr. Bridle stated that the program would be much the same as that presented at the Exhibition, featuring such varied choral offerings as "Creation's Hymn," "Briton's Alert," and a patriotic finale featuring the popular song of the day, "There'll Always Be an England." To these will be added Handel's "And the Glory of the Lord," "John Peel," the glorious old song, "Allan Water," and many others.

MILITIA LADS IN GENERAL ENJOY CAMPING

Admit Soldiering a Sure Developer of the Human System

FOOD IS GOOD

By ELMER DULMAGE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Sept. 28 —(CP)—Militia camp is like golf—a sure developer of the cuss-word vocabulary but great stuff just the same.

About 100,000 young men tasted army life in non-permanent active militia camps across Canada this summer and next month—the first draft of 30,000 21-year-olds start a month's camp experience under the National Resources Mobilization Act.

The militia lads learned fast (1) to drill acceptably with and without rifles; (2) to cuss the corporals who dish out fatigue duties—under your breath, boys, always under your breath; (3) to wash dishes, wash pans, peel potatoes, scrub carrots; (4) to admire the military technique generally.

They returned home with a working knowledge of housekeeping, care-taking, kitchen mechanics, trench-digging, bayonetting, rifle-shooting, field manoeuvres, scouting and camouflage, first-aid treatment, measures to combat poison gases, anti-aircraft fire and anti-tank fire.

They found the food generally good. Not many have since sworn off beef stew because the army makes a good stew. Tent life suited most of them. The word from all camps is that the grumblers were those who performed rather indifferently on the parade ground.

Could Throw Salute

Some of them learned to throw a salute that a Captain might envy. They all know that every commissioned office must be saluted and that, while he doesn't rate a salute, the Sergeant-Major is addressed as "Sir" whereas the Sergeant is just called "Sergeant".

Most of the 100,000 militia recruits didn't know a palliasse from a kitchen detail three weeks before they went to camp. The civilian may be interested to know that a palliasse is a straw-filled mattress. It's rolled out on the tent floor and slept on. The army sees to it that you're tired enough to enjoy the sleep.

The boys were up before dawn—at 6 a.m. in summer and 6:30 in early fall. They wielded razors in the semi-darkness and were all washed and fed and had tents in order before 8:30. Then they went to work on the parade grounds until 4:30. The twice-a-week drill on their return home seemed easy by comparison.

It was a stimulating experience in every way. Hundreds of the lads who were at camp Niagara, Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., from Sept. 9 to 21 have already forgiven the Corporal and have expressed willingness to enlist on call with the Canadian Active Service Force.

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw—The regular meeting of the Springbrock Branch of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. W. J. Barlow on Thursday of this week with a good attendance.

The meeting was opened in the usual manner, President Mrs. J. P. Baker in the chair.

The roll call, "How can we best serve our country at home," was well responded to.

It was decided that in lieu of the October meeting or Hallowe'en party, an afternoon tea will be held at the home of Mrs. J. M. Barlow and at this gathering a demonstration of salads be given.

The motto "Our obligation to the newcomer of Canada" was given by Mrs. J. M. Barlow and was interesting and instructive.

Mrs. Arthur Burkitt gave a splendid paper on "What is a Canadian." The topic, 'Patriotic Songs— Their origin" was excellently given by Mrs. W. G. Swayne.

An interesting contest "Jumbled Words" was staged by Mrs. J. S. McKeown.

The above program was in charge of Mrs. Hugh Jones, Convener of the Committee on Canadianization.

AT THE BELLE

"WALT DISNEY'S FESTIVAL OF HITS"

The Walt Disney Festival, a quintet of brilliant Disney hits now at the Belle theatre, demonstrates the number of hit-parade numbers which Disney productions introduced to song-loving America.

The list is led by such favorites as "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?", "Ferdinand", "Some Day My Prince Will Come", "Heigh Ho", "Whistle While You Work", "I'm Whistling" and "One Song". All but the first two numbers are from "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs", which heads the Festival. The first title comes from "The Practical Pig" while the second was originally heard in "Ferdinand the Bull". These, with "Donald's Lucky Day" and "The Ugly Duckling" make up the Walt Disney Festival.

Music in Walt Disney's pictures always serves to heighten action and often-times dialogue. In "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs", the musicians were faced with the longest and most complicated assignment they ever had. Their efforts are rewarded by the continued popularity of the picture's song hits.

When the picture was started, the musicians "roughed out" the music, trying out descriptive phrases and bits of melody. For it must be remembered that in scenes where music has to synchronize with the action it has to be composed before a line of drawing is done. Long before the animator sets to work he receives a chart showing how the musical beats and accents fall in each frame of film. For example, if the animator is called upon to draw a character tiptoeing to music, he can draw to perfect synchronization by following the chart.

If a door closes, a floor board squeaks or someone brushes against a tree branch, the music has to tell it. In the ordinary picture a sad scene is heightened by merely a background of sad music; but the Disney attention to detail demands that, should a tear fall, the score has to accent it in some manner, if even by a dramatic pause.

Another problem is the need of elongating or telescoping a musical phrase. At times, it was necessary in "Snow White" to stretch out a motif from four feet to twenty-four feet. And often it was necessary in this stretching process to change the tempo in the middle of a phrase.

Naturally, a far larger orchestra had to be used for "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs", and for Disney's second feature production "Pinocchio", than any which had ever been employed in the Disney studios for the regular output of the short features. But the same meticulous care is devoted to the musical backgrounds for the short features as for the full-length productions.

The popular Belle Newsreel will be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"I Can't Give You Anything But Love Baby"

Appropriate to the comedy and dancing in Universal's musical film, "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby" coming next to the Capitol Theatre, are three brand new songs especially written for the picture by Frank Skinner and Paul Gerard Smith.

"Day by Day" is introduced for the first time by Johnny Downs and Peggy Moran, romantic leads in the film. They present it during comedy scenes in which Downs creates music for the song-writing gangster portrayed by Broderick Crawford.

"Tomato Juice Song," a lilting melody featured as a radio theme song in the picture, is sung by Miss Moran alone.

"Sweetheart of Public School 59" is a novelty composition, sung by half a dozen gangsters who are trying to muscle in on the music business.

"I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby", the title song, is an old time favorite written by Dorothy Fields and Jimmy McHugh. It is featured in song and dance sequences enacted by the famous negro entertainers, Jeni LeGon and Sunshine Sammy.

Albert S. Rogell was the director of "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby," and Ken Goldsmith the associate producer.

"Treasure Island"

The added special attraction features Wallace Berry, Jackie Cooper, Lionel Barrymore, Otto Kruger, Lewis Stone, Nigel Bruce and Charles "Chic" Sales and a cast of thousands.

Anchors aweigh! See Wallace Beery as Long John Silver; Jackie Cooper as Jim Hawkins; Lionel Barrymore as Billy Bones — follow them and the rest of the immortal crew to the end of the rainbow of romance! The Jolly Roger flies above . . . Adventure walks the sea-sprayed decks below! Come . . . We're away to . . . "Treasure Island", showing next at the Capitol.

AT THE McCARTHY

"MUTINY ON THE BLACKHAWK"

Richard Arlen, Andy Devine, Noah Beery and Constance Moore in the thrilling action-hit, "Mutiny on the Blackhawk"; also George O'Brien in an excitement-loaded bandit story of the old west, "Trouble in Sundown" are both now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

"The Boys From Syracuse."

Bringing to the screen some of Hollywood's finest musical comedy talent, the big musical-comedy laugh hit of the century, "The Boys From Syracuse" is the next attraction to be shown at the McCarthy Theatre.

A half-dozen stellar comics and several converted "straight" players from the ranks of the best in Hollywood including Allan Jones, Irene Hervey, Rosemary Lane, Martha Raye, Joe Penner, Charles Butterworth, Eric Blore and Alan Mowbray, head the cast in addition to a score of Hollywood honeys, who contribute to make "The Boys From Syracuse" the year's best musical comedy. Another comedy scream with another all-star comedy cast. "Twincuplets", a short subject treat, plus a technicolor Walt Disney cartoon "Donald Duck's Hockey Game" and Fox News Events presenting first pictures of widespread London raids, will precede the feature attraction, "The Boys From Syracuse" showing at each performance.

Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper in "Treasure Island" coming next to the Capitol and on the same program "I Can't Give You Anything But Love Baby."

PERSONALS

Mrs. A. B. Coupal and small son, Bobby, of Sedley, Saskatchewan, are the guests of Mrs. Coupal's mother, Mrs. James Grant, 289 Church Street.

Mechanic Donald Borden, Mountain Grove, spent Thursday afternoon in the city, the guest of his aunt, Mrs. Arthur Stewart and family, Turnbull Street. He is en route to Brandon, Man., where he will join a flying school preparatory to joining the R.C.A.F.

Miss E. Sprague, Winnipeg, Man., is the guest of her sister, Miss Sprague, George Street.

Friday evening a miscellaneous shower was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Hayward, Victoria Ave., in honour of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Ramsey, who were recently married. Barbara Diment and Jim Taylor carried a very gaily decorated basket filled with gifts and presented it to the bride and groom, and a very appropriate address was read. During the evening dancing was enjoyed to the music of Walter Taylor and the boys. All joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows", after which a dainty lunch was served.

WEDDINGS

McINNIS—SHARPE
PORTER—SHARPE

Wooler—A double wedding of interest was solemnized in Fonthill on Saturday 21st., when Muriel and Marion, twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William Sharpe, became the brides of James F. McInnis and Stanley E. Porter. Each couple attended the other. Rev. E. J. Whan of Fonthill Baptist Church, officiated at the ceremony.

For the wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. McInnis and Mr. and Mrs. Porter travelled to Toronto and points north and west. They were in this vicinity the forepart of this week, the guests of Mrs. Albert Sharpe, Mrs. Sanford Sharpe, Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Sharpe and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Gainforth. Mrs. Ada Boneham of Belleville, is an aunt of the brides.

ARCHER—BENTLEY

At Bridge Street United Church parsonage, on Friday September 27, the marriage was solemnized of Laura Margaret Victoria Bentley and Stanley George Archer. Rev. Dr. James Semple performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Ross Hogle were the attendants and following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hogle, East Moira Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Archer will reside in Belleville.

ssssss

MILLAR—SINE

Stone United Church parsonage on September 25, was the scene of a quiet Autumn wedding, when Laura Alene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Sine, Sidney, became the bride of Corporal Grant Ernest Millar, R.C.A.F., St. Thomas, son of Mrs. R. Noyes, Sidney, and the late Clifford Millar of Napanee. Rev. L. W. Scott conducted the ceremony and Mrs. Scott played the wedding music and during the signing of the register sang "O Promise Me".

Beautiful ferns and Fall flowers formed a lovely background for the bridal party.

The bride entered the room to the strains of the Wedding March, wearing a Shetland wool suit of Bird blue, military style, and hat to match with black suede accessories and corsage of crimson roses, forget-me-nots and baby's breath. Miss Olive Sine, sister of the bride, acting as bridesmaid, wore a navy blue tailored suit with matching accessories and corsage of pink roses and forget-me-nots. Mr. Clifford Millar, brother of the groom was groomsman.

After the ceremony the bridal party received congratulations from the immediate families. The bride's mother wore navy blue sheer with corsage of pink and white roses while the groom's mother wore plum wine with corsage of the same roses. A wedding dinner was served at the Quinte Cafe where the dining room was beautifully decorated with gladioli and dahlias. Later the bride and groom left on a short trip east.

Minerva Chapter Of Eastern Star Holds Banquet

The annual get-together banquet of Minerva Chapter O.E.S. was held Friday evening preceding the regular meeting. A large number of members with their families and friends attended. The tables looked lovely with their decorations of Autumn flowers. Mrs. Nellie Cooper, Worthy Matron, graciously welcomed members and visitors. Mr. Fred Wilson, Worthy Patron was toastmaster. The toast to the King was given by Mr. James Lazenby. Toast to Grand Chapter by Mrs. Laura Hyde, Past Matron and responded to by Mrs. Coral Adams, District Deputy Grand Matron, toast to the visitors by Mrs. Bella Wonnacott and responded to by Mr. Bert Moorman. Mrs. Reg. Hinchey and Mrs. Albert Stirland as conveners of the banquet were congratulated on the arrangements. Following the regular meeting Mrs. Mabel Fry and Mrs. Evelyn Coulby with their group entertained at euchre and bridge.

Mr. & Mrs. W. H. Cook, Bannerman, Celebrate Diamond Wedding

A large number of relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Cook, gathered at their home in Bannerman on Friday evening, September 6, to join with them in celebrating their 60th Wedding Anniversary.

During the afternoon and early evening festivities were of a family nature, relatives gathering from far and near to honour the aged couple. During the evening a large number of friends called to pay their respects to Mr. and Mrs. Cook and wish them much joy and happiness in the years to come and enjoyment of their "Diamond Wedding".

Mr. and Mrs. Cook were given seats of honour in a canopied corner of the large room, where the bride's table was centred by the four-tiered wedding cake, surrounded by vases of beautiful garden and hot house flowers, many of which came from friends in distant parts unable to be present.

The evening passed very pleasantly with instrumental and vocal music and the singing of the old songs. A pretty feature of the program was the trio of three grandchildren, Arleen, Elva, and Shirley Green, with guitar accompaniment, and an appropriate song composed and sung by a daughter Mrs. Oscar Faaren, to "Mother and Dad".

The wedding gifts were drawn in by two little granddaughters in a small house, following the reading of a short address by L. H. Morgan and signed by all present.

Address

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Cook,—

We your friends are glad to join with you on your 60th Wedding Anniversary in a sincere little message to let you know how very dear this day is to your friends who love you so.

May your two hearts, in unison for all the years ahead, be emptied of all cares and filled with happiness instead.

We want you to accept these small gifts as tokens of love and friendship.

Mr. Cook in replying thanked those present for their kindness, sixty years married might seem a long time to some of these present, but it was not so long. He had watched Canada grow since Confederation and it was indeed a wonderful country.

Many from a Distance Attend

Those present from a distance were—Mr. and Mrs. Mumby and Miss Ina Mumby, Brandon; Mrs. Simpson, Brandon; Mrs. W. Kilmurry, Boissevain; Mrs. Oscar Faaren, Ninga; Mr. and Mrs. Earl Cook, Winnipeg; Mrs. Webb, Winnipeg; Mr. J. A. Lucas, Vancouver; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Eggleton and Mr. Arthur Eggelton, Holmfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Cook haye been residents of this district for 43 years.

Mr. Cook is 81 and is still active. He can still place one hand on a wagon box and jump in, a feat that many a younger man would find it hard to accomplish. Mrs. Cook who is 80, is just as spry and both are in excellent health.

Mr. and Mrs. Cook were born in the small village of Harold, Ontario, in Hastings County in 1860. They were friends from early childhood and as they grew older their friendship ripened into love and finally marriage. Miss Elizabeth Brown and Mr. W. H. Cook were united in marriage by Rev. J. Jeffers on September 6, 1880.

They spent a short honeymoon by taking the boat from Belleville to Picton, driving to the Sandbanks near Picton, and home again.

This was quite a momentous journey in those early days.

In 1887 they journeyed to Michigan where Mr. Cook was foreman in a lumber camp. They returned to Ontario in 1891. In 1897 they went to Killarney, latter moving to Bannerman in 1912.

There are only three children of their family living, Earl Cook of Winnipeg; Mrs. Oscar Faaren, Ninga and Mrs. H. Green, Bannerman. There are eight grandchildren and two great grandchildren. Four children died in younger years.

Mr. Dave Wellman of Bonarlaw, is a nephew.

Preparing the School Lunch

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

In most high schools and many elementary schools, lunches in the cafeteria are prepared by persons trained in dietetics. Some high school cafeterias are supervised by the teacher of home economics. Nevertheless, all too many lunches at school are still being prepared by those who are not trained for this purpose.

Parents have a right to know about their particular school. Some of the less capable directors of school cafeterias might be induced to take as their guide the pamphlet, "Menus and Recipes for Lunches at School," to be had by sending five cents to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C.

Parents who prepare lunches at home for their children to eat at school can get valuable hints and helps from this pamphlet.

Hot Pick-Ups

Thanks to the leadership of some wise teachers and principals, and to the interest of the PTA, smaller schools especially in rural places which don't have a school cafeteria, provide ways at school of supplying milk, cocoa or hot soup to supplement the food the child brings from home.

When I was a boy in the country school we took our lunch to school with us. At the noon recess we grabbed a sandwich, piece of cake or pie, and an apple, perhaps, and ran out to play as we ate. Some children today at school eat in like fashion. Not all do.

A few years ago I visited an ungraded rural school in New Jersey where tomato juice, milk and hot vegetable soup were provided. The children prepared these foods in an orderly fashion, directed by the teacher. Before any child began to eat, all were quiet and seated, after which grace was said. With the charming, gracious teacher as their hostess, these children ate in an atmosphere of refinement.

Real Care

I learned that this teacher had, without pay but with the aid of some older pupils during the preceding summer, canned large quantities of vegetable soup and tomato juice made from fruit and vegetables donated by the farmers of that neighborhood, and stored it in the school basement. Once a week this teacher would take three or four of her children to her home for Saturday lunch, giving them, as she said, an opportunity to learn some of the social graces.

This teacher also would remain in the school area on Friday evenings in order to take a group of boys ten miles to Scout Meeting. In May and early June she would also take children in relays of four or five to a swimming beach. Great teachers do many things they are not paid for, which money could not buy, indeed.

I also once heard a lovely young woman at a teacher's institute tell of how she provided hot lunches for her school children in an ungraded rural school among the coal mines of West Virginia, and of her mode of teaching her pupils during the school luncheon, table manners.

I wish school principals who have cafeterias in their school building would treat the luncheon hour as the period of greatest educational possibilities, instead of bedlam and boisterousness as seems to be the rule in many places.

2,160 lbs. Jam Made for Soldiers By the Women of Rednersville

Rednersville.—Te Women of the Rednersville War Emergency met on Thursday at the canning factory of Lorne Brickman and made Damson Plum Jam for the soldiers. Large quantities of plums were donated and 1,052 pounds of jam was made. Over 500 pounds of sugar was used. The grand total of jam made by these ladies is 2,160 lbs.

This will finish the jam-making for this season and all who kindly donated sugar and fruit of all kinds are sincerely thanked for their generosity. There have been over 1,000 pounds of sugar used for the jam. And to the few women who have helped with the canning thanks are extended, especially to Mrs. H. V. McClean of Rednersville, who weighed all fruit and sugar that was put into the jam.

Miss Sims Opens Gospel-Crusade

Evangelist Returns After Two Years to Conduct Convention at Evangel Temple

Evangelist Beatrice L. Sims R.N., of London, Ontario, will open a city-wide Gospel crusade and "Deeper Life" convention on Sunday, September 29, at Evangel Temple, Bridge W. and Coleman Streets. Special subjects are announced for both morning and evening meetings, details being given elsewhere in this edition of The Ontario Intelligencer.

Miss Sims conducted a similar series of services in Belleville two years ago, and all Bible lovers who heard her then, will undoubtedly look forward again to enjoying her rich expositions of the Holy Scriptures. Pastor E. N. O. Kulbeck is extremely grateful that it is possible to bring such an outstanding preacher to the city. The evangelist is the daughter of the late F. L. H. Sims, a musician and theologian of note, and the late Florence Nightingale, a relative of the famous nurse of the same name. Miss Sims was a nurse for a number of years at one of Toronto's leading hospitals, since then she has devoted full time to mission work. She has preached the Gospel of the Grace of God in three countries, addressing audiences as large as two thousand persons in New York City. In all parts of Canada and the U.S. where she has preached, those who have heard her acclaim her as one of the ablest of Bible expositors of the North American continent.

Miss Sims states that she has a three fold purpose in coming to Belleville, namely; the exaltation of the Lord Jesus Christ, the exaltation of His Holy Word, and the depening and enriching of the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ. Her services are free from cheap clap-trap sensationalism, and attract serious thinking people. In Ottawa, eight doctors were in attendance when she gave her address on the "Atonement". People of all churches and creeds are cordially invited to these non-sectarian services.

Bible Society Work In Year of War

Objects and Claims of Society Will be Referred to on Sunday in Number of Churches

The work which the Upper Canada Bible Society as an auxiliary of British and Foreign Bible Society is performing will be emphasised in churches of the city on Sunday, September 29th. Since the foundation of the British and Foreign Bible Society in 1804 it has distributed the Scriptures in 741 languages. Forty languages are printed in raised type for the blind. Over ten million copies are circulated each year. Besides supplying the churches, the society itself distributes the Scriptures. It has been supplying Bibles to all immigrants as they have entered Canada. Over one hundred languages have been required for Canada alone.

In the year 1931-1940 of almost unparalleled stress and difficulty the British and Foreign Bible Society has circulated 11,763,666 volumes of the Holy Scriptures, an increase of 724,175 books. In the British Commonwealth more than half a million Bibles, three quarters of a million New Testaments and nearly two million portions in English were issued from London. 800,000 copies of the New Testament in navy blue, khaki and Air Force blue bindings were published for the Forces. In Europe the total distribution has amounted to almost two and a quarter million copies, an advance of 612,000 copies. Increase in China amounted to 203,000 to make a total of 2,296,000. There was a drop in Japan of 180,000 copies, the distribution being 363,000. Over a million copies were distributed in South America.

Though the income of the society was $1,582,145, the outlay was $1,669,970 indicating a deficit of $87,825 owing in part to mounting taxation and higher cost of living. The marvel according to the society is that so much has been achieved in a war year. Canada and Newfoundland are accepting greater financial responsibility.

The Society in time of war realizes as it has ever done, that it has a world mission.

BRIDGE STREET W.A.

The Women's Association of Bridge Street Church met Friday, September 27. Mrs. Hyde, president presided. Opening Hymn 388 followed by Lord's Prayer in unison. After different reports were given several letters of communication were read and discussed. Mrs. Hibbard's and Mrs. Morris' unit then took charge with Mrs. Boyd giving Bible Reading. Mrs. Baker led in prayer.

Mrs. F. Houston and Miss Doris Houston sang very sweetly "The King of Love My Shepherd is".

Mrs. Ackerman gave a most interesting talk on her trip and stay in Mexico.

Dr. Semple also spoke on "The Importance of Atmosphere" in connection with the church.

Meeting closed with Hymn 500 and National Anthem.

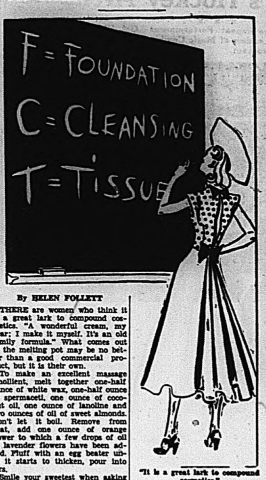
Cosmetics Compounded At Home



"It is a great lark to compound cosmetics."

By HELEN FOLLETT

THERE are women who think it is a great lark to compound cosmetics. "A wonderful cream, my dear; I make it myself. It's an old family formula." What comes out of the melting pot may be no better than a good commercial product, but it is their own.

To make an excellent massage emollient, melt together one-half ounce of white wax, one-half ounce of spermaceti, one ounce of coconut oil, one ounce of lanoline and two ounces of oil of sweet almonds. Don't let it boil. Remove from heat, add one ounce of orange flower to which a few drops of oil of lavender flowers have been added. Fluff with an egg beater until it starts to thicken, pour into jars.

Smile your sweetest when asking your druggist to fill this order and caution him to weigh the solid ingredients carefully. A bit too much wax or spermaceti will make the cream hard.

Cold Cream

To compound a cold cream melt together one ounce of white wax, one ounce of spermaceti, four and one-half ounces of oil of sweet almonds. Remove from heat, add one and one-half ounces of stronger rosewater. As the mass starts to thicken, pour in a few drops of your favorite perfume. Use the egg beater, as in the foregoing formula.

Both of these formulas have been compounded time and again by your beauty reporter with elegant success.

Tea Time Very Appropriate Hour For a Stork Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—Please tell me if it is proper to give a stork tea shower for a mother-to-be, rather than the old-fashioned shower usually given? 2.—If a tea shower is correct, should the mother-to-be ever stand in the receiving-line?

M.

1.— Yes. Tea time is especially appropriate for this informal type of gathering and the menu suitable for tea time is so simple and easy to prepare. 2. At the stork shower there should not be a receiving line. This is a formality that is out of key with the informality of a stork shower.

Gift Candy Etiquette

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Recently I did a little favor for a friend and to show her appreciation she bought me a box of candy. Should one always open the candy and "pass it around" immediately after one receives it? When a boy presents a girl with candy, should the girl at once open it?

S.

No matter who gives us a box of candy we should open it at once and "pass it around'. This shows our delight at receiving such a pleasant gift.

When to Announce Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

How many months before my marriage is it proper to announce the date set for the wedding?

W.

There isn't any rule about this. When the date has been decided the couple may tell their relatives and friends immediately if they wish. Or they may wait to reveal the date when the invitations are sent out. It's entirely a matter of choice and convenience.

Man Writes First

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

About two weeks ago I met a young man while I was on my vacation. He asked me for my address and he gave me his. He seemed quite interested in me, but I haven't heard from him yet. Now, Mrs. Beeckman, what I want to know is: should the girl or the man write first?

A.

It's the man who should write first. He asked for your address, and it's his place to use it, if he wishes, to begin the correspondence.

Wedding Information Given

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—I am employed in a large firm where it would be impossible to send invitations to all employees. May I address one invitation to "Employees of the firm?"

2.— My employer is a widower who has two grown daughters whom I have never met. Should the invitation to him also include the daughters?

1.—Yes, this is the only way when it is impossible to send individual invitations to one's co-workers.

2.—No, send the invitation addressed only to your employer, to his home address. If his wife were living, your invitation would be addressed to Mr. and Mrs. But, since you do not know his daughters, an invitation to them would be out of order.

COURTESY TIP

It is incorrect to use the word "invite" as a noun. "Invite" is a verb. . . . . ."I invite you to a party". The noun is "invitation" . . . . ."I send you an invitation to the party".

Don't say, for example, "I received an invite to a party". This use of "invite" is not only incorrect . . . .it's tacky!

B. F. Dickens, Wife, Celebrate 57th Anniversary in B. C.

Old friends in Belleville of Mr. B. F. Dickens will be pleased to learn that he and Mrs. Dickens celebrated the 57th anniversary of their marriage recently in Vancouver, B.C. Mr. Dickens left here forty-two years ago, and prior to moving to the west, he was associated with the late C. B. Scantlebury in the retail and wholesale wallpaper business with branches in several cities, including Winnipeg. Mr. Dickens was in charge of promotion and advertising. "Bennie" Dickens, during his residence in Belleville was popular with a host of friends and was a good citizen. He is a brother of Mr. Ed. F. Dickens and Mr. A. W. Dickens of this city.

The following reference to the wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Dickens is copied from a Vancouver paper:

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Dickens of 3582 West Fourteenth Avenue are today observing their fifty-seventh wedding anniversary. They were married at Napanee, Ontario, in 1883 and have lived continuously in Vancouver since 1918, when Mr. Dickens became the first advertising manager of The Vancouver Daily Province under the late Hon. Walter C. Nichol.

Mr. Dickens later became a director of the World newspaper in association with Mr. L. D. Taylor. Subsequently he engaged in real estate. He promoted the building of North Arm summer resorts and helped found the One Hundred Thousand Club about 1906.

Mr. and Mrs. Dickens are enjoying good health, although they are both nearing the age of 80.

To love God is our Happiness, to trust in Him is our Repose, to surrender ourselves entirely to His will is our Strength.—Charles Beard.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Stature

There are four main factors that parents can influence in ensuring that a child attains his maximum stature. These are correct diet, rest, exercise, posture.

Of course, it is well to remember that these four factors aren't the only ones determining growth by any means. They are the ones that most parents can control and regulate. Heredity, of course, plays its part; and any illness that weakens the system and removes some of the energy and materials needed in growth, will naturally cut down the stature. So will any bad environmental influence. Lack of sunshine, lack of a happy home life, anything that affects general health, will naturally affect stature. To put it simply, the growth promoting conditions are the same that influence our general health.

Growth is explained as an accumulation of cells of living tissue. These cells are, in effect, the bricks used in the construction of the body. According to this theory, the differences in sizes of different people isn't the result of one person having larger cells any more than the reason for one building being larger than another is the size of the bricks. The bricks in both buildings are the same, but one is larger because there are more of them in it. In the same way that bricks can be formed into any kind of a building, so the cells can be arranged to form every organ of the body.

So, a person's stature depends on the multiplication of cells in his body. This increase goes on in the simplest possible way—by division. When a cell is full grown, it divides into two parts. Then these two grow up, and divide into four, and so on and on.

For growth to go on, the conditions must be the best possible for the division of a maximum number of these cells. There must be plenty of the materials needed to make the two small cells grow up to the necessary size for division. That is why the child must have an adequate, balanced diet, to provide all the materials for this process. In addition, he must have energy to do the work of converting these materials into cell growth, thus he needs ample rest and ample exercise.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Husband Stole Mortgage Money For Liquor

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My married sister, with whom I live, has worked terribly hard giving music lessons to pay the interest on a mortgage on our old home. As I have an interest in the home as well, I saved and scrimped and we had the money together, which amounted to several hundred dollars. We were afraid to put it in the local bank, of which we were not sure.

So we hid the money in what we supposed to be a safe place in our home. But my sister's husband, who is a habitual drunkard found it and spent it on drink. My sister has lost all affection, but like many women living in a small town, she dreads gossip if she leaves him. His mother is the richest woman here, but is not on good terms with her son. We're likely to lose our home if we can't raise the money, and there is not time to earn any more.

"Sister Anne"

There comes a time in some lives when it's the worst kind of folly to worry over the gossip of neighbors. That "butters no parsnips", as the saying goes. Apply to your brother-in-law's mother, as she is better off than most of your towns folks, and ask her to make good the money her son took. Whether she's on good terms with her son or not, she'd probably dislike the scandal of having him branded as a thief as well as a drunkard.

Sometimes people who hold mortgages have a humane streak, and perhaps if the holder of the mortgage knows the circumstances, he may be willing to accept monthly payments on the note.

Try and get your sister interested in "Alcoholics Anonymous". It is working many cures among chronic inebriates. And she may be able to persuade her husband to take the treatment.

Social Lessons Needed

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The boy friend doesn't have a job, but he does have a comfortable weekly allowance. While I do not expect him to waste money on me or take me out often, I am surprised at his quick acceptances of our family invitations, and his slow returns of the "treats". When he does take someone out, it's his boy friends.

He's proficient in all sorts of athletics, but so am I. He's very jealous if I accept invitations from other boys.

Waiting

A little social discipline would be a good thing for this young man. He accepts invitations from your hospitable family but never returns these courtesies. If he does spend money, it's on some other boy. Wouldn't it be a good thing to let him go without invitations from you or your family, until he gets wise to his social deficiencies?

Feeding the Gunners Of Britain

(By ART DUNCAN)

Centuries ago, when hardy sons and daughters of the British Isles moved westward to establish new homes on this Dominion, out of the wilderness and forests came the first rough boundaries of cleared sections which later for geographic convenience became our counties, Townships, Villages, Towns and Cities. Following the method of life and civilization, the settlers put British thoroughness in their building and their expansion program became a copy of life in their homeland and regarding things social, religious and political. Thus came into being a second London, York, Kingston, Hastings, Essex, Norfolk and hundreds of other places so named not for sentimental reasons only but because of an inward desire to re-create the healthy social atmosphere and enviable traditions that go with such stalwart names. Closer to many of us are such names as Hastings, Huntingdon, Tweed, Stirling and Rawdon and other local places so named. There is a marked likeness in many of these places to places in Britain from which they secured their names. London, Ontario, is another London on the Thames. Closer by, the village of Stirling as viewed from the Oak Hills is a duplicate of the scenic beauty observed from the turrets of the famous Stirling Castle looking out over the Vale of Monteith. There is also a likeness to the famous field of Bannockburn from Cillies Hill also near the Scottish Castle. Separated by miles and founded in different ages, there is a profound likeness in the natural setting of these two places of the same name.

But today there is a vast difference in all these places of the same name. The originals are drenched in darkness of blackouts each night as planes of the enemy roar overhead, threatening, rather than frightening, the busy workers in their efforts of war production. The world frankly voices admiration of courage, determination and calmness displayed by the people there.

Hitler's brain trust of destruction has little geographical knowledge of Canada and no doubt counts it of little consequence in the Battle of Britain. But as he and his aides scan the maps of Britain in preparation for one of his raids and one by one the objectives are marked as points where production must be harassed, he apparently doesn't realize that production proceeds entirely unhampered in another London, York, Hastings, Essex, Kingston, Norfolk, thousands of miles beyond his reach, and the calibre of the people at work there is just as dogmatic and determined as those in the London which he so bitterly hates. His attempts to slow up production in Britain have failed and in the second London and other places, production gains astounding momentum with each passing day.

Feed for guns and gunners is pouring forth from these places far beyond the reach of his interruption raids. As "Britain Speaks" and tells us in truth what goes on over there of courage, and steadfastness in these places from which we have taken our names, all Canada is imbued with a new spirit of loyalty. With one voice Canadians of London, York, Kingston, Essex, Norfolk, Hastings, cry out — "We're with you to a man".

Our young men strive to serve on land, sea and air and in most cases the ensigns under which they march are of homeland origin. The Highlanders, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, these are Canadians marching to the defence of Britain with the Tommies sharing a kinship closer than brotherhood. Canadians at home must also measure up to the civilian life over there. Like the originals we must be loyal sons of London, Kingston, Essex, York, etc., as they grope through the darkness to take their place at work bench and lathe to turn out food for guns and gunners.

Here we must concentrate on feeding the gunners, we are farmers with the best equipment in the world, the best land in the world and our job is to produce food for the best gunners in the world. We must give of our wealth for victory, talk nothing but victory and with our pens we must write of the victory that will someday be ours. We must religiously say again and again "I Love Life, I want to Live" but to live we can live only in freedom. This is our part in the great task of "Feeding the Gunners".

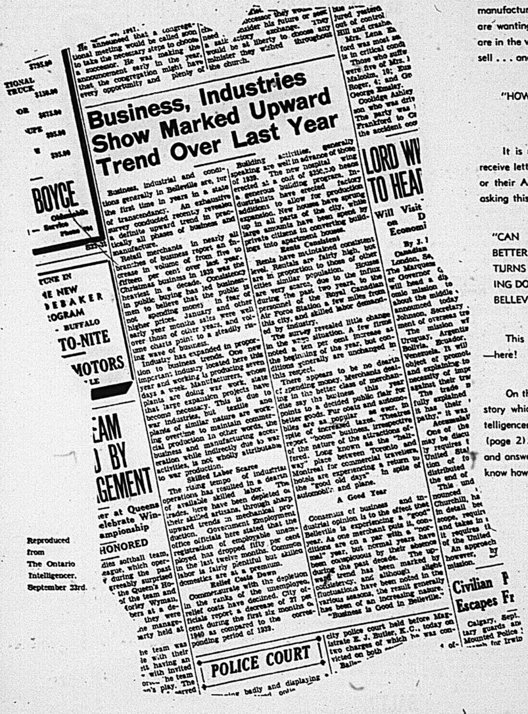
Business is GOOD in BELLEVILLE



Business, Industries Show Marked Upward Trend Over Last Year

Business, industrial and conditions generally in Belleville are, for the first time in years in a state of transcendancy. An exhaustive survey conducted recently revealed a definite upward trend in practically all phases of business and manufacture.

Retail merchants in nearly all branches of business report an increase in volume of from five to fifteen per cent over last year. Christmas business in 1939 was the heaviest in a decade. Consistency in public buying has led businessmen to believe that the public is not spending money in fear of higher prices. January and other early year months sales were well over those of other years, and volume charts point to a steadily rising wave of business.

Industry has expanded in proportion to business trends. One new important industry located here this year and working is producing seven days a week. Manufacturers, whose plants are doing war work, state that large expansion projects have become necessary. This is due to war industries, but textile and plants of similar nature are working overtime to maintain commercial production In other words, the business and manufacturing acceleration while indirectly due to war activities, is not wholly attributable to war production.

Skilled Labor Scarce

The rising tempo of industrial operations has resulted in a dearth of available skilled labor. The trades here have been depleted of their skilled artisans, through sharp upward trends in mechanical production. Government Employment office officials here stated that the registration of employable unemployed has dropped fifty per cent in the last twelve months. Common labor is fairly plentiful but skilled domestics are at a premium.

Relief Costs Down

Commensurate with the depletion in the ranks of the unemployed, relief costs have declined. City officials report a decrease of 27 per cent during the first six months of 1940 as compared to the corresponding period of 1939.

Building activities, generally speaking are well in advance of those of 1939. The new hospital wing erected at a cost of $250,000 heads a generous building program. Industrialists have erected factory additions to allow for production expansion. New houses have sprung up in all parts of the city, while large amounts have been spent by private citizens in converting buildings into apartment houses.

Rents Consistent

Rents have maintained consistent level. Rentals are fairly high, but are in proportion to those of other cities similar population. Houses are very scarce, due to the influx during the past two years, to the personnel of the Royal Canadian Air Force Station a few miles from this city, and skilled labor demanded by industry.

The survey revealed little change in the wage situation. A few firms noted a ten per cent increase at the beginning of the year, but conditions generally are unchanged in this respect.

There appears to be no dearth of spending money. Merchants dealing in the better class of merchandise say the business this year points to a decided public flair for better goods. Fur coats and automobiles are as popular as ever, in spite of increased taxes. Theatres report "boom" business, irrespective of the nature of the attractions offered. Long known as the "halfway" place between Toronto and Montreal for commercial travellers hotels are experiencing a return to the "good old days" in spite of automobile and plane.

A Good Year

Consensus of business and industrial opinion is to the effect that Belleville is experiencing a "good" year. As one merchant puts it, conditions are on a par with a "normal" year, but normal years have been conspicuous by their absence during the past decade. The upward trend has been marked by consistency, and although slight fluctuations have been noted in the various seasons, the result generally has been of an increasing nature. "Business is Good in Belleville."

Seven Clubs in American Loop Murmuring 'Wait'll Next Year' As Detroit Tigers Cinch Flag

Floyd Giebell Bests Bobby Feller in Hurler's Duel to Win 2-0

YANKEES STOPPED

Johnny Babich of A's Defeats Yanks for Fifth Time This Season

By The Associated Press

A couple of right-hand pitchers made it "next year" for seven American League clubs today.

All the dreams and the hopes of winning the junior circuit title that keep flickering until somebody actually nails the pennant to the flag pole faded out yesterday for everybody but Detroit Tigers.

Now the other seven clubs are murmuring: "Wait'll next year."

Floyd Giebell, the West Virginia rookie, who bested Bobby Feller in a pitching duel that gave the Tigers a 2-0 decision and the championship, is one of the righthanders, the other is Johnny Babich, of the Philadelphia Athletics, who racked up his fifth win of the year over the four-time world champion New York Yankees, by 6-2.

Babich stopped the last-ditch drive of the Yankees, which had reached eight straight games, with a five-hitter. He got help from Lusty clouting, as his mates pounded out nine hits, including Sam Chapman's sixth inning homer, off Three Yank pitchers.

Boston Red Sox unleashed all their power to run up the season's largest score—a 24-4 trouncing of the hapless Washington Senators.

Chicago White Sox edged out the Browns, 4-3, on Luke Appling's 10th inning single that scored Joe Kuhel.

The National League had some fireworks too. Arky Vaughan, the Pirate shortstop, doubled in the 10th inning to score Bob Elliott with the run that gave them a 4-3 victory over Cincinnati Reds. Paul Derringer, slated for important mound work in the world series next week, tried vainly for his 21st victory—but lasted only seven innings.

Ontario All-Stars Remain in Fight For Lacrosse Honors

Vancouver, Sept. 28 (CP)—Ontario All-Stars, Friday defeated British Columbia All-Stars 19-11 in the third game of their best-of-five series and remained in the fight for the Canadian Junior Lacrosse championship and the Minto Cup. British Columbia won the first two games. Fourth game will be played at Vancouver Monday.

On the verge of elimination, Ontario used their weight to advantage and in the final quarter outscored British Columbia 7-1 to cinch the victory.

Both goalies played brilliant games scooping out many hard drives. Kingsley Crick, British Columbia's star net-minder, was injured half-way through the third quarter but returned to finish the game in the final hectic period.

Ontario sharpshooters charged into the goal on numerous occasions and Jack Gair finally knocked Crick over, sending him to the dressing room for repairs. Dave Yeadon relieved for the duration of the quarter.

Johnny Hewitt paced the winners with four goals. Jimmy Lang was best for the British Columbians with four goals.

Belleville Rink Wins Tourney in Aid of Red Cross

Inaugurated as a war effort one year ago, at the out-set of the "Lick Hitler" hostilities, the second annual open rinks lawn bowling competition, sponsored by the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club under the auspices of the Canadian Red Cross, saw lawn bowling rinks from Stirling, Havelock and this city take part in the second of such Red Cross charity benefit tournaments at the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club yesterday.

Eight rinks in all enjoyed ideal weather conditions to take part in the second Red Cross tourney, which was introduced by the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club last September and has met with equal success across the province as it spread from Belleville. All revenue derived from the tournament was given to the work of the Red Cross.

Three Belleville rinks took the major prizes of the tournament, all prizes given consisting of War Savings Stamps, thus assuring the entire proceeds and prizes supplementing Canada's war effort. The Belleville rink of Alf Symons, skip, Mrs. Sandercock, I. Helkey and Chas. McGuire won with three wins high carding a score of 36 with a plus of nine. Second, with two wins high, was the local rink of Ernie Vanner, skip, Mrs. Cross, E. Rutherford and Col. Bonisteel with a score of 33 and a plus of five. One win high saw the Belleville rink of Fred Harper, skip, Mrs. G. Watkin, R. Casement and Jack Smith victors with a score of 33 with a plus of twelve.

2-26TH BATTERY REPLACES SARNIA IN THE O.R.F.U.

No One Expects the Team Will Carry on in the Tradition of the Imperials

STIRLING MAY PLAY

Battery Team Will Lack Capable Men on the Reserve Bench

By A. W. TENNANT

(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Sarnia, Ont., Sept. 28 (CP).—The famous Imperials, perennial champions of the Senior Ontario Rugby Football Union, have been disbanded and this city's football name will be carried by the 2nd 26th Battery. No one expects that they can carry on in the tradition of the Imperials.

But they do know that the men behind the army team love the game and that their players will have all the fight necessary to make up in part for whatever they lack in senior football ability. There's no fair way of telling just what kind of a team it will be until its first game against Hamilton Alerts Oct. 5.

The bulk of last year's championship club is not available for the army team. Red France, Hi Living, Jimmy Geary, Bernie Moros, De Remigis and Palso Parsons are among those who have left Sarnia or retired. But there is a ray of hope in the word that Hugh (Bummer) Stirling may come out of retirement.

Will Make Team Threat.

The Bummer isn't as spry as he used to be when he was the east's best backfielder. He may not be able to kick a ball as far or make a block as hard, but the Bummer still would be a mighty man on a football field. Give the battery team Stirling and they'll be a threat, even if only a minor one.

Hank Galloway, who graduated from junior ranks to the Imperials last season, probably will handle most of the punting. Coach Cecil (Mike) Fitzgibbon probably will be able to surround him with enough experienced material to make the battery team an interesting question mark in the O.R.F.U. set-up.

Fitzgibbon, who produced much of Imperials' material as coach of the city's school teams, probably will have ready for duty such men as Ivan Andrews, Owen Lockhart, Trip Trepanier, an ace linesman, Jack Thurlow, Gus Schiers, Pat and Jim Butler, Ralph Perry, Ike and Dick Norris, Nick Rapaich, Gordon Evenland and Joe Woodcock.

That isn't bad material. But a senior football club is only as strong as its reserves and Fitzgibbon hasn't an abundance of capable men to throw in for relief work.

BALTIMORE EVENS PLAYOFF SERIES

Howell's Drive to Score Benjamin Decided Contest in Favor of Orioles

Baltimore, Sept. 28—(CP)— Although outhit 10 to 8, Baltimore Orioles pushed over a run in the ninth inning to defeat Newark Bears 5-4 here Friday and even the International League final Governor's Cup best-of-seven game series at two games apiece.

Going into the last frame with the score deadlocked, Gene Corbett singled but a chilled crowd of some 6,000 fans had nothing to get steamed up over when Stan Benjamin forced the Baltimore second baseman.

Benjamin, however, stole second and romped home when Howell's drive went to the far right field corner.

The fifth game will be played here today and the teams move to Newark Sunday to resume the scrap for the right to get into the little world series with the American Association playoff winner.

MIKE MOMERKO TO MEET PAVISH

Western Canada Grappler Will Give 'Bad Man' Pavish a Real Bout

Acknowledging the demand of the wrestling patrons of this district to either procure a suitable opponent for George Pavish, the villanous Greek, or discontinue matching him with alleged push-overs, local wrestling promoters saw the writing on the wall and promptly signed Mike Momerko, the 231-pound grappler from Western Canada, who already has decisions over Al Dunlop and other well-known Easterners to meet Pavish in the main bout at the Hume Arena on Monday night.

Domerko, dubbed the 'human bone-crusher', weighs 21 pounds more than the rough-house Pavish, just enough additional avordupois to withstand the pugnacious attacks of Pavish and no doubt supply the reprisals, which the patrons have been clamouring for since Pavish has taken over the domination of local wrestling circles.

Of equal importance on the card is the return bout between Jimmie Allen, former Canadian amateur welterweight wrestling champion, and Pedro Valdez, the lithe Mexican grappler. These two agile and willing ringmasters provided one of the best received bouts in years last week when they were rematched as semi-finalists, over the hour limit, for Monday night's card.

Roy Doherty, Shannonville's gift to the professional wrestling circles will open the show versus Tom George. Doherty won two challenge bouts at the Shannonville Fair recently.

C.O.S.S.A. Schedule

Making their two local senior interscholastic grid iron appearances within the same week, the Cobourg Collegiate Institute rugby squad was included in the Bay of Quinte group of the Senior Interscholastic C.O.S.S.A. when Convener Lester Shiels released the group schedule here today.

The league schedule calls for six games with Albert College and Belleville Collegiate Institute returning to the fold to make up the three-team loop along with Cobourg. The schedule opens on October 9th at Cobourg when Coach Pete Beach's Albert College squad test the pigskin in Cobourg. Cobourg make their initial appearance in Senior Interscholastic football circles for many years here versus the Belleville Collegiate on Thanksgiving Day (Monday, October 14th).

The Senior Interscholastic Bay of Quinte football schedule for 1940 reads:

Oct. 9—Albert College at Cobourg C. I.
" 14—Cobourg C. I. at Belleville C. I. & V. S.
" 19—Cobourg C. I. at Albert College.
" 23—Albert College at Belleville C. I. & V. S.
" 30—Belleville C. I. at Cobourg C. I.
Nov. 6—Belleville C. I. at Albert College.

Cornwall Seniors On Way To Title

Cornwall, Ont. Sept. 28 (CP)—St. Regis-Caughnawaga Indians dropped an 11-10 overtime decision to Cornwall Seniors Friday for their second straight loss in the best of five game series for the Quebec Lacrosse Association championship. The next game will be played in Lachine Monday.

Leading 5-1 at the end of the first period, the Seniors were outscored 4-1 in the second and 2-1 in the third. They held the Indians even in the fourth, each team scoring twice, and the game went into extra play with the score 9-9.

With but 40 seconds left of play, Joe Gosselin scored for the Seniors after scores by Buckshot for the Indians and Desrosiers for Seniors.

RUDY YORK HITS TOWERING HOMER TO SINK INDIANS

Feller Allowed Only Three Hits but They Came When it Hurt

GIEBELL A HERO

Hurler, Who Won Game, Not Eligible for World's Series Against Cincinnati

Cleveland, Sept. 28 (AP)—One of the most amazing triumphs in baseball history was an accomplished fact today.

Detroit Tigers, whom nobody gave a hope of getting anywhere last spring, had clinched the American League flag and were only playing out their string here before meeting Cincinnati Reds in the World Series starting next Wednesday.

Tigers won their deciding victory yesterday behind a rookie named Floyd Giebell, who shut out the local Indians, 2 to 0, and who won't even be eligible to pitch against Cincinnati.

Rudy York, who has played first base regularly for the Tigers this year only because Hank Greenberg, the team's $40,000-per-annum star, consented to be shifted to the outfield, supplied the conclusive runs off Bobby Feller with a towering home run into the left field stands.

Feller gave up only three hits, and one of those was a fluke double by Greenberg which Roy Weatherly of Cleveland lost in the sun.

No Surprise to Tigers

The strange wind-up to the most heated American League race in recent years came as no surprise either to the Detroit players or to their owner, Walter O. Briggs. This aggregation of veterans apparently realized it was star-struck some months ago, and felt that nothing could deprive it of a pennant.

"There's never been a club with a finer fighting spirit," said Manager Del Baker. "They did everything I asked of them. What Giebell did to the Indians was no more than the others have done all the way."

The Cleveland players took their elimination quietly. There was no sign of the blow-off that had been half expected between Manager Oscar Vitt and the players who rebelled on him in mid-season. It might possibly come yet, but probably not. The realization of what their internal squabble cost appears to have stunned them.

"I don't know whether I'll stay for the World Series," said Vitt. "I might go on home. It's been a hard year."

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

The student body up around the local seat of secondary school of knowledge are breathing a little more easily, as a matter of fact the patients are definitely out of danger of a nervous breakdown. Earlier in the week it was rumoured about the spacious corridors of "Mac" MacLaurin's educational edifice, that Ross "R. C." Clare was about to change his affections and enter the portals of Albert College. This would have been drastic for "Goldie" Mullholland and his cohorts, but yesterday "R.C." was seen wandering nonchalantly about the corridors of the old B.C.I. and there are happy hearts beating throughout Coach Eddie Schrieder's squad today. Youse Collegiate flappers and rug-cutters can even breathe more freely today, as our operator No. 23 (skidoo) informs us in no uncertain terms, that the two McBride boys, (Bill, the ghost, and Stewie, the junior) are leafing over the pages of last year's football scrap book and the urge may prove too great to resist, so don't faint when you see them out to practice next week.

Looking over the Collegians' roster from atop the City Hall (our favourite diversion on a windy day), we find Coach Schrieder minus several of his last year's stars. For instance Jack Stewart and Doug Sword are with the C.A.S.F., "Cavie" Cavanaugh and Jack Thorne are over the age limit for Interscholastic sports, while "Trusty Jim" Watson is employed with his dad up in the north countree. However, Coach Schrieder is quite elated over the fact that Clare and the McBride brothers are flirting with the idea of returning to school, following a summer's employment. Insofar as Bill (Ya Can't Catch Me) McBride is concerned, however, his problem is a difficult one, as Bill is firmly entrenched in the employment of the Bell Telephone. Clare intends to complete his science studies, while Stewart (How he Hates "Junior") McBride hopes to be able to take time off his military studies to get into the senior Interscholastic swim if at all possible. Otherwise, Coach Schrieder has little to worry about, as the remainder of the squad is anxious and available.

Convener Les Shiels released the Bay of Quinte senior Interscholastic football schedule today and we find the boys push off on Oct. 9th with Albert at Cobourg Collegiate. With the addition of the "Summer Town" Interscholastic gridders into the Bay of Quinte loop, rugby football should take on a new lease of life throughout the district. The announcement that a Saturday game and a holiday game on Thanksgiving, are to be included in the schedule will also meet with favourable local approval. There have been no reports emanating from Albert College relative to the strength of Coach Beach's 1940 football squad, but the largest student body in the history of old Albert is in attendance this year, which should result in a strong squad representing that school. In the six-man junior football set-up, Jack Doran's St. Michael's Academy sextette has joined the merry throng assuring three teams, O.S.D., B.C.I. and St. Mike's, while the Picton Collegiate is toying with the idea.

"Doc" Empson's South Hastings "Combines" are scheduled to meet Carman Bush's Columbus Grads at Willowdale (The Pits) Park in Toronto this afternoon in the first game of the intermediate O.B.A. semi-finals. The Columbus Grads gave Milton a sound trouncing in the previous round, winning in two straight. Coach Bush intermingled a few veteran senior Toronto ballsters along with some up-and-coming kids this spring and launched his baseball ship in quest of a provincial title. The great problem confronting the Combines, however, will be the matter of transportation to Toronto today. Providing they make it the second game of the series will be played at the Fair grounds next Wednesday.

Do you remember when Connie Mack, manager of Philadelphia Athletics, stuned baseball fans when he announced the sale of Al Simmons, Mule Haas and Jimmy Dykes to Chicago White Sox eight years ago today. The players were key men in the great Athletic team which won three successive American League pennants from 1929 to 1931.

Local wrestling fans seem happy about the whole thing, when they heard that a 231-pound giant had been signed to meet George Pavish, the terrible Macedonian mat-villain. The new-comer hails from Western Canada and goes under the name of Mike Domerko. Frankly we don't care what he calls himself as long as he takes care of the unscrupulous Pavish. Of course the return bout between Jimmie Allen and Pedro Valdez was matched through popular demand. Since Roy Doherty made such a fine impression in his last ring appearance here, the Shannonville goliath was signed to meet Tom George in the curtain-raiser.

Jimmy Drummond, former Oshawa and Toronto Goodyear puckster is down east to play hockey with the Glace Bay "Miners" this winter. That's the same club Jo Jo Graboski signed with recently.

Twenty years ago big league baseball was delivered a serious blow when the 1919 world series scandal broke for the first time just two decades ago this week. However, big league baseball vindicated itself yesterday when the lowly Philadelphia Athletics knocked the mighty Yankees into baseball oblivion. Early this spring Connie Mack predicted the downfall of the Bronx Bombers and it remained to have the veteran Philadelphia mentor bring his predictions into reality when the A's beat the Yankees yesterday to shatter any hopes the former American League champions might have of winning the 1940 league pennant. Yes, me hearties, baseball is really the honest game.

Sport Spice — So it's Detroit Tigers and the Cincinnati Reds in the 1940 world series....Del Baker's Motor City nine won the flag the hard way, but they proved that offence can beat defence, an old axiom seldom to go wrong in sporting circles....It was a tough game for Bobby Feller to lose, he hurled a three-hitter and lost and no matter how you look at it, that's tough baseball, but the Tigers had the power....In the autumn classic it will be power offensive versus superb defence, as the Reds boast of the best defensive team brought up by the senior loop in years....Take your choice between those two types of baseball, but don't forget Hank Greenberg and Rudy York while you're passing by.

JAPANESE BLAME

"attack" would be made.

Article three binds the three powers to support each other with economic, political and military means —"when one of the three contracting powers is attacked by a power at present not involved in the European war or the Chinese-Japanese conflict."

Attitude Towards Russia.

In regard to Soviet Russia, Suma said significantly "the Imperial government intends to adjust its relations to all nations. Russia is closely related to this treaty."

Qualified sources, asserting Japan's primary problem now is to bring Russia into the framework of the new agreement, predicted Japan would make an immediate effort at a rapprochement to safeguard her western boundaries. German help in such a move was forecast in view of the importance to Germany of the trans-Siberian channel of trade.

Official Japanese quarters declined to elaborate on Article V of the tri-power pact which states that the status of agreements of any of the signatory parties with Russia is to remain unchanged.

Germany and Russia.

This provision was interpreted unofficially, however, as implying that Germany would not assist Japan in the event of a Russian-Japanese clash, because of the previous existence of the Russian-German non-aggression pact.

(Japan currently is aligned with Germany, Italy and Spain in an anti-comintern pact directed against Communism.

(In London Russian sources, commenting on the pact, described the Soviet Union's position as "dangerous and very grave", but said the crux of the situation was whether Germany had informed Moscow in advance of the alliance. There was no official comment from Moscow.)

Japan's "Mission".

Emperor Hirohito and Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka informed the world that the new treaty did not mean Japan was going to enter the European war or pick a fight with anybody. Both said it emphasized the nation's determination to complete her self-proclaimed mission of establishing a "greater east Asia" by peaceable means.

The Japanese public received news of the pact quietly while the press discussed it widely.

"We doubt that America now is prepared to participate in a war, confronting as she does the existing situation both in the Atlantic and the Pacific," said the influential newspaper Yomiuri. "The treaty will serve as a silent power on the United States' future course of action."

72 Canadians Train in England For Navy Commissions

London, Sept. 28 (CP Cable)—Seventy-two keen young Canadians anxious to adopt a sea-faring career are at present in training in Britain for commissions in the Royal Navy.

The Canadians have been arriving in small groups over a period of some weeks for a course of training beginning at Devonport and continuing at H.M.S. King Alfred, the shore-based school.

They were selected in the Dominion from among a number of candidates desirous of entering the British Navy. It is understood that the 72 will enter the Royal Naval volunteer reserve at the completion of their course.

"Flying Blind" by VERA BROWN

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

After Labor Day, things seemed to go better. Judith was so busy at the shop, she had little time to moon. The fall days flew. She and Dudley managed to see a couple of football games. They saw most of the new shows. Thanksgiving they spent at Dudley's apartment. There was a large dinner party.

Judith had promised her mother she'd come home for Christmas. Dudley was disappointed, but agreed that she probably ought to go. So the two of them planned a Christmas celebration at Judith's apartment the night before she left. Judith trimmed a Christmas tree and planned a fine dinner. She had never been so happy in her life.

For weeks she had tried to think of some gift which would please Dudley. Finally she had settled on having a miniature done of herself. It had turned out well and she wrapped it carefully the night before their Christmas party.

When Dudley came, he brought her Christmas gift with him. It was a small package, too.

"But you must take it to Detroit and not open it until Christmas morning. Promise?"

"If you'll promise not to open mine!"

Judith was utterly happy. She had made up her mind, knew her own heart at last. Now she wondered why she had ever hesitated. This time Judith went home eagerly. She wore her ring.

Her dad met her early morning train Christmas Eve and she rushed into his arms and later her mother's. It was easy to tell her mother about Michael this time. "He's wonderful, mother. In the spring I'll bring him out here. He's the finest person I've ever known. I'll be happy; so will you and dad!"

Mrs. Van Dyck, watching her daughter, believed she would. Her father was less sure. That night when he and his wife were alone, they talked the matter over before they went to bed. He shook his head. "I don't now. Judith's like you, mother. She's a one-man woman. I'm afraid . . ."

Christmas morning around the tree, just as in the old days, she and her father and mother opened their gifts. Dudley's present was a lovely diamond bracelet. She held it around her slim wrist, speechless with pleasure. With the bracelet was a little note from Dudley: "I love you".

As Judith looked at her bracelet, Dudley in New York had opened her gift to him. Even before he looked at the lovely miniature, he read the little note: "May all our Christmases be as happy as this one, but may we spend them together. I'll marry you, Michael, in the Spring."

Dudley reached for the telephone beside his bed. When the 'phone rang at Judith's home in Detroit, she knew it was Michael.

"Merry Christmas!" His voice told her how happy he was. "It's the grandest Christmas present anybody ever had! Come back quick!" She promised.

This time she left her parents with a wrench, although she was so eager to be back with Dudley.

x x x

New Year's Eve, Michael and Judith decided they must celebrate. "The gayest spot in town. Next year we'll be old married folks and stay home.

"Home! It sounds wonderful!"

When Dudley called for Judith, she was dressed in her best, wearing his orchids. He took her into his arms. Hours flew. . . . They forgot their "gayest-spot-in-town" plan

"Do you know what I want to do?" asked Judith. "I want to meet New Year's Eve in Times Square—with you!"

Dudley looked at his watch. "We've got half an hour. Wear your carriage boots," he added.

Later they were in the mad pushing throng. A light snow fell, starlike flakes glittering on Judith's hair. Michael pulled the hood of her wrap over her head. . . . Suddenly bells and whistles broke loose. A shout went up from the throng. The old year was dead. A fresh new year! Confetti flew. Pandemonium!

Michael bent and kissed Judith. "Happy New Year, Mrs. Dudley-to-be soon!"

And she snuggled there in his arms as the world milled about them in exultation. "I'm happier than I have ever been in my whole life," she murmured.

x x x

In February Michael had to fly to Bermuda on business. Judith felt lost and alone. When five o'clock came the first night, she was utterly desolate. Then Hugh Lanning telephoned and she joined him for dinner at one of his "newspaperman hangouts". He watched her speculatively, then ventured: "What about Tex?"

She smiled a little. "That's over at last, Hugh."

"You're sure?"

"So sure I'm not afraid of anything in the world."

"Good girl! I hope you're right."

"Don't you think I am?"

He hesitated a moment. "I don't know. You see I knew you pretty well, and Tex, too. He's the kind of guy that gets under your skin. I was afraid you'd never care for anybody else quite like you cared for him. Even though, in some ways, he's a no good . . ."

"Tex isn't a no-good," interrupted Judith. "He didn't want to fall in love with Sonia."

"But he did."

They dropped the dangerous subject . . .

Later that night Judith lay sleepless, thinking of what Lanning had said. It disturbed her more than she cared to admit. Hugh, too, in the next few days thought often of that conversation . . .

Then one day at the shop before Michael came back, Lee Holt telephoned. She asked him to dinner. Lee came to her apartment that evening, browned to a deep bronze, looking fit indeed. He caught her in his arms and gave her a big hug. "Lord, I'm glad to see you, Judith."

Soon she was bustling about, cooking the chops, while conversing. They sat over dinner a long time. Lee was full of news, and Judith was hungry for the jargon of fliers. Suddenly he touched the ring on Judith's left hand.

"Who is he? Dudley?"

"Yes."

"He's a great guy and a lucky one."

Lee lapsed into silence, made as if to speak once or twice, and finally mustered his words: "You now, when I came here, I didn't know whether to tell you, but now I will."

"Tell me what?"

"Well, Tex and Sonia are through!"

Judith sat up straight. "You're serious?"

"Absolutely. I've seen a lot of Tex lately, since they've been having trouble. Tex is coming east and Sonia's staying on the coast."

Judith did not answer immediately. "I'm sorry," she murmured.

"Yes, it's too bad. Tex is still nuts about her. But they got into an awful row over the trophy race. That ship cost $40,000; it went up in smoke."

"But Tex couldn't help that."

"Sonia thinks so. She told him the oil pump was no good. They battled over it all the way cross country on the Bendix. When it burned up, she was wild."

"It was her money, of course."

"Sure, that's the rub! That loss of forty grand!" Then Lee added: "Tex is drinking a lot these days He can't get back on the air lines; he can't pass his physical."

"Oh, Lee!"

"I know. Tough, isn't it? He was a great pilot, but planes and whiskey don't mix."

"Has he any money?"

"Not a dime! Sonia's living in their new house. It's some joint! Four-car garage, and a swimming pool."

"Where's Tex?"

"Living with one of the boys near Glendale; mooching drinks."

"That is awful! Can't something be done?"

"I've tried. When he and Sonia broke up two weeks ago, he went out to a ranch to take a rest cure. The caretaker makes moonshine and Tex tried to drink up all the output."

Judith shook her head. "But somebody's got to get hold of him."

Lee looked away from Judith. He was sorry now that he had told her. Then he asked awkwardly, "You aren't going to step in at this date, are you?"

Judith was indignant. "Of course not! But I can't help but be sorry. He's a great pilot, Lee, and there are too few of them in this world."

Judith watched him. Tex had been Lee Holt's hero. It is hard to learn your idol has feet of clay. He turned, his eyes not quite dry, with: "You know, I never forgave Tex for leaving you."

"Don't feel that way. I was to blame, too. I expected more than he was capable of giving. Thank goodness, I found out in time!"

"I never thought Tex Aimes would wind up this way."

"Then he isn't flying any more?"

"Oh ,he's flying all right. That's the trouble. He's going to end up by killing himself. With his reputation he can always get somebody to loan him a ship!"

They talked for a long time more. It was midnight when Lee finally left her.

x x x

Before Michael Dudley returned to New York, the newspapers headlined the news of the latest Tex Aimes matrimonial crackup. There were reports that Sonia was being seen often with a young army flying officer. Poor Tex! Judith knew how his pride would be hurt.

Judith prepared a welcome-home dinner for Michael at the apartment because she knew he would like that best. He telephoned her soon after landing, and arrived at Judith's an hour or so later, taking two steps at a time.

"My dear!" He swept her into his arms, pushed the door shut with his foot. His face was buried in her dusky hair. Then he cut short the greetings with, "Now for the surprise! I've rented a cottage in Bermuda for April. It's heavenly, ideal, wonderful! That's where we will honeymoon at long last."

x x x

Judith was in a daze. She rushed about from one task to another, trying to buy clothes for herself and, in between times, sell clothes to other people. Because there was so much to be done, Judith was not now seeing Michael every evening. He was himself deep in expansion plans for his air line.

One night in March, when they had planned to drive out on Long Island for dinner, Judith had to break the date. At the last minute De Franc had commandeered her help on a buying project.

"I simply can't tonight, Mr. De Franc," Judith said firmly.

"I insist" He stormed around his office in a pet. "I want your advice badly in this deal, for a line of inexpensive hats to sell at $16.50 have got to be in the shop in three days! We must select them tonight."

She again protested, "I promised Mr. Dudley—"

"You're going to be married to him the rest of your life! Certainly I ask few favors of you! Can't you do this for me? If anybody else finds out I'm buying this line, where will we be?"

Judith finally capitulated. De Franc had been a good friend. "All right. I'll do it."

So Judith tried to explain things to Michael over the telephone. But he was bitterly disappointed and he was annoyed. He asked, "Can't I see you about nine?"

"I'm sure we won't be finished until much later."

"Well, I'm meeting Henderson and some of his board at ten at his club. Surely it won't take long to buy a mess of hats!"

"Oh, Michael, you don't understand!"

"If it's that important, forget it."

"You're sweet to understand."

"What else can I do?"

Something in his voice warned her. "Is there anything wrong, Michael?"

"No, why?"

"I thought your voice sounded—not quite right."

"Are you sure De Franc is the reason you're not meeting me tonight?"

Judith was surprised. This was not like Michael.

"Of course, it's strictly business," she answered. Then she added, "Tomorrow night I promise to cook a special dinner for you. Nothing will interfere."

Michael finally hung up, saying he'd call her at home late in the evening.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was almost a half an hour late for dinner and finely he came in with his key and ma said, Now really, Willyum, I mean really.

I know just what you're going to say, you're going to say it must of been unavoidable, and as usual your intuition borders on the psykick, pop said, and ma said, The whole entire dinner is stone cold, that's what I was going to say and it's just too bad.

Now that's just like you, my deer, blaming the dinner instead of me, pop said, and ma said, What are you talking about, the roast is like a cinder and the potatoes are unfit to be mentioned.

It's very caracteristic of you, but really, you mustn't blame it on the potatoes, it's all my fault and it just makes me feel more gilty, pop said, and ma said, You know how Nora is, she's a slave to time and if things aren't sat down to the moment they're done, then they're overdone and the devil take the hinemost.

Wait till I see Al Sturgiss again, he'll laugh on the other side of his mouth, pop said He thinks all women are crabby like his wife, and he told me I was going to catch hale Columbia for being late and do you know what I said to him? Listen, Al, I said, do you know what that little woman's first impulse will be? Her first impulse will be to lay all the blame on the meat and the potatoes. It doesn't make sense, Al, but that's the way she is, I told him. I was going to tell him more but I didn't want to waste any time because I thought you might like to take in a picture show after dinner, pop said.

Being where they went.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Sept. 28—(AP)— Selected stocks got back on their feet in today's market although the majority showed little inclination for a fast rallying sprint.

The list was a bit ragged until the final hour when buying in steels, rails and an assortment of specialties brightened the picture considerably. While gains of fraction to a point or so were well distributed at the close, many leaders were unchanged to off a shade.

Dealings for the most part were slow. Occasional flurries, however, put the two-hour volume up to around 200,000 shares.

Scattered preferred stocks camé to life for fair-sized advances. Among these were McKesson and Robbins, Certain-Teed, Buff Mfg. and Willys Overland. McKesson and Robbins common was active at a gain of a point or so and United Drug moved up.

Supported were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Boeing, Sperry, White Motors, Kennecott, N.Y. Central, Great Northern, Standard Oil of N.J., American Can, Dow Chemical, Johns-Manville and Woolworth.

In the Canadian group International Nickel and Dome Mines improved fractions. Canada 4s in the bond market, dipped 1-8 point.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Sept. 28.—(CP) Dull action in a narrow list marked trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange during today's abbreviated session. While a few price improvements were noted, small losses predominated throughout the list. Volume was at the rate of about 60,000 shares compared with last Saturday's 82,000.

Among the weaker golds were Teck Hughes, down ten cents, Nipissing, and Pamour, down five each. Preston, Upper Canada and Kerr Addison firmed from 1 to 3 cents. Only a few Base Metals appeared, Noranda showing an early gain of a fraction and Steep Rock easing a cent.

Industrials and Western Oils were neglected. In the lower priced issues Abitibi common gained five cents and Canadian Marconi eased a like amount. Fanny Farmer and Laura Secord firmed fractions along with Ford.

Sir George Wilkinson New Mayor of London

London, Sept. 28 (CP). — Sir George Wilkinson, alderman for Aldersgate, was elected Lord Mayor of London, succeeding Sir William Coxen, in a picturesque ceremony at the Guildhall today.

Despite the risk of air raids all the ancient customs and ceremonies were observed, even to strewing the floor of the ancient hall with herbs —a survival of the age-old precaution against plagues.

Sir George said there would be no pageantry and little hospitality during his term of office while the city is in the midst of ruthless air warfare.

Sir George is 55 and is governor of St. Bartholomew's, St. Thomas's, and King's College Hospitals.

KENT VISITS RESCUED CHILDREN

London (CP Cable)—The Duke of Kent drove 40 miles to a Scottish port Friday to see the six children rescued after a week in an open boat on the Atlantic following the torpedoing of their ship, the City of Benares, by a Gerban sumbarine.

The Duke shook the hand of each of them and also congratulated their escort, Miss Mary Cornish, who played a heroine's role in keeping the spark of life in the children in the intense cold and rough weather.

How to Raise Litter of Pigs to be Demonstrated

During the period of raising a litter of pigs up to market weight the farmer becomes acquainted with such characteristics as the type and conformation of each individual pig. It is only logical that the farmer would often try to picture in his mind's eye the carcasses of the pigs and how they would compare with the requirements of the export market.

This comparison is made more interesting when a group of farmers visit the plant together. The Canada Packers' special prize at Tweed will bring together good farmers and good hogs which will make conditions ideal for an interesting and constructive meeting.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of September 27th, are as follows:

Better Export Prospect Aids Butter

Toronto, Sept. 28. — Report of Great Britain's interest in Canadian food stocks raised hopes here of butter export business, which has been lacking during the current year, and in turn helped to maintain this week the strength on the local butter market that prevailed in the previous week.

Trading opened the week quietly on the butter market, but sellers raised prices about mid-week when a return of buyers effected ready absorption of continued light receipts. This improved demand, however, subsided toward week-end after buyers apparently had taken on sufficient supplies to cover present requirements in fairly active dealings late Wednesday and throughout Thursday. The market on the first grade Ontario product closed yesterday ¼ cent to ½ cent per pound higher on the week at 23¾ cents to 24 cents, which was more of a bid and ask price as offerings were difficult to obtain at the lower figure and buyers were reluctant at paying higher.

An irregular price trend developed on the egg market during the week. Trading was generally quiet due more to buyers cleaning up stocks on hand rather than to any falling off in local consumer demand. Buying was concentrated on grades B and C, which resulted in firmer prices on these grades and weaker prices on the three top grades. Inspected shipments to Northern Ontario were light, but some dealers were more active in export trading. Three cars were being assembled for overseas shipment this week. Government inspected shipments commanded a premium of ½-cent per dozen all week.

sary in the light of changed conditions."

Hundred of Incidents.

The Japanese government, however, he said, "has declared that it intends to create a 'new order in Asia'."

"In this endeavor," the undersecretary said, "it has relied upon the instrumentality of armed force, and it has made it very clear that it intends that it alone shall decide to what extent the historic interests of the United States and the treaty rights of American citizens in the Far East are to be observed."

He declared that "many hundreds of incidents have occurred" in which American rights had been violated.

But he said "there is no problem presented which could not be peacefully solved through negotiation provided there existed a sincere desire on the part of all concerned to find an equitable and a fair solution which would give just recognition to the rights and to the real needs of all concerned."

Reviewing the "tragic history of the international relations of the past seven years," Welles said "there is just one bright picture of constructive achievement that stands out." That, he said, was the development of close relations among the 21 American Republics.

CELEBRATES 114th BIRTHDAY

BRITISH SEE U.S.

U.S. Reaction Placed First.

The News Chronicle placed the New York reaction story ahead of the account of the pact signing itself, under the headlines: "Roosevelt Sees Lothian"; "Defence Officials Meet in Washington"; "Cordell Hull Says 'It's Clear Now'."

Editorially, the News Chronicle hinted at United States entry in the war with the statement: "If the English speaking world has taken on all aggressors at once it will survive and win."

The Mail said "Neither Britain nor America will quail before Ribbentrop's bluster about a 'new order' backed by 250,000,000 people."

The Express did not comment editorially but the paper's New York correspondent cabled: "It is only a matter of time now before there is a formal Anglo-American axis to face to the bitter end the partnership of brutality and brigandage made later today by Japan's decision to weld herself onto the middle of the Rome-Berlin axis."

U.S. Capacity.

The Manchester Guardian said Hitler would count on immediate gains "if the United States came into the war against him and was then attacked by Japan," on the theory "the United States would have to give its first attention to the Far East and it would divert to its own needs a large part of the supplies of all kinds that it is sending in increasing measure to the European allies."

This belief, the Guardian said, failed to "take account of two essential points".

"The first is the formidable capacity of the United States for making war, however many the fronts, in the economic, the military and every other field, should she, by whatever process, be drawn into the struggle. It ignores also the no less formidable spirit with which she makes war when she is in it."

Washington, Sept. 28 (AP).—Senator Key Pittman (Dem.-Nevada), citing ratification of the treaty of Havana as new proof of Pan-American solidarity, declared today that the western hemisphere nations are prepared to meet "any aggression" which might arise from the German-Italian alliance with Japan.

The senate ratified the treaty by voice vote yesterday shortly after announcement in Berlin that Japan had lined up formally with the axis powers in an agreement which pledged the three nations to assist each other in the event any of them was attacked by a new enemy in the European or Chinese wars.

The Havana treaty provides specifically that the twenty-one American nations will act jointly against the transfer of sovereignty of European possessions in this hemisphere to other European powers. Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared its significance at this time was much broader.

"It minimizes the effect of the proclaimed solidarity of the eastern hemisphere, as expressed in the tripower axis treaty," he told reporters. "It furnishes concrete evidence that the countries of the western hemisphere are prepared to meet any aggression with a united front."

No Change In U.S Policy Seen.

What aggression might conceivably result from the new axis alliance the senator did not say. Official Washington generally regarded it as directed chiefly at the United States as the only potential new enemy of the totalitarian states in either the Orient or Europe.

There were no indications, however, that the course of the United States foreign policy would be altered in the slightest. On the contrary, State Secretary Cordell Hull said yesterday that the Berlin treaty was not unexpected and that in fact, such a development had been taken into account in determining United States policies.

And President Roosevelt, who refrained from comment on the pact, entertained new appeals for greater aid to Britain. A group of 87 men and women, describing themselves as a "spontaneous crusade" appealed for such aid and later a spokesman said they were "enthusiastically encouraged."

Lord Lothian Received by President

The President also received Lord Lothian, the British ambassador, and Sir Walter Layton of the council of British Ministry of Supply. Upon leaving the White House, Lord Lothian said that Britain's need is for "more of everything and quick."

Moreover, it was recalled that in-so-far as Japan's expanding military activities in the Orient are concerned the United States only this week extended a new $25,000,000 loan to China and Secretary Hull vigorously stated American objections to the Japanese entrance into Indo-China.

The Havana Treaty, designed primarily to meet the possibility that Germany might try to take over French, Netherlands, or other European possessions in the Western hemisphere, was signed in Havana, Cuba, in July by representatives of all the American nations except Canada.

It provides that they will co-operate in establishing a provisional government over any threatened possession, while one or more of them may act to prevent occupation by a non-American power if the need for expedient action arises.

Everyone must think in his own manner, for he finds on his road always a truth or a kind of truth which helps him through life, only he must not let it have its own way but control it.

OVERNIGHT RAIDS

Twice in the early hours this morning, raiders penetrated to the centre of the capital.

They were met by anti-aircraft barrages described as the heaviest yet fired in London's determined defence. At least one bomber was seen smashed by the shell bursts over the city. Others, caught momentarily in searchlight beams, seemed damaged by the thunderous fire that at times drowned out the sound of exploding bombs.

Number of Fires Started

Some heavy explosives smashed again into the heart of London, setting a number of fires. These and the flash of explosives, lit southeast London as bright as day for a short time.

Large squads of firemen and volunteers extinguished most of the fires within half an hour.

The firemen worked with shrapnel clattering into the streets and on rooftops around them.

Residents of one London section said they heard a roar of motors during the height of the attack which seemed to indicate that one German bomber had dived below the bursts of anti-aircraft fire and streaked across the city at roof-skimming altitude. The plane was either flying very low or was unusually large, persons in the district said.

Town Bombed For First Time

But London, still the bullseye, was only part of the Nazi target, and raiders attacked objectives in scattered sections of Scotland and Wales and hit at almost every part of England.

Two towns in the industrially important midlands were bombed. For one it was the first raid of the war.

Seven towns in northwestern England—less often bombed than the south and east coasts— were attacked. At one of them workers still dug through wreckage and rubble today to rescue the trapped and extricate the dead from a number of homes in a working class residential district. Heavy calibre bombs showered the district in one of three separate attacks from dusk to dawn.

R.A.F. Visits Enemy Ports.

The Air Ministry, meanwhile, reported continued R.A.F. raids on the "invasion ports" along the German-held coast, and said other flights of bombers had attacked across the German frontier, striking at communications lines.

The operations against the German bases along the coast were described again as "large scale" attacks.

Homes in London and its suburbs and business and industrial buildings in the capital were reported damaged by bombs. There were some casualties—their number not disclosed.

In areas apart from London casualties were described as small. Bombs were reported to have fallen in South Lancashire, Midland towns, parts of southwestern England, and "several districts between London and the south coast."

FINANCE FOURTH

Savings barometers have been erected in the squares of markets towns and on village greens. The pointers are raised 5 pounds at a time as the little men dig in their pockets and donations to the war effort roll in.

Savings Groups Formed

By purchasing these certificates at $3 each, the buyer lends the government his money for 10 years. At the end of that period interest has increased his investment to $4.12.

Savings groups are formed in hundreds of factories, workshops and stores, where the workers put aside part of their weekly earnings to boost a co-operative purchase of certificates.

"Street" and "family" groups are popular in some parts of the country. The record family group—in Essex—has 15 members.

Many cities and towns hold a savings week.

Opening of the week was announced by the historic town crier at Canterbury.

Two other towns of Kent—Maidstone (population 37,000) and Tunbridge Wells (36,000)—challenged each other to a war savings race.

Meet at Pub

In their robes and chains of office, the mayors of the two towns met at Cob Tree Manor (the original Dingley Dell of Dickens' "Pickwick papers") to issue their challenges.

So far Maidstone people have subscribed $2,720,000 to war savings, while Tunbridge Wells has raised $2,000,000. The aim of both towns is to top the $4,000,000 mark by the end of the year. "Barometers" erected near each town hall show how they are succeeding.

More and more money is being subscribed by the public to help buy new planes for the Royal Air Force.

Local "Spitfire funds" are organized in factories and business offices and collections are taken at public meetings and in the theatres.

Willard Garfield Weston, M.P., the Canadian-born biscuit manufacturer, gave $400,000 to buy 20 new Fighters to replace those lost during recent battles over the Channel. Twelve of them will form a squadron which may be named after him, the remaining eight being held as reserves.

From Canada has come a similar gift of $1,000,000 from J. W. McConnell, Montreal publisher, placed at the disposal of Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production, to be used in putting more British planes into the sky against Germany.

casting are due to the directing genius he displayed.

Sir Frederic travelled extensively throughout Canada. He possessed an unrivalled knowledge of climate and was greatly interested in the different types of Canada winters. He believed they depended to a great extent on the temperature of the water in the North Pacific.

One of his dreams was the production of a world weather map and Sir Frederick came close to realizing the ambition by producing weather maps for the greater part of the northern hemisphere. This laid the foundation for forecasts for the North Atlantic and was a great contribution to meteorology, particularly with the rapid development of air travel.

His wife died several years ago.

Price Board in Charge

On June 30 the Wartime Prices and Trade Board was advised that the cargoes would be landed in Canada in order to prevent them falling into German hands, and that the vessels were urgently required to return at once with fresh cargoes of war essentials.

Coal Administrator J. McG. Stewart and his technical adviser, F. G. Neate, were both in Halifax at the time and they took charge of the job.

There were some 40 different varieties of bituminous coal, some of a type not used heretofore in Canada, and it was impossible to know in advance what variety would be in each cargo.

"However, we received most hearty co-operation from the trade," Mr. Stewart was quoted in the Board's statement. This co-operation had to do with use of dock and unloading facilities and with regard to "willingness to pay reasonable and even generous prices for these grades in the Canadian market."

By July, 20 of these vessels had discharged their cargoes at Eastern Canada ports and in Newfoundland, six others were unloading and five others on their way to unloading points from control stations.

One ship went through the Panama Canal and unloaded at San Francisco and Seattle, and all but one of the original fleet has been accounted for, the statement said.

FIVE OFFICERS ARE PROMOTED

R.C.A.F. Wing Commanders Now Raised to Rank of Group Captains

Ottawa, Sept. 28—(CP)—Promotion of five officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force from Wing Commander to Group Captain was announced at headquarters today.

The new Group Captains are A. L. Morfee, newly-appointed Officer Commanding the R.C.A.F. Air Station at Dartmouth, N.S., A. Ferrier of the Engineering and Supply Division at Ottawa headquarters, J. L. E. A. deNiverville, Director of Recruiting and also on the headquarters staff, Frank S. McGill, Officer Commanding No. 2 Service Flying Training School at Ottawa and A. H. Hull, attached to Western Air Command Headquarters at Vancouver.

These days not all that's washed up on the beach is common property and three persons in Wales were fined for tapping a 56-gallon cask of stout that came ashore from some lost vessel.

URGED TO STAND TO THEIR JOBS DURING RAIDS

British Workers Told Every Hour They Defy Hitler's Bombers is One More Step to Victory

MORRISON'S APPEAL

London, Sept. 28 (CP Cable) — Herbert Morrison, Minister of Supply and leader of the great civilian army of factory workers who keep Britain's war machine supplied, issued an order of the day today to his men urging them to "stand to your jobs", during the air raids.

"Victory will crown your efforts," he said.

"Along among the troops of our civilian army you can do more than suffer and endure in grim patience. You can hit back," he told the workers, most of whom keep working now during the raids until the danger is imminent.

"You're the men and women of whom Hitler's afraid, for your hands are forging the weapons of victory. If his airmen could slow down and paralyse your work he would have won this great battle.

"Every hour's working time he can keep you idle is a gain to him: Every hour you can defy his bombers and remain at your posts is one more blow struck in defence of your homes, your families, one more step towards victory."

118 CHILDREN BOUND FOR U.S.

Arrive at Eastern Port and Will Leave for States on Sunday

An Eastern Canadian Port, Sept. 28.—(CP)—A group of 118 British children, bound for wartime homes in the United States, were cared for here today after their arrival aboard a liner with 1,000 other passengers.

The children, ranging in age from five to 15 years, were brought here by the United States committee for the care of European children. They will leave for New York tomorrow.

Among the passengers were 210 Foresters from Newfoundland, returning from Great Britain. They went overseas last spring.

One of the passengers was M. C. Willon, a young Montreal sailor, who was a survivor of the torpedoing of the Belgian steamship Ville D'Hasselt last month.

Willon said that after the Ville D'Hasselt's crew took to the boats they saw the submarine come to the surface, but it did not approach them.

Czech Predicts Decisive Battle Fought in Balkans

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 28—(CP) —The decisive battle in the war will be fought in the Balkans and Russia will come in on the side of Britain to crush German oppression. Such is the prediction of Count Edmund Czernin, Czecho-Slovakian scholar and diplomat who spoke in Kingston last night, under the auspices of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs.

"The war will not end for another year or two," said Count Czernin. "The battle now raging in England is only a passing phase. The Czech nation is convinced that their freedom will come."

Every gift which is given, even though it be small, is in reality great, if it be given with affection. —Pinder.

Vincent Astor Weds 3 Weeks After Divorce

East Hampton, N.Y., Sept. 28 (AP) —Mary Cushing one of the three daughters of the late Dr. Harvey Cushing, noted brain surgeon, is the new Mrs. Vincent Astor—bearer of a family name powerful in the United States since the days when the first John Astor made a fortune in furs.

She was married Friday at her mother's summer home in this peaceful seaside resort to that Astor's 49-year-old great, great grandson — a multi - millionaire yachtsman and largest single owner of New York real estate. The bride is in her early thirties.

Twenty-three days after the first Mrs. Vincent Astor, a leading New York music patron, obtained a divorce in Wyoming, ending a marriage of twenty-six years, the brief, simple ceremony took place in a living room overlooking the ocean.

In the same room the bride's younger sister, Barbara, was married a week ago to Stanley Mortimer Jr., a distant relative of the Roosevelt family.

Another sister, Betsy Cushing Roosevelt, former wife of President Roosevelt's son, James, was at the wedding yesterday with her two small daughters, Sarah and Kate.

So quiet were the arrangements that few residents of East Hampton knew of the marriage until Astor and his bride had left for a ten-day cruise on his yacht, Nourmahal, which was anchored off Montauk.

Astor, a personal friend of President Roosevelt, has been active in movements to eliminate Manhattan slums, replacing them with modern buildings.

His mother, Lady Ribblesdale, who attended the wedding, returned here from England several months ago. Astor's father, John Jacob Astor 2nd, died in the Titanic disaster in 1912. Vincent Astor's inheritance was $75,000,000.

HINT BULGARIA MAY JOIN AXIS

Such an Alliance Would Isolate Turkey Italians Say

Rome, Sept. 28—(AP)—The possibility that Bulgaria, as well as Spain may join the new alliance of Japan, Italy and Germany against attacks by other powers now at peace was hinted in Italian political circles today.

If Bulgaria entered the new alignment, foreign observers said, it presumably would be for "protection" against Greece, from which Sofia wants an outlet to the Aegean Sea through Thrace, and also from neighboring Turkey, friendly with Britain.

Such an alliance, these observers added, would tend to isolate Turkey in a manner similar to the United States.

Authoritative Fascists have said previously that Italy and Germany want a settlement of still pending problems in southeastern Europe, among which are Albanian and Bulgarian claims on Greece.

A dispatch from Sofia reported that King Boris talked with his Foreign Minister, Ivan Popoff, and added that the Bulgarian Finance Minister, Dobri Bojiloff, who has the close confidence of the King, would visit Berlin and Rome next month at the invitation of the axis governments.

HOBOES URGED TO GET INTO SERVICE

Philadelphia (AP)—Jeff Davis, king of the hoboes, sent word by grapevine and mail to 1,010,000 "subjects" yesterday to "get off the road" and into the United States military service or defence industries. "This is no time to be gazing at the seenery," he said. "It is the nation's most critical moment—not hour." Davis said his decision was reached when Japan's link with Germany and Italy became known.

MOTHER AND FATHER IN BATTLE FOR CHILD

The curtain rises, LEFT, on a bitter domestic drama in New York supreme court as Frank Long program hawker at the World's Fair aquacade, attempts to kiss, RIGHT, his six-year-old daughter, Jacqueline, when she enters the building with her mother, Bunny Howard, high salaried entertainer. The latter pulls the youngster away and a bruising battle ensued. The wife's lawyer tried to prevent Long from kissing the child and a fight, RIGHT, started. Long was battered by a well-directed punch and injured his head when he fell on the concrete floor. His wife also hit the floor when she either slipped or was pushed. The melee came in an interlude of the child custody battle.

The War This Week

By DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Cable Editor

An agreement designed to facilitate co-ordination of the aggressive aims of the German, Italian and Japanese governments was signed with elaborate ceremony in Berlin at the close of the 56th week of the war, bringing to a head intense diplomatic activity in the axis capitals.

The United States anticipated the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo accord by a day, President Roosevelt putting into effect an embargo on export of scrap steel and iron, which Japan needs badly. When news of the pact reached Washington, the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, said it merely "makes clear to all a relationship which has long existed in effect." Britain saw the accord as having the effect of tightening economic co-operation between the United States and the British Empire.

A new turn in the hostilities appeared during the week when a free French amphibian force under Gen. Charles de Gaulle arrived off Dakar, important West African air base nearest to South America. After three days of sporadic naval fighting, when it had become apparent that only major operations would bring the colony's surrender, the expedition was withdrawn. It was explained that Gen. de Gaulle had been led to believe that in view of the strong sentiment in the colony favoring his movement the landing of his forces would be unopposed.

Bombing Activities Increase

The bombing activities of the Royal Air Force increased, with several raids on Berlin and nightly forays along the "invasion coast." In the Berlin raids the objectives hit included the Klingenberg Power Station, main source of power for Berlin, the Tempelhof Airdrome, railway facilities and munitions factories. It was hinted in air circles that henceforth Berlin will be attacked every night that weather conditions are suitable.

German raiders completed their third week of day and night attack on London. In the night raids factories, office buildings and homes were hit despite the efforts of anti-aircraft crews. But in the more important daylight raids the Germans continued to have little success in getting by the vigilant R.A.F. Fighter squadrons. On Friday alone more than 130 Nazi raiders were shot down, bringing to more than 1,000 the number destroyed in September.

A new act of brutality in German submarine warfare was recorded in the sinking without warning of the liner City of Benares 600 miles out in the Atlantic. Eighty-one British children on their way to Canada as war refugees were lost, together with 167 adults. Six children were rescued after passing a week in an open boat.

Italian Campaign Bogs Down.

"In the Mediterranean the Italian advance into the Egyptian western desert made no progress and Marshal Graziani's gases at Sidi Barrani and elsewhere were subjected to severe punishment by British naval bombardment and Royal Air Force bombers. Gibraltar was attacked twice by aircraft belonging to the Vichy government as a reprisal for Gen. De Gaulle's Dakar expedition.

In the Far East Japanese troops finally gained admission to French Indo-China but their zeal in exceeding the terms of the agreement between Tokyo and the colonial authorities caused a number of armed clashes. Gen. Chiang Kai Shek's forces in China prepared to meet a thrust from the Japanese army's new bases in Indo-China.

Glancing back 25 years!

The allied autumn advance on the western front began Sept. 25, 1915, the British and French making considerable gains and capturing 20,000 German prisoners in two days. British troops at this date held 70 miles of front. British troops in Mesopotamia captured Kut-El-Amara, the Turkish defenders retreating to Baghdad. Greece agreed to a proposed allied expedition to Salonika.

Soviet Russia Firmly Neutral, Pravda Declares

Newspaper Says Success of Division Of Spheres of Influence is 'Different Question'

Moscow, Sept. 30 (AP)—The Communist party newspaper Pravda declared today that the new triple axis pact, which is laid in part to military co-operation between the United States and Great Britain, presages further widening of the war.

Pravda said in an editorial marking the first Russian comment on the accord that Soviet Russia remains firmly neutral. The newspaper said Russia was notified of the German-Italian-Japanese alliance in advance of its announcement by Germany last Friday.

Accounting for the pact, Pravda said 'doubtlessly it was stimulated in the first place by the latest facts of intensification between Britain and the United States."

New Phase of War Seen

"It signifies the advent of a new phase of the war which is more extensive than prior to conclusion of the pact," Pravda said. "If until lately the war has been confined to a sphere in Europe and northern Africa in the west and a sphere in China in the east . . . now an end is being put to this separation . . .

"Henceforth Japan renounces a policy of non-intervention in European affairs while Germany and

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Temperature and latitude! Long before the present era, geographers divided the earth climatically into the five well-known zones, the torrid, two temperate, and two frigid zones. They associated the differences in climate simply with the sun's altitude. The limits of their zones corresponded with the parallels of latitude. But as a matter of fact the lines of equal temperature never follow a parallel of latitude for any distance. This variation from the parallels is more pronounced in the northern hemisphere than in the southern. This is because the southern hemisphere is mostly water. But even there, Australia, the smallest continent or largest island, has considerable influence in diverting the temperature lines of the southern hemisphere.

Children Injured After Explosion Of 200 Dynamite Caps

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—(CP)—Two children from Arnprior, Ont., were in hospital here today with serious injuries suffered Saturday in an explosion that occurred as they played with about 200 dynamite caps.

The children, Raymond Clouthier, 10, and his sister, Lucille, eight, were blown over backward as the first caps exploded, and this is believed to have saved them from more serious injury. Doctors said they are suffering from many deep cuts and burns and bruises.

Neighbours who heard the explosion rushed up to find the terrified children, clothes covered with blood, crawling from the kitchen of their home. Their father, Pte. Paul Clouthier, is serving in England with the Royal Canadian Engineers. ing in Chicago with Billy Soose vs

9 HURRICANES CHASE 9 HEINKELS

Air Ministry Says They 'Saved Liverpool' From Possible Serious Bombing Attack

London, Sept. 30 (CP)—The Air Ministry declared today that nine Hurricane fighters "saved Liverpool from what might have been a serious bombing attack."

The Hurricanes, patrolling over the Irish Sea about 8.30 p.m. yesterday, sighted a formation of nine Heinkel 111 bombers.

"The Heinkels were flying fast and high to the northeast which would take them to the Liverpool area," the account continued. "The Hurricanes at once attacked."

The pilot of one Hurricane said "When they saw us the Heinkels veered toward the west. We kept chasing after them. One crashed into the sea near Wexford."

"By this time the Heinkels had wheeled right round and were heading back to the south," he added. "Another was badly damaged and it is unlikely to have reached home. When last seen it was lagging well behind the rest."

Support Proposal For Centralization Of Municipal Police

Toronto, Sept. 30.—(CP)—Support for his move to have control and direction for municipal police forces centralized was placed before Attorney-General Conant today from two sources. Mr. Conant urge this move when speaking before the Ontario Police Association convention at Guelph last week.

Police Chief Robert J. Robinson of Kingston, wrote Mr. Conant that he endorsed the Attorney General's views of consolidation of police forces, and feels confident that all members of the Association are behind him in this move He hoped in the near future a concrete plan on the proposal would be placed before the legislature.

A Long Branch woman writes hoping that smaller places would be place under the Attorney-General for policing.

"Then we would receive justice" she stated.

AXIS CAMPAIGN AGAINST 'ROCK' A POSSIBILITY

British Sources Also Believe Indian Summer Attempt May be Made Against Britain

BRITAIN CONFIDENT

Daily Express Claims Hitler is Approaching His "Supreme Gamble"

London, Sept. 30 (CP)—Informed sources said today Britain is preparing against a new war crisis in October—an axis campaign against Gibraltar coupled with an Indian summer attempt to invade England.

Naval circles warned that the danger of invasion still is present despite the approach of the winter storms that lash the English channel. They said direct attack could be attempted in periods of calm especially during clear weather in October.

The Daily Express, published by Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production, said the most likely axis strategy would be thrusts at Gibraltar and Bizerte, French Tunisia, in an effort to draw the home fleet to the Mediterranean and leave the English Channel less hazardous for invasion barges.

The Express declared Hitler is approaching his "supreme gamble" and asserted:

Senator Laird Dies at Burlington

Burlington, Ont., Sept. 30 (CP)—Senator H. W. Laird of Regina and Ottawa died at his summer home here early today after a long illness. He was 72 and had been a member of the Senate since February 1917.

Senator Laird was a former mayor of Regina, president of the Regina Cold Storage Company, vice-president of the Ontario Equitable Life and Accident Insurance Company, and had a distinguished record as a soldier.

As Lieutenant-Colonel he organized the 3rd Divisional Train, Canadian Expeditionary Force, in 1916, and took the unit to England and France. He was awarded the Long Service Medal (Canadian) in 1932.

Senator Laird was born at Port Dover, Ont., Jan. 4, 1868, son of Rev. W. H. Laird and Elizabeth Burke. Surviving are his widow and four daughters and one son. His eldest son, Flt.-Lt. Homer Laird, was killed in action in 1917.

STUDENT PILOTS TO GET WINGS

First Class at Camp Borden Under Empire Air Training Scheme to Graduate

Camp Borden, Ont., Sept. 30—(CP) — Presentation of wings to student pilots making up the first class of students under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan at Camp Borden will be made today, Group Captain A. T. N. Cowley, officer commanding the station, said Sunday night.

(At Ottawa Saturday an erroneous report from air ministry sources said the wings ceremonies had been postponed until Oct. 13.)

These pilots have completed their intermediate flying training at the No. 1 Service Flying Training School. They now will have five weeks of advance training followed by two weeks at a bombing and gunnery school before full graduation.

Big Fire Blazes on Calais Quayside After British Use Long Range Guns

London, Sept. 30 (CP)—British long range guns shelled the German-held French coast shortly before dawn today.

The heavy gunfire shook the Straits of Dover.

A direct hit was believed to have been scored on the quayside at Calais harbor where a big fire blazed for some time after the thunder of the shelling died down, The Press Association reported.

German batteries attempting to silence the British batteries from emplacements on the French coast fired four salvoes of shells at 20-minute intervals

Later in the morning they started shelling the Dover area.

Praise for British Victory In War Against Hitler Raised in Many U. S. Churches

New York, Sept. 30 (CP).—Prayers that the British people may be victorious in their defence against Hitler's Germany marked the services in many United States churches yesterday, set aside by the governors of five states and the mayors of twenty cities as "Great Britain Sunday".

Throughout New York clergymen of many churches joined in the prayers and Rt. Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church addressed a message to the people of Great Britain in which he declared that "England stands today the bulwark of the Christian way of life."

Rev. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, president of the Union Theological Seminary, said that the condition of the world is the judgment of God upon a thoughtless and selfish generation and added:

"There is tragedy when boy or nation reaches manhood's powers and remains a child in mind and conscience. A disappointed world may well ask of us: 'Will America ever assume her full obligations?'"

Rt. Rev. William T. Manning, Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of New York, said at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine that "it is our duty to give our immediate aid without stint or limit in every form of the people of Great Britain."

"We cannot afford to remain neutral either in heart or in action," said Bishop Manning. For the sake of humanity and for the future well-being of the United States "we must do our part in this struggle, which is ours as truly as it is theirs.

Dr. Henry Darlington, who spoke at the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Heavenly Rest, where he is rector, warned his congregation that the pacifists are playing into the hands of "the enemy".

HITLER COVETS AMERICAS' RICHES SAYS LA FLECHE

Major - General Declares Military Training of Canadian Youth Necessary for Safety

ADDRESSES YOUNG MEN

St. Hyacinthe, Que., Sept. 30—(CP)—Hitler covets the riches of the two Americas and will seize the first chance to attack Canada, Maj.-Gen. L. R. LaFleche, Deputy Minister of National War Services, said in an address to the St. Hyacinthe Chamber of Commerce.

Canadians were fighting for their own liberties and their right to live and none understood better the full meaning of the word "liberty" than the French-Canadians, Gen. LaFleche told the meeting here last night.

AMERICAS SEND MISSIONS ABROAD

Military Note-Campaigning Among Countries Reaches Unprecedented Scale

Buenos Aires, Sept. 30 (AP). —Military note-comparing on an unprecedented scale is in progress among the Americas.

Although this was started weeks before Berlin, Rome and Tokyo bound themselves to fight any new enemy in either of the world's two wars, it has reached its height amid the world reaction to the pact of Berlin.

Besides South and Central American military representatives already in the United States to acquaint themselves with North America's potential military might and talk with United States military leaders, these missions were en route today:

Argentina—The head of the army, Inspector-General Guillermo J. Mohr, accompanied by his chief of staff, Lt.-Col. Roque Lanus, is at sea, bound for New York.

Peru—Col. Filipe de la Barra, chief of general staff, passed through Guayaquil, Ecuador, yesterday by plane.

Uruguay—Inspector-general Macelona Bergalla and his air force commander, Lt.-Col. Oscar Gestido, left from Buenos Aires last week, flying by way of Rio de Janeiro, to Washington.

PTE. F. G. SIMS KILLED IN ACCIDENT

London, Ont, Sept. 30.—(CP)—Pte. Francis G. Sims, has been killed in a motorcycle accident in England, his widow, Marcella, was advised by telegram from Ottawa, last night. Well known in the building trade here, he joined the army shortly after the outbreak of war and sent overseas with the Canadian Active Service Force. He is also survived by three daughters and two sons.

GUN ACCIDENTS CLAIM 2 LIVES, HIGHWAYS TWO

Fire in Basement of Kirkland Lake Residence Fatal to Henry Diggins

WEEKEND TOLL LOW

(By the Canadian Press)

Shooting accidents took two lives in Ontario during the week-end as the death toll for the province dropped to the lowest figure in weeks. Two persons lost their lives in highway accidents and one died in a fire.

Melbourne Whiting, 20, of Cochrane was killed when he handed a loaded rifle to his 12-year-old brother by the muzzle. The gun discharged and the bullet pierced the young man under the armpit. It was to have been his last hunting trip before enlisting.

BISHOP UNFURLS NEW RCAF FLAG

Air Marshal Pays Visit to Canadian Army Co-operation Squadron

By HAROLD FAIR
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in Southern England, Sept. 30 (CP Cable)—Air Marshal W. A. Bishop, V.C., today unfurled the new Royal Canadian Air Force flag which flew for the first time in England when he visited a Canadian Army Cooperation Squadron in this beautiful rolling country.

The flag, similar to that of the Royal Air Force, is blue with a Union Jack in the upper lefthand corner but in place of the familiar red dot on a white background inside a darker blue ring it has a red maple leaf. The flag, approved by the King, was designed in Canada.

Air Marshal Bishop flew here—the first time in the air for the former war ace since he reached Britain last week—with Sqdn.-Ldr. Bert Evans of Winnipeg. The journey took the Canadian V.C. over part of the London area including the air defence zone which nightly roars defiance at Goering's air force.

The air marshal was greeted on his arrival with a general salute. The squadron was lined up in general mass flights and the band played under the direction of Cpl. Fred Hill of Winnipeg. The band, whose instruments were provided by Winnipeg business men, has gained a considerable local reputation.

Air Marshal Bishop was received by the Commanding Officer, Sqdn.-Ldr. W. F Hanna of Winnipeg. On the inspection he was accompanied by Hanna and Air Commodore G. R. Walsh, Senior Officer of R.C.A.F. headquarters in Britain. After lunch at the officers' mess, where he talked shop, Air Marshal Bishop reboarded his plane enroute to London, planning to stop off on the way to see Sqdn.-Ldr. Ernest McNab's R.C.A.F. fighter squadron.

CHAIN OF FIRES MARKS RAF RAIDS ON GERMAN CITIES

Large Refinery and Benzin Plant Subjected to Several Hours' Attack

STUTTGART BOMBED

Large Gas Plant and the Bosch Electrical Factory Severely Damaged

London, Sept. 30 (CP).—A chain of fiercely-burning fires in factories supplying Germany's war machine was announced by the Air Ministry today as the result of raids by Royal Air Force bombers lasting almost three hours Sunday night over a broad sweep of Germany and the Nazi-held coast.

The ministry gave this account, supplementing its communique's bare announcement of the R.A.F.'s objectives:

"Fires, followed by explosions which could be seen by aircraft crews 60 miles away, marked a heavy attack on an oil refinery and storage plant at Magdeburg, carried out last night by aircraft of the bomber command.

"A plant known as Braunkohlen Benzin A. G., situated 200 miles inland from Germany's western frontier, was subjected to a series of raids which began shortly after 11 p.m., and continued for nearly three hours.

"Ground haze over the city and the glare of many searchlights hampered bomber crews in the early stages of the attack, but later the many fires started by incendiary bombs illuminated the target and guided following aircraft directly to their objective.

400 Dollars Year Cost of War to Average Family

Toronto, Sept. 30 (CP)—The war is costing the average Canadian family about $400 a year, Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley, here to speak at a dinner meeting, told interviewers today. This amount is not paid in cash, but bases on current estimates of increased taxation and government borrowings. It works out to about $85 per person.

Not all of this is spent on soldiers and ammunition. For instance, $900,000,000 is provided in this fiscal year's estimates as assistance to certain industries that lost export markets. Apple growers are an example, but Mr. Ilsley said this estimate does not include aid to wheat producers.

Dry Canteens In N.P.A.M. Centres

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—(CP)— Canteens in the Non-Permanent Active Militia Training Centre which open October 9 will be dry it was learned at the Department of National Defence today.

In this respect the centres will differ from the camps and training centres of the Canadian Active Service force which are provided with wet canteens serving beer.

The men called up for 30 days' training under the National Resources Mobilization Act will be able to buy cigarettes tobacco, candy and soft drinks in their canteens but no beer, wine or liquor.

Cafe Counter-Man Held for Murder

Philadelphia, Sept. 30.—(AP)—A legal trail that could lead to the electric chair began today for a 35-year-old short-order cook who admitted, police say, that he took attractive Mrs. Ethel Atkins to a vacant farmhouse 20 miles from the city and bludgeoned her to death in a liquor-inflamed rage.

Mrs. Atkins body, naked and battered, was found last Tuesday in an old dwelling at Horsham, Montgomery County. Wife of a Philadelphia bricklayer and mother of twin sons, she was related by a former marriage to the Duke tobacco family of North Carolina.

Police Captain William C. Engle said that William J. Ernest signed a statement he killed Mrs. Atkins after accompanying her on a round of Philadelphia taprooms.

German Aircraft Put to Flight in Twenty Minutes

Four Nazi Machines Destroyed on Southeast Coast Before Reaching London

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer))

London, Sept. 30 (CP).—Royal Air Force fighters clashed with Nazi raiders over the metropolitan area today and put the German aircraft to flight after 20 minutes.

Four German planes were reported to have crashed—in the vicinity of Oxted, Godstone, Tadworth and Ealing.

Londoners had not heard planes or gunfire in the earlier alerts but coast towns were bombed while big guns exchanged shots across the Straits of Dover.

More than a score of bombs were dropped in two raids on a south coast town. Considerable damage of a non-military nature was caused, including the town's pavilion. There were some casualties.

Block of Flats Struck.

Bombs falling near a block of flats in a southeast coast town caused slight damage but no casualties.

Night raiders confined themselves in several areas to the dropping of crude oil and incendiary bombs.

In the course of a night attack on the Merseyside two auxiliary firemen were killed and three injured when caught in falling debris in a warehouse fire. Waves of planes bombed, fired and damaged three churches, a convent school, a garage, a laundry and many working class houses.

The nurses' home of a hospital in a western suburb of London which was bombed during the night will have to be rebuilt. Twenty nurses who ordinarily occupy it were on duty at the hospital and escaped unhurt.

Some Streets Closed

Bombs jettisoned on a northwest London residential section during the night damaged houses, caused casualties, and punctured gas

BRITAIN INTENDS TO REOPEN ROAD

London, Sept. 30.—(CP)—Some informed British sources indicated today that because the whole situation in the Far East has changed, Great Britain intends to reopen the Burma Road, supply line for China, probably after consultation with the United States.

The Foreign Office remained silent on the question of the road, due to be reopened October 18, "failing a fresh agreement with Japan".

(The Burma Road, which follows the ancient silk trail traversed by Marco Polo 700 years ago, is a link in the 2,000-mile trade route returning from Burma's seaport of Rangoon to the Yangtse River, connecting the Burmese railhead at Lashio with Kunming, capital of China's Yunnan Province. It was ordered closed for three months July 17 following an agreemnt between Britain and Japan.)

'War Hardly Begun' Says Crookshank, Urging Saving

Coventry, England, Sept. 30 (AP). —Capt. Harry Crookshank, financial secretary to the treasury, said today that "the war has really hardly begun" and urged Britons "to save to the limit" to finance armaments for the big battles to come.

Speaking at a luncheon opening a "war weapons week" here, Capt. Crookshank said:

"The first year of belligerency has passed out—without detracting from our great successes in our fight or from the steady destruction of German military objectives by our bombers—but we still have a very long road to travel."

Uruguayan Papers Fire 'Reprisal' Blasts At Italian Sheet

Montevideo, Sept. 30—(AP) —Uruguayan newspapers fired "reprical" blasts Friday at the Italian newspaper Regime Fascista of Cremona in a bitter word battle over the neutral status of Uruguay, which currently is sifting evidence against Nazi plotters.

Regime Fascista yesterday accused Uruguay of being "at the service of sterling"—meaning the British pound sterling—that she must consider herself 'a belligerent against the totalitarians" and added something about a settling of accounts in the not too far distant future.

Meanwhile eight Nazi charged with an ambitious plot to conquer Uruguay remained in jail while Judge Hamlet Reyes thumbed volumes of evidence prepared for their trial.

5-YEAR-OLD BOY RESCUES BROTHER AND TWO SISTERS

Lloyd Thompson of Peterborough Pushes Others to Safety From Burning Barn

BURNED ABOUT HEAD

Peterborough, Ont., Sept. 30—(CP)—Five-year-old Lloyd Thompson was something of a hero today after rescuing his brother and two sisters, all younger than himself, from a blazing barn here yesterday.

The lad was badly burned about the head and legs as he pushed the three younger children to safety through a hole in the barn.

The children had apparently been playing with matches in a hay loft just before the fire started.

Once outside, the oldest girl, Shirley, four, used her bare hands to beat out the flaming hair of her brother. She was slightly burned about the face. The barn was completely burned in 20 minutes.

8 BELIEVED DROWNED

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

SEPTEMBER COOLER THAN A YEAR AGO

The rainfall in September was considerably less than in the corresponding month of last year according to figures released Monday by the Water Purification Plant. Rainfall in September of this year was 1.61 inches while in September of last year there was 3.06 inches of rain. September was also a cooler month than September of last year, the high temperature for 1940 being 80 degrees and the low 31.5 which is a half of a degree below freezing. In September of 1939 the high temperature was 88 degrees and the low 34.1 degrees.

HUNTERS PREPARE FOR TUESDAY'S SHOOT

Hunters of the city combed attics and garages today in preparation for the annual trek to hideouts of the various hunting spots of the district. The duck-hunting season officially opens Tuesday, October 1st, in regions south of Highway No. 7 and many of the local nimrods will depart tonight to be ready for the first blacks and teals which wing their way over the marshes and lakes at the crack o' dawn.

Reports from the districts north of Highway No. 7 where the season opened two weeks ago, are to the effect that ducks are fairly plentiful with the blacks and teals predominating.

UNSKILLED WORKERS STILL PREDOMINANT

Although a scarcity of skilled laborers, such as machine shop workers, tool and die makers, etc., is still predominant locally, there are any amount of unskilled workers registered at the local employment bureau, stated Mr. W. D. Ross of the Dominion Employment Agency this morning. Forty laborers had been placed at the airport on Monday morning in temporary positions but laborers of this class were still being registered in numbers, said Mr. Ross.

The fact that the harvest was practically over and farmers' helpers were not needed now as during the summer months accounted for numbers of laborers looking for work, commented Mr. Ross.

LOCAL CAIRN TERRIER WINS CHAMPIONSHIP

Signal honor was brought to Belleville at the All-Breed Dog Show of the Ladies' Kennel Club of Canada, held in Montreal on Saturday, when Roger E. Parks, Charlotte Street, won the championship in the Cairn Terrier class with his handsome dog. Two hundred and seventy-five entries from all parts of Canada and the United States took part in the show, the grand championship of which was won by "Droll V. Sadowa of Salmagundi" a standard poodle owned by Justin Griess, Hamilton, Massachusetts. The best of the Great Danes was "Judge Hassia" owned by Mrs. G. W. Hyslop, Brockville.

$14,650 IN BUILDING PERMITS ISSUED DURING SEPTEMBER

With a total over the month of September of $14,650, building operations in the city for the month of September were down about 50 per cent in comparison to $29,900 for the corresponding period of 1939. Last year's figures included, however, the $19,000 construction program of buildings, tanks, etc., of the Shell Oil Company.

Included in the last month's program was the $9,000 addition to the factory of the Stephens-Adamson plant; Carl D. Crosby, new dwelling at 247 Albert Street, $2,500.00; B. Sherry, new dwelling, 161 Bleecker Avenue, $2,000.00; John Spencer alterations to refrigeration plant, Market Lane, $1,000.00, and alterations to the Docter's Hotel Station Street, $150.00.

Belleville Members Of the Famous "21st" Report Grand Time At Annual Reunion

Belleville members of the famous "Fighting Twenty-first" Battalion returned to the city Sunday night and today with glowing reports of a "grand time" at the annual reunion held in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, over the week-end.

About three hundred of the "remnants" a great many of them once more in the uniform of His Majesty the King, thronged the convention rooms where the Toronto Club were hosts at a function that compared favorably with those of other years. President Edward Bind, of the Toronto branch acted as chairman for the occasion where addresses by such famous "Twenty-First" men as Lieut.-Colonel Allan Cockeram, now Second-in-Command of the Toronto Irish Regiment; Colonel Pence, and others were heard.

A sparkling floor show added to the gayety of the occasion, while many reunions between old comrades of the unit were noted. Members came from all parts of Ontario, with a large delegation present from the United States. Belleville members included E. Reg. Hinchey, Roy Madden, president of the Belleville Twenty-First Club, Fred Jobson and others.

Former Belleville Man Was Passenger On City of Benares

Popular manager of the Belleville branch of the Coca-Cola Company some years ago, and now the representative of a soft-drink firm in England, William B. Forsythe was one of the survivors of the ill-fated "City of Benares," British liner torpedoed last week in the Atlantic with the loss of nearly three hundred British evacuee children and adults.

Mr. Forsythe, who was on his way home to Canada had a harrowing experience. He was one of six survivors of a life-boat load of 32 adults and children who had been passengers on the ship.

Four hours after the ship had been torpedoed the first passenger in Forsythe's boat died from exposure, and one by one the others died until only six were left when help arrived.

"I had the task of burying the dead and I recited as much of the funeral service as I could remember before dropping them overboard into the Atlantic," the former Belleville man said, after he had landed in Glasgow.

Mrs. W. S. Forsythe, mother of the rescued ex-Belleville man, told newspapermen in Toronto, that her son was not religious "on the surface," but had a great faith and belief in prayer. "His recital of what he could remember of the burial service during those terrible hours," she said, "is like him and I know my boy. All the same he'd say 'Is my face red?' if he knew anything was going in the papers about him."

Mr. Forsythe was well-known in Belleville business circles during his stay here and was popular with his staff as well as a large circle of outside friends.

Contest for Ontario Dairy Queen Title Extended a Month

Closing date for entries for the Ontario Dairy Queen contest sponsored by the Ontario Cheese Makers' Association, and originally scheduled for September 30th, has been extended to October 31st, Chief Grader J. L. Irwin announced today.

Entries have been coming in from all parts of the province, and the extension has been granted to give last-minute contestants a chance to participate in the competition. The contest is open to wives and daughters of cheese makers and patrons throughout Ontario, and the winner will be judged in time to be a guest of honor at the British Empire Dairy Show and Cheese Exhibition scheduled for Belleville in early December. The winner will pose for her photograph which will be placed on calendars to be released by the O.C.M.A. for 1941.

Contestants will be judged by photographs only, and the winner will be given an all-expense trip to Belleville for the Dairy Show

RED CROSS TAG DAY REALIZES $529.00

Further evidence of the generous response of the Belleville and district public to humanitarian causes was seen here on Saturday when the Tag-Day sellers of the Argyll Chapter, I.O.D.E. netted the handsome sum of $529.00.

Appreciation of the fine response to their appeal for war-work funds was expressed today by officials of the chapter "It was most gratifying," Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson stated, "and provides an added incentive for members of the chapter to go ahead with his important work. We extend our heartfelt thanks to all those who assisted us with funds and efforts and assure the general public that the work will go on with the same unflagging zeal that has characterized it since the celebration of war. Again the Argyll Chapter extends its thanks to the people of Belleville and its outlying environs."

Fall, Winter Term At "Y" to Open

Following a summer during which activities at the "Y" have been at a comparatively low ebb, the coming of shorter days and longer evenings prompts the local "Y" officials to expect greater gym. activities in the near future. Basketball leagues, volleyball leagues, wrestling, weight lifting, boxing, swimming lessons for men and women and other special interest groups are planned.

Starting October 1st, the various classes will swing into action with the Preps holding sway on Saturday mornings, the Juniors on Wednesday afternoons and on Saturday mornings The employed boys of 15 to 17 years will have the use of the gym. floor and swimming pool on Tuesday and Friday evenings and the Seniors and young men Monday and Friday evenings. The Business-men will take over Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 5 o'clock, Thursday will be Ladies' day at the "Y" with classes starting at 10 o'clock and continuing until evening when the business girls take over.

Extensive renovations at the "Y" have been almost completed and the various rooms, the swimming pool and gym. will present a brighter and more cheerful appearance for the seasonal classes beginning tomorrow. Last remaining on the list of renovations planned will be a compete check-up in the heating plant.

In addition to the regular classes on the "Y" program are the many meetings held daily by various local service clubs. On four days out of the week, the local Red Cross workers convene there for sewing of clothing and other articles either for the use of needy persons or intended for shipment to the troops overseas.

CAMP BORDEN TROOPS C.A.S.F. TO PUT ON SHOW

Biggest Program of Tactical Exercises Since Outbreak of War Will be Carried Out

5,000 TO TAKE PART

Toronto, Sept. 30—(CP)—Central and western Ontario will see Canada's khaki-clad modern army in action this week when 5,000 troops of the Canadian Active Service Force swing through their biggest program of tactical exercises since the outbreak of war.

Conditions as nearly as possible duplicating those of active service will greet three columns of men and machines as they move southward and westward tomorrow from their encampment at Camp Borden, 70 miles north of Toronto. Four Royal Canadian Air Force scouting planes will cooperate as their "eyes in the sky."

The exercises — routine training for the C.A.S.F. but on the largest scale yet attempted—will continue through Wednesday and wind-up Thursday with a seven-mile procession along the Queen Elizabeth Way from Hamilton to Toronto.

Mechanized vehicles of many kinds, including a number of tanks are being prepared for the long trek. Among these are tenders which carry mobile radio equipment for constant contact with the R.C.A.F. planes overhead. Some 500 vehicles will carry the troops.

Col. S. A. Lee is O.C.

The exercises will be under command of Col. S. A. Lee, M.C., Commandant of Camp Borden, and among the units taking part will be the Irish Regiment, Grey and Simcoe Foresters, Perths, 2nd Canadian Motorcycle Regiment, 8th Field Company of the Engineers, certain units of the 1st tank brigade and of a road construction outfit, 2nd Field Ambulance of the Medical Corps and details of the 2nd Casualty Clearing Station.

The three columns will move from camp early tomorrow, the first route to take them through Kitchener, Paris, Brantford and Hamilton. The second column moves through Fergus, Preston, Galt, Brantford and Hamilton and the third through Orangeville, Guelph, Galt, Brantford and Hamilton.

All converge on the Brantford-Hamilton area Wednesday and there Lake Ontario will, in fancy, become the English Channel or any other coastline to be defended. There the C.A.S.F. will support a theoretical British army against attacking "German" forces in a big military manoeuvre.

Thursday the cavalcade will form up in Hamilton and travel through city streets to the broad, two-lane highway leading to Toronto. They'll be back in camp at nightfall.

FERRIS WOOD
(Ameliasburg)

Ferris Wood passed away at his residence in Ameliasburg, Prince Edward County, on Saturday, Sept. 28. He was in failing health for some time.

The late Mr. Wood, who was in his 63rd year was born in Ameliasburg Township and resided there all his life, being engaged in farming. In the community he was held in high esteem, and his passing has brought sincere regret to many friends. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Wood; his father died some time ago. In religion he was a member of the United Church in Ameliasburg, and fraternally he was a member of Ameliasburg Lodge No. 215 A.F. & A.M., and of the Order of the Eastern Star, Ameliasburg.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Annie Sager; his mother, who resides at Ameliasburg; one sister, Mrs. Maud Lont, Ameliasburg; two brothers, Mr. Francis Wood and Mr. Charles Wood, both of Ameliasburg.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

Partridge Season Opens for 2 Weeks

The first of the open season periods on partridge as announced recently by the Department of Game and Fisheries starts tomorrow, Tuesday, October 1st and will continue till October 14th, both dates inclusive. The second period will start on November 4th and continue until November 16th both dates to be included.

All regulated crown areas and preserves and the counties of Essex and Kent are exempted from hunting.

According to reports from the northern part of the county and some parts of Prince Edward County, the birds are fairly plentiful this year, and many good bags are anticipated. The partridge wintered well and ideal weather conditions prevailed during the nesting season this year.

One unfortunate partridge, which apparently had the opening dates mixed, beat the figurative gun on Saturday, when it inadvertently crashed into the side of an automobile proceeding along Highway 62 near Holloway. The kind-hearted driver immediately stopped to ascertain the damage, and placed the wounded bird in his car. But death overtook it before a "hospital" could be reached and the victim of the unfortunate accident was "buried" with all due ceremony.

POLICE COURT

The respects of the Belleville Police Court and its officials were duly paid to Major H. S. Alderman, of the Salvation Army, at the close of Magistrate Butler's court here today when it was brought to the attention of the court that Major Alderman was leaving his Belleville post to enter into the war work of the Salvation Army at Sussex, N.B., this week.

"It is with regret we learn of your coming departure from our city and I wish to convey the thanks of this court to you for your able assistance, especially among the needy and wayward juveniles who occasionally come into our courts," stated His Worship, Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., as he extended to Major Alderman his respects and good wishes in his new field.

"Yes, sir, Major Alderman has taken a marked interest in the work of the church among many who have found their way into our courts. His work will be missed in Belleville, where he has made so many friends during his four-year stay," added Chief Kidd.

There being no criminal cases Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson was not present in court today. James Sidey, who was found wandering at large and was unable to give a coherent account of his actions, appeared faced with a charge of vagrancy.

"I have been shot at twice at the Trenton Air Port and demand the protection of the court," Sidey interrupted as Chief Kidd asked for a week's remand in order that the man might be given a medical examination. The accused is suffering from hallucinations, police authorities stated after the court closed.

Two inebriates enriched the court's coffers by paying fines levied after being convicted on counts of intoxication.

U. S. CONGRESS CONSIDERS BILL

Senate-House Committee Redrafts Excess Profits Tax Bill

Washington, Sept. 30 (AP).—The United States Congress put a $1,000,000,000 excess profits tax bill at the top of its calendar today after a Senate-House committee finished redrafting the measure to include a boost in the normal corporation income tax rate from the present 20.9 to 24 per cent.

The income tax increase would be in addition to the 25 to 50 per cent excess profits levy provided in the bill and, like the latter, would apply to 1940 corporation income. Special lower income tax rates for corporations earning less than $25,000 would not be affected by the income tax increase.

Final agreement on the legislation, which is part of the defence program, was reached yesterday at an unusual Sunday session of the conference committee appointed to compose differences between the Senate and House, which approved the bill in different forms.

CHAIN OF FIRES

"Attacking in shallow dives, and often from low level, the raiders straddled the oil plane with high explosive bombs, leaving a trail of multi-colored fires and spasmodic explosions in their wake. As one of the raiding aircraft climbed away from the target after releasing its bombs in a shallow dive, the rear gunner poured a burst from his machine guns into the blazing target.

"Late arrivals, adding their quota of bombs to fires already raging, saw them blaze up still more fiercely and spread rapidly across the target area.

"Raiders taking part in this attack also bombed the railway at the southern exit of the city and started fires close to the main line junction.

Heavy Bombs Fall On Gas Plant.

"Meanwhile, at Stuttgart, 260 miles away in Western Germany, other forces of heavy bombers were launching attacks against a large coal gas plant and the Bosch factory which produces magnetoes, spark plugs and other electrical equipement for the German services.

"Sticks of heavy-calibre bombs which fell across the gas works caused ten separate explosions, accompanied by brilliant white flashes. The Bosch works, subjected to a 15-minute bombardment from varying heights, is also believed to have been heavily hit. A large fire was seen to be blazing in the area as the bombing ceased.

"An aluminum factory at Bitterfeld, twenty miles north of Leipzig, and rail-communication centres were other targets in Germany successfully attacked during the night.

"In Belgium, a power station near Antwerp was bombed.

"Other night raiding forces, maintaining their pressure on possible invasion bases, attacked shipping concentrations and harbor works at Ostend, Flushing, Calais, Boulogne and in the French Atlantic port of Lorient."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

SPAIN FIGURES IN AXIS SAYS VIRGINIO GAYDA

Editor Cautions U. S. Against Any Attempt to Enter World War

CLAIMS UNIFIED PLANS

Rome, Sept. 30 (AP). — Virginio Gayda, Fascist editorial spokesman, wrote today that joint Italian-German plans for an attempt to reach axis goals—have been formulated at a Berlin conference which included Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the high command of German armed forces.

The editor said in Il Giornale d'Italia that a meeting between Spain's minister of the interior, Ramon Serrano Suner, foreign minister Galeazzo Ciano, foreign minister Ribbentrop and Keitel had "unified plans of the three friendly powers".

Serrano Suner, who is on his way to Rome, will settle any points at issue between Italy and Spain in conversations with Premier Mussolini, Gayda said.

Spain, Gayda boasted, now figures in the "immediate scheme of things", thus indicating that Spain must be regarded as a member of the axis corporation, instead of as just a sympathetic friend.

U.S. Cautioned.

Italian editorial commentators, discussing the new Rome-Berlin-Tokyo pact, cautioned the United States with the "myth of American power" would burst if that republic made any attempt to intervene against axis plans.

Almost every newspaper warned the United States not to turn the "peace pact" into a war pact. Appeals were made to "America's sense of responsibility" to abandon Britain to her fate.

Gayda, speaking of Spain as foreign minister Ciano left Berlin for Rome after a conference with Hitler and Serrano Suner, said:

"Gibraltar is . . . Spanish territory which Spain is redeeming for herself in the new European order."

He gave no hint of how Britain's hold on the rock she has held for 236 years as a symbol of empire and as a sentinel at the western entrance of the Mediterranean was to be broken.

(In London, an authoritative source commented that "if there is to be any assigning of Gibraltar it would not be left to the Italians. The British feel quite capable of looking after it.")

Roosevelt Stages Surprise Air Show At Airport Opening

Washington, Sept. 30 (AP)—The United States paraded hundreds of warplanes before foreign diplomats Saturday in a demonstration which President Roosevelt explained was "just a gratifying flexing of the kind of fighting muscle democracy can and does produce."

The unheralded and impressive display of air power came, by coincidence or otherwise, close on the heels of the German-Italian-Japanese pact—interpreted by many as aimed at the United States.

The representatives of these and other powers had been invited to attend ceremonies in connection with a cornerstone laying at the new $13,000,000 Washington airport—told only that Mr. Roosevelt would make an address and that some transport planes would land.

But they had no more than settled into their seats when from all directions came roaring flights of army and navy warplanes—trim pursuit ships and huge bombers, circling and wheeling. Altogether, officials said, there were 240 army planes and 162 navy and marine craft.

Raising his hand to them, the President smilingly observed that he had staged a "surprise party" for the several thousand who had come to the ceremonies.

Then, in serious vein, he said the roar of the planes was "symbolic of our determination to build up a defense on sea, on land and in the air capable of overcoming any attack."

"They represent in a small way," he added, "the power we ultimately must have—and soon will have."

He went on to say that "we all hope their missions will always be in the ays of peace.

"We shall strive with all of our energies and skill to see to it that they are never called upon for missions of war. But the more of them we have, the less likely we are to have to use them—the less likely are we to be attacked from abroad."

To many in official Washington the demonstration and the President's remarks appeared calculated to lend emphasis to the statement of foreign policy made earlier in the day by Sumner Wells, Undersecretary of State, in an address at Cleveland. Welles said the United States is preparing "for any eventualities."

St. Michael's Church Re-opened In New Beauty and Splendor

On Sunday September 29th, the congregation of St. Michael's Church gathered again at the various masses in their parish church which has undergone most extensive improvements, notably the magnificent tile floor.

The pastor, Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., said: "This day is indeed a signal one of abundant joy and gladness, brimming over with a plentitude of happiness and gratitude. No phrases of mine are needed to express the affection with which this beautiful church is enshrined in our hearts. This morning it gleams resplendent like a sparkling jewel set in a precious ring on the finger of God. And by a happy course of events we assemble again within this sacred temple on the feast of St. Michael the Archangel to whose patronage it is dedicated. For some weeks past its doors have been closed to permit extensive alterations. Today the Church of St. Michael welcomes us in all its glory.

Expresses Gratitude

"My first words on this occasion are strengthened by the knowledge that they reflect the sentiments of every member of this parish. They are words of sincere gratitude to Mr. John C. McCarthy who has bestowed this princely gift in memory of his good sister, the late Mrs. Mary E. Daly. We are deeply indebted to Mr. McCarthy who has borne the total expense of these wonderful improvements and has displayed his intense concern in this project. He has given his entire time and talents to this undertaking. From the fifteenth of July he has neglected every other interest that he might give his personal supervision to this task of love. Today I thank him in my own name and in that of this congregation and we pray that God may bless him for his generosity."

The work at St. Michael's has been underway since mid-July. The church furniture, the seats and everything necessary for divine worship were removed to the spacious school auditorium which has been in use as a church since then.

The floors and the wainscotting were removed. Steel girders were installed and reinforced concrete used as a foundation for the asphalt tile.

Beautiful Color Tones

The aisles of the church are done in Connemara and vert antique with border of Carrara and maroon. The entire floor was paved with tile of a similar color. At the head of the aisle appears the Alpha and Omega, the symbol of God, the beginning and the end. In the porch are the wings and the spear, the coat of arms of St. Michael. The sanctuary is done in Tuscany, as is the sacristy. The choir loft has a tile flooring.

More than twenty tons of steel were used, 450 bags of cement, 48 yards of crushed stone, 70 yards of gravel and eight and one-half tons of tile.

New Improvements

The sanctuary has been extended and the altar rail carried from wall to wall of the church and the niches have been decorated. A considerable amount of plastering was entailed with painting and decoration in accordance with the design of the interior. The lighting effects are most effectve, bringing out the beauty of the high altar.

With these added features the stately church of St. Michael is unsurpassed in beauty and grandeur and may well be a source of pride to its congregation.

London Press Vents Violent Criticism On Dakar Retreat

London, Sept. 30 (CP Cable)—The Allied retreat from Dakar drew blistering comment from the Sunday papers, whose criticism exceeded in length and violence the critical editorials of the daily press after the expedition was abandoned.

Papers varying from the staid Sunday Times to the tabloid Sunday Pictorial demanded an explanation and investigation.

Editor John Gordon of the Sunday Express wrote: "The tragedy of it is not the loss of Dakar, which doesn't matter a great deal, or even the momentary loss of prestige in Africa, but the shock of discovering that just when we thought we had eliminated all those quainter ideas of warmaking which nearly destroyed us in the first year, we have them all on parade again as fresh and lively as ever."

In a column-long editorial the Pitcorial declared: "Dakar has entertained the world to yet another display of that imbecilic, blistering muddling which has damned every foreign campaign to which we have so far set our hand. In the days of Mr. Chamberlain the defeat at Dakar would have evoked profound resentment.... It is Parliament's duty to probe this escapade. And it will be Mr. Churchill's duty to remove the responsible men."

The Sunday Times said that when Parliament meets the members and public will expect a Government statement "as to the miscarriage of the expedition. Till then they will defer judgment.... It was a bitter disappointment."

The paper added the public will expect definite assurance that Britain will not tolerate a German-controlled Dakar because "the most cursory glance at a god may will show the reason why."

REMOVE BOULEVARD TO WIDEN STREET

Widening operations to that part of Pinnacle Street outside the offices of the Bell Telephone Company are being done by Department of Public Works workmen. A new cement boulevard is being constructed, and the project when completed will effect a long-felt need at this particular part of the street.

Mild, Cool, Sweet -that's PICOBAC!

● What do you want from a pipeful of tobacco? Taste? Picobac is sweet as a nut! Coolness? Fragrance? Picobac is cool and fragrant as an autumn breeze! A reasonably priced tobacco that you can enjoy all day? Picobac is just that! It fits into your every mood from morning to night—always mild, always cool, always sweet. There is one sentence which tells why more Canadians buy Picobac—and buy more of it than any other pipe tobacco:

"It DOES taste good in a pipe!"

"It was my idea of a mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke in the first place," says Mr. Picobac. "The idea has certainly spread some."

At last!—delicious WHITE BREAD with the natural wheat vitamins lost for generations
RETAINED IN THE MILLING-NOT ADDED

You Get the Extra Nourishment and Flavour at No Extra Cost

NATURE gives our wonderful Canadian wheat sufficient B vitamins and other essential food elements to make our daily bread truly the staff of life. But for generations, in order to make white flour, millers have had to rob the grist of many of these precious elements. And so much vitamin-robbed white bread is consumed today that there is a serious Vitamin B deficiency in our national diet, medical authorities assert.

No synthetic substitute can improve on the natural B1 and other vitamins of the "B" family provided in the sun-ripened wheat—the very finest Canadian Hard Spring Wheat.

Thanks to the discovery of a new milling process, you now get the natural wheat Vitamin B1, and other essential vitamins of the B family, in Mellor Bread. Here is more nourishment than you have ever had from ordinary white bread, and the taste of fine white bread, PLUS—at no extra cost.

Melior Bread is creamy white. It has irresistible white-bread taste. It is golden-crusted, fine textured, velvet-smooth. It makes appetizing sandwiches, extra-delicious, satisfying toast. It has excellent keeping qualities. Melior Bread is the well-nigh perfect loaf. Take every advantage of this triumph of scientific research. Make good your possible lack of the "B" group of vitamins, in a natural way. Give your family the benefits that come from eating Vitamin-rich Melior Bread 3 times a day. Get a loaf or two from the "Wonder" Bread salesman. There's one on your street every day.

QUALITY CONTROLLED BY SCIENTIFIC STANDARDS ESTABLISHED BY THE PAEDIATRIC RESEARCH FOUNDATION OF TORONTO

Paediatric Research Foundation has set the nutritional standard for Melior Bread. It is constantly assayed by Paediatric Research Foundation for its Thiamin (vitamin B1) and Iron content. Every loaf of Melior bread contains 300 units of vitamin B1 and 13 mgs. of Iron.

QUISLING AGAIN IN NEWS

After weeks and months during which he was not mentioned in the press of the world Major Vidkun Quisling whose name gathered an unpleasant significance in the days of the German invasion of Norway has emerged into the Nazi German light again.

For he has been named the sole political leader in Norway as Germany interrupts the independence of this Scandinavian nation. Nazi Commissioner Terboven who has been handling the state which Hitler said was to have German "protection" has set up Quisling and a board of fifteen to rule Norway "neither as a monarchy nor a German protectorate," German troops are to be in indefinite occupation.

Nazis mean this to be the end of what was freedom but the world knows that democracy will not so end in that country. In time Quisling, the Nazi Norwegian and the German influences and restrictions will be banished.

This German action is the crude, violent work of the Nazis who know not how to deal with states except to try to crush their freedom and liberty.

Despite Quisling, the Norse people will preserve their tradition of the kingship, which they recognize is not ended. Soon, far too soon for Hitler the Hun and the other Huns, the freedom of Norway will come back through the destruction of Nazism.

COURAGE OF BRITISH PEOPLE PRAISED

The courage of the people of Great Britain undergoing the bombardment of London by Nazi airmen was likened to the courage of St. Paul by a New York rector, the Rev. Roelif H. Brooks of St. Thomas P. E. Church. "St. Paul, despite the sufferings and perils of his mission in teaching the Gospel to a hostile world, thanked God and took courage," he said. "His attitude is no so uncommon today as it might seem . . . We are receiving daily reports from England of trials and tribulations never before known to men and women—dangers of which we have not the slightest conception. What do we know of incendiary bombs dropping at our feet, of the whistling of dive bombers over our heads, the shriek of the warning siren, of death that may drop out of the skies for us at any moment? What indeed do we know of war?

"But like St. Paul, they are not downcast. They are full of their trust in God, they are sure that right will triumph. The King and his gracious Queen, whose own home has been bombed, go about the streets unattended, bringing sympathy and courage to their people in their common trials. They have thanked God and taken courage."

St. Paul was one of the most courageous of men. His noble mission and his faith justified that courage and in it he triumphed. Such can be said of the people of Britain, who did not want war but whose entry into war was the only means of saving the world from a blighting influence from which it could not have emerged for many centuries. What the British people are doing at this moment is playing their part in dealing the death blow to barbaric ideals.

The days of St. Paul and of the early Christian church were possibly the greatest days of the church for they were days of trial and tribulation and yet out of the sufferings of that period came the worldwide Christian Church which has moulded the course of history. Today the people of Britain are passing through trials like heroes and will leave their mark upon the ages. Upon these days mankind of the future will look back with thanksgiving because democracy was championed by the British people in holding back and banishing the darkness of militarism and violence.

Paul was of heroic mold. It was he who said "I have fought the good fight. I have finished the course. I have kept faith."

Knowing what the people of the British Isles are doing for the sake of freedom, the New York clergyman made an apt comparison with the heroic apostle. The British Empire is fighting a good fight, she will finish the course and she is keeping the faith.

Pool Treatment For Weak Muscles Following Infantile Paralysis

When a youngster has recovered from infantile paralysis he may have a group or groups of muscles that are weak and must be strengthened by exercise. This work of strengthening these weak muscles by exercise is usually done under the direction of an orthopedic physician.

Although the results obtained by exercises in a gymnasum have been of great help, Dr. K. G. Hanson, Cornell University, in the Journal of the American Medical Association, states that exercise taken under water has advantages over those given in the 'dry' gymnasium.

Thus the temperature of the pool is 85 to 92 degrees Fahrenheit and therefore the application of heat is taken care of in this simple way. "Moist heat is better than dry heat and the even distribution of heat through contact with water is ideal. The heat will relax the muscles that oppose the weakened muscles and thus there will not be stretching of the weakened or paralysed fibres of the weak muscles." The water buoys up the youngster and keeps the weight of an arm or leg from overstretching the weakened muscle. The motion of the arm or leg through the water probably produces the best form of massage; the usual method of massage (kneading the muscle) may do harm by too much pressure on the slow-or inactive tiny bloodvessels of the part.

Another advantage pointed out by Dr. Hanson is that when the time comes for walking, this can be started more easily in the pool even when crutches and braces are necessary. The water of the pool gives the patient the feeling that he is being supported and he does not have the fear of falling and hurting himself. The fact that he feels that he is not likely to fall greatly raises his self confidence. This self confidence is a great step to recovery.

"The pleasures of crippled children are few and they look forward to the pool treatment with a great deal of interest and joy." Unless the physical director or teacher is unusually gifted, the treatment in the dry gymnasium is monotonous and uninteresting.

Should your youngster be in need of strengthening exercises following infantile paralysis, the above information may prove helpful in the treatment.

From Spy to Ambassador

By WALTER TSCHUPPIK
(United Correspondents)
(H-21)

Nothing is more eloquent of the situation in which Marshal Petain's government finds itself than its enforced acceptance of Herr Otto Heinrich Abetz as German Ambassador at Vichy.

A few months before the war — in the early summer of 1939 — Otto Abetz, Ribbentrop's chief assistant in Paris, was obliged suddenly to leave the French capital. He was the central figure in a political scandal which, but for the imminence of war, might have attained the notoriety of the Dreyfus case or the Panama scandals.

The French Prime Minister, at that time Daladier, forced parliament to adopt an emergency decree which made all press discussion of subjudice legal proceedings an offence punishable with three years imprisonment.

But even the severest measures could not prevent more and more details from leaking out. Paris, all France indeed, was in a fever of excitement. It was feared that German propaganda and espionage had fatally corrupted French political life.

At this time a prominent French journalist, named Poirier who had been arrested on suspicion of treason and espionage on behalf of a foreign power, committed suicide in the military prison in the Rue du Cherche—midi. The news, which could not be suppressed, caused great uneasiness. Poirier, a respectable old man and an officer of the legion of Honour, had for many years been managing director of the semi-official "Temps" and had later joined the staff of the "Figaro". Soon after, it became known that another well-known journalist named Aubin, also an officer of the Legion of Honour, had been arrested on the same suspicion. It was remembered that a relative of his, Lieutenant Aubin, had been executed for treason a few months before. The affair became more and more wide-spread; prominent politicians, deputies and journalists were involved, even cabinet ministers, past and present.

France might perhaps have been spared the worst if the French government had allowed the press openly to ventilate the scandal. But at the moment Hitler was about to invade Poland, France was on the verge of war and Daladier was afraid lest the revelations might plunge the country into civil discord. The man who had been working for years in Paris to sap the national morale was Otto Heinrich Abetz. He had succeeded not only in winning over all pro-Nazi elements in France, but in bribing newspapers and journalists.

Before he committed suicide, Poirier revealed the sum he had received from Abetz — 3½ million francs. Aubin had been content with a mere million. In the same connection the names were given of journalists on the staff of many other papers conspicuous for their support of Bennet's policy in September 1938, and for the abuse of Churchill, Eden, Duff-Cooper and Benes. The storm that broke a little later over Europe swept the names of these journalists into oblivion. Abetz' activities went back a long way. He had played a decisive part in the Munich crisis; in the summer of 1939, however, he engineered the downfall of France long before she was beaten in the field.

Hitler, informed by Robbentrop at all times of what was going on behind the scenes in Paris, prophesied, as Rauschnigg tells us, that he would not need to defeat France in a military sense, but would be received "as a liberator". And as such he was in fact welcomed by the large group of politicians, industrialists, pressmen and generals whom Abetz had enlisted in his service.

Otto Heinrich Abetz started upon his adventurous career in a field far removed from politics and diplomacy. In the days of the Weimar Republic he was a humble arts master at Carlsruhe, the capital of Baden. Later he was attracted to politics, became a pacifist and a member first of the Catholic Centre, then of the Democratic Party. The turning-point in his career came with the establishment of what was known as the Franco-German Committee, a body which, while originally supposed to serve the cause of a Franco-German understanding, was later used by Hitler and the German militarists to undermine and spy upon France.

Abetz' work on the Franco-German Committee took him frequently to Paris, and it was there that he met his future bride. Ribbentrop made Abetz' acquaintance shortly before January 30th, 1933, and, recognizing him at once as the man he needed, appointed him to high office in Paris. Abetz had just that criminal type of mind for which Ribbentrop's men became famous. Clever and audacious, with a ready tongue and good drawing-room manners, he has the art of captivating women, the art of flattery, intrigue and falsehood.

Abetz, who speaks extremely good French, shunned no method of gaining his ends, and he owed much of his success to the help of influential women of rank or beauty. To mention but a few, his friends included Princess Loewenstein, the notorious Princess Hohenlohe, alias Steffi Richter, Corinne Lucheur, the actress, and the Baronne de Porte.

Abetz' soirees brought together representatives of famous aristocratic families, grasping financiers, journalists and ambitious politicians. As President of the Franco-German Committee, his master stroke was the successful capture of a famous French officer, Major de l'Hopital, an aide-de-camp of Marshal Foch in the Great War. Even the leaders of ex-service men's associations, Messrs. Pichot and Goy, and Scapnini, the highly respected deputy who was blinded in the war, succumbed for a long time to Abetz' blandishments, before their eyes were finally opened.

After the disaster of Munich his power increased. Abetz knew about Bonnet's stock exchange speculations, which had been connected with the French government's shameful abandonment of Czechoslovakia. It was due to Abetz that Mandel and Zay, the two Jewish members of the Cabinet, declined an invitation to attend a banquet held by Abetz in honour of Bonnet. It was Abetz again who arranged for the two leaders of anti-Semitism in France and Germany to meet at the Nuremberg Congress. There Julius Streicher shook hands with Darquier de Pellepox. France, with Abetz' help, was launched on the road to crime and treason.

One further enormity deserves to be made public at the moment when Marshal Petain is to offer his hand to Abetz, the spy, as a gesture of welcome to the German ambassador. This is the hitherto unknown crime of Rethel.

Everyone knows that the fighting in the Rethel sector decided the issue; it was there that France lost the war. What really happened is beyond the boldest imagination to conceive. Abetz and his Franco-German Committee organized what were known as "Youth Meetings". German and French boys up to eighteen, together with their military leaders, met, sometimes on German, sometimes on French soil.

The first of these meetings took place in the Black Forest long before the war. A second was held at Mainz and the third, after any possible French apprehension had been allayed, at Rethel.

Here the military leaders in charge of the German boys were able to view and make a close study of the whole terrain between Rethel and Sedan. In the course of long cross-country marches maps were plotted, the ground thoroughly surveyed. Is it surprising that later on the German armies received accurate instructions from the General Staff and that important bridges which the retreating French should have destroyed, were left intact? The Franco-German Committee had done its work well.

Unhappy France is now compelled to show the honours due to a victor's envoy to Otto Heinrich Abetz, her own assassin and gravedigger. The new ambassador brings with him a secretary who has already done him good service in France. She is Countess de Maure, alias Marta Buehner. At one time she was secretary and assistant to Julius Streicher at Nuremberg. Today she is the mistress of Darquier de Pellepox. Whither is France bound, the France of July 14th, 1789?

Life Remains Calm in Eire

Dublin — When I wrote my last letter a month ago you will recall that I was in a state of nervous apprehension as to what was going to happen here. War alarms were much in the air, and I must have given the impression that if you heard from me again it would be to tell of sanguinary doings in this old country. Let me say at once that, up to the moment of writing, nothing has happened to mar the even tenor of our normal existence. But nevertheless we have been continually conscious of a warlike atmosphere that keeps us always aware that Europe is in a ferment, and that at any moment we may be in the midst of it.

Here in this part of Ireland the preparations, which I outlined in my previous dispatch, have been greatly intensified, and, without boasting, one can say that whatever force attempts to breach our neutrality will do so at severe cost. The regular army and reserves have been on a war footing for some time, and are daily undergoing training exercises intended to meet any sort of emergency. There are frequent field manoeuvres under war conditions, and route marches all over the country, with tanks and heavy transport constantly on the roads.

The air force, greatly augmented in machines and personnel, has reached a high state of efficiency. The entire country is, through this arm, under constant supervision from the air. A short time ago an unfortunate accident caused the deaths of two young airmen whose machine was operating from Gormanstown aerodrome. They were flying over the popular seaside resort of Laytown, County of Meath, when trouble developed and, apparently in an effort to avoid crowds of holiday-makers on the strand, they were obliged to come down on unsuitable ground. Both were killed instantly.

• • •

Apart from the purely professional military formations, now greatly augmented, some hundreds of thousands of men of all ages are in the Local Security Force, a purely voluntary body, which is being trained for semi-military duties. It is divided into two sections, one which will be armed, and the other which will serve for patrol work, and take on various services of a police nature in case of emergency. Both sections are being drilled and shown the mysteries of firearms. The success of this force has been the cause of much gratification, especially as it includes men of all classes, employers and employed, men who have served in the British forces and many others who were in the Irish Republican Army during the fight with the British. Only those who know the local circumstances can realise the significance of this coming together. In some areas men who were prominent in the Black and Tan war are leaders of local squads, with ex-officers of the British army serving under them, and in others I. R. A. men take orders from ex-British soldiers. The greatest harmony and good-fellowship prevail among them, as all are impressed with the gravity of the situation and the necessity of putting forth all their energies in face of the prevailing menace.

The Government, with which leaders of the Opposition are working in complete agreement, has recently devised a scheme for the carrying on of the function of government in the event of any part of the country being cut off from the central Government in Dublin. High officials of the government and local bodies have been appointed to take control in certain specified areas, and during the emergency these will, of their own volition, exercise the functions of government. They will especially be charged with the distribution of food, which has now been stored in all ports of the country, and in every aspect of life they will exercise the full powers of the executive government.

• • •

During a short holiday I have had an opportunity of seeing a good deal of Ireland, both North and South. The activities to which we have become accustomed, in and around Dublin, are fully duplicated throughout the twenty-six counties of the South. But when one crosses the border into the Northern area the contrast is striking—the difference is that of a country which is neutral and one which is actually at war. I spent a week-end in a Northern town of five thousand people, in normal times a quiet business town. Now it is a hive of military activity. British soldiers, in their new quaint war dress, filled the streets, and heavy transports dashed about in all directions. For several hours on the Saturday morning lorries and busses filled with soldiers and war material passed through the streets on the way to field manoeuvres at a place about forty miles away, and late at night I saw them returning. One was struck with the remarkable efficiency of the turn-out, and this was not to be wondered at, since many of the men wore tabs which indicated that they had already seen active service in Norway or France.

Everywhere in the North one sees defence works; roads with sand-bags blocking the way, and carefully concealed machine-gun nests all ready to meet a potential foe. Attention is paid to strangers, and it is decidedly undesirable for one to go there without properly authenticated identification papers. Even with these, if the authorities are not satisfied, one may be unceremoniously taken to the frontier and put across. Here in the South somewhat similar arrangements are in operation. Remembering what has happened elsewhere, no country can be blamed for taking precautions against undesirables. Only recently a group of persons, understood to be Jews, who set up a business in Dublin purporting to be a trading company under the auspices of the Turkish government, were given expulsion papers and sent out of the country. There was no suggestion in this case of subversive activities, but just that certain details, which came to light as to their methods, made them undesirable. Ever since the outbreak of war the non-native population in Southern Ireland has been considerably augmented and the restrictions in regard to these have been greatly increased. They are required to report regularly to the police, and even British citizens, who came since a particular date, are subject to special conditions. A British citizen and his wife, who left their residence at Dun Loaghaire, without acquainting the police, have been brought before the special court and, pending their trial, have been placed under a heavy bail.

• • •

Conditions of life in Southern Ireland show no material change. There is no blackout at night; no food rationing; no troublesome restrictions for the native population. The August Bank Holiday was observed as usual. In Great Britain and Northern Ireland the annual holiday on the first Monday in August was suspended, as was the Twelfth of July Orange celebration in the North. While horse-racing has been stopped in England and Northern Ireland, nearly all the usual meetings are being held here. Cricket and tennis playing go on as usual.

While these gratifying conditions persist, I regret to have to end this dispatch on a somewhat ominous note. Since I began this letter, news has come that an Irish vessel had been attacked off the coast of Cork by a German aircraft. The vessel, the Kerry Head, of 825 tons, was damaged but none of the crew was injured. The ominous fact is that this is the first time a German aircraft has been identified in the vicinity of these shores. Submarines have been known to cause damage to shipping outside Irish waters. The Irish government has taken steps to protest to Berlin, and a demand for compensation has been lodged. The protest will be made by the Irish charge d'affaires at Berlin. There is no minister there at present. Dr. Kiernan, who is Director of Radio Eireann, is minister designate, but owing to the prevailing conditions has not been able to take up his post— By Hugh Curran in Hamilton Spectator.

"HOW DO AIR FIGHTERS DODGE EACH OTHER IN A SCRAP?!"

Growth of interest in air combats—is shown in the number of questions which readers have fired at us, says the Glasgow Sunday Despatch.

We thought we couldn't do better than get a former Spitfire pilot to answer them. So here he goes:

What's meant by a dog fight?

I thought most folk knew that one. Seems they don't. It means a rough and tumble between single-seater fighters. Name was first given early in the last war.

We may start a battle in squadrons, but the formation is apt to break up into a series of single combats. And, you know, we are just like a bunch of dogs growling round each other.

How do the fighters manage to avoid each other in a dog fight?

Occasionally we don't. Collisions have occurred when there's been a big bunch of us engaged. But there's a heck of a lot of sky, and we're not often as close together as we appear from the ground.

How do the different members of a flight, or squadron, manage to communicate during a fight?

Believe me, friends, youve hit on a mighty important point there. All single-seat fighters have two-way radio, so that pilots can speak to each other.

And there have been times when I've been darned glad that was the case. Often we're able to warn a pal that there's an enemy plane on his tail.

How do anti-aircraft guns avoid hitting our fighters in a dog-fight?

That was a point that worried me when I first joined up. I didn't relish the idea of our own guns chasing me.

I soon found they don't fire at all when we're tangled up in a scrap. But they're ready to get busy if an enemy plane manages to get away.

Who takes command of a formation if the squadron leader is shot down?

I'm glad to say that's one I can't answer from actual experience. But, in any case, once the commanding officer has given the order to attack the scrap usually develops on individual lines—and a pilot is left to use his own judgment. You pack up when your ammunition is finished.

Officer next in command is the official "boss" once the leader has been shot down.

What is meant by a "burst of fire"?

We're buzzing around pretty fast when we're up there—and the enemy is only in the sights for short spells at a time. We smack home as many bullets as we can in that time—a burst, in fact. A burst may average between one second and five seconds.

A Spitfire or Hurricane fires 9600 shots a minute—which means 160 each second. It's a lot of lead if you're in the road.

What are tracer bullets?

Tracers are designed to leave a trail of smoke behind them, thus showing if the bullets are hitting the target. There's always a number in every belt of ammunition—and very useful they are.

And, by the way, when they come in contact with inflammable material such as petrol, fabric, balloons, etc., they have incendiary effect.

What is meant by a pilot "blacking out" in a turn?

Most of us can tell you that from actual experience. And not a pleasant experience either.

If you go into a steep turn at high speed, centrifugal force—same force which keeps water in a glass when you swing it over your head—drains the blood from your head and eyes.

You are liable to lost consciousness. Even if you regain it you may find yourself blind. But once the turn is stopped everything becomes normal again.

How fast can a Hurricane climb to intercept the raider?

It doesn't take long, believe me. A Hurricane can get to 10,000 feet in four minutes, 20,000 in nine minutes.

Vertical rate of climb is 25 miles an hour, though the plane may be travelling horizontally at 200 miles an hour in a climb.

How do we eract to high speed?

Actually we never notice it. It's as comfortable in a Spitfire or a Hurricane as in a taxi. Always provided, of course ,that the pilot's an experienced man.

You've got to get used to high-speed power dives of 400 miles an hour—but you soon stop thinking about speed altogether, except for its use in chasing the enemy.

How are victories reported after a combat?

When we've been in a scrap we have to give even the smallest details of it in what is known as a "combat" report.

If you see an enemy plane hit the ground you tally one! But if you have only seen it go down out of control you don't count it as an official victroy—which is why the Nazi air losses are a sight bigger than you think.

To amplify the written report, mechanics also carry a camera which takes photos so long as the trigger is pressed.

Has a German plane ever surrendered in the air?

Yes, sir! I've seen a badly-disabled German plane "pac in" myself. Usual sign of surrender is when they lower their undercarriages and shut off their motors.

Once a Nazi bomber pilot did it—then tried to shoot down the Hurricane which came alongside to escort him to the ground. He didn't have time to surrender a second time!

What sort of advice is given to a pilot before his first combat?

Speaking for myself, I was warned to keep an eye on the weak spot behind my "tail", to watch for an enemy attacking out of the sun, to guard against turning away from an attack on an enemy bomber in such a way as to leave myself exposed to their attack, and to conserve my ammunition until I was well within range.

I took good care to stick to orders—and it paid.

400,000 U.S. MEN TO BE HEALTHIEST

Draft Boards and Physicians Will Do Preliminary Sifting of Conscripts

Washington, Sept. 30 (AP)—The 400,000 men soon to be inducted into the United States army will be the healthiest group of conscripts in American history.

Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon-general of the United States Public Health Service, says the whole American people are in better physical condition than at any time in its history, and the army will choose its men in the most thorough physical and mental examinations medical science has devised.

In addition to checking every detail from ingrowing toenails to dandruff, the inspecting boards will also make rudimentary mental tests indicating the prospective soldier's ability to stand up under the strain of unusual camp conditions, training marches, and the pounding of rifle and cannon fire on manoeuvres.

Local draft boards and physicians in local communities will do the preliminary sifting of those called up for examination and as many as 30 per cent may be eliminated immediately because of poor teeth, flat feet, hernias, haemorrhoids, tonsilitis, faulty vision, venereal disease and other ailments. None will be excused from possible duty. They will be put on a deferred status.

The examining boards and physicians in communities who know the prospective draftees may eliminate many men, War Department officials said, for no other reason than their inability to get along with other people.

Perfect Weather, Fine Exhibits, Excellent Program Factors In Success of Picton Fair

Over Ten Thousand Paid Admission to the Grounds in Two Days

Tweed

Tweed—The rugby season at Tweed High School opened on Friday with Stirling High School team winning by a score of 11-0. The locals fielded a team made up largely of players used as subs in the 1939 season. Coach Calnan has not had time to whip them into shape in the two weeks since school opened. Stirling was in much better form and on the day's play deserved their victory.

They scored a single point in the opening quarter, with the half ending Stirling 1, Tweed 0. Pyear was on the receiving end of McGee's forward pass and raced over the line for a major score which was not converted.

A fumble by Tweed on their own twenty yard line paved the way for the visitors' second and final touch down. McGee recovered and carried the ball over the line. Wagar, Connor and L. Rivers played well for the local High School.

Tweed line-up: Snap, Fisher; Insides, McCrea, Meagher; Middles, Connor, Beatty; Outsides, McTaggart, Rivers; Flying Wing, Shannon; Quarter, Doyle; Halves, Cassidy, Wagar; Full back, Vance; Subs, Credicott, Rivers, Rashotte, Wallace.

Linesman, Mr. Good; Referees, T. J. Calnan, Mr. Mumby.

Tweed High School girls defeated Stirling girls by the narrow margin of 16 to 15 in the first game of the season. Helen Orr was the leading scorer with four runs in four times at bat, M. Moon and M. Baker each scored twice. Most of the scoring was done in the latter stages of the game with Tweed going to pieces in the sixth inning during which the visitors crossed the plate for nine runs.

Verna Fobert's home run in the seventh won the game for the locals. Mr. C. A. Wells, Stirling, was the umpire.

Stirling—Betty Conley, Marjorie West, Helen Bailey, Madeline McGee, Joy Harding, Eileen Tanner, Edith Cranston, Marion Rose, Lee Conley, Betty Lucas, Jean Dafoe, Eileen Bradshaw, Eileen Montgomery.

Tweed—Verna Fobert, Hazel Kelly, Bernice Fevreau, Marjorie Rashotte, Yvonne Rivers, Helen Orr, Marion Moon, Muriel Baker, Betty Vance, Elaine Gehan.

Mrs. John Durkin and Mrs. Wm. Durkin of Stoco were guests of honor at a farewell party held at the home of Mrs. Wm. Kellty prior to their removal from Stoco district where they had resided for many years. They were members of the Altar Society and the Catholic Women's League of St. Edmund's Church, Stoco.

Mr. and Mrs. John Clark of Actinolite recently celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary at the Kleinsteuber homestead. Forty guests were present at the dinner which was served by the nieces, Misses Anna, Mary, Gladys, Madeline and Dorothy Kleinsteuber and Miss Hazel Reycroft. Mr. and Mrs. Clark received a number of beautiful gifts. Guests, all members of the family were present from Lansdowne, Napanee, Bath, Bloomfield, Consecon, Tweed, Madoc and Actinolite.

The Business and Professional Women's Club of Tweed was entertained at the summer cottage of Miss A. M. Rayburn and Miss Grace Moran on Sugar Island.

Tag day for the blind held in Tweed on Saturday netted the sum of 34.45. The local committee is composed of Dr. W. A. Paul, con-Mitchell and Miss Cosey Meikle-Mithoell and Miss Cosey Meiklejohn.

Tweed has not returned to Daylight Saving Time. No action will be taken by the council until word is received from Ottawa. It was felt that "fast" time in Tweed this year was unsatisfactory in its results. It will prove more so in the winter time owing to the fact that about one hundred rural children who attend the three local schools and are brought to school in buses will be forced to leave home well before daybreak in order to reach school in time as some of them are brought eight or ten miles and motor buses cannot run throughout whole of the winter season.

Rev. A. E. Pepper, rector of St. James's Anglican Church, Tweed was elected president of the Central Hastings Ministerial Association at a meeting held in Marmora. Others officers are:

Vice-Pres.—Rev. W. A. Hunter, Madoc.

Secretary-Treasurer—Rev. J. E. Beckel, Stirling.

Executive—Rev. F. C. Beazer, Roslin, Rev. H. L. Morrison, Tweed.

LATE FREDERICK COTTON

Mr. Frederick Cotton, a former resident of Tweed and Sulphide, passed away at his home in Guelph on Sept. 20th, following an extended illness. The late Mr. Cotton was born 63 years ago in England. On coming to Canada, he resided in Sherbrooke, Que., where he became a master mechanic. Later he spent a number of years in Sulphide as an employee of the Nichols Chemical Co.

Surviving are his widow, five children, Mildred Cotton, teacher, Toronto; Mrs. Kenneth Greenaway, Niagara Falls, Ont., Mrs. Fred Bell, Toronto; Arthur of Windsor and Harold of Guelph. Two brothers, William of Guelph and Gilbert of Montreal and three sisters, Mrs. H. J. Cordy, Sulphide, Mrs. Albert Webb, Guelph and Mrs. Walter Herrington, Montreal also survive.

The funeral was held on Monday, Sept. 23rd to Woodlawn Cemetery, Guelph, where interment was made.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Stewart and family of Actinolite were presented with numerous gifts prior to their departure to their new home.

The Ladies' Guild of St. James's Anglican Church served a fine Harvest supper at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Thursday evening. There was a large attendance as the ladies of the church are famous for their excellent suppers. It was the consensus of opinion that they had surpassed all previous efforts on this occasion.

Messrs John Trudeau, Belleville, Ambrose Hunt, James Trudeau and George Cassidy, Tweed, have returned home from a motor trip to the Province of British Columbia.

Miss Marion Varty has left for Peterboro where she will attend Normal School.

Mrs. Ida Douglas, Reg. N. has returned home from Belleville General Hospital where she was operated on recently.

Mr. George Morrison, son of Rev. and Mrs. H. L. Morrison, has entered the Faculty of Forestry at the University of Toronto.

Mr. Elgie Drinkwater has been appointed Secretary of the United Church Sunday School, succeeding Mr. Ronald Sayers, who is in charge of the Selrite Store opened at Wellington recently by his father Mr. W. H. Sayers.

SPANISH PAPERS ASSAIL U.S. FOR AIDING BRITAIN

Claim United States Has Missed Significance of Rome - Berlin - Tokyo Pact

BITTER ATTACK

Madrid, Sept. 30.—(CP)— The newspaper ABC said Sunday that United States—Canadian defence co-operation and American aid to Britain may be considered by the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis as a "casus belli"—acts justifying war.

The remark was contained in a bitter attack on the United States launched by ABC and other Spanish newspapers, which took for granted that Spain has become a part of the expanding Rome-Berlin axis.

Ramon Garriga, correspondent for the official Spanish News Agency, saying that the Interior Minister, Ramon Serrano Suner, probably would go to Rome from Berlin before returning home, declared his visit to the German capital "definitely incorporates Spain into this new diplomatic system with which Hitler and Mussolini have gained so many resounding victories."

The Newspaper ABC said that Washington apparently had "missed the significance" of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Alliance signed last Friday, judging from the Cleveland speech of the United States Under-Secretary of State, Sumner Welles.

(Welles suggested Saturday night that far eastern problems still can be settled by conference but said the United States is prepared "for all eventualities' and hinted at an impending extension of Pan-American defence policies.)

The Newspaper Arriba again assailed the United States for its Pan-American policy and told Spain's one-time colonies nobody in Europe is thinking of attacking them.

Survivors of Liner Landed in Britain

A Northern British Port, Sept. 30 (CP Cable)—Survivors of the 5,802 ton Donaldson liner Sulairia, torpedoed Sept. 25 by a U-boat, were landed during the week-end.

One of the crew, J. Curran, of Sligo, Eire, was killed outright. The other survivors were picked up by a British warship after drifting in lifeboats for 24 hours. Nearly all of the crew were Scottish.

(Loss of the liner, which traded between Glasgow and Canada before the war, was disclosed in New York last Wednesday by Mackay Radio).

MULTI-ROOT CARROT FOUND

Another of the freaks of vegetable nature, a multi-pronged carrot with no less than eleven individual segments, was brought into the Ontario Intelligencer office on Monday morning. Grown on the farm of Mr. C. W. Dawson, R.R. No. 1 Rednersville, the odd shaped carrot was truly an unusual sight even for a vegetable such as the carrot which in some seasons is seen in many misshapen forms.

Crew of British Sub Prisoners of War

London, Sept. 30.—(CP Cable) — The Commander, officers and a number of the crew of the British submarine Shark, reported lost by the Admiralty July 15, are believed to be prisoners of war in Norway.

The parents of Lt.- Cmdr. P. N. Buckley, Commander of the Shark, said last night that they had received two letters from him Saturday saying that he was receiving treatment for head and knee wounds in a Norwegian hospital.

The letters were dated mid-July and did not give any details. Four other officers and a number of the submarine's 39 ratings also are believed prisoners.

SOLDIERS' VOTE MAY HELP LABOR

Already Majority of Menzies in Australia Reduced to Three

By J. E. HOLDEWORTH
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Sydney, Sept. 30 (CP Cable)—The vote of Australia's soldiers overseas has swung the pendulum in Australia's recent election to the side of Labor, and narrowed the majority of Prime Minister Menzies to two, perhaps three, in the House of Representatives.

Eight seats still are doubtful and Labor needs five of these to deprive the Government of a working majority. Observers concede Labor the chance of winning four of the doubtful seats and a 50-50 chance to obtain the fifth.

Greatest surprise in the weekend count of the soldiers' vote was the election of Labor-Leader John Curtin who himself had given up the Fremantle seat as lost, and had already begun preparations to run in a seat Labor planned to vacate for him.

Mr. Menzies is expected to renew his invitation to Labor to join in a coalition but though some Labor members favor acceptance, the majority still seem opposed.

Marmora

Marmora—Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Currie and R. C. Reid of Niagara Falls spent Thursday in the village.

Mr. and Mrs. Garth Sabine and sons and Mrs. Jacob Wilkes visited Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Linton of Elmvale over the weekend.

Born—In Marmora, on Monday, September 23rd to Mr. and Mrs. George Vesterfelt, a son.

North Hastings Teacher's Institute will hold its annual convention in Marmora on Thursday and Friday, October 10th and 11th.

Ronald Regan has been accepted as a member of the Signalling Corp training at Kingston and left on Saturday to commence his new duties.

Mrs. J. A. Paquet and son Dan were in Kingston on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Whittemore spent the week in Toronto.

The regular monthly meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held on Thursday evening at the home of Misses Mary and Hilda Hughes with a large attendance. Miss A. V. Foley (president, was in chair. After a short business meeting, Miss Marion Lashwa was called and presented with five dollars. The presentation was made by Rev. Father Farrell. This presentation is made by the C. W. L. each year to the pupil in Marmora district receiving highest marks in the entrance examination and Marion received that honor this year. She thanked Rev. Father Farrell and members, after which Father Farrell briefly addressed the meeting on the evacuation of children from England. After several games of bingo were enjoyed, the members joined in singing several numbers with Margaret Shannon at the piano. A sumptuous lunch was served by the hostesses. after which the gathering dispersed.

Over the Fence for Mr. Caffeine-Nerves

HOUSEWIFE: I don't know what's wrong with me lately, Mrs. Phillips. My life is just a steady round of nervous indigestion and sleepless nights. The slightest thing makes me irritable.
MR. CAFFEINE-NERVES: Anybody would be irritable living with that family of yours!
NEIGHBOUR: Sounds like a case of caffeine-nerves to me—too much tea and coffee. I got rid of my nervous indigestion and sleeplessness by switching to Postum. Why don't you try it?
MR. CAFFEINE-NERVES: Don't be silly! Lots of people drink tea and coffee without harmful effects!
30 DAYS LATER
HOUSEWIFE: Postum has made a wonderful difference, Mrs. Phillips. I really enjoy my meals, now—and I sleep like a top. No more caffeine-nerves for me!
MR. CAFFEINE-NERVES: And no more room for me in your house! When Postum comes in, I go out!

● Many people can safely drink tea and coffee. Many others—and all children—should never drink them. If you are one of these, try Postum's 30-day test. Buy Postum and drink it instead of tea and coffee for one month. Then, if you do not feel better, return the container top to General Foods, Limited, Cobourg, Ontario, and we'll gladly refund full purchase price, plus postage. Postum is delicious, economical, easy to prepare, and contains no caffeine.

WEDDINGS

WOOD—TURNER

Miss Renee Lillian Mae Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Turner, and Mr. Thomas Harold Wood, son of Mrs. Wood and the late A. E. Wood of Frankford, were married at the home of the bride's parents on Erskine Avenue, Toronto. Rev. F. Lane officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of baby pink sheer over taffeta, with shoulder veil, and carried Talisman roses and orange blossoms. Mrs. H. L. Halpenny was her sister's attendant, wearing Heaven blue sheer with matching accessories and shoulder knot of pink roses. Mr. Reginald Solmes was groomsman for his uncle. After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Wood left on a wedding trip, and will live in Frankford.

LUTHER—GAZLEY

Gladioli in pastel shades adorned the chancel of Holloway Street United Church for the wedding on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock of Jessie May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Gazley, and Mr. Henry Granger Luther, Napanee, son of F. C. Luther and the late Mrs. Luther. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Royal E. Newman.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was charming in heavenly blue with navy accessories and corsage of Briarcliffe roses. Miss Ellen Gazley, sister of the bride, was bridemaid, wearing soldier blue with matching accessories and corsage of Briarcliffe roses. Mr. Cecil Luther, Buffalo, brother of the groom, was groomsman.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, the rooms being effectively decorated with Autumn flowers, a white bell and pink streamers centring the dining room. Mrs. Gazley received her guests wearing rust with brown accessories and corsage of Talisman roses. After a motor trip to Toronto and Niagara Falls, the bride and groom will take up residence in Napanee.

Out of town guests at the wedding were Mr. F. C. Luther, Mrs. M. Withers, Miss Eleanor Luther, Mr. and Mrs. H. Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. D. Bews, Napanee; Mrs. S. Millen Kingston; Mr. Cecil Luther of Buffalo; Mrs. F. Gazley, Jr., Niagara Falls, Ontario; Mr. Ed. Gazley, Brantford; Mr. Al Gazley, Niagara Falls, Ont.

SULLY—GRAHAM

The wedding of Mary Julia, daughter of Captain and Mrs. C. Heathcote Graham, to Pilot Officer John K. Sully, R.C.A.F., of Trenton, son of Group Captain and Mrs. J. A. Sully of Trenton, took place Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in the Church of St. Alban the Martyr, Ottawa. The church was decorated with ferns and pink and white gladioli. Rev. C. Lionel Bruce officiated.

Dr. Harris Crowson played "Jesu Joy of Man's Desiring" during the signing of the register.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of ice blue satin with a heart shaped neckline, and long tight fitting sleeves ending in points over the hands and the skirt falling into a long train. Her finger tip veil, which matched her gown, fell from a coronet of woven ice blue satin and she carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Muriel Inkster, wore a frock of pale pink chiffon with a shirred matching jacket, her short pink veil was held by three pink carnations and she carried a bouquet of the same flowers.

The best man was Pilot Officer Ronald Turner, R.C.A.F., and the ushers were Pilot Officer George Jones of Trenton, and Pilot Officer Campbell Fernie, of Camp Borden.

Mrs. Graham, mother of the bride, wore a model of black crepe and a black felt hat with ostrich tips and corsage of orchids.

Mrs. Sully, mother of the groom, wore a gown of sapphire blue velvet with matching hat and corsage of Talisman roses.

Following the ceremony a small reception for immediate friends and relatives was held at the home of the bride's parents, 62 Stewart Street.

Later Pilot Officer and Mrs. Sully left by motor for Gray Rocks Inn, St. Jovite, Que., where they will spend their honeymoon. They will live in Trenton.

The bride travelled in a dress of air force blue wool with matching turban and accessories of black suede.

BRADY—DIAMOND

Madoc, (Special)—A pretty September wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Diamond, Cooper, on Saturday, September 28, at 2 p.m. when their eldest daughter, Ruby, was united in marriage to Mr. Arthur Brady of Madoc. Rev. George Crabbe of Eldorado, performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked smart in a gown of dusky rose sheer crepe and carried a bouquet of crimson roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Alice Diamond, the bride's sister, wore a gown of pink sheer crepe and carried pink roses. The groomsman was Mr. Robert Bristol of Madoc.

During the signing of the register, Mr. Dennis Chapman sang "O Perfect Love", with Mrs. Hayton, aunt of the bride, playing the wedding music.

Following the ceremony Mrs. Diamond wearing wine sheer crepe, received with the bride and groom. Mrs. A. Parks of Madoc, sister of the groom, wore black sheer with white accessories. A dainty luncheon was served by Misses Lois and Ruth Fitzgerald, Mary Tayler, Phyllis Parks, Edna Phillips and Mrs. Dennis Chapman. The bride's table was daintily trimmed in pink and white.

Mr. and Mrs. Brady left on a motor trip, the bride travelling in a grey suit with wine accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Madoc.

CHAUMONT—CLARK

A pretty wedding took place at St. Michael's Church on Saturday morning, at eighty-thirty o'clock when Miss Lorraine Clark, daughter of Mrs. Ethel Clark, 306 Coleman Street, became the bride of Mr. Camille Chaumont, R.C.A.F., Trenton. Rev. C. E. Baker officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her step-father, Mr. James Clark, wore navy blue sheer with white accessories, and corsage of white roses. She was attended by her sister-in-law, Mrs. V. Fox, who was attired in powder blue sheer with corsage of pink roses. Mr. James Baxter of the R.C.A.F., Trenton, was groomsman and as the bridal party left the church, six members of the R.C.A.F. formed a guard of honor.

Gunner G. Bunnett Honored by Friends Of Aiken's Church

3rd Sidney, (Special) — Gunner Gordon Bunnett, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bunnett, who is home on leave from Petawawa, was presented with a wrist watch and utility belt at Aiken's Church on Sunday.

At the close of the Sunday School session, Gordon was called to the front of the church and an address was read by Mrs. Everett Hubble. The address was signed on behalf of the Aiken's community by Carmen Grills, Everett Hubble, Wm. Bush, Wilmot Bailey, Stanley Spafford.

Gordon voiced his appreciation of the gifts which were presented by Mr. Wilmot Bailey on behalf of the congregation.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, October 1

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A PARTICULARLY lively and eventful day is the forecast made from a chain of swift-moving planetary operations. There is every prospect of advancement, promotion, preferment and favors from superiors, employers or those in authority. There are likely to be surprising and sudden developments in connection with large corporations, fraternal, political, diplomatic or humanitarian organizations. Legacies or litigation may bring satisfaction.

Those whose birthday it is may look for promotion, favors, tokens of esteem and appreciation at the hands of employers, superiors or others in place and power. Large corporations, secret societies or other powerful organizations may provide sudden and surprising benefits or opportunities.

A child born on this day may have not only brilliant intellect and creative faculties, but a phase of wisdom or insight of an intuitive or sub-conscious illumination fitting it for signal success in some cultural place or profession.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

No Shackles

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going "steady" with my boy friend for about six months, but we aren't engaged. He is 21 and I am 19. I told him he had no right to ask that we become engaged, because we're both too young to know our own minds. I go out with other boys just for friendship's sake, and because I think that's the only way one can know which one is the best loved one.

And now he doubts my love for him and says if I really cared deeply for him, as I've told him, I wouldn't want to accept invitations from other boys. M. T.

As long as you aren't positively engaged, you are both at liberty to make what dates you please. I'm sorry for your boy friend, but if you weren't popular, in all probability he wouldn't think as much of you.

Why Not Try an "Old-Fashioned" Party

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We're a group of girls between 15 and 16 years of age. We have parties at each other's homes and the boys always want to play childish kissing games instead of cards or some other games. If we don't play what they want, they go off by themselves and don't pay any attenion to us. Of course, that makes the party a failure. We're going to have another one very soon, and would like to know what you suggest. Six Girls.

I don't know why boys insist on playing these outmoded kissing games. Why don't you give a party outdoors? If you'll send me a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope, I shall be glad to send you my folder of "Old-Fashioned" parties. The boys will surely be interested in these parties, and I know you will all have a wonderful time.

Faint Heart

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 23 years of age and graduated from business college last year. I am very much in love with a girl and I think she cares for me, and sometimes I think I have pretty good chance. Then again I wonder. I've know her for five years and we've been going "steady" for three years.

How can I find out if she really loves me? She is 21 years old. Both our parents are agreeable to this match. She means everything to me, and it isn't "puppy" love either. John.

Where is your courage? You've known this young lady for 5 years. You think you have a good chance, and your parents are favorable. Everything seems in order except asking her how you stand in her affections.

Her Home a "Prison"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young girl of 19, and my problem is lack of social life. I'm not allowed to go out at night, or even in the daytime. I'm tired of this sort of an existence and have decided to leave and get a job doing housework where I can live in. Of course, I'd really have to "run away."

I'm a high school graduate and could have had a nice office position, but my mother prevented me from getting it, because I would have been alone with the boss in his office. I've tried to talk over the matter with both my parents, but all I got was a severe beating which I'll never forget. They say I should be grateful for my room and board.

Do you think it's wise for me to break away from home so that I can live my own life, or had I better stay and "take it?" Desperate.

Unless you are what is known as a "problem child," my dear, I can see no reason for your parents' attitude in refusing to let you take a job or associate with young people of your own age. And to beat a girl of 19 unmercifully does not seem civilized to me. Get someone for whom your parents have respect, your teacher, their pastor, or the family doctor, to talk this matter out with them, if they will not listen to you.

I hope you will not run away from home as you threaten to do. I take it that you have no money to keep you until you succeed in getting a job, and that situation is highly unfortunate for a girl. Please write me again and tell me how things turn out.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Correct Form of Address For Widow is Explained

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me which is the correct way to address an envelope when writing to a woman whose husband is dead? I say the envelope should be addressed to Mrs. John Smith. Some of my friends claim that the envelope should be addressed to Mrs. Mary Smith, that is, using the woman's first name. E. H.

You are right.

When Mary Jones marries John Smith, she becomes Mrs. John Smith. And properly this is the name she uses, whether her husband is living or whether she is a widow.

If she loved her husband, a widow continues to wear her wedding ring and continues to use her husband's name. And she continues to wear her wedding ring and to use his name unless she remarries.

As a matter of fact, a woman should never use the form Mrs. Mary. A married woman or a widow is Mrs. John Smith. A divorcee prefixes her maiden surname to her married surname, and becomes Mrs. Jones Smith or (though this is not best form) Mrs. M. Jones Smith.

Wedding Reception Etiquette

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Our daughter is getting married at a church ceremony in the near future, and we are planning to have a small reception at a hotel, inviting only the members of the immediate families and a few close friends. Will you kindly tell me if it is customary to invite the officiating clergyman and his wife and also the clergyman and his wife of the church the prospective groom attends? M. A.

When the wedding reception is so small and intimate as the one you are planning for your daughter, it is not customary to invite the officiating clergyman and his wife to the reception. Nor is it customary to invite the clergyman of the church that the prospective groom attends.

When the reception is a large and "inclusive" one, naturally the officiating clergyman and his wife would be included in the invitations, and would expect to be included. And it would be natural to include the clergyman of the groom's church and his wife. However, if the officiating clergyman and his wife were exceptionally close friends of the family, they might naturally and, of course, properly be included among the "close friends" invited.

How to Be Nice

By HELEN FOLLETT

EVERYBODY has a pet peeve—or two or three. That's why the girl who is working for a charm record must avoid mannerisms. She might make the observer peevish and then he won't like her; rattles his nervous system.

There is the young lady who twiddles her fingers until you go frantic. Digging up hangnails evidently. It is a silly and distracting habit. There is the neat housewife who, while guests are present, rearranges the furniture, straightens sofa cushions, does this or that instead of sitting quietly and making herself attractive and interesting.

Some girls fuss with beads and chains, or push back their hair or pull their earlobes. And, honest to goodness, there are those who rub their noses as if suffering from a permanent itching. All these mannerisms are ruinous to poise and dignity. To other individuals they are irritating.

True Charm

To be charming one must be restful, nice to talk with, nice to walk with, nice to do nothing at all with. Men will chase miles to be with a girl like that; gives them an opportunity to tell what great things they are doing. It's the slickest way in the world of playing up to them.

They appreciate animation, but don't want too much of it. Vivacity wears 'em down.

• • •

Even those girls who hate exercise, can scarcely lift their lip corners in a smile without feeling exhausted, can do stretching stunts when they awaken in the morning. They'll begin the day right. Circulation will be up and doing.

They should lie on the back, hands at the sides. Stretch the toes and fingers, then the arms and legs, neck and torso, seeing how long they can make themselves. After each good stretch, complete relaxation and ten deep long breaths, inhaling through the nostrils, exhaling through the lips. Then into the tub or shower, you lazy things!

Air-Raid Shelters In East London Cold, Clammy, Dingy

(By J. Norman Lodge, Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 30—(AP) — It is hard to believe human beings shelter in some of the poor East End's "nightmare arches" and storage depots which they use in a nightly flight from death.

In cold, clammy, dingy hovels thousands of London's east enders huddle on single blankets on bumpy paving bricks and try to keep out of the drafty gusts until daylight chases away the German air invaders.

People are admitted only after 5 p.m. for the night's respite from bombs but during the day admittance is allowed for the duration of raids. There is a scurry to be the first out, just as there is to be in line when the raids are coming.

I visited one which accommodates 20,000 east enders. The shelter was a huge vault. There was no cleaning or disinfecting.

"Tube" or "shelter throats" were prevalent. Coughing was almost continuous while I was there.

Expectoration was frequent and it seemed a perfect breeding place for disease.

Some effort has been made to serve tea but the metal pots in which the beverage is brewed are not easily washed when a raid is in progress. for water has to be fetched and that means losing your place.

Hastily-erected composition board screens concealed the crude toilet facilities.

Dingy little bulbs provided the only light. Luckily smoking was not permitted.

Cockneys mingled with Indians and Negroes.

The government is taking steps to do away with or vastly improve the shelters in this particular section.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Changing The Baby

I got a letter from a young, very anxious husband. He and his wife are the proud parents of a baby. He was worried. He was absolutely convinced that his wife wasn't putting the diapers on the child in the proper way, and he thought if I gave a few instructions in this column, he could show them to her and she would see she was wrong. Curiously, I get requests even from mothers asking me for the best way to "change" a baby. You would be surprised how many girls get married and have babies, without having the slightest idea how to care for it. But this was the first time I ever got such a request from the father.

Of course, the first rule is to change the baby every time he wets or soils the napkin. After that, the correct procedure is rather simple, for it is based on common sense, as all care of the baby is.

Naturally, the room where the changing is done should be warm and free from drafts. If there are windows open, close them. When you are ready to start the changing, have everything you require within easy reach.

When you start, make sure the baby is in a good safe position on your lap. This is very important, because I have known babies who received serious injuries when they slipped from the grasp of the person who was changing them.

Getting the soiled diaper off the child isn't the only thing to worry about. The baby's buttocks must be well cleaned. For that, use a bit of cotton dipped in warm olive oil. Remember never to dip the same cotton in the oil twice. Keep a fresh supply of cotton and olive oil handy. Sometimes, to clean the child properly, it may be necessary to use a mild soap and water.

Then, there is the matter of safety pins. Always keep them well away from reach of the baby. If he gets his hands on them, into his mouth they'll go. I remember that once, when the Quins were a few months old, a picture appeared showing them with some safety pins nearby. We must have received at least five hundred letters from persons everywhere warning us not let the children get at the pins. It's a good idea to fasten the pins to your apron.

Take the clean diaper, fold it in thirds or quarters, depending on the size. When you have the diaper, in place, fold over the part that is too long. This part, which is outside the diaper, helps protect the baby's clothing. Also, by bringing it outside this way, you avoid too much fullness between the legs which might disturb the soft bones there. Also, it sometimes keeps the child from exercising properly.

Above all, make sure the diaper is sterile before it goes on the baby.

FORCED TO FIND EXCUSE

London, Sept. 30.—(CP)—When British bombers fly over Germany German radio stations cease operations.

Last week the Royal Air Force visits were so numerous that German radio stations were silent for quite a time and now they are forced to find an excuse for these "silent nights", according to the British Broadcasting Corporation.

The German radio stations reported that the absence of short wave transmissions was due to "cosmic causes".

No telling where ingenuity will lead one. Using a gilded walnut shell as a case, one woman has had a handsome little watch set in it and wears it suspended from a leather and gilt bead necklace.

Columbus 'Grads' One up On South Hastings 'Combines' In Intermediate 'B' Playdowns

Toronto Team Bunch Hits When Needed to Score 8-2 Win

LOCALS OUTHIT

Collins Hit a Triple to Score Only Two Runs Obtained by Locals

Fielding a well-balanced squad of heavy hitters and nifty fielders, the Columbus "Grads" of Toronto, defeated the South Hastings "Combines" in the Intermediate "B" O. B.A. semi-finals at Willowdale Park in Toronto on Saturday afternoon by an 8-2 score. The return game of the series will be played at the Belleville Agricultural Park on Wednesday afternoon, when "Doc" Empson and his Combines will have to get in there and fight to extend the round to the third game.

Although the "Grads" won over the Combines by quite a margin on Saturday, the score is by no means truly representative of the actual play. The locals were only outhit by a 10-7 margin but exactly half of the winners' bingles were of the extra base variety and they got them when they were needed. One glaring error in right field and some slow fielding from the same corner aided considerably in mounting the score for the Grads.

Carmen Bush hurled effectively for the Grads, holding the Combines to seven scattered safeties, one a triple by Collins in the eighth with two aboard accounting for the losers only tallies. Bush had almost perfect control, walking only one batter and striking out eight. Kelleher, for the Combines, was nicked for ten safeties, struck out three, walked one and hit one batsman.

Made Hits Count

The Columbus nine made their hits count in the second inning when after Thomas tripled to start the frame, a single, a hit batsman and a lordly home run by Bush accounted for four runs. They added one each in the third, fifth and seventh and completed their scoring in the eighth. The Combines counted their runs in the eighth when after an error and a walk Collins conked out a triple to score two runners.

Bush paced the homesters' ten-hit onslaught at the plate with a homer and a single. Thomas came through for a triple and a double, while McDowell hit a homer and Stewart two singles. E. Jarrell for the Combines was the only batter to connect with Bush's deliveries for more than one hit, getting two singles.

Jarrell Boys Good

Krychia, at short for the winners played smart ball, as did McDowell at second but in no wise overshadowed the performance of the two Jarrell boys. Ed, playing the initial sack for the first time this season, stood out with his smart fielding, while Marsh in left, stole the fielding highlights with two shoestring catches. Empson had a field day in centre, making five outs.

Playing on the home lot on Wednesday the Combines should show to better advantage as the fast-playing field at Willowdale Park took them for a loss for the first few innings. With Barrage scheduled for mound duty and "Nicky" Sero back at short, it ought to be a close-tussle with the odds favouring the homesters.

DETROIT TIGERS WELCOMED HOME

Detroit, Sept. 30 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers, safely out of the American League storm but finding another right here at home, dodged around corners today or stayed indoors to escape the mighty affections of an admiring citizenry.

All reports safe and sound, the Tigers sought peace after having been tossed around last night by a whirlwind of fandon adulation from which police and the "black maria" had to rescue some of the players.

A tumultuous crowd surged upon the Tigers as the team came home for the city's official reception and acknowledgment of the American League title.

Shortly before the train from Cleveland reached Detroit, outfielder Pete Fox confided: "Boy, I'm scared. I know these Detroit crowds."

Massed inside and outside the railroad station were thousands of roaring fans. Thousands more were along the street as the Tigers rode in cars to the downtown ceremonies after an hour's battle to get out of the depot, and still more thousands were downtown for the official party.

BALMY BEACHERS DRUB ARGOS 12-3 FOR CITY TITLE

Toronto's East End Club Cash in on Mistakes Made by Lew Hayman's Squad

HAMILTON WINS

Score 16-1 Win Over Camp Borden but Held to Three Points for Three-Quarters of Game

By SIDNEY GRUSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

They pull the blanket off the eastern football show next week-end and, if Saturday's gridiron doings were anything to set stock by, there'll be more interest in what might happen this season than had generally been expected.

Four of the section's senior squads went into action with the Ontario Union and the Big Four splitting a couple of decisions. The surprising things were that Balmy Beach drubbed Argonauts 12-3 for the Toronto city championship and that Hamilton Tigers had so hard a job in beating Camp Borden 16-1.

Reveal What Teams Lack

Mostly the games were notable in revealing what the teams lacked, rather than what they possessed for the coming campaign. Judging by the one day's play, the coaches of the four clubs might sit down and write their wishes something like this:—

Lew Hayman, Argonauts—Please strengthen my line, improve the boys' ball handling, have Bill Stukus change his mind about quitting the club and clear up Red Storey's tonsilitis attack quickly so my end run might get away more swiftly.

Alex Ponton, Beaches—Please let my team develop a scoring offensive on their own hook and not have to rely so much on the other club's mistakes.

Art Massucci, Tigers—What I would like most is for the Tigers to come up with a nice finishing touch so that something won't go wrong every time we get near the other team's goalline.

Alex Hayes, Camp Borden—Just let my boys continue improving as steadily as they are now, and don't let anything happen to Eddie Thompson.

Two Scoring Threats

Argos made two quick scoring threats; cashed in once and for the rest of the afternoon played mostly in their own backyard. They offset their first landing on the Beach 10 by a poorly-timed, third-down fake placement, Johnny Munro made no mistakes the second time and booted a field goal.

The Beaches wiped that out and led 9-3 by half-time, on a field goal that climaxed a 52-yard drive mostly through the air and on a touchdown from Leo Deadey's recovery of a fumble 10 yards out. Playing so conservatively that it seemed they just didn't know any tricks, they added a safety touch and a single while protecting the lead in the second half.

The Tigers did everything well except muff a half-dozen chances in sight of the Soldiers' goalline. Hayes' Troops made their first start an impressive one, holding the Big Four Cats to four points for three quarters of the game. Thompson, former University of Toronto and Beaches star, was their big gun. He got their only point and galloped 85 yards once on a pass interception.

Hamilton power finally untangled itself in the last quarter and Mike Ozarko and Abe Zvonkin scored touchdowns.

Players Eligible For World Series

New York, Sept. 30 (CP)—Detroit Tigers and Cincinnati Reds each have 25 players eligible for the World Series. Following are the lists:

Detroit—Earl Averill, Richard Bartell, Alton Benton, Thomas Bridges, Frank Croucher, Bruce D. Campbell, Ervin Fox, Charles Gehringer, John Gorsica, Henry Greenberg, Michael F. Higgins, Fred Hutchinson, Barney McCosky, Archie McKain, L. D. Meyer, Harold Newhouser, L. N. Newsom, Lynwood Rowe, Thomas Seats, Clay Smith, Geo. J. Stainback, William J. Sullivan, George Tebbetts, Paul H. Trout, Rudolph York.

Cincinnati — Morris Arnovich, William P. Baker, Joseph Beggs, Harry Craft, Paul Derringer, Linus F. Frey, Ival Goodman, Witt Guise, John Hutchings, Edwin Joost, Ernest N. Lombardi, Frank McCormick, Myron W. McCormick, Lloyd A. Moore, William H. Myers, Elmer Riddle, Lewis Riggs, James A. Ripple, Milburn Shoffner, Eugene Thompson, James R. Turner, John Vander Meer, William Walters, Wm. M. Werber, James Wilson.

R.C.A.F. FLYERS WIN TITLE FROM WALLACEBURG

Capture Intermediate "B" Softball Title in Two Straight Games

HURLER IS HERO

Harry Farr Hits Homer With One on in Eighth to Win Contest 3-1

Trenton, Sept. 30.—The R.C.A.F. Flyers captured the O.A.S.A. Intermediate "B" Championship here on Saturday afternoon by defeating the Lambton-Kent Creameries of Wallaceburg 3 to 1 in a hard fought battle. The Flyers had previously defeated the Dairy boys in Wallaceburg 14 to 13 in a ten-inning struggle.

Harry Farr, on the mound for the Flyers, was not only credited with winning the game for the Flyers by his superb hurling but actually did win the game by slamming out the only homer of the game with Joe Stephenson on base. The score was tied one-all in eighth frame, when Farr slammed the ball in the direction of the bay to score the winning runs. Farr returned to the mound in the ninth frame and mowed down the opposing batters in order, causing each to whiff the ozone.

A Pitching Duel

The game turned into a pitching duel from the opening innings, between Farr and Shepley, on the mound for Dairy boys. The two hurlers kept on even terms for the first seven frames. Shepley loosened a little in the eighth when Stephenson singled and Farr homered. Farr struck out 11 of the opposition during the game, allowed three free passes to first and gave up three hits. Shepley struck out seven and allowed five hits but did not give up a single walk.

One of the Dairy boys' three errors directly resulted in the Flyers scoring their first run in the seventh. For six frames the two teams had been held scoreless when Snape popped an easy fly to shortstop, Montgomery fumbled and overthrew first base, while Snape went to second Legris singled placing Snape on third. Gibson followed to slam a long fly to right field and Snape crossed the plate. When Legris tried to reach home he was put out at the plate by Bowers.

Lambtons Even Score

The Lambtons evened the score in the first of the eighth when F. Bowers the first up, slammed out a triple and came home on his brother's single. Efforts to bring B. Bowers home were useless as Farr tightened to allow the opposition to pop out easy flies.

Joe Stephenson, the first man to bat, in the last half of the eighth, contacted on a low ball to send it to centre field for his first hit of the game. Farr, the next man, slammed the ball past the centerfielder for the game-winning homer.

The Dairymen threatened to score in the sixth frame when Kerns doubled and Farr walked Bennie, who was one of the heavy hitters for the losers. However Farr allowed the next man up to pop out an easy infield grounder and he was thrown out.

Kerns with a double, F. Bowers with a triple and B. Bowers with a single were the only Dairymen to collect hits. Farr, with a homer, Legris with two singles, Snape with a single and Stephenson collected all five hits for the Flyers.

Lambton-Kent—Fraser, rf; Bennie lf; Montgomery, ss; F. Bowers, 3b; B. Bowers c; Brown, 2b; Truan 1b; Kerns cf, and Shepley p.

R.C.A.F. Flyers—Snape, 2b; Legris, ss; Gibson, c; Weaver, cf; Casey, 3b; Caswell, rf; Caton, lf; Riggs, lf; Stephenson 1b, and Farr.

Yesterday's Stars

Lee Grissom, Dodgers: His two hit pitching gave Dodgers a 5-0 shutout over the Phillies.

Bill Lohrman, Giants: His three hit pitching was aided by Johnny Rucker's two homers to give the Giants win over the Bees.

Morton Cooper, Cardinals: Went the route in limiting the Cubs to half a dozen scattered hits.

Al Milnar, Indians: Limited the champion Tigers to 10 hits in beating them 3-2 in 14 innings.

Joe DiMaggio, Yankees: His single in the 11th scored Red Rolfe with the winning run in 4-3 margin over Senators.

Eldon Auker, Browns: Won 16th victory of year with nine hits in pitchers duel with Johnny Rigney of White Sox.

BODY FOUND IN BUSH

Pembroke, Ont., Sept. 30—(CP)—Body of Joseph Commanda, 76-year-old Maniwaki Reserve Indian missing for almost a month, was found Sunday in the bush country near his home at Point Alexander, 35 miles west of here.

Coroner J. C. Bradley said that no inquest would be held. Commanda is believed to have collapsed while trapping.

Connie Mack's Prediction Yanks Would Finish Third Comes True

CLEVELAND SECOND

Sid Hudson, Senators' Hurler, Likely to Win "Rookie" Award

By BILL WHITE
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

They snickered when Connie Mack predicted the Yankees would end in third place, but the "grand old man" of baseball, as usual, is enjoying the last laugh——

The season has ended and the world champions are in third place.

Thus the mighty Yanks have fallen—and that's the year's biggest baseball story. It's bigger than the fact that the Detroit Tigers held their aged infield together while Hank Greenberg and Rudy York pounded in enough runs to win their first American League title since 1935 in a mad scramble from the dissention-torn Cleveland Indians and the Yanks.

No such contest sent National League fans swarming through the turnstiles. There the Cincinnati Reds were able to stave off the Brooklyn Dodgers early in the season—and coast home on the wings of a fine pitching staff and lots of hustle.

The year left other memories. There were two no-hit games, one by Cleveland's Bobby Feller and the other by Brooklyn's Tex Carleton. Five pitchers—Bucky Walters, Paul Derringer, Claude Passeau, Buck Newsom and Feller—won 20 games or more; a handful of freshmen bid for "rookie of the year" honors, with Young Sid Hudson, Senator Pitcher, making a strong claim; and the Indians' intramural war seemed destined to make Oscar Vitt the managerial victim of the year.

Dimaggio Hits Well

Joe Dimaggio tried to keep the Yanks on top single-handed, but he couldn't do it. His 11th inning single yesterday to beat Washington 4-3 was typical of the way he's hit all year. That win wasn't enough to put the Yanks in second place for Al Minar beat the champion Tigers, 3-2 in 14 innings to give Cleveland the runner-up spot. The Boston Red Sox edged into a fourth place tie by whipping the Athletics 9-4 and 4-1.

Phil Marchildon, rookie hurler from Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League, was on the mound for the A's in the nightcap. He limited the Sox to six hits and struck out four. But he allowed five walks and placed himself in trouble several times.

Eldon Auker outpitched Johnny Rigney to give the Browns a 2-1 decision over the White Sox.

Reds Wallop Pirates

Cincinnati tapered off for the series with an 11-3 walloping of the Pirates; Bill Lohrman pitched a three hitter for the Giants and subdued the Bees 14-0; Brooklyn's Lee Grisson hurled a two hitter to stop the Phillies 5-0 and Mors Cooper's six hitter enabled St. Louis to beat the Cubs 6-0.

In Saturday's games the Indians defeated the Tigers 2-1 in a game that meant little as Detroit had won the pennant Friday. The Yankees divided with the Senators, winning 7-1 after losing the first game 4-3. Chicago beat St. Louis 5-1 and Boston Red Sox beat Philadelphia 16-4 to 8-1.

In the National League Cincinnati nosed out Pittsburgh 6-5; New York beat Boston Bees 11-1; Philadelphia defeated Brooklyn 5-1 and St. Louis won from Chicago 4-3 in 12 innings.

VANCOUVER TEAM ON WAY EAST

Burrard Blue Bombers, Champions of B.C., After Senior Lacrosse Title

Vancouver, Sept. 30—(CP)—Coach Les Dickinson and his Vancouver Burrard Blue Bombers are en route today for Montreal and the Dominion Senior Lacrosse semi-final.

Dickinson will send his British Columbia champions into the first of the best-of-three series with Montreal Indians October 3. The coach and 15 players left Saturday night.

Winners of the series will meet the winner of the St. Catharines-Brampton series in the best-of-five final for the Canadian title and the Mann Cup, opening at Toronto October 7.

Accompanying Dickinson and his squad are two items they considered highly important to their eastern invasion. One is a large and ancient pine box especially built for lacrosse equipment. The other is Chuck Jones, erstwhile coach of Harlem Globetrotters, world's professional basketball champions, who is making the jaunt as general "tape-upper".

Appendectomy Halts Selkirk

New York, Sept. 30 (AP)—George (Twinkletoes) Selkirk, veteran New York Yankees' outfielder, was reported in "very good condition" Sunday night after an appendicitis operation.

Selkirk suffered an attack in the second game of Saturday's doubleheader against the Senators in Washington. He was brought to New York by plane and was operated on by the Yankees' team physician, Dr. Robert E. Walsh, at St. Elizabeth's Hospital Saturday night.

Selkirk, native of Huntsville, Ont., took over right field for the Yanks in 1934, replacing Babe Ruth. He had a .303 batting average for his first six major league seasons.

CINCINNATI REDS ENTER SERIES IN BAD SHAPE

TIGERS FAVORED

Superb Pitching Staff of Reds Sure to Function in High Gear

By GAYLE TALBOT

Cincinnati, Sept. 30 —(AP)— Providing one of their ace pitchers doesn't fall down an elevator shaft between now and Wednesday, Cincinnati Reds still feel they have at least an even chance of beating Detroit Tigers in the world series.

The National league champions are a pretty blue bunch, however, from Manager Will McKenchnie down. A series of injuries has taken a lot of pep out of them and where they previously were completely confident, they now are only determined.

The hard luck that has hit the Reds must be almost unprecedented. Two of their regulars, catcher Ernie Lombardi and second baseman Lonnie Frey, cannot be counted on for any effective play against Detroit, and there are grave fears that Jim Ripple, the team's left fielder from Montreal Royals, will not be ready for the opening game.

Lombardi Using Cane

Big Lombardi is limping around on his torn ankle. Frey had his toe broken by a falling water cooler.

A ball whacked Ripple on his throwing wrist yesterday, and it was puffing up fast last night.

This is all very discouraging, not only to the Reds but to their supporters. They felt this was their year. The fans, having forgiven the Reds long ago their four-straight defeat by the Yankees last Autumn, have bought out Crosley Field for the games here, with choice seats being hawked as high as $50 a copy.

The uncertainty now surrounding the locals probably will hike the odds against them higher than the 7-10 quoted when Detroit clinched the American league pennant last week in Cleveland. About all the Reds would have left with Lombardi, Frey and Ripple riding the Bench would be their superb pitching staff, and that is only nominal insurance against a set of sluggers like the Tigers.

Speedy Argo Star Brought Down in Open Field

With a clear field in front and the goalpost in view, Backfielder Art West of Argonauts is over-hauled and brought down by Balmy Beach's Morin in the rugby opener at Toronto's Varsity Stadium.

SOLDIER SQUAD OF CAMP BORDEN WILL MAKE GOOD

With Hastily Constructed Grid Team Hamilton Tigers Given Real Tussle

MANY U.S. PLAYERS

Coach Alex Hayes Will Build Team Around Eddie Thompson

Camp Borden, Ont., Sept. 30—(CP)—The soldier footballers from Camp Borden, representing the Canadian Active Service Force, have proved themselves even before the east's season begins. They cleared up whatever doubt there was about recruiting a team from the C.A.S.F. in their first exhibition tussle Saturday.

When a hastily-gathered club, put together from a limited field of material, can hold one of the big four's favorites as Camp Borden held Hamilton Tigers then they must be all right. For three quarters the soldiers were behind by only three points. Hamilton's 12-point splurge in the last quarter didn't detract from the performance.

Alex Hayes who played quarterback for Sarnia Imperials for more than a decade, has shaped together a team which includes former high school stars, some juniors, a sprinkling of men who learned their football in the United States and a quarterback, Eddie Thompson, who was good enough to make the backfield of the Canadian Press all-eastern team last season with Balmy Beach.

Thompson was the Camp Borden star against Tigers. He is a shifty runner, a fair kicker and a good pass thrower. He will call signals for the soldiers and it is likely that Hayes will build the team's offensive around him. Thompson, a leading aircraftsman, will probably captain the squad.

Strong Backfield

The starting backfield will have Mike Noskas, a forward - passing half from Windsor, at flying wing, with Dave Irwin, Ernie Jackson of London, Ont., George Dudley of Beaumont, Texas, and George Hungerford, former Imperial all first-rate prospects for the other backfield positions.

Cy Coulter, a centre from Franklin University, Ind., will be flanked at inside by Tom Donnelly, graduate of Ottawa City league ranks, and Eddie Michalski, a promising young lineman from Central Technical School at Toronto. Phil Albright of Greenboro, Ohio, and Bill Boyd, a tackle from Terre Haute, Ind., will hold down the starting middle-wing jobs with the end positions being taken care of by Sparky Bell, former Argonaut, Red Glass, graduate of Winnipeg junior ranks and Joe Harrison, who played with Royal Military College.

Good Relief Strength

For relief the army team will have Charlie Ostopovich, Windsor-born end; Sam Lerner, centre with University of Western Ontario; Dave Armstrong, who played high school football in Cobalt, Ont.; Dudley Spencer, Toronto Central Tech end; Bill Walker, Toronto high school backfielder; Jimmy Lesperance of Windsor, F. A. Lee and Bill Hersey, both of whom are making their first try at football after several years of soccer, Jack Munro, who played junior in Ottawa and Montreal, and Leo Shear, a chunky backfielder from Cincinnati, Ohio.

It has been a big job of organization for the men behind the club, but things are moving smoothly now. A regular training table has been established and Hayes has the club practising daily. The teams will play two of its home games at London and the other at Toronto.

The hopes and aspirations of the local wrestling patrons may be realized tonight, as Mike Demerko, the 231-pound giant grappler is being brought to the Hume Arena for the express purpose of beating the pugnacious and villianous George Pavish. By popular demand Jimmie Allen and Pedro Valdez will resume hostilities over the full hour route in the semi-final while Roy Doherty, the Shannonville Goliath adds local color to the show against Tom George in the curtain-raiser.

With the 1940 World Series coming up veteran ball fans recall that every series has had its drama and down the long list of stirring incidents are a few that stand out—moments hard to equal.

Like the one in the seventh game in 1926. Jess Haines was pitching for the Cards. St. Louis had three runs, New York two—but the Yankees had had men on base in every inning and were nipping at that lead.

And up to the bat came doughty Tony Lazzeri — he who managed the Toronto International tail-enders in the 1940 season. Lazzeri was then the "poosh-'em-up" guy, the ordinary batter who became a slugging terror in a clutch. Haines shook his head and stepped off the mound.

Then there was a roar from the crowd. That figure stalking in from the distant bull-pen was old Grover Cleveland Alexander, with two series triumphs already chalked up, coming in to pull this one from the fire. He had beaten the Yanks just the day before.

Lazzeri set himself. Alex pitched. "Strike." Called. "Ball."

Alex stretched, let go and every Cardinal fan groaned. Lazzeri had slammed a wicked drive down to the left field foul line . But it was foul.

Alexander, still the methodical workman despite the furore, uncorked his next pitch. Lazzeri swung, the catcher nonchalantly rolled the ball back to the box and the Cards had won the series. Not a Yankee reached first in the next two innings.

There hardly has been a more dramatic moment than when Babe Ruth faced Charley Root of the Cubs in the 1932 third game. Babe was disgusted with the taunts of the Cubs. Some 50,000 fans saw Ruth, at the plate, point his bat to the distant bleachers, "calling his shot." And he did just what he threatened, blasting a homer just about at that spot.

Then there was the ninth inning of the 1924 seventh game when Walter Johnson replaced Fred Marberry. Johnson, most popular and greatest pitcher of his day, had been beaten in two other starts. The Washington outlook was dark. But Walter held the Giants scoreless inning after inning until Washington won in the twelfth when McNeely's grounder bounced over Lindstrom's head and scored Ruel.

The year before, Casey Stengel was the drama - maker. Casey homered within the park in the seventh inning of that first 1923 game and the Giants beat the Yanks, 1-0. Stengel was no youngster and sports writers had great fun telling how he huffed and puffed to beat that ball home.

So, two days later, when Casey came to bat in the ninth, two out and score tied at 4-4 a chorus of cheers—and jeers — greeted him. Stengel swung twice and it looked like "Casey at the Bat," literally. But his next effort sent the ball into the right field stands for a homer. His trot around the bases was one of exaggerated leisure.

There were other sudden, unexpected moments of drama. Like the time Connie Mack surprisingly struck old Howard Ehmke in against the Cubs in the first 1929 game—and Ehmke not only beat them but set a world series strike-out record.

Which brings us up to the 1940 series and gentlemen here's one for careful perusal. The Reds boast of one of the best defensive teams in years as has been proven by their numerous one-run victories but don't forget the York - Greenberg combination to say nothing of Newsom et al.

Congratulations are in order to the R.C.A.F. "Flyers," intermediate "B" champions of the O.A.S.A. for the season of 1940. It was somewhat of a one-man show when the Airmen beat Wallaceburg 3-1 Saturday to cop the championship in successive games. Harry Farr pitched and won his own game. Farr and "Boney" Shesley, the Wallaceburg moundsman, hooked up in a sterling hurlers' duel, but remained to have Farr hit a home run, with Joe Stevenson aboard in the eighth to win. This is the second provincial championship the Flyers have brought to this section of the province. In 1938 they won the intermediate hockey title. Saturday's Flyer win saw the first provincial title ever brought to a Trenton league.

A two-week lay-off took its toll on the South Hastings Combines in Toronto Saturday when the Columbus Grads downed Doc Empson's charges 8 to 2 in the first intermediate O.B.A. provincial semi-final game. Joe Kelleher limited the Grads to eight hits but three were for extra bases, with men aboard. The Combines feel they can beat the Grads here on Wednesday and force a third game. "We had not touched a baseball in two weeks, while the Grads had just finished a series with Milton and were hot," explained Skipper Empson today as he predicted a win for his team on the home lot. Eight of the Columbus Grads are former senior ball players. The Combines were in no way disgraced and judging from their performance against Deloro the fans can look for a hometown win here Wednesday.

Do you remember when the daffy Brooklyn Dodgers answered Bill Terry's now - famous question: "Brooklyn- Are they still in the league?" with an 8-5 victory over his New York Giants six years ago today? It was the Dodgers second win in two days and enabled St. Louis Cardinals to replace the Giants in first place in the National League and clinch the pennant.

Hodge Podge — The Tigers and Reds rest up today and tomorrow following the closing of the major league season yesterday .... Cincinnati realized it's league-winning ambition when the Reds touched the century mark in the win column as the Redlegs won their final league game over the Pirates .... As Connie Mack predicted last spring, the Yankees finished in third place .... Today they are calling the Tigers the "team of destiny" they won the hard way .... From both the Tigers and Reds camps come word of lamentation—"we're badly crippled, luck is against us, etc."....Seldom does a world series roll around without the injury cry being heard from all sides prior to the big contest, but once the series starts most of the players make appearances...Jerome (Dizzy) Dean was shelled from the Cub box in his final league appearance at St. Louis yesterday, his former team mates having little respect for the rejuvenated Dean arm.

HITLER COVETS

Military training of Canada's youth was necessary for the nation's safety in war and would be helpful in the period of rehabilitation after it. Training was necessary to prepare men for the task of defending the country and Canada had to be self-reliant in opposing the threatening attack.

Addressing himself to the thousands of 21 and 22-year-olds who will go to military training centres Oct. 9 for 30 days' training, he said.

"You men go to camp with the certainty that you enjoy the respect and the admiration of your compatriots. Go gaily, head high, with the conviction that you are preparing to defend Canada and that tomorrow history will write your names in its annals. The country asks you to accomplish a task. Answer the appeal in good spirits."

No Kitchen Fatigue In Training Camps Says Defence Dept.

Ottawa, Sept. 30 (CP).—Cheering to those who are going to take compulsory military training in militia camps that open next month, the Defence Department let it be known that general kitchen work has no place in the training program.

The idea is that the lads called up will have plenty to learn without spending time on "cookhouse fatigue". According to present plans permanent camp staffs are going to handle the chores at the woodpile and the scouring of pots, pans, kitchens and vegetables.

"It does not mean that there will be no fatigue," a Defence Department official said. "Some jobs may arise from time to time which details may be called upon to perform, such as cleaning out a recreation room, but the daily fatigue work will be done by the permanent staff at the training centres."

Two things will be aimed at by defence authorities in these centres. One is to advance the recruit as far as possible in thirty days of military training and the other is to provide him with comfortable housing and good food.

On Oct. 9 some 30,000 single men of 21 years will move into thirty-nine training centres across Canada to start the initial thirty-day training period.

Already arrangements have been made to see that their food is good. Army cooks for the training centres have taken a six weeks' course at Camp Borden, and rations will be based on recommendations of a committee of scientists and experts in dietetics.

Not only that, but the Defence Department has stressed the importance attached to making their first experience of army life reasonably comfortable. Accordingly, all will be housed in heated huts.

Johnny Downs, Broderick Crawford and Peggy Moran in Universal's tuneful comedy, "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby," now showing at the Capitol. On the same program, "Treasure Island," with Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper and Lionel Barrymore.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Boys From Syracuse"

You must see it, now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, the musical-comedy laugh hit of the century "The Boys from Syracuse", on Broadway for a year at $5.50 now it's here at popular prices.

Allan Jones, Rosemary Lane, Joe Penner, Irene Hervey, Martha Raye, Charles Butterworth, Alan Mowbray and Eric Blore head the cast of "The Boys from Syracuse" and the musical hit tunes were written by Richard Rogers and Lorenz Hart including "This Can't be Love". . . . "Sing For Your Supper" . . . . "Falling in Love with Love" . . . . "He and She" . . . "Who are you" and "The Greeks Had No Word for it".

Broadway acclaimed it as the biggest musical in years . . . now . . . with the greater scope of the motion picture . . . "The Boys From Syracuse" emerges as one of the most lavish, tuneful, fun festivals ever filmed.

An all-star comedy "Twincuplets" a Walt Disney technicolor cartoon Donald Duck in "The Hockey Champ" also Fox News, presenting the first pictures of widespread London raids, is now playing in addition to "The Boys From Syracuse" at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL

"I Can't Give You Anything But Love Baby"

Picturing the hilarious adventures of a music-writing gangster who uses strong-arm tactics to get one of his song into the "hit parade" class, Universal's musical farce, "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby" starting tonight at the Capitol.

Broderick Crawford, who scored in the Broadway stage success, "Of Mice and Men," before entering films, portrays the public enemy whose poetic yearns get him into hot water. Johnny Downs has the role of a bewildered young composer who is forced to write music for the gangster's song lyrics.

Vivacious Newcomer

Peggy Moran, vivacious screen newcomer last seen in "Oh, Johnny, How You Can Love" shares romantic honors with Downs. Warren Hymer plays a rival gangster composer, and John Sutton enacts an underworld "Emily Post." Gertrude Michael has the role of a temperamental actress.

Three new songs introduced in the film include "Day by Day," "Sweetheart of Public School 59" and "Tomato Juice Song," all by Frank Skinner and Paul Gerard Smith. There are original dance routines by Sunshine Sammp and Jeni LeGon, popular negro entertainers.

Action in Radio Station

The action of the story takes place in a radio station and at the pent-house which the thugs use for headquarters while "muscling in" on the music business. The picture was written as a screenplay by Arthur T. Horman and adapted by Paul Gerard Smith from an original story by James Edward Grant. Albert S. Rogell was the director and Ken Goldsmith the associate producer. Elwood Bredell did the photography.

"Treasure Island"

The second feature starring Wallace Berry, Jackie Cooper who bring you now the greatest screen treasure in years—heart-touching, pulse quickening, thrill packed romance, brought to life from the adventure classic of all time.

AT THE BELLE

"Pride and Prejudice"

Another famous romantic classic has been brought to the screen in "Pride and Prejudice" picturization of Jane Austen's gay comedy, starring Greer Garson and Laurence Olivier which is the next feature attraction at the Belle theatre.

Teaming two Academy Award nominees of last year, the amusing story deals with the romance of Elizabeth Bennet, eldest of five unwedded daughters living in a small provincial English town, and Darcy, handsome, wealthy young aristicrat, who comes to town as a visitor. Mrs. Bennet, the girls' fluttery mother, has her cap set for any eligible bachelor who comes within her vision. Darcy finds that family pride is not nearly as strong as love and in the end comes to the rescue when Elizabeth's sister, Lydia, runs away with an adventurer, Wickham. This brings Elizabeth and Darcy together again.

One of the season's most notable supporting casts is featured in the film, headed by Edmund Gwenn and Mary Boland as Mr. and Mrs. Bennet, Edna May Oliver as the croochety Lady Catherine de Bourgh and Melville Cooper as her stuffy librarian, all highlight comedy roles. The sisters of Elizabeth are charming Maureen O'Sullivan as Jane, Ann Rutherford as Lydia, Marsha Hunt as Mary and Heather Angel as Kitty. Others in the cast include Bruce Lester as Mr. Bingley, Frieda Inescort as Miss Bingley, Edward Ashley as Wickham, Karen Morley as Charlotte and E. E. Clive as Sir William Lucas.

The film was directed by Robert Z. Leonard and produced by Hunt Stromberg, who made "The Great Ziegfeld," "Maytime" and "The Firefly," among other hits.

The Belle news of the hour and an all-new Pete Smith novelty "What's Your I.Q." will also be exhibited.

Festival of Disney Hits

Romance, high comedy, pathos, excitement, color of breath-taking beauty and tuneful music! Mix them all together and you have the favor of the Great Walt Disney Festival which is now at the Belle.

As a popular innovation this all-Disney program is being presented as a national release through RKO Radio. No program of Walt Disney classics would be complete without that never-to-be-forgotten full-length production "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" which is the feature attraction in the Festival. In addition to "Snow White" the theatre is also presenting as part of the unit four classics Disney features: "Ferdinand the Bull," the "Three Little Pigs" in "The Three Little Pigs in "The Practical Pig," "The Ugly Duckling". and "Donald's Lucky Day."

GUN ACCIDENTS

Near Toronto Joseph Fekete, 37, was killed when a companion, Alec Szotko, stumbled and the gun he was carrying discharged. The accident took place on the Holland marshes north of the city.

Trapped in Basement

Henry Diggins, 54, of Kirkland Lake lost his life when he was trapped in the basement of a burning residence. The house owner said he was asleep in the basement but when firemen reached him he was dead.

James John Waters, 39, of Sarnia died of injuries he received Saturday when he was struck by a car allegedly operated by George Harrold, also of Sarnia.

In Toronto James Gould, 18 months, was killed by a truck allegedly driven by Stanley Lowe of Toronto.

During the week-end two persons died of injuries received previously. Frank Wellesby, 72, of Caledonia died of head injuries he received Wednesday when he fell while picking peaches.

Mrs. Kathleen Palmer, 28, of Hamilton died of head injuries she received Friday when she fell from her husband's car as the door flew open.

BALTIMORE EVENS BASEBALL SERIES

Newark, N.J., Sept. 30 (AP)—Hank Borowy, the former Fordham University righthander who has won two playoff games so far, was given the task of stopping Baltimore's sluggers today as the Newark Bears went after the deciding game of the International League's Governors' Cup playoffs and the right to enter the Little World Series for the third time in four years.

Five Newark pitchers couldn't turn the trick Sunday as theee Orioles hammered out a 9-7 victory and deadlocked the four-of-seven final series at three victories each. But Borowy held the Flock to seven hits last Thursday night and won 8-4; he pitched a three-hit shutout against Jersey City in his first playoff appearance and he beat the Orioles three times in four attempts during the regular season.

His opponent on the mound tonight will be Orlin Collier, who hasn't finished either of his playoff games but who is the best man available for the Orioles. Baltimore used up three pitchers in yesterday's game with Italo Chelini finally getting credit for the victory by blanking the Bears with one hit in the last 4 2-3 innings. Six flingers took part in Saturday's game which Newark won 12-6 at Baltimore.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

"Flying Blind" by VERA BROWN

Judith and De Franc left the shop at six. They had a sandwich and a cup of coffee at a drugstore and hopped into a cab. It carried them to a loft over on Seventh Avenue.

To Judith there seemed to be acres of hats in the big showroom. Under the high bright lights, she put on hats and took them off, until she was ready to scream. . . . It went on for hours until she had a splitting headache. It was ten o'clock before the hat matter was finally settled to De Franc's satisfaction.

The perspiring millinery maestro made the wholesaler promise to have the hats at the store in forty-eight hours. As they came out into the deserted street, De Franc insisted on buying a supper. She tried to beg off but he insisted. So they stopped at an oyster bar on 34th Street.

De Franc looked at her tired face; then declared: "You're the only woman I'd ever ask to marry me."

"I appreciate that honor, Mr. De Franc."

"Then why do you marry this Michael fellow. He's stupid!"

"He's not stupid, he's brilliant! He has one of the most fascinating jobs in the world. I love airplanes. We're going to have a grand life."

The somewhat mad hatter shook his head, dissatisfied. "If I knew any way, I'd break it up!"

Judith, in spite of her annoyance, laughed. "Nobody could do that!"

De Franc let her go finally, put her into a cab. It was almost eleven when she got to her apartment. The telephone was ringing when she came in, but before she could reach it, it stopped.

Michael? And she had missed his call. She got into a dressing gown, bathed her face, and lay down on the couch to wait. He would call again. In about fifteen minutes the phone rang again. She rushed to answer it.

"Hello, darling!" Judith's voice rang with relief. Then she stopped abruptly.

The man on the other end said: "I've got to see you!"

Judith couldn't speak from shock. It was Tex!

"I didn't know you were in town." That was all she could manage.

"Just flew in this morning. But I must see you."

"I'm afraid not tonight. It's very late."

"I've been waiting for hours. I'm just around the corner. I'll come over."

"No!"

"It's important." He hung up.

Judith was in a panic! She sat here without moving. She couldn't. When the buzzer sounded. In a flash she slipped on a dark house-coat, ran a comb through her glossy hair. A sharp knock sounded on the door. Her hand trembled as she opened it.

Tex walked into the room. Without a word he took her into his arms and tried to kiss her. Judith knew Tex had been drinking.

"Is this the way to greet your old husband?"

"Really, Tex, it's too late at night to be flippant." She moved across the room, motioned him to the only comfortable chair. She sat on the couch. He did not sit down, but stood there looking down at her speculatively.

"You're getting pretty."

She smiled, getting a grip on herself. "That's not very gallant."

"Probably not, but we were never especially polite to each other."

"Let's not go into that. Why are you so anxious to see me?"

"Lonesome. That's the answer."

Now that she saw his face, she could trace new lines in it. He looked older and very tired. His bouts with liquor were definitely recorded. He leaned down to touch her ring. "Hear you're getting married soon."

"Yes."

"Dudley's the kind of guy who usually gets his way."

At that moment the telephone rang. Judith was horrified. With a great effort she picked up the handset, clearing her throat nervously.

"Hello, darling!" Her old greeting sounded hollow indeed.

"I'm just uptown a little way. Don't suppose I ought to come down, it's so late." Dudley's voice was definitely pleading.

"Anything wrong, dear?"

"No, nothing. I'm just tired."

As she talked, Tex watched her with seeming amusement. When she finished, he was laughing. "You've improved since you left me. You're better at excuses."

Her face was white with anger. "I regret the necessity!"

Tex sat down with elaborate carelessness as Judith said, "I'm very tired, Tex. I just finished work. You wanted to see me. Please make it short, for I must get to bed."

"Very business-like, aren't you?"

"I'm a business woman now."

"And doing very well for yourself." He glanced around the apartment. "Not that this is much, but I suppose you'll be moving into cafe society shortly."

Judith was not to be put off. "Why did you want to see me?" Her eyes met his squarely. She was in no mood for appeasement. So he said abruptly: "I've got to have $5,000 and you're going to get it for me."

Judith stared at him in surprise. "Where in the world do you think I'm going to get $5,000?" she demanded heatedly.

"From Dudley, of course," came the prompt, explicit answer.

Judith was suddenly afraid of Tex. His eyes blazed. He was like a man possessed. He'd gone quite mad! But no, it was the whiskey. It was difficult to handle Tex at best. She was uncertain just what tack to take.

"You are being ridiculous," she managed.

Tex stood there looking at her as though she were a stranger. "Young woman, I have to have a racing ship. I can get one for $4,000. Another thousand will fix it up."

She shook her head. "The only way I can excuse your coming here tonight is that you're drunk." The scorn in her voice seemed to cut through the alcohol.

"Be careful. I might lose my temper." His hands were clenched at his sides. Judith despised that thin smile on his lips. But she had to get him out of her apartment without waking everybody on her floor. The walls were none too thick. She must appease him.

Her voice was more conciliatory when she spoke next. "It might be a good idea for you to go home and sleep. We can talk about it some time when you're more yourself."

"Home?" Tex laugher loud and Judith tried to make him be quiet.

"I won't shush. Home! I haven't any. I haven't even a place to sleep tonight. She took everything. Kicked me out like a dog!"

He dropped into a chair and began to weep helplessly. Judith watched him, horror-stricken. It seemed incredible that he could have changed so much. But there was nothing she could do. Her one desire was to get him to leave.

"I'm sorry, Tex. Go along now, like a good boy. I'll give you money for a hotel room. Tomorrow—"

"No, tonight! I want that money and I'm going to get it."

He changed swiftly from a broken man to a desperate one. His words came in rushes: "I've got to have it, I tell you. I'm going to show her. I've got plans. I'll paint my name higher than it's ever been before! I'll make her sorry! I'll have her come back to me on her knees!"

"Tex, your voice. Please keep it down!"

"Cut that talk! You're going to listen to what I have to say."

"If you don't leave at once, I'll call the police."

Tex laughed. "Oh, no, you won't! Wouldn't that be nice to see in the morning papers that the important Michael Dudley's coming bride had to have her ex-husband put out of her apartment at midnight. Nice! You'd look pretty in a police court!"

He laughed again at the fear in her eyes. "You don't like that, do you? You want your cake! Well, you can have it, but you're going to cut me in!"

Judith hated him then, utterly and completely. "Just a minute, Tex. Will you get this straight? I love Michael. That is why I am marrying him."

Tex laughed uproariously. "Love him? Of course, you don't. You love me. You always will. I know that. Why do you suppose I am here?"

Judith was desperate. "We can't go on like this all night. I've got to be at work early. Tomorrow—"

"Tonight! I'm going to have your pledge. You're going to make Dudley come through."

Judith's anger made her throw all caution to the winds. "Get this straight! I will not ask Michael for one cent for you. If he had millions I wouldn't ask him! I haven't any money myself. So what are you going to do?"

Tex looked at her speculatively. Then his eyes fell on her ring. "Nice ice, that!"

"Oh, can't —?" He came toward her slowly. "I'm going to take that ring. I'm going to keep it unless you kick through with the five grand."

Tex grabbed her hand and Judith began to struggle noisily as he jeered, "Be quiet, you'll wake the neighbors!"

Judith, using all her strength, fought him off. She fell against the table. The lamp crashed to the floor, the bulb exploding into a hundred pieces.

They stood facing each other, Tex with Judith's left arm bent under. "I heard somebody at the door," she whispered. "Let me go!"

But he wrenched her arm back unmercifully, until she moaned. Then he tore the ring from her finger and put it into his pocket. A knock. There was somebody there!

In the dim light of the room, the two stared at each other. Tex bent her arm back sharply and whispered into her ear, "Ask who it is?"

Judith's voice was faint as she called: "Who's there?"

"It's Michael Dudley, Judith. Let me in."

Tex's lips were on her ear: "Tell him you're undressed and to go away."

He wrenched her arm again. "I'm sorry, but—but I'm in bed."

Michael's voice was low as he replied through the door: "Open the door or I'll break it in!"

She tried to get away from Tex.

"Open it, I say!" Michael's voice was a ringing command. Tex dropped Judith's arm. She held it, for he had hurt her cruelly. He said: "Wait, 'til I get in the bathroom. I'll lock the door."

Then Judith let Michael into the room. Her face was chalk white; her eyes pleaded with him. He looked at the broken lamp, Judith's hair, her sleeve torn, and the blood on her hand. She was holding her injured arm. He went to the bathroom door.

"Come out of there, Tex Aimes!"

There was no answer. Dudley tried the knob.

"Come out of there. I've got a gun. I'll shoot through the door if you don't." There was another silence. Dudley put his hand in his coat pocket. Judith gave an agonized cry:

"Michael! Don't! Don't!" He did not seem to hear her.

"I'll give you five seconds to open that door, Tex." Dudley's voice was like steel striking steel.

Slowly the bathroom door swung open. Tex stood there, saw Dudley's hand in his coat pocket.

"Come out here!" Dudley motioned with his pocketed hand. Tex obeyed. "Sit down."

Tex slumped into a chair. Judith tried to speak. "You keep out of this, Judith. This is between Tex and me," Dudley ordered.

"I had to have money."

"Why didn't you come to me?"

"You wouldn't have let me in your office. I was there today and your girl turned me down."

"I was not in."

"You lie!"

Dudley smiled grimly. "I don't have to lie to you."

His poise put Tex on the defensive: "You kicked me out of my job, just because you wanted my wife. You stole her."

"Don't be a fool!"

"You'll see how much of a fool I am! I'll put your name and Judith's on the front page of every paper in this country. What about your fine new job then? I'll see you're blackballed just as I am."

Dudley ignored the tirade, requested Judith to make some coffee. She hurried to do so. He sat down in front of Tex, his hand still in his coat pocket. The only sound which broke the stillness of the apartment, was the sputterings of the coffee.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 30 (CP).—Prices remained stationary through the first three hours, on Toronto Exchange today, the golds and industrials showing insignificant gains. 52,000 shares were traded up to 1 p.m.

Demand was fair for East Malartic, Kerr-Addison and MacLeod-Cockshutt and these were firm to a bit stronger. Steep Rock at 1.45 was down 3 cents and other base metals were firm.

Home Oil firmed a cent to $2 and Pacalta was a fraction stronger on the announcement of a stock option.

The stock of the Dominion woollen mills was in demand and the preferred advanced 1¼ to 6¾. British American Oil was a stronger spot in the senior oil group.

Shares of Berens River Mines Limited have been listed by the exchange and will be called for trading tomorrow, Oct. 1. The property, located in the District of Patricia, has been milling a year or more.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 30 —(AP)— The stock market acted as though it wanted to go up today, but most leaders lacked real rising steam.

Aircrafts were given a moderate run and an assortment of preferreds registered sizable advances on small turnovers. Dealings generally were light and, near the second hour, quotations were slightly mixed.

Among stocks inclined to tilt higher were Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Boeing, Glenn Martin, International Nickel, American Smelting, N. Y. Central, Great Northern, Union Carbide, Air Reduction and Montgomery Ward. Senior issues of General Steel Castings, American Woolen, Certain-Teed and Budd Mfg. were lifted.

Lagging were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Texas Corp. and Chrysler.

McIntyre, in the Canadian section, advanced a fraction while Canadian Pacific and Dome Mines held unchanged. Canada 4s, among Bonds, gained 1-4 point.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Sept. 30 (CP)— Cattle trade was very dull on all grades up to mid-session on the livestock market here today. Veal calves, lambs and sheep were steady. No price was established for hogs. The cattle holdover from last week was 600 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion marketing service were: Cattle 4,330, calves 2,100, hogs 1,560, sheep and lambs 1,830.

Butcher cows sold firm at from $4-$5.50. A few butcher steers and heifers sold about steady at $6-$8. Bulls were steady selling at $4-$5.50. Fed calves were steady at $9-$10.50. Stockers were slow at $6-$7.40.

Veal calves sold at $11-$11.50 for choice with common selling downward to $6.50. Grassers sold at $5-$5.50.

Lambs sold at $8-$9 for good ewes and wethers with culls and bucks mostly at $8.

Sheep sold at $2.50-$6.

Hogs closed previously at $9 off-trucks for bacons and $12-$12.15 dressedweight.

Montreal, Sept. 30 (CP)—Grass calves and hogs were a shade easier while other classes of livestock held steady in early trade on Montreal Livestock Markets today, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Receipts: Cattle 1,311, calves, 3,285, sheep 2,850, hogs 1,979.

Cows were the first to sell and these brought $5.75 for good kinds, $4.75-$5.25 for mediums, and $4-$4.50 for common kinds. Canners and cutters were $2.50-$3.75. Odd steers sold at $8-$8.50 for good kinds and $6.50 for mediums. There were not enough early sales of steers to establish prices.

Veal calves were strong and grassers were 25 cents or more lower. Good veals made $10-$10.50 with a few tops up to $11. Medium kinds sold up to $10 with common light veals down to $8. Drinkers were $5.50-$7.50. Grassers were slow and easier, selling from $4-$4.85 with the bulk between $4.50-$4.75.

Lambs were steady to a shade higher in spots. Good ewes brought $8.50-$8.75 with most sales at $8.50. Culls and bucks were cut $2 per hundredweight. Sheep were $3-$5 with a few yearlings up to $6 and with the bulk of the sales between $4-$5.

Hogs were slow and prices unsettled. A couple of hundred hogs were sold at 15 cents lower than last week, making $9 for bacons fed and watered and $12 hot weight. Balance of hogs were not sold in early trade.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Sept. 30 —(CP)— Bacon-hog prices were unchanged at Brantford, London, Peterborough and Stratford markets reporting early today.

Dressedweight: Brantford $11.50 plus transportation, London $11.50 plus transportation, Peterborough $11.50 plus transportation, Stratford $11.50 plus transportation.

Liveweight: Chatham $8.25.

Dressedweight: Chatham $11.25, Hull $11.30.

Butter Prices Stronger in Tone

Toronto, Sept. 30—Prices continued to strengthen for butter on the Toronto open produce market Saturday. Eggs and cheese showed no change.

Brokers had little to offer on the butter market as receipts still arrived in light volume. Although demand was small, there was no pressure to sell, and prices on No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids firmed to 24 cents per pound.

The egg market remained steady, with offerings ample for the demand. Government-inspected shipments of graded eggs continued to sell at 1-2 cent per dozen premium.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Sept. 30 (CP).—Produce market prices here Saturday, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter — First-grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 25c; first-grade solids, jobbing price 24 1-2c.

Receipts for the week 13,566 boxes, compared with 12,106 a year ago.

Cheese — Western white, current receipt price, 13 5-8c and 13 13-16c; colored, current receipt price, 13 5-8c to 14 1-16c.

Receipts for the week 41,588 boxes, compared with 23,997 a year ago.

SOLDIER STRIKES JEWISH MERCHANT

Wound Inflicted Required Four Stitches to Close—Police Probe Incident

Allegedly set upon by two soldiers, Harry Vechter, Front Street secondhand store dealer, was assaulted and beaten in front of his place of business late Saturday night. Vechter sustained a lacerated face, the wound necessitating four stitches to close and a badly bruised eye, that was blackened and closed. Dr. G. S. Cronk attended the injured man.

Vechter told Belleville police yesterday he was standing in front of his store when two soldiers approached him. One walked up to me and asked: "Are you a Jew?"

"I said yes, and I'm proud of it, and with that he struck me several times with his fist in the face, knocking me down," complained Vechter.

Although the incident was not reported to the police until Sunday morning, Detective Fred Izard investigated and yesterday afternoon apprehended a member of the Midland Regiment. The soldier, whose name was withheld for the time, stated he had seen the entire proceedings and that another soldier had walked up to Vechter and "without any apparent reason, struck him several blows in the face." The matter is still under investigation.

Otherwise activities were without serious incident around local police circles. Local police apprehended Fay Thompson, of this city, who escaped from the Galt Girls' Training School recently. The Thompson girl was committed to the Galt institution from a Belleville court.

Oshawa police reported the theft of a 1937 model Buick coach, licence 941-B-7 over the week end.

NEW SCOUT COMPANY IS BEING ORGANIZED

A company of Boy Scouts will be organized at Centre Street Mission, Thurlow, in the near future. A number of boys of that district have expressed a desire to form a company and Mr. Suter, of the Albert College staff, has very kindly offered to act as Scoutmaster. At present Miss Dorothy Osborne, a lieutenant in the Girl Guide company which has made such progress since its organization, is assisting in the development of a Scout company. Enrolment will be held at a later date, so far the activities have centred about a greatly enjoyed wiener roast.

BRITAIN WEATHERS 'CRISIS MONTH' AND IS UNSHAKEN

Goering, Experts Say, Used as High as 90% of His Effective Bombing Force in Vain

HUGE NAZI LOSSES

Food Situation of Britain First Class as Navy Holds Open Trade Routes of World

By J. F. SANDERSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 30 —(CP—Cable)— Britain has come through the "crisis month" of September, weathering the heaviest and most sustained air attacks in the history of warfare.

Goering's air force has put the air defences of this nation to the severest test and has failed to gain even temporary mastery of the air, let alone strike a knockout blow.

Several times in September Goering opened the throttle of his war machine wide open, using at least 90 per cent of his effective bombing strength, in the opinion of air experts here.

But he lost 1,008 aircraft during the month and nearly 3,000 highly trained airmen, and not once could he gain temporary mastery to permit the armada of flat-bottomed troop-carrying barges setting sail from the other side of the Channel in an attempt to invade this country.

British losses have been 286 fighter planes, but 135 of the pilots parachuted to safety. On three days, Sept. 7, 15 and 27, the Royal Air Force shot down more than 100 German machines. A record bag of 185 fighters and bombers was made Sept. 15.

Industrial Life Almost Untouched

As far as Britain as a whole is concerned, there can be no doubt that it is emerging from September unshaken with comparatively little damage to essential services and its industrial life almost untouched.

The food situation remains first class because the British navy still holds open the trade routes of the world.

If September has demonstrated nothing else, it has shown beyond all doubt that Britain's air defences especially the fighter planes, hold the upper hand in daylight attacks, no matter how many aircraft Goering sends, what route they select, or what ruses they adopted to avoid interception.

As far as night bombing is concerned, the defences of inner London are getting steadily stronger and have been becoming so effective lately that the bulk of the raiders have been driven to the suburbs where bombs have been dumped on targets of relatively minor importance.

Morale Stands High

Of course it would be misleading to suggest that there has not been severe damage to many parts of London. There has been, but it should be judged for its effect on public morale and the effect on the nation's war effort.

As far as morale is concerned, it must be observed to be considered. The tough fibre of these people, their determination to stick it out no matter what Hitler does, is beyond all description.

As far as the nation's war effort is concerned the air offensive has accomplished remarkably little damage. The R.A.F. has more planes than it ever had. Communications are intact. The output of factories making guns, ammunition, planes and all other wartime necessities has not suffered to any appreciable extent.

AXIS CAMPAIGN

"It is most probable that General Franco (of Spain) will be asked to let the German army cross the Pyrenees to attack Gibraltar. Mussolini will seize Bizerte (at the narrow part of the Mediterranean). The purpose of these two moves would be to seal our fleet in the eastern Mediterranean.

Campaign Explained

"Then, thinks Hitler, the British home fleet will have to sail to raise the siege of the Rock, leaving Britain bare to invasion.

"Not until then will German barges put out, dive bombers take off and great tanks waddle to shore . . . An invading army cannot face both a hostile sea and a hostile sky."

The Express said the British counter-plan involved smashing at the German air force daily "to beat it down out of the skies."

The public is told daily of new developments expected to aid the R.A.F. in meeting German air blows.

The London Mirror banner-lined a report that the R.A.F. is "working up to a climax in which a secret new bomber will go into action." There was no official confirmation of such reports about a secret bomber.

The press also has carried reports of a "new weapon" being developed to stop German night bombing of London although there have been no official statements on such a weapon.

AS GERMANY, ITALY, JAPAN SIGNED 10-YEAR MUTUAL ASSISTANCE PACT

German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop (4) is pictured reading the terms of an alliance pledging joint economic, political and military collaboration among Germany, Italy and Japan in the event any new nation (undoubtedly meaning the United States) enters the war in Europe or the Far East. The treaty was signed at the Berlin Chancellory in the presence of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler (1). Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano is seen (3) seated alongside Japanese Ambassador to Germany Saburo Kurusu (4).

mains. Some streets were closed because of an unexploded bomb.

About 100 shops and houses were demolished, a public house wrecked and a sports track and clubhouse badly damaged by bombs which fell in a southwest London district during the night. Casualties were comparatively slight.

A demolition squad after two hours found the body of a boy, Ronald McArthur, partly shielding his sister, who died later in a hospital. The mother was blown clear and escaped without injury.

Calais Harbor Ablaze

British long range guns opened up on the German-occupied French coast shortly before dawn. Fire blazed from the quayside of Calais harbor. German batteries replied with four salvos of shells at 20 minute intervals. Later they opened fire on the Dover area.

One man was killed and several others were wounded during the half hour bombardment of Dover.

British bomber pilots attacked German gun emplacements near Cap Gris Nez during the night and also bombed the French and Belgian coastlines and industrial Germany.

A serious fire in the city of London, a number of persons killed or injured in residential districts of the capital and several large fires in Merseyside—the shipping and shipbuilding sections of Liverpool—marked German air raids on Britain during the night the government announced today.

Of Serious Character

The fire in the City of London—the financial centre of the capital—"was of a serious character but is now under control", said a communique of the Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security.

German raiders were active over many parts of the country, the communique said, but London, the home counties, —those nearest London—and Merseyside bore the brunt of the attack.

Heavy British raids meanwhile were directed last night against ports on the German-held French and Belgian coasts.

"Targets in Germany included marshalling yards, oil plants and aluminium works", the Ministry added. "Pilots' reports of damage have not yet been fully examined.

French Coast Bombed

German raiders came in long single files over the storm English Channel, notably dropping oil bombs which started fires.

Observers said the 23rd consecutive night of air attack against London brought no more bombs than usual recently and an effective anti-aircraft barrage kept most of the raiders away from the central part of the capital.

There were some heavy explosions in mid-London and two large fire was started in the old section which houses London's financial district, warehouses, markets and other business.

Southeastern Scotland and the midlands came in for part of the night pounding by the Nazi bombers. The heaviest bombing of the London outskirts seemed to be in the south and west fringe of the city.

Scattered Fires Reported

Scattered fires were reported. One of the largest of these apparently was caused by a bull's [illegible] on a gas main in Southwestern London.

The Air Ministry reported that anti-aircraft fire and British fighter planes brought down three German planes from dusk to dawn, making the Sunday day-night total nine German bombers and one Fighter plane to four British planes lost.

Over the week-end 11,000 mothers and children were moved from London—especially the poorer districts of the east end—to other places in the country.

The exodus raised the number moved from the capital since the start of the bombings to between 75,000 and 100,000. More thousands are expected to be moved as wrecked residence blocks daily in the next few weeks.

TRAMP STEAMER RESCUES 87 MEN

Dares Frowning Nazi U-Boat Guns to Save Crews of 2 Torpedoed Ships

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 30—(CP-Cable)—Written into naval records today was another saga of the British men who go down to the sea — a tale of a dingy tramp steamer that rescued 87 survivors of two torpedoed British merchantmen under the guns of the German U-boat that sank them.

The story was told in St. John's Saturday when the rescue ship, her identity withheld except for the fact that she was British, steamed into port. She carried the survivors of the two torpedoed ships—the 5,156 - ton Elmbank and the 4,409-ton Blairangus — which were sunk Sept. 21, 500 miles off Britain.

The ships sank almost immediately after the attack but the men had time to launch lifeboats. The Germans shelled those of the Elmbank as the ship sank and Captain H. T. Phillips was mortally wounded.

For eight hours, the men in the lifeboats rode the sea — many of them even hoping no rescue boat would come in sight when they thought of the Nazi submarine waiting to pounce on any rescue ship. Then over the horizon came the audacious west-bound tramp.

She hove in full sight of the frowning Nazi guns and with complete disregard for them she began to round up the lifeboats and take the survivors aboard. All the time, the men expected to see a torpedo streaking through the water—but it did not come.

Chief Officer B. H. Jackson of the Elmbank said he couldn't "understand why the U-boat didn't sink her as well." He added: "I can only believe that her commander did not because of his admiration for her disregard for her own safety to save others."

SOVIET RUSSIA

Italy in their turn renounce a policy of non-intervention in far eastern affairs.

"This doubtless means further aggravation of the war and expansion of its realm."

The newspaper said a significant phase of the pact was that "it openly recognizes spheres of influences of its signatories and division of these spheres between them.

Realization Different Question

Pravda added:—

"Whether signatories of the pact will succeed in realizing in practice such a division of spheres of influence is a different question. Undoubtedly realization of such a plan will depend on real correlation of forces of the belligerents, and on the issue of the present war which has become more and more acute."

The United States and Britain were said to have co-operated in these ways:—

"Continuously increasing military assistance rendered by the United States to Britain; transfer of British naval bases in the western hemisphere to the United States; inclusion of South American countries in the sphere of influence of the United States; and Britain's consent to transfer her far eastern and Australian bases to the United States."

Says U. S. in Same Camp With Britain

(There has been no report from London or Washington of any transfer of far eastern and Australian bases to the United States.)

"Of course," the editorial said, "the United States has not yet formally joined in the war on the side of Britain against Germany, Italy and Japan. But this is not important since, in fact, the United States is in the same common military camp with the military adversaries of Germany, Italy and Japan."

Pravda said the reservations in the pact by which the relations of the signatories with Russia remain unchanged "should be understood in the first place as respect on the part of signatories of the pact for the attitude of neutrality which the Soviet Union has been pursuing since the very first days of the war...... True to its policy of peace and neutrality the Soviet Union, on its part can confirm that insofar as this will depend on it, this policy remains and will remain invariable."

Too Delicate For Comment

Tokyo, Sept. 30 (AP)—The question of conclusion of a non-aggression pact between Japan and Soviet Russia is "too delicate for comment" Yakichiro Suma, Foreign Office spokesman said today.

He said Moscow's official reaction to the alliance signed Friday among Japan, Germany and Italy had not yet been received and he parried questions regarding what Germany's position might be in event of a Russian-Japanese clash.

Asked if Japan might accord special facilities to Italian-German raiders in the Pacific in the European war, Suma asserted: "The treaty stipulates nothing like that."

Prime Minister, Dionne Quints, Hollywood's Brightest Stars Aid Red Cross Drive for Funds

Toronto, Sept. 30.—(CP)—Hollywood's brightest stars joined with Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the Dionne Quintuplets Sunday night in an inspiring radio program stated for the Red Cross Emergency appeal for $5,000,000 to aid British air raid victims.

British and Canadian motion picture actors drew on the works of English writers from Shakespeare, down through Kipling to Noel Coward to emphasize England's indomitable spirit in her present plight.

The international character of the broadcast, which was produced by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and was carried over the Mutual network in the United States, was emphasized at the close. Allan Mowbray, Master of Ceremonies, asked American listeners to sing "My Country, 'Tis of Thee", while Canadian listeners sang "God Save The King", pointing out the music was the same.

A singer in Hollywood sang the British National Anthem.

Opens Program With Appeal

Mr. Mackenzie King opened the program at Ottawa with an appeal for funds for the Red Cross and an explanation of the work it was doing. During the broadcast American sympathizers were told they could send their contributions to Mr. Mowbray at Hollywood and they would be forwarded to Canada.

The Quints were a distinct hit. Introduced by Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, their physician, they surprised their listeners with their good English pronunciation in singing part of "There'll Always be an England". Then they sang "O Canada" in French.

The hour-long program was moving in many features, particularly in the reading of British actors about their homeland.

Hollywood Audience Cheers

The audience of 3,000 in a Hollywood sound-stage thundered their applause when Laurence Olivier spoke King Henry's exhortation to his soldiers before they started to scale the walls of Harfleur, from Shakespeare's "Henry V", ending ". . . . Cry God, for Harry! England and St. George!"

Response was tremendous too when Vivien Leigh gave the final scene from Noel Coward's "Cavalcade", when Madelene Carroll read the New York Times editorial, "It's Twelve O'clock', written last July when Hitler threatened to invade England, and when Sir Cedric Hardwicke spoke Shakespeare's words in "Richard II",—

"This Royal Throne of Kings, this sceptred Isle,
"This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
"This other Eden, this demi-paradise; . . .
"This blessed plot, this earth, this realm,
"This England."

'This Other Eden'

Sir Cedric used the quotation in a playlet, "This Other Eden", written by Gene Lockhart, London, Ont., movie actor, in which Lockhard, Binnie Barnes, George Sanders, June Lockhart and Freddie Bartholomew played. Laid in an air-raid shelter, time the present, the play gives Sir Cedric, acting the part of a clergyman, an opportunity of using Shakespeare's words to quiet the fears of Bartholomew and Miss Lockhart, playing a young English boy and girl.

Doctor's Certificate Will be Required

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—(CP)—Effective immediately, a standard form of medical certificate will be required with all applications of Canadians for United States travel funds for reasons of health, the Foreign Exhange Control Board announced today.

Under Government policy of conserving Foreign Exchange for war purposes the Foreign Exchange Contraol Board, from which American Funds must be purchased, will provide no such exchange for pleasure travel though United States dollars may be obtained if a matter of health necessitates travel in the United States.

The Board said that all medical certificates accompanying applications for American Travel Funds will be examined by medical officers of the Federal Health Department before requests are granted.

The certificates, available from branches of chartered banks throughout the country, must be completed by a Canadian doctor.

Martha Raye and Joe Penner in a scene from the musical-comedy, "The Boys From Syracuse," which is now showing at the McCarthy Theatre. Allan Jones, Rosemary Lane and Irene Hervy are also featured.

HUN BOMBS FAIL ON R. R. TARGETS IN LONDON AREA

Misses to Hits 20 to 1 and Few Hits Cause More Than Overnight Damage

REROUTING POSSIBLE

By MILO THOMPSON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 30—(AP)—A checkup of railroads in the London area indicates that Nazi bombing of such targets has been ineffective and that the percentage of misses to hits—counting as hits those which fall alongside the rails—is about 20 to one.

There have been hits, as almost certainly would be the case whether bombs were aimed or dropped indiscriminately. The authorities say, however, that this is the easiest kind of blow from which to recover. The explanation is that regular maintenance of way staffs always are ready and perfecty equipped for making fills, relaying rails and hoisting heavy debris.

Few hits caused more than overnight tie-ups, personal observation indicates.

I have seen overpasses apparently shattered, but shored up and in operation in a few hours.

Value of Canals

The London network of rails is such as to permit rerouting in the event of trouble. There also is a more extensive system of canals than most Londoners themselves appreciate. These and the Thames herself have been growing busier with the raids, because they provide a traffic route little affected by bombs. But this is not because the railroads are much hurt.

It is a queer freak of war that traffic actually has increased on roads, highways and canals. This is in keeping with a strange kind of bood elsewhere. Those business buildings which have been dark and empty since being vacated by enterprises halted by war, like the Automotive Tourist Bureau, are suddenly coming to life to house bombed out businesses removed from other points.

SURVIVE EIGHT DAYS AT SEA IN OPEN BOAT AFTER TORPEDOING

These children, still able to smile after spending eight days in an open boat after the City of Benares was torpedoed while en route to Canada, express the indomitable courage of the British. They and another child and 40 adults were rescued by a British warship after being spotted by British flying boats 600 miles west of the British coast. The officer in charge of the lifeboat paid high tribute to the courage of the children who made up exercises in order to keep from freezing. Many of the Lascar seamen in the life-boat had to be carried aboard the warship after suffering frozen feet.

New Flotilla Crews Anxious to Get Crack at the Nazis

By ROSS MUNRO

Aboard a British Destroyer in a United Kingdom Port, Sept. 30 (CP)—Flying the white ensign of the Royal Navy and manned by British tars burning for a scrap with Hitler's navy, a flotilla of former United States destroyers rode at anchor here today, being outfitted rapidly for special duties, possibly on convoy work or as anti-invasion craft.

The warships slid quietly into port after a 2,500-mile Atlantic voyage from an East Coast Canadian port, with the only incident an apparent submarine attack on the last night at sea, when a torpedo was fired but failed to strike any of the ships.

On the last leg of the trip the flotilla zigzagged its course in battle formation across war zone waters which had seen dozens of bombing attacks. But not one Nazi plane or vessel appeared in the clear autumn sunshine as the destroyers completed the voyage and tied up safely.

No Cheering or Ceremony

Sleek four-funnel craft built twenty years ago, but in serviceable condition to provide an invaluable bolster to the Royal Navy's destroyer might, made up the first flotilla of American destroyers transferred to Britain. It was an historic occasion as they moved down the harbor in line and received salutes from British and Allied warships and merchant vessels.

A Polish warship signalled: "Fraternal Greetings," a message that pleased the flotilla commander more than any other.

There was no cheering. No whistle sounded. Transfer of the warcraft marked a vitally important development in Anglo-American relations and growth of United States aid to Britain, but the lack of fanfare emphasized the grim reality of the warships' purpose.

I was the only newspaperman with the flotilla. I rode the flotilla leader on its epochal voyage and my outstanding impression was the efficiency of British officers and seamen in manoeuvring the ships through storms, submarine areas and minefields at a speed hair-raising to a landlubber.

The commander of the flotilla leader told me he fully expected a Nazi attack during the final day at sea.

"You're likely going to get a dusting off," he said.

Lot of Things to Settle

The bridge was a tense place during those final hours as a Royal Air Force patrol roared overhead. The destroyers' crews stood by their guns and lookouts scanned the horizon. But the "dusting off" didn't come. There was only the memory of the poorly aimed torpedo of the night before.

When the final headland was passed and no enemy craft had attacked, the officer said: "Now you know who controls the sea."

A rugged Scottish signalman expressed the spirit of the bluejackets aboard, who soon may be guarding the Atlantic's vital convoy route. He said:

"We want to go at them Nazis for our revenge. They're potting at our home folk and we've got a lot of things to settle."

A gunnery officer who heard a broadcast report of an air raid on his English home town said: "If they come near us I'll tilt the torpedo tubes into the air and shoot them like anti-aircraft."

FATS RATIONED IN ITALY

Rome, Sept. 30 (AP)—Cooking fats were rationed today for the first time in Italy. The monthly allotment will be 800 grams, or 28 ounces. Each person will be allowed a half liter of oil, which is slightly less than one pint, each month, plus 10 ounces of butter, lard or suet. Necessities already rationed include sugar and laundry soap.

The War Today

By H. M. PETERS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The German communique today spoke of fighting planes being used to drop bombs on Britain—apparently a tacit admission that Goering has decided daylight raids by big, expensive bombers are proving too costly. He has lost 1,008 planes, most of them bombers, over Britain in September.

While the air war continued at an intense pace, with the R. A. F. pounding Germany's "invasion ports" along the Channel and the Nazis hitting at London, Liverpool and other British ports, diplomatic activity was equally intense and important.

The Russians after maintaining silence for more than a day, came out with qualified approval of the new military alliance among Germany, Italy and Japan. An editorial in the newspaper Pravda, circulated all over the world by Tass News Agency, said that Russia was notified in advance of the treaty signed at Berlin last Friday, that it foreshadowed a spreading of the war and that military co-operation between Britain and the United States had been the pact's forerunner.

Hint Ribbentrop to See Molotoff

Berlin hinted that Ribbentrop, Hitler's foreign secretary, would see Molotoff, Russia's premier, soon to discuss implications of the pact.

The Italians, never enthusiastic over Russia's views, switched the diplomatic emphasis to Spain. Gayda, who writes Mussolini's thoughts in his editorials, all but predicted a declaration of war by Spain when he said that the Axis powers had "decided" to "restore" Gibraltar to the Spaniards.

Gayda wrote that Field Marshal Keitel of the Nazi high command had sat in with Serrano Suner, Spanish Interior Minister, Ribbentrop and Count Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, at a ways and means conference on Gibraltar.

Britain Will Have Say

In London it was drily pointed out that when disposition of Gibraltar is made, if ever, it will be Britain, not Italy, that has the say.

In this connection, the National Broadcasting Company's representative in Madrid the other day was permitted to spend three days at Gibraltar. She broadcast to North American an enthusiastic account of the way Governor Sir Clive Liddell and his forces have strengthened Gibraltar against any attack by land from the Spanish side, by water or by the big guns reputed to be aimed at the rock from Ceuta.

In other phases of the war the Germans remained stalled across the channel, undergoing heavy bombing raids every night and most days; and the Italians made no progress from their often-shelled base at Sidi Barrani, in Egypt, towards the Suez Canal.

Vichy claimed, without confirmation from London, that Britain had demanded that the governor of Madagascar, big French island off the east coast of Africa, sever allegiance to the Petain-Laval regime and join Gen. De Gaulle's free French forces.

Noted Author Dies in Hotel

Courtney Riley Cooper's Stories on Crime and Circus Were Renowned

New York, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Courtney Ryley Cooper, 58, author and "circus fan No. 1", hanged himself in a closet of a midtown hotel room Saturday. His body was found early Sunday by hotel attendants.

Mrs. Cooper could advance no reason for his suicide, but told police he had been morose over alleged snubs he had received in Washington when he sought to inform officials of German activities he said he discovered in Mexico.

Finally he said, he had conferred with his close friend and writing collaborator, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation but she did not know the result of their conferences. Mrs. Cooper said her husband made an exhaustive investigation in Mexico several months ago, and unearthed details of German conditions and propaganda there.

B. E. Sackett, special agent in charge of the F.B.I. office here, said, however, that neither Hoover nor any other member of the F.B.I. had talked with Cooper about the Mexican matter.

"We have not seen or heard from him since he returned, and we do not know what he did while in Mexico", Sackett said. "Cooper though a close friend of many of us in the F.B.I., was in no way connected with the F.B.I."

Detective Caswell Jacobs, who termed Cooper's death a suicide, said he found an unsigned note in Cooper's room. It said: "In my clothes is $43 in cash. I think my bill is about $32. Give the hotel $32."

Cooper's body was hanging from a rope attached to a steam pipe.

Most of Cooper's books and magazine stories concerned two subjects—the circus or crime. Among them were "Memories of Buffalo Bill", with Mrs. Cody; "Circus Day", "Annie Oakley, Woman at Arms".

Recently he had been active in interpreting work of the F.B.I. in magazines and books, and had collaborated with Hoover on many articles dealing with crime.

Also among his vast writings were several motion pictures, including "The Plainsman", "Weary River" and "Wild Cargo".

BRITISH WOMAN ASKED TO LEAVE

'Female Scarlet Pimpernel' Credited With Getting Refugees Out of Czecho-Slovakia

Bucharest, Rumania, Sept. 30 (AP)—Claire Hollingworth, British woman journalist and lecturer publicised in the London press as a "female Scarlet Pimpernel" credited with getting refugees out of Czechoslovakia and Poland, was ordered today to leave Rumania within eight days.

Fifteen other British subjects, including some oilfield employees, prepared to leave the country voluntarily late today by way of Constanza. The Rumanian Government has not replied to a protest filed by Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax relative to the treatment of five Britons including a Canadian, arrested recently. The Canadian is believed to be Capt. John E. Treacy, Mimico, Ont., a native of Chatham.

British legation officials said they still were not permitted to see those arrested, on the ground they "still were being questioned."

The legation officials intervened in the Hollingworth case and obtained the eight-day extension of the expulsion order, which they said carried no explanation. She is the wife of Vivian Deering Vandeleur Robinson, an official of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

MAXIMUM PENALTY IMPOSED

Toronto, Sept. 30 (CP)—Maximum penalty of $200 or three months was imposed today on Hal Jones, colored, when he pleaded guilty to failing to register in the National Registration. Police said he was given four chances to register but refused because he didn't want to go to war.

Lack of Cooking Fats Baffles French Cooks

(By Robert Okin)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Sept. 25.—(via Berlin, Delayed) (AP)—A true picture of Paris under German occupation in 1940 would have as one of its main panels a view of a food queue and one of a ration card.

Frenchmen say that never since the famine of 1870 has it been so difficult to obtain food in Paris.

For, as a people who always have eaten well and who hate to wait in line, Parisians have had some rude gastronomical shocks since the Germans arrived.

This one-time capital of good food has felt in its stomach the lack of transportation and the shattering of its economy.

When butter and oil disappeared completely French cooks found themselves baffled. They might have been able to get something to cook, but they didn't know how to cook it.

Other staples such as cheese, eggs and coffee, disappeared. And rice, spaghetti, milk, chocolate and salt were scarce and obtained only after long waits in line.

Long Lines Form

The food-card system was conceded by most people to be fair but, like so many French measures, it tends to be complicated. To the point was a newspaper cartoon which showed a child saying to a companion: "Mama has gone to wait in line to get a card to avoid waiting in line".

Lines form for everything now. Hundreds fall in before coffee bars to get breakfast. Stores selling chocolate bars always have a huge audience on the days they are permitted to open. Crowds of people swinging tin pails or clutching empty bottles mean somewhere ahead is either a dairy or a wine shop. The lines always are three or four persons thick.

Restaurants thus far have managed to get sufficient food and those who eat out have been lucky, but new restrictions go into effect for them next month.

On the four days a week it may be sold, French pastry seems plentiful. One famous pastry and chocolate shop (Sherrys) sells ice cream and one can even get ice cream sodas and sundaes.

Vintage Wines Plentiful

Lobsters, oysters and shell fish arrive almost daily and vintage wines can be bought either at stores or restaurants. Ordinary "vin rouge", however, which French homes buy her the liter for a few francs, has become difficult to get. Potatoes also are hard to get.

Food rules, which came in during the war—beef only four days a week, two days without meat, three days without pastry, ice cream or liquor—still are in force. The Vichy Government recently prohibited aperitifs of more than 16 per cent alcoholic content. Beer, wine and champagne are available every day.

Another characteristic of the time is "national coffee", which contains some coffee and lots of chicory and coffee substitute. People drink it to have some excuse to go to a cafe.

Rationed and difficult to get is laundry and hand soap, and one American here remarked: "I haven't had a bath in three weeks and I'm getting to like it that way".

2 French Destroyers Pass Gibraltar Say Spanish Reports

Madrid, Sept. 30 (AP). — The Spanish News Agency Fifra, in a dispatch from Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, reported today that two French destroyers had passed at high speed through the Strait of Gibraltar into the Atlantic Ocean followed at a considerable distance by several British warships. No explanation of the movement was offered. (There was no immediate comment from British sources.)

R.A.F. IN BETTER POSITION THAN BEFORE SEPT. 7TH

Experts Believe New British Types of Fighters and Bombers Ready for Action

NEW WEAPON READY

London, Sept. 30 (CP)—Swarms of German fighter planes are being used as cavalry of the air in attempts to smash British fighter resistance and allow heavy Nazi bombers to filter through, neutral air attaches said today.

This tactic, they said, has been attempted in daylight raiding with increasing frequency in the past three days.

Such raids, it was added, result from the failure of night bombers to hit military targets consistently.

These sources said they expect no let-up in the night bombings, which they say are aimed to a great extent at terrorizing the population of London.

Large-scale attacks which sent as many as 300 German planes, most of them fighters, into action on six different days in September were made in attempts to dislodge the Royal Air Force from its southern bases.

A second objective was to force the R.A.F. command to "pack" London and the southern areas with fighter planes at the expense of the industrial centres in the Midlands and Wales.

Reasons Set Forth

British military comment shows most experts believe that these attacks failed and that the R.A.F. now is in a better position than before the start of the aerial siege of London, September 7.

These three reasons are given:

1. New British types of fighters and bombers better than anything the Nazis have are ready for action.
2. The R.A.F. can afford to extend its offensive as new bombers and fighters come into use.
3. A new weapon which will prove the answer to random bombing of London by night is about to come into use.

Much has been written, but little seen or heard, about this "new weapon." Guesses range from cannon shooting clouds of gas into the area where bombers are in operation to a "radio wave" machine sending rays into the sky which will paralyze German engines.

London correspondents learning aeronautics by ear declare they hear—but do not see—the new weapon.

Even the most optimistic—and many are optimistic with the passing of September, another in a long series of "crisis" months—do not say the new weapon will end the night bombings entirely.

Japanese Residents In Great Britain Returning Home

Tokyo, Sept. 30—(AP)—Some 150 Japanese residents of Britain are returning home voluntarily shortly, Yakichiro Suma, Foreign Office spokesman, said tonight.

He added, however, that several hundred others would remain and denied that Japanese had been ordered or advised to leave Britain.

Withdrawal of Japanese from Britain has gone on steadily since the war began and conditions under the incessant German bombing raids and strained Japanese-British relations have given the movement impetus.

A Domei, Japanese News Agency dispatch quoting the Foreign Office to the effect that the London embassy had ordered 750 Japanese to leave Britain because of threatened scarcity of food and fuel was said to be erroneous.

First Toronto-Built First-Line Bomber To Receive Tests

Toronto, Sept. 30.— (CP)—The first Toronto-built first-line bomber will get its official flight tests at nearby Malton airport today with J. H. (Red) Lymburner, veteran Canadian pilot, at the controls. The plane is a twin-engined Hampden and is the first of a original 40 to be assembled at the Malton plant of Canadian Associated Aircraft Limited.

Another 40 are being assembled at Montreal.

The plane, weighing almost six tons, packs four machine guns and carried about 3,000 pounds of bombs, stowed in the centre "suitcase" section.

The plane, its top speed listed at 265 miles an hour, has a four-man crew—pilot, navigator, bomber, wireless operator-gunner and lower rear gunner. Its wing span is [illegible] feet and is 53 feet long.

ROBBERS ENTER IVANHOE CHURCH

Robbers entered the Presbyterian Church at Ivanhoe over the week end and looted the property, stealing articles that could be disposed of as junk. Provincial Police authorities were notified of the incident after the robbery had been discovered by the sexton yesterday. Mirrors, brass ornaments, and even parts of the stoves used to heat the building, were removed from the premises. Provincial Constable A. Dymond is conducting a thorough investigation. Doors were not secured at the time of entrance, it was revealed today.

ELEVEN NAZI MACHINES DOWN

London, Sept. 30—(CP)—Eleven German planes had been destroyed by British fighter planes and anti-aircraft up to 5 p.m. (noon EDT) today, the Air Ministry announced.

Urge Australian Representation On Empire War Council

Military and Other Press Commentators Argue War Council Should Decide on Empire Policy

Sydney, Sept. 30 (CP).—Australian representation in an Empire war council in London has been demanded by military and other press commentators in discussion of the Dakar incident and the new Italian-German-Japanese pact.

These commentators argued that the war council should be allowed to decide on empire policy particularly in the conduct of the middle east campaign.

The Australian imperial force has been stationed in Egypt and spokesmen argued that it is up to Australia to see that her soldiers are used to best advantage.

Although the government of Prime Minister Menzies, who has been consistent in support of British war policy, has remained silent on the question, A. G. Cameron, leader of the pro-government Country party publicly suggested formation of an Empire war cabinet, asserting: "We were driven to that in the last war and it looks as if we'll be driven to it in this war."

Labor spokesmen also urged an Empire cabinet.

German Prisoner Held Near Kingston

Ottawa, Sept. 30 (CP).—Officials of the internment branch announced shortly after noon today the capture near Kingston, Ont., of Klaus Schloessingk who escaped from an Ontario internment camp and remained at large only a short time.

"The prisoner has been captured and is now in custody at Kingston," said an official of the branch. "He was at large only a very short time."

No other details of the latest escape and capture were given out. Only escaped prisoner not returned to camp is Manuel Fischer, held by authorities at International Falls, Minn.

Previously there had been seven escapes from internment camps in Ontario and two from an Alberta camp.

Captured in Two Hours

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 30 (CP) — Less than two hours after escaping today from a work party of German prisoners and internees, Klaus Schloessingk, a young German internee from Britain, was back in the internment camp at Fort Henry just outside this city.

Scholessingk was brought to Canada several months ago with a larges party of war prisoners and enemy aliens from the United Kingdom.

The man was outside the fort at the time of his escape shortly before noon, working with other prisoners near the transport department's wireless station, Major Colin Carruthers, camp Commandant, believed he made his getaway by crawling under a large truck used on the job and in some way hiding in it as the truck moved off.

The wireless station, from the vicinity of which Schloessingk escape, is located about one-quarter mile from the fort. The prisoners and internees held here are ordinarily taken outside the walls of the fort to do road work and other construction work, being paid 20 cents a day for their labor.

During the first Great War two prisoners of war escaped from Fort Henry and were never recaptured. It was believed those men, who were working in the garden plot outside the fort itself, made their way along the shore and stole a skiff in which they rowed across the St. Lawrence River to to the United States. Later they communicated with the camp Commandant that they were safe in the United States.

Captured by R.C.C.S.

Schloessingk was recaptured today by members of the Royal Canadian Corps Signals who had joined the widespread hunt as soon as the alarm was sounded. They found the man about half a mile from camp hiding along the river bank. He had removed his uniform, with its large red patch on the back and red stripes down the legs, and was found wearing only shorts and a blue shirt. His uniform had been found earlier by a boathouse near Deadman's Bay, leading authorities to believe he was heading for the International border.

When captured he said he had realized the odds were heavily against him but he felt it was "worth the chance."

Nanking Says 'No,' Kai-Shek Says 'Yes,' On British Lease

Shanghai, Sept. 30 (AP). — The Japanese-dominated "Chinese government" at Nanking announced today that it would not renew Great Britain's 10-year lease of port facilities on the Liu Kwang Islands, near Weihaiwei on the northern short of the Shantung peninsula. The lease expires today.

Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek's Chinese government at Chungking, however, has announced a 10-year renewal of the contract. The British navy's China squadron has been using the islands as a summer station.

JAPAN TIMES BLAMES U. S. STATE DEP'T.

Says Department Has Betrayed British and American People by 'Warlike Moves in the Pacific'

Tokyo, Sept. 30 (CP).—The Japan Times, the foreign office's English language mouthpiece, declared editorially today that the United States State Department had betrayed the British and American people by a series of "warlike moves in the Pacific", and that these solely were responsible for the tripartite alliance.

The newspaper asserted the state department deliberately had deprived Britain of the friendship of Japan in "the greatest betrayal in history of a nation in the direst hour of its peril."

The Japan Times went on

"When the full tale is told of the Washington clique's machinations, there will be such an outcry of the American people" that wholesale renovations will be made in the state department, "getting rid of the members of a super-state in America.

"By every means short of war, it (the state department) has put the Pacific in turmoil until, their patience exhausted, Germany, Japan and Italy took group precaution against an utterly irresponsible American nation."

FEW YOUTHS OF 16 ARE INTERNED

Officials at Ottawa Decline to Confirm Reports That Young Graduates of German Diplomatic Schools Are Among Them

Ottawa, Sept. 30—(CP)—Officials of the internment branch made known today that a few youths of 16 years are confined in internment camps in Canada but declined to confirm reports that youthful graduates of German diplomatic schools are among them.

"There are absolutely no boys 14 or 15 years of age interned," an official stated, "and there are very few as young as 16."

Surprise was expressed at a report from Fredericton in which Mayor C. Hedley Forbes of that city was quoted as saying he saw a large number of boys aged 14 and 15 in an Eastern Canada internment camp.

The mayor said he had been informed by the camp commandant that these boys had been trained to lie in a diplomatic school in Germany, sent into Holland and Belgium as part of the Nazi fifth column and later entered Great Britain as refugees.

Baron C. de Vos, aide-de-camp to Princess Juliana of the Netherlands, informed of the Fredericton mayor's report, said he knew that a number of German boys 15 and 16 years of age were found among the wounded in the hospitals in The Netherlands during the Nazi invasion.

"They were supposed to have come in by plane, as parachutists, and certainly took part in the fighting for some were found to be suffering from wounds," said the baron.

Justices of Court Against Abolishment Of Grand Juries

Toronto, Sept. 30—(CP)—A committee of justices of the Ontario Supreme Court are resolved that grand juries should not be abolished because they represent democratic institutions now being fought for in Europe, Chief Justice R. S. Robertson today told a committee of the legislature probing administration of justice in the province.

The chief justice appeared before the committee accompanied by Chief Justice Hugh E. Rose of the trial division and Mr. Justice W. E. Middleton. A committee of judges had previously considered the matter and concluded there was no adequate substitute for the grand jury.

Any reduction in the size of grand juries would take away its representative nature. Juries usually err, if at all, on the side of mercy for the accused and in civil cases in favor of the poor man.

Work of the grand jury might be improved by having their recommendations followed through and progress reports given to succeeding jurors. The juries themselves might well question why certain persons on bail are not brought to speedy trial.

Speaking of exemptions, Chief Justice Robertson asked: "Who would make a better juryman than a reporter?"

The chief justice said that he would not abolish all exemptions from jury service but he mentioned specifically the exemption of newspapermen.

BRITISH AIR OFFICIAL ON WAY TO NEW YORK

FUND IS RAISED FOR RAID VICTIMS

Tweed Consolidated School Sponsors Tea in Aid of British Air Raid Victims

Tweed, Sept. 30 (Special) — A successful afternoon tea in aid of the British Air Raid Victims sponsored by the staff and pupils of Tweed Consolidated School was held at the Huyck House on Saturday afternoon. Through the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Potts the hotel dining-room and sitting-room were made available for the afternoon. The affair was a complete success and the sum of $45.75 was realized, which included a contribution of $5.00 from Mr. W. S. Gordon, Manager of Tweed Steel Works. A sale of home-made candy was held in conjunction with the affair.

A unique feature of the tea which touched a responsive chord in most hearts was the sale of 83 bouquets of flowers in memory of the 83 children who were victims of Hun frightfulness in the sinking of "The City of Benares" last week. These bouquets were sold at five cents each. The name of the purchaser was written on a large card to which the flowers were then attached. The card was inscribed with the words, "In Memoriam. For the children of the 'City of Benares'." The card, very attractive with its colorful bloom was placed on display in Kerr & Co. Store and later transferred to the Cenotaph at Memorial Park.

Total receipts to date for the British Air Raid Victims Fund are $123.90.

German's Patent Leads to Jail Term

Berlin, Sept. 30 —(AP)— An excessively clever German who figured out how to make a girl's bare legs look like stockings has been sentenced to four years in prison.

Silk stockings, even of the German artificial yarns, are comparatively scarce, and are rationed. The number of bare legs is increasing.

So when a businessman advertised he had developed an unrationed substitute for silk stockings his mail box was promptly stuffed with orders. He demanded cash in advance—3.34 marks.

What he delivered by return mail was a pencil-like device resembling a lipstick, and produced in various shades of brown and gray. Directions advised the girls to start at the heels and draw lines up the back of their legs to their knees. The effect, he promised, would be that seams of an extremely sheer pair of stockings.

Girls who wanted to be really realistic were advised to draw the lines a little crooked. Then everybody would think they had dressed in a hurry.

A FINE EXAMPLE

Berlin, Sept. 30 (CP)—Advice to the young:

Propaganda Minister Goebbels told 8,000,000 members of Hitler youth organizations during a broadcast to take Hitler as "a shining example of masculine life."
